Columbia

Adventures of Wild Bill Hickok
We didn't like this serial. The patrons got tired of waiting for the end which was nothing. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 1,200. Capacity: 388.—Felix Tisdale, Ritz, Brantley, Ala.

Blazing Six Shooters
This is one of Starrett's better western pictures. Pleased all of our western fans. Business fair. Fri., Sat. Weather: Cloudy, cool. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 670. Capacity: 408.—Jack Story, Mary Agnes, Jamestown, Ky.

His Girl Friday

His Girl Friday
Good on any day. A fast noisy comedy that will shake the dust off your ceiling lights. Hail Columbia! Our tenth year screening Columbia product and every one a good deal. Wed., Thurs., Fri. Weather: OK. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

First National

Three Cheers for the Irish
A picture that every one seemed to enjoy. Good comedy. Alan Hale added lots of fun to the picture. Priscilla Lane always a good drawing card here. It's worth playing. Business good. Sun., Mon. Weather: Fair, cool. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 670. Capacity: 408.—Jack Story, Mary Agnes, Jamestown, Ky.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Another Thin Man
Good mystery story and good picture of that kind. The baby was cute. Did not draw very well. Sun., Mon. Weather: Good. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 1,200. Capacity: 388. —Felix Tisdale, Ritz, Brantley, Ala.

At the Circus
Played on Bank Night. Enjoyed by all. Even those that don't like the Marxes enjoyed the circus. Fair business. Wednesday. Weather: OK. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 1,200. Capacity: 388.—Felix Tisdale, Ritz, Brantley, Ala.

Remember?
Played on Bank Night. All the Taylor fans pleased, which is the majority. Should have played it Sunday and Monday. Fair entertainment. Wednesday. Weather: OK. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 1,200. Capacity: 388.—Felix Tisdale, Ritz, Brantley, Ala.

Paramount

Geronimo!
Brought the Indian heads in at the boxoffice even though the women stayed at home. Andy Devine pays his way at this theatre. Sun., Mon., Tues. Weather: OK. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Road to Singapore
One of those light fast moving musical comedies that makes your patrons all glad they came. Bing and Bob team well together and I believe the public will demand more of the combination. Lamour was her usual seductive self. Business great in spite of rain. Five days. Admission: 25-10. Town and rural patronage. Population: 3,500. Capacity: 450.—Charles Hoge, Dickinson, Olathe, Kas.

Santa Fe Marshal
This Cassidy western with "Cat and Canary" drew them through tempest and flood "Pop" Sherman shoots westerns, but by his standards other producers just shoot at them. Saturday. Weather: All wet. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Republic

Pioneers of the West
Just a western of the Three Mesquiteers. Fair business, no comment. Fri., Sat. Weather: Good. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 1,200. Capacity: 388.—Felix Tisdale, Ritz, Brantley, Ala.

Wolf of New York
This one is nothing to crow about. Will please only a few that go for this type picture. Fri., Sat. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Rural patronage. Population: 1,000. Capacity: 184.—R. C. Vantrease, Rex, Watertown, Tenn.

20th Century-Fox

Drums Along the Mohawk
Good business on this one. The Technicolor Indians scared the women, but they liked the picture just the same. Sun., Mon., Tues. Weather: Cloudy. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Grapes of Wrath
Comparable to "Wuthering Heights" as a masterpiece of acting. Every character perfectly cast. Somewhat depressing however and patrons did not go out enthused. Did a nice business on it though. Sun., Mon., Tues., Wed. Weather: Fair, cold. Admission: 25-10. Town and rural patronage. Population: 3,500. Capacity: 450.—Charles Hoge, Dickinson, Olathe, Kas.

Here I Am a Stranger
But no one was; we were lucky enough to catch our regulars with this picture, although it was sold in the top block. I wondered why the trailer was so uninspired until I saw the picture. Sun., Mon., Tues. Weather: OK. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Pack Up Your Troubles
Wish we could when we played this one. Jane Withers pictures are quite disappointing. They get by—yeah, they get bye, bye. Wed., Thurs., Fri. Weather: OK. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Rains Came, The
Very good picture that played to good crowds despite a basket ball tournament the same nights. Maria Ouspenskaya almost steals the show. Brenda Joyce a good discovery. Sat., Sun. Weather: Warm. Admission: 35-10. Rural patronage. Capacity: 250.—H. M. Weydahl, Killdeer, Killdeer, N. D.

Shipyard Sally
Only one thing good, music, the rest smells. Very, very few comments. Billed with "Wyoming Outlaw" and drew below average. Fri., Sat. Weather: Cold. Admission: 30-10. Rural patronage. Population: 1,300. Capacity: 264.—F. Kenyon Reed, Shinglehouse, Shinglehouse, Pa.

Swanee River
A grand picture and a natural for the boxoffice. Give it every thing you've got, including playing time. Many returned the second night and planked down their quarter to see it over again. Sun., Mon., Tues. Weather: Rain. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 600. Capacity: 350.—John L. Bush, Ritz, Little River, Kas.

20,000 Men a Year
Nice surprise, but customers acted as if they expected it. Three good days on this one. Wed., Thurs., Fri. Weather: OK. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

20,000 Men a Year
Don't bank on this one to pay off the mortgage. When the kids don't go for an airplane picture there is something lacking. I did not look for much on Good Friday but Saturday was a flop also. Just a fair program picture with the wrong allocation. Weather: Cold. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486. —A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

United Artists

They Shall Have Music
I can't say but one thing good about this picture—good story. It might go over in a big way in a city. That Heifetz guy and his violin didn't make film rental. If I had the day to go over I would not play it. Sun., Mon. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 670. Capacity: 408.—Jack Story, Mary Agnes, Jamestown, Ky.

Universal

Destry Rides Again
A super-western at top allocation that pleased says

DARK COMMAND

"This is the finest picture ever produced by Republic and one that every exhibitor should play. It will hold up for extra playing time and be a money-maker on your preferred play dates. There is never a dull moment, and the tempo is fast."

my patrons, which were many. The checker grew tired of counting so many faces, he went to sleep. Universal still got a nice overage. Sun., Mon. Weather: Clear, crisp. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486. —A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Little Accident
That's possibly what it was. With Sandy and Hugh Herbert working on the set, Univ should have turned out a BIG one. But that would have been another story. Country people would really go for Sandy if Univ would take her pictures off the dole. Wed., Thurs., Fri. Weather: OK. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Little Accident
A dandy little program picture full of entertainment. Business fair in spite of poor roads and bad weather. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Cold and snow. Admission: 35-15. Small town and rural patronage. Population: 2,500. Capacity: 500.—Beatty & Johnston, Capitol, Red Deer, Alberta.

Mikado, The
An operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan. I wondered for a long time what I was going to do with it. I put it on Wednesday-Thursday and half of my audience walked out. It cost me three times what I paid for it to run it. In return I received an apology from the salesman who sold it. Nice going. Weather: Good. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Pa.

Rio
While this picture did a fair gross for two days, I still think "The Mikado" the week previous cut the attendance down at least 30 per cent. People don't easily forget a show they walk out on, and that was it. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Cloudy. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Tower of London
I heard this one was a bad gruesome baby, so made reservations to see it myself. I became much interested and consider it fair entertainment. It would be hard to sell it to the public without an inducement like Bank Night or Wahoo. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Rainy. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486. —A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Tower of London
No good at the boxoffice. I am going to use Karloff's ax on the next salesman that even tries to sell me an English picture. Saturday. Weather: OK. Admission: 20-10. Rural patronage. Population: 1,000. Capacity: 300.—Logan Hedrick, Homer, Homer, Ill.

Tropic Fury
These Arlen-Devine action pictures are some consolation for the eggs delivered by Universal. We play them on our Saturday double feature program and they please. Weather: Cloudy. Admission: 35-10. Country patronage. Capacity: 400.—George E. Harvey, Arbuckle, Arbuckle, Cal.

Warner Bros.

Dead End Kids on Dress Parade
This show has a good moral and is fine for children, however our adult patronage likes them better in the tough roles that first brought them to the scene. Sat., Sun. Weather: Cold. Admission: 35-10. Rural patronage. Capacity: 250.—H. M. Weydahl, Killdeer, Killdeer, N. D.

Elizabeth and Essex
Not a bad picture, but very low in boxoffice value, WHICH WAS taken care of by re-allocation. Bette Davis gave her usual good performance, but the story was just too quaint for our modern youth. The older people really enjoyed it. Sun., Mon. Weather: Cold. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486. —A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Elizabeth and Essex
One of the finest historical pictures we have ever played. Cast good, acting outstanding. Business fair. Mon., Tues. Weather: Cold. Admission: 35-15. Small town and rural patronage. Population: 2,500. Capacity: 500.—Beatty & Johnston, Capitol, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada.

Invisible Stripes
A good picture of its type (the world won't give an ex-convict a chance type) but not good boxoffice for me. My patrons don't like too many prison or gangster pictures. If you cut the shooting sequence from the trailer, it may garner in a few more lady patrons. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Cool. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 876. Capacity: 165.—Walter J. Buchholtz, New Haven, New Haven, Mo.

It All Came True
Second theatre in Kentucky to play this one (as far as I know). That Sheridan gal has got it. Good picture, business extra good. Don't pass this one up. Pleased 100 per cent. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fair, warm. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage. Population: 670. Capacity: 408.—Jack Story, Mary Agnes, Jamestown, Ky.

United Artists (——) 83 Minutes Rel. May 17, '40

A hilarious sally into the field of droll fantasy in which the famed Thorne Smith novel has been—to some extent, at least—expunged of its risque motivations, this stands as one of the season's funniest and most unusual comedies. It's definitely not for the kiddies, but audiences seeking novel entertainment are sure to acknowledge complete satisfaction with the ludicrous results ensuing when John Hubbard and Carole Landis, as a scrappy husband and wife, find they have exchanged bodies—the wife going to the office, the husband running the home. Hal Roach, who both produced and directed, paced it for laughs all the way and lined up a sterling comedy cast into the bargain. Outstanding in support are William Gargan, Donald Meek and Adolphe Menjou.

Carole Landis, John Hubbard, William Gargan, Donald Meek, Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor, Verree Teasdale.

Turnabout A Comedy

Warner Bros. (——) 55 Minutes Rel. June 2, '40

Another in the series of international spy films currently on the market and a good action picture which should keep the thrill fans in suspense. The story deals with the invention of what is called an inertia projector which has the power of stopping mechanical devices in motion. Quite obviously, it is owned by the government, with foreign agents after the plans. James Stephenson is leader of the sabotage ring, and Ronald Reagan is the G-man out to put a crimp in the unorthodox activities. He succeeds after taking quite a bit of punishment. Lya Lys plays a small part. Romance is nil, the main theme dealing with the efforts of the ring to secure government information and being thwarted by Operator Reagan. Lewis Seiler directed.

Ronald Reagan, John Litel, Lya Lys, James Stephenson, Eddie Foy jr., Robert Warwick, Frank Mayo.

Murder in the Air F Spy Melodrama

Warner Bros. (——) 74 Minutes Rel. May 18, '40

Commercial aviation has served before as a substantial basis for story material. In varying degrees of excellence it has provided fair drama, fair comedy but rarely as a vehicle for further enhancing the promising talents of such youthfuls as Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris, Dennis Morgan. Aided by Virginia Bruce and Ralph Bellamy, they give out with what the audience demands and relishes in "Flight Angels." It's a tale of airline Casanovas—Morgan and Morris—romancing stewardesses, experimental aviation, CAA rules and regulations and plenty of reliable situations. The production details never wane in the aeronautical sense. The story dashes about merrily, dramatically, cattishly and always entertainingly. The country is interested in aviation and a turnout seems assured for this one. Lewis Seiler directed.

Wayne Morris, Virginia Bruce, Jane Wyman, Dennis Morgan, Nell O'Day, Ralph Bellamy.

20th-Fox (——) 58 Minutes Rel. July 12, '40

Embellished by a generous supply of feminine pulchritude, this ordinary tale of jewel thieves fits into its designated program spot neatly enough. Conception of the yarn apparently placed no strain on ingenuity of parties concerned. The pretty heroine who puts the finger on the mob is Florence Rice. She meets Kent Taylor who falls in love with her. Taylor believes she is a clever jewel thief and has Miss Rice, who is really a woman detective, join the gang headed by Lionel Atwill. Miss Rice operates from a women's hotel. The curiosity of a chambermaid hastens the climax, which results in Taylor being killed as he tries to escape from the hotel. Although an effort is made to dress up the production, producers should know that hotels for women are far from swanky, as portrayed. Ricardo Cortez directed.

Universal (——) 61 Minutes Rel. June 21, '40

Unpretentious, but occasionally funny burlesque on the song-writing business, containing a little too much raucous slapstick for the more discriminating tastes. As lightweight supporting material, however, it should prove adequate, despite the negligible draw of the cast. Director Albert S. Rogell can be credited for spotting his laughs in the right places, but must plead guilty for frequently allowing the proceedings to become much too noisy for comfort. Johnny Downs, a composer, is virtually kidnaped by Broderick Crawford, public enemy number three, who fancies himself a lyricist. Their combined effort—an atrocious song—reaches the top of the hit parade when Crawford applies racketeering tactics to song-plugging, and the mobster gives up to the law so he can write undisturbed in a prison cell.

Broderick Crawford, Johnny Downs, Peggy Moran, Jessie Ralph, Gertrude Michael, Warren Hymer.

I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby F Comedy With Music

Universal (——) 62 Minutes Rel. May 10, '40

A timely and mildly engrossing drama of the Russo-Finnish embroglio, and which should serve with average distinction as supporting fare. The feature is retarded from attaining a higher station through mediocre scripting and direction, and the want of important cast names. Philip Dorn, a Finn, and Reed Hadley, a Russian, compete in the 1936 winter Olympic Games ski marathon, and become fast friends despite racial differences. Dorn returns to Finland, where war with Russia is declared, and Dorn and his townsmen station themselves in a dangerous mountain dugout to stave off the enemy. When the Russians begin to mine the mountain, Dorn volunteers to try to prevent the operation. He meets his friend Hadley, who refuses to shoot him; Hadley is killed, and Dorn's objective is accomplished. Directed by Lew Landers.

Philip Dorn, Luli Deste, Stanley Fields, Samuel S. Hinds, Reed Hadley, Edward Norris, John Qualen.

Ski Patrol F Melodrama

Paramount (3933) 67 Minutes Rel. May 10, '40

A good example of compact, melodramatic comedy, produced for the program brackets and certain to please in those spots. Other than Charlie Ruggles, it carries nothing in the way of a draw cast, but the players are vigorous and pleasing and the story, albeit a bit ridiculous in spots, carries its share of chills and chuckles. Gravest indictment, perhaps, is its lack of originality. Ruggles and Robert Paige are newspaper reporters. Staging an elaborate ruse to promote a vacation for Paige, they encounter a trunk, bought at auction, which contains a woman's body. Then ensues the chase, in which they are joined by Janice Logan, who also wants the trunk—but for purely innocent reasons, of course. The windup has Paige scooping the world on the murder and winning the girl. George Archainbaud directed.

Charlie Ruggles, Janice Logan, Robert Paige, William Frawley, Florence Shirley, Lawrence Grossmith.

Lavish production handling and a hard-working cast manage to surmount a somewhat dated and contrived story of international intrigue and jewel-thievery in this one, which should register in the upper brackets and show a tidy profit if given the benefit of the smart exploitation handling it requires. The story is, at best, an amusing fable, played with tongue in cheek by the principals; of whom Peter Lorre, as an eccentric pickpocket, and Erich Von Stroheim, returning after a long absence from the American screen, are the stand-outs. Weakest link in the talent lineup is Richard Greene, who displays a complete lack of conviction in his role. Gregory Ratoff injects considerable suspense and a number of amusing moments into his direction and Zorina scores in a brilliantly staged ballet number.

Zorina, Richard Greene, Peter Lorre, Erich Von Stroheim, Fritz Feld, Sig Rumann, Cora Witherspoon.

"Rancho Grande" is a formula story strung up on a song. It is pleasant, but dull, although Gene Autry fans will approve of their hero. He runs a big ranch, supervises construction of an irrigation line, makes two youngsters from the east toe the line, rides, fights and sings. It is the sort of film with which audiences can relax. The performances are good, in the western sense. Fundamentally, Autry has a time with June Storey and Dick Hogan, heirs to the ranch, who come from the east. Their young sister, Mary Lee, takes to the outdoors, but her elders balk at the lack of excitement. At the conclusion they seem satisfied with the state of things after Autry outwits a scheming landgrabber in a running fight. Director: Frank McDonald.

Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Mary Lee, Dick Hogan, Joseph De Stephani.

Look back over the newspapers of the past few months and select the articles about the safety factor in commercial aviation and have them blown up. Specifically, one concerned the advisability of pregnant women flying. This film has such an incident—a baby is born aloft. In the line of player exploitation plug Morgan, Miss Wyman, Bellamy and the other supporting players for all that can be gotten out of such procedure. Tie in with the local air transportation ticket sellers. It's American Airlines pictures.

SELLING ANGLES: "Ski Patrol"

Sell this as the first picture based upon the recent Finnish-Russian war and give the marquee and advertising credits to Luli Deste and Philip Dorn, billing them as two of the screen's most promising new players. The ski-patrol angle has received plenty of nation-wide publicity through newspaper stories and layouts in "Life," "Look" and other magazines. Obtain copies of these publications and blow up some of the illustrations for your lobby pieces. Dress attendants in costumes approximating those used by the Finnish soldiers.

SELLING ANGLES: "Rancho Grande"

For this one, all the Gene Autry props and stunts. His following should be satisfied. Miss Storey is the most personable young actress to appear on the western scene in many a day. The title song has faded from popular attention but has every indication of interesting revival. The line of Autry novelties includes a stationery portfolio. Miss Storey can be exploited along feminine footwear lines. The Columbia record company has a platter made by Autry.

Headlines from newspapers which feature spy activities should be posted in the inner and outer lobby. Considerable interest can be built up around the so-called inertia projector if a miniature facsimile can be made and encased in glass for prominent display. Invite inventors with novel ideas pertaining to airplanes, Zeppelins and the like to exhibit their designs in the theatre. Pages from "Popular Mechanics" and other magazines dealing with new inventions and ideas should be played up. Cards at newsstands should help attract attention.

The song numbers—particularly the title tune, a well-known torch song—are the most exploitable factors herein, although the name of Johnny Downs might be of some value on the marquee. Hold a contest in which amateurs contribute popular songs, and arrange to have the best of them played by a dance band, the leader of which might be the judge of the contest. Another contest could be built around submission of the longest lists of song titles containing the word "love."

Stage a "mystery" campaign in behalf of Zorina. Mask a girl in a black veil, with the word "Zorina" on it, and have her go through the streets. Zorina, it is claimed, has one of the world's most perfect figures. Place a life-sized cutout of her in lobby and award free admission to women coming closest to her measurements. Contact exchange for information on commercial tieups arranged for Zorina, Richard Greene and other cast members. Make tieups with jewelry stores, planting stills from the picture in their windows.

SELLING ANGLES: "Turnabout"

Build up a lobby center-piece comprising life-sized cutouts of Carole Landis and John Hubbard, the former in men's clothing and the latter in feminine attire. Hold a "turnabout" performance at which the women pay the admission fee for the men who accompany them. Snipe the town with posters in which the picture title and billing are spelled out backwards, and employ the same stunt in newspaper advertising and mailing pieces. Arrange tieups on this and other Thorne Smith novels with bookstores and libraries.

You've Often Thought You'd Like to Change Places With Your Spouse . . . But You'll Change Your Mind When You See What Happened to Two People Who Did.

SELLING ANGLES: "Girl in 313"

The advance buildup for this picture should focus attention on the feminine members of the cast. Blowups of most of the players should be used for lobby display. For a street stunt, have an attractive masked girl distributing teaser heralds, such as: "Who is the 'Girl in 313'?" Tieups for window displays can be made with stores featuring smart women's accessories and luggage. The theatre front should emphasize the melodramatic content of the film.

CATCHLINES:

SELLING ANGLES: "Opened by Mistake"

Charlie Ruggles is the predominant name to sell via marquee and advertising, with Robert Paige and Janice Logan billed in suport as a new romantic duo. The newspaper background suggests that, for mailing pieces, a tabloid "newspaper" be printed, illustrated with scenes from the picture. Address letters to your patrons, with "Opened by Mistake. Sorry, Blank Theatre" stamped across the front. Contents might be a "personal" letter from Charlie Ruggles to the patron, urging him to attend the picture.

A Tex Ritter western with enough action to make up for other obvious shortcomings. On the credit side is the presence of Sugar Dawn, reputed to be the world's youngest rodeo star, who also is a cute personality. Ritter indulges in a considerable amount of hard riding, in addition to singing three songs. The outdoor shots are good. Weak point of the film is the story which appears slapped together without much effort and the acting which is unconvincing. The story has Tex saving Sugar's ranch from her foreman and neighboring rancher who are working together to prevent delivery of the cattle. Tex discovers how the brand is changed and rounds up the culprits without much difficulty. Al Herman directed.

Will Fyffe, finished performer that he is, bears the weight of this London police drama and manages to make it an entertaining film. The story lumbers along slowly, but steadily. It is an English production. As "J. G. Reeder" of Scotland Yard, Fyffe is on the trail of a gang of counterfeiters who pass their phoney money at race tracks and who, in their idle moments, frequent night clubs. He cleverly makes criminals do his bidding and, in doing so, supply him with leads, clues and evidence. When his young aide is killed, Fyffe goes bloodhound, pulls a few reckless stunts and catches the gang leader. The story moves against realistic London background and the humorous content spices the story at appropriate intervals. It's a Will Fyffe picture that his admirers will like.

For the citizens of an air-minded country, "Mercy Plane" will provoke any number of horse laughs. It also supplies the cut-and-dried crime story whose sole variation is that here it concerns a clique that steals planes and resells them to foreign powers. There is a girl. Her brother owns the crooked outfit. His partner is the sort of a guy who'll stop at nothing. James Dunn is the wizard flyer whose friendly enmity with the girl blossoms into romance and later traps her brother. Generally, it is pretty feeble stuff that depends on stock shots and trick models to get over its aeronautical thrills, which are not so thrilling. The title comes from a ship which was designed for rescue work. It seems it can take off, fly almost vertically and land the same way.

Too much footage is devoted in the early part of this western to conversation about foreclosure on loans and the prevalence of the hoof and mouth disease. For the rest of its running time it utilizes regulation riding, singing and fighting sequences for their story worth and the climax does not arrive until about the last 500 feet. It is a mediocre western even if it does feature boxoffice cowboy No. 3. Ritter, as sheriff, is duped into quarantining the entire valley by the skullduggery of the local loan shark. In good time, the government cattle inspector comes on the scene. The two uncover the dirty business, interrupt a court session and shoot the whole matter out. Spencer Bennet directed.

"Captain Moonlight" is probably the most boresome import package to come from England in some time. It is an operetta dated from the time of the defeat at Waterloo and is performed with all the flapdoodle that a third-rate English cast can muster. Not for one moment will the audience view it as anything other than "acting," and hear lines that could easily be guessed in advance. It resembles too much the Gilbert and Sullivan renditions in which performers run through lines, action and singing almost mechanically. The story's big moment comes when a card sharp, about to commit bigamy, is unmasked by the hero. Before this the regiment sings; the crook is forced to marry a girl he betrayed; the heroine's father loses his all in gambling; to recoup, he marries his daughter, who is in love with the hero, to the villain.

Romance and rebellion on the Irish border are the chief ingredients here. The latter element is responsible for a well-developed bit of action toward the end of the film, where the law steps in to intercept a group smuggling arms across the border. For the most part, however, there is little else that might attract others than Gaelic patronage. They should be willing to overlook the ultra-simplicity of the plot and the lack of motivation; not that the roles are played with a lack of understanding, rather the scenario is less inspired, dramatically, than is the case in the bulk of domestic screen fare. The film is a quota unit, produced in England by 20th Century-Fox. Technically, it is well-knit, but that will hardly be sufficient to build word-of-mouth. The all-Irish cast is chiefly concerned with the romance of a girl and a border guard who is hunting her brother for gun running.

Weak western fare is "Covered Wagon Trails." From production details it has all the earmarks of hurried manufacture. For story it has an incoherent theme that doesn't hold up when the conclusion rolls around. Jack Randall, horse dealer, is awaiting a wagon train from the east bearing settlers and his brother. His brother is murdered when he seeks the Randall stock. Randall sets out to get the killer and then see the wagon train safely into Prairieville. To this end, there is much shooting, fighting that is too obviously theatrical, and riding. The chief item on the credit side is motion, violent and otherwise. The photography, a vital factor in western films, is second rate—many scenes seem to have been shot in cloudy weather. Raymond K. Johnson directed.

Disregarding its production shortcomings, this film biography of the Negro scientist who is still living has every indication of potency at the boxoffice but within its sphere. Its particular audience will be colored spectators. Dr. Carver, who is working at the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, appears throughout the film as narrator and philosophic guide to a student who comes to him and poses the question of his ultimate work—a colored graduate's place in the world. Most of the film concerns Dr. Carver. It covers his life from the cradle to his present high position in the scientific world. For the most part, the film uses amateur talent and many stock shots for atmosphere. However, it puts its points over with dignity. A local colored audience responded easily to its every emotional demand.

The old, old story of the young girl who comes to the city seeking a career—in this case as a model—and falls victim to the enticements of a slick villain is told here with little to recommend it. Turn back the years to the count of 50 and you will have the-villain-pursued-her—all over again. Such drama passed out with high-laced shoes. This particular yarn is told against the Hollywood scene, mostly in its streets. Such familiars as a needy ailing mother and wild parties in which the heroine is ruined are offered with little imagination. At length her true love marries her and the villain gets his under the wheels of a car.

This one can be put over to some degree, it seems likely, by creating an aviation stunt, such as a dummy plane mounted on the top of the marquee, with its propeller spinning. Work up a connection with stores that sell model airplane assembly kits for attracting the youngsters. Miss Gifford is a capable little actress who should go places in the minor feminine performance line. Dunn gives his usual type of delivery to the usual role. For the patronage this film would most naturally attract it seems advisable to play up the rebellion angle at the border, a course pursued at the New York run. Recent newspaper headlines anent IRA incidents in Ireland could be tied in to lend flavor to this approach, if desired. Numerous scene stills also lend themselves to creating an action campaign. Miss Wood appeared in "The Ghost Goes West" and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," which is deserving of prominence in your advertising and exploitation. A street bally that should get attention might be a man, in ragged costume, being taken in tow by a man dressed as a police guard, both of them winding up at the theatre.

As a dramatic offering this film is better left alone. Compared with B product it takes its place way down in the alphabetical list. However, if it must be played, spotting it in low gear seems its best bet. There are no names in the cast that carry any following. If this one must be played, it will probably be wise for the exhibitor to invite the audience to come and cheer the hero and hiss the villain, as in the old gaslight days. They might go for it. A number of such shows have been enjoying success in New York for some time. In addition, he might plaster the town with "Beware, Captain Moonlight" teasers and work up a little stuff on the highwayman angle. It is costume stuff, stuffy at that. While this film will obviously find its best niche with colored audiences, an attempt might be made by the interested exhibitor to attract his local liberal element. Dr. Carver's reputation is widespread and emphasis should be placed upon the facts that he personally appears and speaks in this production. If it can be worked up tastefully, a display of peanuts, with which Dr. Carver has achieved his greatest renown, should be created along with by-products such as various oils, plastics, paints and the like. What has been commercially developed from the peanut is directly attributed to Dr. Carver. In any case, let dignity be your guide.

Approach and technique to this serial shows slight regard for the gullibility of even the youngsters. The conception of the events depicting the efforts of the railroad to get through a domain lorded over by an outlaw chief is obviously outmoded. Dick Foran, as the hard-hitting Jeff Ramsey who battles the outlaw, is wasted by a poor script and inept production. Most of the action is featured by fights with the Indians who are incited by King Carter, played by Harry Woods. Anne Nagel, James Craig and Tom Fadden are featured. Is Modern Morality a Failure?

James A. FitzPatrick 8 Mins.

About a year ago, James A. FitzPatrick conceived the idea of making a series of pro and con short subjects. Topic of discussion was to center around modern morality. After making one with Dr. Bertrand Russell and Dr. Stephen S. Wise, FitzPatrick abandoned the idea. Fortunately for himself, he preserved the initial effort. For in this reel, Dr. Russell and Dr. Wise present their views briefly on companionate marriage. It offers some exhibitors an opportunity to capitalize on the nation-wide furore raised by the court's rejection of Dr. Russell as a professor of mathematics at the College of the City of New York. Dr. Russell's position may suffer for he is somewhat at a disadvantage against the studied eloquence of Dr. Wise in an ineptly produced and photographed short.

Actually this is the "Triumphal March and Entry" from the Verdi opera. Frederick Feher conducts and the National Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra plays the music, aided by a choral background. The camera work and recording are finely done. The music is a standard orchestra piece and is played in musicianly style. The audience for this one should be drawn from the Deanna Durbin following. Future numbers planned for this series should keep that audience coming back for more. Worth while.

A Self-Imposed Epitaph to an Impotent Theatre and an OVERDUE APOLOGY TO THE ENLIGHTENED PUBLIC!

Theatre buildings are business properties, but like persons they are ofttimes left impotent at birth through lack of personality in their appearance and physical makeup; or they become so later by reason of old age, passing fashion or the need for nourishing maintenance. Yet incompetent movie theatres, young or old, can be restored to high productivity through House Appeal—the chief ingredient of which is COMFORT. Sad indeed is the plight of the emaciated picture theatre whose very appearance stamps it as physically unfit in the eyes of an enlightened public. Such theatres actually advertise their own discomforts and other deficiencies detrimental to patronage. . . . In the May 25th issue of The Modern Theatre section, you readers of BOXOFFICE will be given another strong draught of House Appeal, after which many of you will decide to do something about it. The editors are enriching this next issue with a particularly potent presentation on "Lighting Effects," an especially important essential to a theatre's pep and personality—the sort of vitality that begets more business for the boxoffice . . . . and besides, there'll be plenty of other slants and side angles on business restoration that you won't want to be missing, such as air conditioning, architecture, acoustics, decorations, seating, projection, sound reproduction and many other subjects intimately involved in creating more patronage through the medium of COMFORT. You can't miss if you'll make it a point to read

BLITZKRIEG FROM HOLLYWOOD

HIGHER admissions and extended playing time.

With increasing intensity, this double cry rains down on the industry from those otherwise pleasant heavens which ceiling the studios. Here is the answer to trouble overseas.

Hollywood, sticking by its solution, is trying very hard indeed to get others stuck in it.

The conclusion is very simply reached, at that. So much money came from Europe before Hitler marched. If X countries kicked in X numbers of dollars, the grand total, of course, must remain at X. It makes little difference how the figure is reached. If Europe no longer can be depended upon, it's up to America to plug the hole. Severe restrictions in England, with something more drastic to come, cut no ice. Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium out of the running, with Sweden lucky if she escapes, make it the more regrettable. But X is X and Hollywood, you can bet, knows its letters.

This immediate assumption that the international gross, stemming from all directions will, or must, remain at its unchangeable level regardless of who or what contributes to that level is hastening the crisis in this industry. For no matter how the situation is sliced, no matter how loudly goes the whistling in the dark, there is no assurance of anything of the sort.

In fact, caution dictates immediately and clearly that the total will drop or, certainly, is in serious danger of dropping. Caution does not suggest it as feasible or in good business automatically, and autocratically, to issue blanket decrees that admissions must go up and playing time be extended in a manouvre designed to transfer the whole burden from one shoulder squarely onto another.

Hollywood insists the answer now is in the hands of the American exhibitor. He must pick up the slack. The theatreman must bend backwards and gyrate in all directions in his desire, and in his eagerness, to help the producer so that he, in turn, may continue to do a sterling job of it at the studios. Actually, there is an undeniable need and an obligation for the exhibitor here to assume part of the burden. Actually, too, there is no need for Hollywood to feel that it can escape its own share of the responsibility. Nor should it try.

That responsibility is heavy and foreboding. It will require sympathy and the concrete thing, which is action, from all quarters, but it can have no place for exemptions granted to, or assumed by, any one group.

If exhibitors are to assume their part of the deal so must the studios and the men who run them.

Hollywood must make up its mind to spend its lavish dollar more judiciously, more wisely, more discreetly and also to spend it less freely.

Hollywood, as well, had better reorganize its mental boundaries in a realization of the limitations of the American market and it had better do its manufacturing with both eyes glued to the outlet. Rainbows don't last.

Once more and who knows for how many times now, this does not mean cheap pictures. It does mean good and better than good attractions, more carefully blue printed, more conservatively made, less extravagantly turned out.

A lot of world sprawls beyond Hollywood's borders. Events in it and trends in it cannot be pigeon-holed forever.

GOV'T SKIRTS FACTUAL "MEAT" IN PRE-TRIAL QUIZZES; WANTS TO AVOID TIPPING ITS HAND

New Line of Questioning Only Scratches Surface On Government Action

NEW YORK—The consensus among distributor counsel is that the government has suddenly altered its line of attack in questioning topline industry executives at pre-trial examinations in the big suit with the idea of not tipping its hand any further until the trial gets under way in federal court here June 3.

The feeling in major counsel quarters is that examiners for the department of justice are laying off the real stuff and holding the "meat" back until the same men are called to the stand at trial.

Under the government's plans, defendant witnesses are to be paraded before Judge Henry Warren Goddard as soon as the opening statements are launched by both sides. In department circles, the explanation for this procedure is that the industry's leading executives then will give the presiding judge a first-hand picture of the background of the film business before complaining witnesses are questioned.

"Real Questions" in Court

Distributor lawyers also feel that when the executives are called the real questioning will take place with a judge to rule on what is permissible and what is not for the record.

Furthering the contention which obtains in film circles is the switch from Robert L. Wright to John F. Clagett on pre-trial interrogations. This took place when Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, and Charles C. Moskowitz, in charge of Loew's metropolitan operations, were questioned.

The line of questioning directed at these men only scratched the surface, one lawyer told BOXOFFICE.

Repeats Previous Queries

In the case of Blumberg and Moskowitz, the examiner repeated questions asked previous Universal and M-G-M executives. The lawyers are suspecting something, adding "the government now is only going through the motions."

Very little has been accomplished by the recent examinations, insofar as the government is concerned, according to film counsel who point to the fact that every court motion for particulars has been won by the defendants much to the surprise of certain department of justice men.

As a result, it is stated, the government has had to give out information which it was planning to withhold until trial. And because of this, attorneys add, it is not surprising that a new line of approach has been adopted by the plaintiff.

Another incident which seemingly is mystifying distributor legalites is the fact that before Darryl F. Zanuck came on

Moskowitz: He Knits His Own; Blumberg: He Pooled Theatres

NEW YORK—Nate J. Blumberg, former RKO vice-president and general manager and now Universal president, participated in negotiations leading to pooling deals by RKO units in Des Moines with A. H. Blank, in St. Paul with Minnesota Amusement, in Cleveland with Warner and in Kansas City with Paramount and Fox Midwest, he stated at pre-trial examinations in the all-industry suit. Cliff Work handled the deal for joint operation of the Hillstreet in Los Angeles with Rodney Pantages' theatre of the same name in Hollywood.

In all instances, the witness said, there were too many first runs in town and not enough product. The pools, he added, turned losses into a profit by "intelligent handling of operations."

RKO had the Orpheum in Des Moines and a small interest in the Roosevelt, a small neighborhood house, while Blank operated the Paramount. RKO had RKO product, half of Warner and Columbia.

In St. Paul, RKO had the Orpheum, and the President, since torn down, was being operated by RKO Realty Bondholders. Minnesota had two or three theatres and Blumberg's impression was the Strand was brought into the deal after the pool was formed. RKO had RKO, Universal and

NEW YORK—As head of metropolitan New York operations for Loew's, Charles C. Moskowitz keeps to his own knitting and has not discussed out-of-town product or pooling deals in which the circuit's theatres have been involved with Joseph R. Vogel or Nicholas M. Schenck. So Moskowitz testified when questioned at a pre-trial examination by John F. Clagett, special assistant to the attorney general.

But, despite his insistence he knew very little about the theatres handled by Vogel, Moskowitz was questioned at length on such situations as Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Denver, Houston, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Memphis, New Haven, New Orleans, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, St. Louis and Washington.

The witness, from what scant knowledge he apparently had, said he believed Loew's Century in Baltimore was closed and that Loew's had a financial interest in the Great Lake, Hippodrome and Buffalo, operated by Vincent McFaul for the Shea interests. His understanding, also, was there is no pool between Warner and Shea. While he believes the theatres in Cleveland operated by Loew's are the State and Stillman, he has never heard of them

Legal battery flanks Loew's metropolitan New York theatre operator on his way to appear before government counsel to testify in his examination before trial in the all-industry suit. Left to right, the group includes Lawrence Bunker of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner and Reed, prominent law firm representing Loew's; Moskowitz, Jay Eisenberg of the Loew home office legal staff, Edward McLean, of the Davis office; J. Robert Rubin, Metro's general counsel, and John W. Davis, senior partner of the outside law firm defending Loew's.

OIL CASE MAY SET SUPREME COURT KEYNOTE IF ALL-INDUSTRY ACTION REACHES TRIBUNAL

Eye Ruling Trade Gain No Excuse for Price Fixing Activity

By EARLE A. DYER

WASHINGTON—Treatment which may be accorded the distributors should the all-industry suit reach the supreme court is foreshadowed in the decision of that tribunal in the so-called Madison oil case.

Affirming a district court decision holding 12 corporations and five individuals guilty of violations of the Sherman act, the court, in effect, held that a business combination that has the purpose and the power of fixing prices is in violation of that law even though the controls it exercises are designed to improve conditions within an industry.

"Under the Sherman act," the court declared, "any combination formed for the purpose and with the effect of raising, depressing, fixing, pegging or stabilizing the price of a commodity in interstate or foreign commerce is illegal per se."

Was Price-Boost Case

The oil case differed from the film suit in that it was based upon concerted action by the major oil companies to purchase and withhold from the market large quantities of "distress" gasoline, the effect of which, the government charged, was to raise the prices of gasoline to dealers and the public.

In its decision, however, the court went further than that issue in holding that the depressing of prices was as illegal as their raising, thus attacking one of the contentions of the film distributors that the practices of the motion picture industry tend to keep prices to exhibitors at a reasonable level.

Cites Court Stand

The keynote of the supreme court's attitude on the question was expressed by Associate Justice Douglas in delivering its opinion, when he said that "for over 40 years this court has consistently and without deviation adhered to the principle that price-fixing agreements are unlawful per se under the Sherman act and that no showing of so-called competitive abuses or evils which those agreements were designed to eliminate or alleviate may be interposed as a defense."

Of major importance, however, was the warning that where Congress has the power to accomplish the aims sought, industry must not attempt to attain them without Congressional authorization.

In the oil case, Justice Douglas declared, "the fact that Congress through utilization of the precise methods here employed could seek to reach the same objectives sought by respondents does not mean that respondents or any other group may do so without specific Congressional authority."

The elimination of so-called competitive evils is no legal justification for such programs, he said. "Ruinous competition, financial disaster, evils of price cutting and the like appear throughout our history as ostensible justifications for price-fixing. If the so-called competitive abuses were to be appraised here, the reasonableness of prices would necessarily become an issue in every price-fixing case. In that event the Sherman act would soon be emasculated; its philosophy would be supplanted by one which is wholly alien to a system of free competition; it would not be the charter of freedom which its framers intended."

Reverting to the theme that it is Congress and not the courts which has the authority to pass on these questions, the opinion continued:

"Congress has not left with us the determination of whether or not particular price-fixing schemes are wise or unwise, healthy or destructive. It has not permitted the age-old cry of ruinous competition and competitive evils to be a defense to price-fixing conspiracies. It has no more allowed genuine or fancied competitive abuses as a legal justification for such schemes than it has the good intentions of the members of the combination. If such a shift is to be made, it must be done by the Congress."

Believes Collapses Overseas May Induce Suit Settlement

By LEONARD WEISBERG

NEW YORK—Those who favored, or saw the possibility of, a consent decree as a means of settling the government's key suit admit the idea has cooled to the point of collapse so far as industry objectives are concerned. But in a very important quarter, somewhat removed from legal or political machinations, a view persists that a very definite chance for discontinuance of the suit exists.

The department of commerce would be the body to ask for a "common sense" approach to the situation and the invasion of Holland and Belgium would provide the reason; the department of justice would not be consulted and "the whole thing could blow up in 24 hours." So goes the speculation on the theory the government has as much as, if not more than, the industry at stake in keeping commerce humming in high gear during times of international insecurity. And now a quote:

"The government might be made to see that it would be far more beneficial to keep an industry such as ours intact than for the department of justice to gain the satisfaction of winning another court battle. And in the long run, the cost to the justice department of preparing and trying the case would be a drop in the bucket as compared to what the mouth that feeds it might lose if the industry is defeated, is compelled to disintegrate, is forced to cut its payrolls and accept distress bids for its theatres."

Holland and Belgium enter the picture by way of offering irrefutable proof that foreign markets have shrunk to a negligible source of revenue as against the 40 per cent that normally comes from abroad. Since it is the commerce department's responsibility to see that domestic commerce rolls with as little shackling as possible, the foreign situation looms as a distinct impediment. Until now, this source avers, Thurman Arnold has turned deaf ears to majors' pleas that the loss of foreign markets has all but demoralized their financial reckonings.

Assuming the commerce department does present its view to those in Washington not as single-track minded as Arnold is pictured, it would be coupled with the observation that the cost to the industry of defending the suit, which is estimated at millions, and the probable effects of the Neely bill, assuming it becomes law, would be of such combined force as to sharply interfere with the "benefits, whatever they may be, presently enjoyed by the government from the motion picture industry."

Opinion that the suit may yet be settled seems to gain weight from another viewpoint, according to BOXOFFICE's informant. This stems from the fact the commerce department asked for, and was supplied, voluminous data on every important phase of industry machinery. The request was made openly on the grounds the information might form the basis of an acceptable trade practice code with the justice department's benefaction. The facts were supplied with "confidential" stamped all over them, it is said. They later formed the groundwork for the commerce department's approach to the justice department for a consent decree. This procedure made it possible for Arnold to view openly the "confidential" data referred to the commerce department and which can be expected to be used against the majors should the suit go to trial.

Now that Arnold has made it known he will not countenance a consent decree, this informant takes the position the commerce department "must save face" with the industry and do all in its power to secure some form of settlement.

Notes to You from Red Kann

NOT AT ALL by accident did Stanton Griffis embark upon his plea for the continued independence of this industry when he spoke recently before the Los Angeles Town Hall. It so happens that his address naturally divided itself into two parts. One was designed to be of general appeal to the average reader. The other was more particularly aimed at the financial world. Both, however, were directed at registering one company's attitude—and very conceivably beyond—toward governmental influence and even interference in its business. A quick dip into the text makes that clear. Witness:

> "A great combination of art and business finds itself today beset on every side by attacks of local, state and federal agencies, in the courts and the legislature, harassed by such congressional bills as the Neely bill—harassed and tormented by suits of the department of justice aimed toward forcing the major companies to separate theatre ownership from production; worn down by taxes of every conceivable nature; inhibited and limited by almost a hundred censor boards which have sprung up around the country; all at a time when an unprecedented collapse of foreign income is upon us due to the breakdown of foreign currencies and the great war."

But, too, there was another angle. How it will register with the political colossi of all parties in Washington is as much for you to ponder over as it is for us. It could be troublesome, although it might not be, for an attitude like this to percolate around the nation:

> "This is an industry, too, that consistently, even if not quietly, sticks to its knitting of furnishing amusement, laughter, entertainment and escape; spends its far-flung energy in making the world a happier place to live in; resolutely endeavors to keep out of the field of politics and propaganda, although I sincerely believe that, if the motion picture companies should so desire, and would for the moment stray from this principle, it could, within a very short time so influence public opinion as to elect a congress and a president . . ."

Yet, regardless of all of this, Griffis made one comparison which is funnier than immediately appears to the eye. Talking of Paramount as a developer of by-products and citing the profit from candy vending to be in excess of the interest on its indebtedness, he compared the company with Armour.

It is probably needless to stress the observation that Armour deals largely in hams.

Essay on Traffic

"A trust-buster weary of his title" is how the Associated Press describes Thurman Arnold who "is out to sell the anti-trust laws anew as guardian of the market place where American housewives buy milk for the kids, gas for the car and movies for the whole darn family."

Great corporations in steel, motors, glassware and aluminum have battled with him in the courts, but with Arnold, continues this Washington dispatch, the attacks have been directed—and presumably will continue so—not at cutting down the size of companies, but at keeping them in bounds. A quote to illustrate:

> "Consumers never could be convinced that size in itself is an evil. They know that the automobile they ride in could not be produced except by a large corporation. They remember when glasses and dishes and hammers and all the things that are now sold at the 10 cent store at low prices used to be luxuries."

His tocsin sounds for "free trade within the borders of the United States." Bearing on that approach and in view of June 3, it is pertinent to record this, too:

> "We have an instrument already at hand in the form of our anti-trust laws. They are the only expression of our competitive ideals which has any positive force behind it. Maintaining a free market is like controlling traffic. It is not a difficult job, but it is a continuous one. The referee has been too long absent from American industry."

CENTURY-FOX FILM CORPORATION

PRODUCT ANNOUNCEMENT for 1940-41

At a time when great pictures are more than ever necessary for the continued prosperity of our industry, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation takes pride in announcing its production program for the season 1940-41.

We expect to release 52 feature pictures; and, for exhibitors throughout the world, it is of the utmost importance to note that with leading foreign markets destroyed or weakened by war or currency restrictions, this Company has made no curtailment in its production budget. In our opinion this is the only policy which can assure to theatre operators and ourselves the quality of pictures which is vital to progress and profitable operation.

From the stories and with the stars, players and directors listed on the following pages will come the great majority of the productions released by this Company next season. Because of circumstances which nobody now can foresee, some of these stories may not be produced—in their final form some may not measure up to our hopes, others may be replaced with timelier, more important subjects. In every case, however, where a change is made, it will be done solely to improve the program.

In listing the personalities for our product, as well as directors, we name only those who are under contract to this Company or whom we have already borrowed from other producing companies. As in the past, however, we expect to use additional boxoffice names not now ready for announcement.

Twentieth Century-Fox is proud in the knowledge that as of today we have on our books more accounts than ever before in the history of this Company. To our customers throughout the world we present this program which we sincerely believe to be the greatest and most forward-looking list of pictures we have ever had.

. . . of which 26 will be produced from the following stories, or others timelier and greater . . . all on a scale worthy of these extraordinary properties!

BRIGHAM YOUNG

Tremendous, human—being produced on a heroic scale. The cast already includes TYRONE POWER, LINDA DARNELL, DEAN JAGGER (brilliant Broadway star), Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Brian Donlevy, Mary Astor, Vincent Price. Written by Louis Bromfield ("The Rains Came"). Screen play by Lamar Trotti, author of "In Old Chicago." Directed by Henry Hathaway. To be launched with the greatest nationwide promotion 20th ever gave a picture.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS

Without a doubt the greatest sea story ever written! Set for the spectacular top-budget production its scope demands. Directed by Henry King.

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY

Today's runaway best-seller! The story property of the year! Richard Llewellyn's powerful, emotional novel will receive a production that assures it a place among the great pictures of all time. Directed by John Ford.

TIN PAN ALLEY
A lavish and magnificent musical on the scale of "Lillian Russell" —in the romantic setting where are born the songs the whole world sings and plays and remembers.
BROOKLYN BRIDGE
TYRONE POWER . . . ALICE FAYE . . . DON AMECHE . . . HENRY FONDA . . . LINDA DARNELL . . . EDWARD ARNOLD! New York during the decade that transformed it from an ordinary seaport to the world's greatest metropolis!
WESTERN UNION
by Zane Grey
Words of meaning to every American, and in them Zane Grey found his last and greatest story. The epochal spanning of our continent by wire—a vital lifeline to the nation torn asunder by the fury of the Civil War. A production of maximum importance and showmanship opportunity.
THE GREAT PROFILE
Adolphe Menjou plays the title role.

THE RETURN OF FRANK JAMES

In Technicolor

Boxoffice successor to "Jesse James," unanimously acknowledged 1939's biggest money-maker. HENRY FONDA plays the title role. Others already cast are Andrea Leeds, Henry Hull, Jackie Cooper, John Carradine, Donald Meek, J. Edward Bromberg, Eddie Collins. A top-profit certainty, made in response to unprecedented audience demand. Directed by Fritz Lang.

5th AVENUE

The brilliant new novel by Polan Banks. A story of the five decades from the glittering nineties to now. Definitely important boxoffice.

SGT. SAM DREBEN, U. S. A.

The unparalleled adventures of Fighting Sam Dreben, named by General Pershing "a one-man army." Vital and colorful, his thrill-packed story receives merited big-scale handling! Story by William Anthony McGuire. Directed by John Ford.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY

In Technicolor

The stand-out musical of 1940-41. Starring ALICE FAYE, DON AMECHE . . . and introducing tantalizing, torrid-voiced CARMEN MIRANDA of "Streets of Paris," Broadway hit that was her personal triumph. Songs by Mack Gordon. Directed by Irving Cummings.

HIGHWAY 66

The route that "The Grapes of Wrath" made immortal becomes the scene of another powerfully realistic drama . . . doubly boxoffice because of its association in the minds of movie-going millions with the sweepingly successful Steinbeck masterpiece.

THE GREAT COMMANDMENT

Its greatness given even more powerful impact by its astounding parallel to the happenings of our own times. Spectacular drama of a crushed and helpless people during the last days of Christ. The matchless might of Roman arms . . . countless legions and fearsome war chariots plunging resistlessly through enemy hosts. And through it all a truly inspiring love story. TYRONE POWER and LINDA DARNELL head the impressive cast!

SONG OF THE ISLANDS

Seldom has a story locale lent itself to such spectacular production. Vitally, arrestingly different drama of Hawaii's vast plantations . . . sensationally climaxed by a hurricane-driven, cane-field fire that threatens the island and its people with flaming destruction!

CHAD HANNA

The newest and greatest novel by the famous author of "Drums Along the Mohawk," Walter D. Edmonds! One of 20th's most important story acquisitions—already sweeping to the top of the book lists—acclaimed a "sure-fire, big-time best seller"! The exciting, warming, human story in which young Chad Hanna figures will be an unforgettable picture . . . produced with all the sweep and scope it merits!

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY

Drama at its mightiest . . . sweeping from the gay, dissolute court of England's Charles II to the remotest outposts of the savage Canadian Northland . . . depicting the London Plague and Fire, notorious Nell Gwyn, high intrigue, heart-stirring forest adventure. Story by Lamar Trotti.

I MARRIED A NAZI

The sensational Liberty Magazine serial that created a national furore . . . relating the amazing, unforgettable experiences of a young American woman, plunged into the Nazi reign of terror. JOAN BENNETT will co-star with RICHARD GREENE. GEORGE SANDERS also has an important role. Front-page impact, record grosses.

BELLE STARR

The fiery, high-born Southern beauty who became history's most notorious woman outlaw when carpet-baggers pillaged her family's fortune and Yankee troops murdered her father. Tempestuous romance, blazing with thrill and adventure. Story by Nunnally Johnson. ALICE FAYE will play the title role.

BROTHERS

Moving human drama of two brothers, bred in the teeming waterfront of today's San Francisco, and the girl they both loved. To be cast with three great stars!

RED CROSS NURSE

No more vital theme has ever inspired a great picture. Courage and sacrifice against a thrilling panorama of hurricanes, floods, Arctic storms, mine disaster. Alive with heart-lift, showmanship wallop.

DOWN ON THE WABASH

(TENTATIVE TITLE)

The realistic story of a young, small-town banker whose faith in himself and his fellow-men caused him to revolt against the powers throttling the community that was his home. Rich in young and mature love . . . electrifying in its explosive surprise climax.

Elsa Maxwell's PUBLIC DEB No. 1

(TENTATIVE TITLE)

Keyed to today's smartest comedy vogue! With famed Elsa Maxwell showing how debs tick and click. Co-starring LINDA DARNELL, GEORGE MURPHY, with Charles Ruggles, Ralph Bellamy, Mischa Auer, Berton Churchill, Franklyn Pangborn, Maxie Rosenbloom. Directed by Gregory Ratoff.

Irving Berlin's SAY IT WITH MUSIC

The "Alexander's Ragtime Band" of 1940-41! The great romance of the glamorous, fantastic 1920's . . . keyed to a title of incalculable value. Six new Irving Berlin hits will be added to his finest melodies of that incredible decade. Outstanding cast and production further insure the importance of this attraction. A showmanship show!

YOUNG PEOPLE

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, JACK OAKIE, CHARLOTTE GREENWOOD! The tumultuous and exciting cavalcade of a vaudeville child-star's rise, bringing back to you memorable highlights of Shirley's own spectacular career . . . featuring Gordon & Warren's best songs ever and a top-name cast. Directed by Allan Dwan.

THE CALIFORNIAN

Turbulent, action-crammed drama of California's most romantic days. Blazing with the reckless deeds of a mysterious caballero whose daring forays terrorized the tyrant clique despoiling the country and its people. TYRONE POWER heads a spectacular cast.

THE KHYBER PASS

A cut in the mountains which today holds the fascinated attention of the world. The great story of the historic gateway to the wealth of India.

STUDIO CLUB

Drama spotlighting the fascinating lives and careers of the world's most gorgeous girls . . . famed even in Hollywood for their loveliness! Revealing their ambitions, heart-breaks, loves, schemes! A story thrilling and unusual!

SUN VALLEY

Playground for the wealth and aristocracy of all the world . . . the internationally-famed headquarters for winter sports becomes the scene of SONJA HENIE'S most dazzling and enthralling picture. An exploitation natural of naturals.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES

William Brent's sensational Saturday Evening Post serial. A daringly new kind of football story showing the bitter disillusion of proud grid stars, when the high-pressure college "system" has used them up and their fame is forgotten. Packed every second with scoring punch.

LADIES OF THE ROAD

Hitch-hiking along the nation's highways . . . riding the rods of the transcontinental freight trains . . . a strange new class of itinerants confronts America! Their story will be screened in all its drama and timeliness!

DANCE HALL

Adapted from W. R. Burnett's powerful novel of young people in the steel towns. To be made with the same daring realism that characterized "The Grapes of Wrath."

LUCKY BALDWIN

The stirring, spectacular glorification of a great legend! What "Kentucky" did for Kentucky horse-racing, this will do for golden California and its same sport! And against this vivid background—the strange, dramatic and eventful life of the Far West's most colorful character! Of foregone appeal to every entertainment lover!

UNCENSORED

The absorbing adventures of London's gayest master-crook. Suspenseful audience dynamite!

MAN HUNT

Geoffrey Household's best - selling, super - thrilling novel of a big-game hunter who single-handed goes after the biggest game of all—a world-hated dictator!

PROPONENTS HAMMER FOR NEELY BLOCK BILL; MYERS TO RESCUE OF QUERY-WORN WITNESSES

House Committee Delves Deeply Into Mechanics Of Industry Measure

WASHINGTON—Consideration of the Neely anti-block booking bill as a whole rather than analysis of its provisions separately was urged by Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, in a pre-schedule appearance at the House Committee hearing as representatives of civic groups approving the bill bogged down before a barrage of questions regarding the measure's mechanics.

Interpreted as a move to forestall further query bombardments under which observers believed the civic group representatives fared rather badly, Myers went through the bill section by section for members of the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce. He explained just what the independent exhibitors hoped to get out of it, and expressed the hope that the committee would ask each opposing witness "whether he is prepared to defend block booking and blind selling."

Myers denied that the differential provision constituted "government price fixing," and in answer to a question by Representative Boren as to how prices are now affixed asserted that the companies have a "mathematical formula" based upon previous experience with theatres. "We are not supposed to know that," he added.

Raps "Monopoly"

"The opponents of the bill base their arguments upon alleged ambiguities in the measure, or hardships that allegedly will result from its enforcement," Myers declared. He contended that "by these practices the Big Eight have built up their monopoly. By these practices they maintain that monopoly. The bill will open the way for competition and neutralize or destroy their monopoly."

Charging that the distributors sought from the exhibitors all that the traffic will bear, the witness admitted that the exhibitors worked on about the same principle. However, he testified, the admission prices of some theatres might be lower were it not for contract requirements that the minimum of 15 cents be observed, "enforced," he said, "in order that the difference between subsequent-run and first-run admissions might not be too impressive."

Led into a discussion of the right to buy, Myers admitted that, except for the increased competition which is anticipated, the independent exhibitors will not be able to improve their run position.

"This can't be a bill really directed at one thing and shooting at something else, can it?" Representative South asked.

"I don't think so," Myers replied.

Representative Hinshaw suggested that the protection setup might be similar to that followed in the automobile and other industries where some dealers are given exclusive franchises and others are permitted to participate as subsidiary dealers.

Indicating that he was in sympathy with the efforts of the proponents of the bill to eliminate block booking, Representative McGranery asked Myers whether it would not be possbile to restrict the synopsis provision so as to eliminate some of its ambiguities. The witness indicated that he would discuss that with other proponents, and, possibly, offer an amendment.

Myers expressed reluctance to have any amendments made in the measure, however, pointing out that such action would delay enactment and possibly prevent the bill from getting through this year.

First witness to appear before the committee was Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman of Washington as chairman of the "national committee for legislation to abolish compulsory block booking and blind selling of motion pictures," who later was to appear as spokesman for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Bannerman was questioned exhaustively by members of the committee as to the manner in which community selection would operate. Her explanation, briefly, was that the bill would give to the independent exhibitor the same privileges which now, she said, are reserved for the producer-owned theatre, and pressure could be brought to bear upon the exhibitor to show the pictures his community wanted to see.

Members of the committee asked about cancellations, but the witness suggested such questions be directed to the exhibitors who will testify. She also evinced disinclination to discuss other trade practices or the details of the government's pending all-industry suit.

Mrs. Bannerman was followed by Henry R. Atkinson of Boston, a member of the legal committee which he said drafted the main provisions of the bill, who characterized motion pictures as "the greatest invention since the printing press and the radio."

"Community Selection" Is Keynote of Civic Group Leaders' Testimony

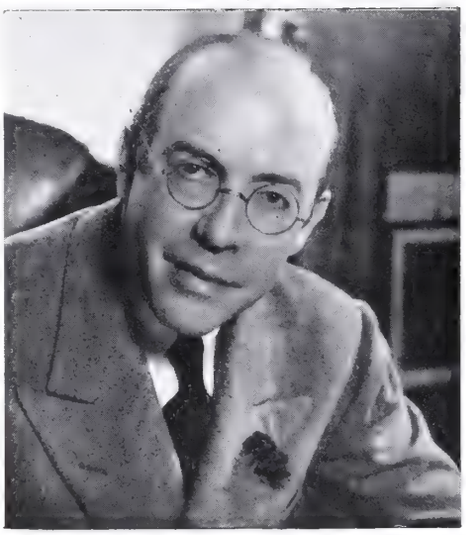
Atkinson declared that even a censorship movement would not be a substitute for the Neely bill which, he said, deals with the fundamental problems of the industry.

Devoting more than three hours to examination of Atkinson, the committee carried him through an exhaustive examination which culminated in the assertion by Representative McGranery that the synopsis provisions of Section 4 were so loosely drawn as to throw into the courts practically every controversy which would arise between producer and distributor.

Before an apparently hostile committee, Atkinson was forced to defend the measure against charges that the ban on the transportation of violating films was unenforceable, that the price differential provision lacked clarity, that the synopsis provisions were ineffective, that low-admission competition would spring up from theatres showing pictures rejected by the "good" exhibitors and that the courts would, in effect, become bodies for censorship.

During his examination, Atkinson tried to evade giving direct answers to many questions regarding the working of the bill, as, for instance, the query of Representative Hinshaw as to how "reasonable" price was to be determined in advance, which he answered by saying that it would be necessary to exercise "due care" and consider "all factors."

Calls "Edison, the Man" Inspired



East Orange, N. J.—"Edison, the Man" is an inspired film. This appraisal is in full consideration of the varying degrees of success, boxoffice-wise, accorded biographical efforts. But 105 minutes of the life of Thomas A. Edison on the screen, as John W. Considine jr., produced and Clarence Brown directed and as Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson and a heart-expanding cast enact it is something to infect theatregoers of all ages with a thrilling, emotional experience.

Space is inadequate to detail the kaleidoscope of the period covered where "Young Tom Edison" left off. Briefly, it opens at the Golden Jubilee of Light in 1929 where Edison, amazingly portrayed in his declining years by Tracy, is being honored. The toastmaster is telling of his accomplishments, which brings the story into view by way of flashback. This begins in 1879 and totals Edison's achievements as the world knows them. Woven into this pattern of fact and, possibly, fancy is portraiture of elevated skill. The human nuances speak volumes. The humor is earthy and unaffected. Indomitable perseverance, failures, pathos and love are eloquently fused. Such intangible screen entertainment as the successful culmination of a new invention becomes a thrill under the guidance of Brown's direction.

The script is steeped in undertones, resembling somewhat Edison's portrayed compassion and humility for his fellow workers. Yet there is a sense of exaltation as obstacles are overcome and climaxed in the realization of the incandescent bulb. At this point, the story returns to the Jubilee ceremony and Tracy delivers a plea for world harmony that, in a few moments, and without flag-waving, matches anything ever essayed along these lines in a motion picture.—WEISBERG.

NO CUT IN TOP ATTRACTIONS, BALABAN STATES FOR PARA'T

NEW YORK—"There will be no reduction in the number of top pictures to be produced and we will have as many additional good pictures as we can find material for," Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, told BOXOFFICE on the eve of his departure for the company's sales convention which is slated to get under way at the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles, Friday and terminate Sunday.

The company is well into the new season's schedule with 29 pictures either under way or scheduled to be in work by the first of the new year, he added and, while he did not comment on the total number planned, the expectancy is that Paramount will have 58 for 1940-41.

In commenting on Paramount's position as it contemplates the new season, Balaban also declared, "We pulled in our horns several years ago and, therefore, are in an excellent position to withstand recent shrinking in foreign business resulting from the war. While we are dealing with a restricted market, there will be no drastic change in our production plans for the coming year. Our men will see that our program for the coming season is even better than this season's."

Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, will stress these keynoters:

"The world today suffers from its biggest headache. Thank heaven, the old U. S. A. can still smile. It will be Paramount's job to help keep it smiling. Our conception of entertainment is to entertain—to please—to thrill audiences with sparkling romance, music and laughter and visual beauty. We are ducking the social significance of the heavy problem play. There are real enough real problems today.

"The Paramount formula is action, fun, suspenseful mystery expertly interpreted against colorful backgrounds by interesting and talented people such as Colbert, Cooper, Benny, Crosby, Lamour, March, Hope, Betty Field and many, many others."

Late last week, however, Agnew tipped off 11 of the new releases. They are:

"I Want a Divorce," starring Joan Blondell and Dick Powell; "Rhythm on the River," starring Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone and Oscar Levant; "A Night at Earl Carroll's" with Ken Murray, Rose Hobart and Blanche Stewart; "Texas!" with John Howard, Ellen Drew, May Robson and Broderick Crawford; "Dancing on a Dime" with Robert Paige, Peter Hayes, Eddie Quillan and Grace MacDonald; "Rangers of Fortune" with Fred MacMurray, Albert Dekker, Patricia Morison and Gilbert Roland; "Mystery Sea

The G.S.M. Talks to the "Boys"—

William A. Scully, sales chieftain for Universal, addressing the eastern sales regional at the Ambassador, Atlantic City as Cliff Work, Nate J. Blumberg, Joseph H. Seidelman and Charles D. Prutzman listen attentively.

CHICAGO—Universal's flexible sales policy for 1940-41 will be keynoted by six top bracket pictures at 40 per cent, three of which will be the Frank Lloyd productions to be sold separately. So William A. Scully, general sales manager, informed the western sales forces at the Drake Hotel over the weekend following the eastern meeting at Atlantic City.

The policy also provides for an alternative of the three top pictures, but not the Lloyds, being sold at 35 per cent with a split arrangement over a designated figure. In other brackets, there will be eight at 35 per cent, eight at 30 per cent, 12 at 25 per cent and 11 at 20 per cent or flat rental.

The budget for the new season's lineup of 59 pictures, it is reliably reported, will total $20,000,000, representing a substantial increase over the current season.

"No Unethical Dealings"

Highlighting Scully's address in Atlantic City was the declaration that Universal would not tolerate any unethical dealings with its exhibitor accounts. The company, he said, did not want any salesman who resorts to misleading statements as an aid in the selling of the product. He repeated that here.

"We want every Universal salesman to read and know the contract under which he is selling our product to the exhibitor, and what is even more important, we want that salesman to be sure that the exhibitor whom he is selling also knows the contract," Scully declared.

"We do not want to receive any exhibitor complaints that are based upon misunderstandings of the contract. We will not have salesmen make any promises that cannot be made part of the contract. I fully realize that this admonition is hardly needed for the type of salesmen we employ. We want it to stay that way."

Scully declared six salesmen achieved 100 per cent results, selling every possibility in their respective territories. These men are David Barnholtz, Simon E. Feld and Ludwig Hess, Pittsburgh; Robert W. Funk, Chicago; Joseph Leon, Philadelphia, and Lon E. Hoss, Los Angeles.

After pointing out certain selling deficiencies in the efforts of the force, Scully told the conventioneers that Universal had stepped over the 10,000 account mark.

"I can't be too hard on you boys after such an accomplishment," Scully said. "We have been trying for that mark for some time, and it is as much a tribute to your sales efforts as it is to the product you are selling that this fact was accomplished."

Lapidus Topped East In Scully Sales Drive

ATLANTIC CITY — Jules Lapidus, Pittsburgh, topped the Universal branch managers of the eastern division in the recently concluded William A. Scully drive. The other winners announced at the eastern sales meeting are Bernie Kreisler, Washington, second; Paul Baron, Charlotte, third; Joseph R. Kauffman, Cleveland, fourth, and George E. Schwartz, Philadelphia, fifth.

Joseph Finds Coast Publicity Setup Works

ATLANTIC CITY—The shift of Universal advertising and publicity headquarters to Hollywood is now considered permanently established after a two-year trial, according to Director John Joseph. With Dave Lipton assisting him on the coast, Joseph explained, and Lou Pollock handling the eastern advertising and publicity, the department is functioning smoothly.

Retires Debentures

NEW YORK—Selznick International is retiring its entire six per cent debenture bond issue of $2,900,000, embracing the entire investment in the company and leaving only the common stock outstanding.

15 Films Finished By Sept. 1 Is Goal

By DAVE GOLDING

ATLANTIC CITY—Fifteen of the new season's pictures will be completed and in exchanges by September 1, Nate J. Blumberg, president, told the Universal eastern sales meeting in his windup speech at the Ambassador Hotel.

In addition, Cliff Work, studio head, added that five of the 15 will be among the top bracket pictures. The group includes "Seven Sinners" with Marlene Dietrich; "When the Daltons Rode" with Walter Pidgeon and Kay Francis; Gloria Jean in "Little Bit of Heaven;" Allan Jones in "Riviera" with an original score by Jerome Kern, and the re-make of "Back Street."

Blumberg, in his talk, explained that this position was reached only because the studio has essentially completed its commitments for the current season and that June, July and August are open entirely for new next season's production. He said by the end of the week six of the new season's lineup will go before the cameras.

Other principal speakers were J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, who expressed satisfaction over the financial progress of the company; Frank J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager; W. J. Heineman, western sales manager; J. H. Seidelman, foreign sales manager, and the coast contingent of Cliff Work, production head; Jack Skirball, associate producer of Frank Lloyd Productions, and John Joseph, director of advertising and publicity.

Regional and branch meetings concluded the three-day session Monday night. Earlier in the day the sales force was shown rushes of "The Boys From Syracuse."

Keith Board Protecting Officers Against Suits

NEW YORK—In a move designed to protect officers and directors from personal liability, the B. F. Keith board has amended its by-laws to indemnify its executive personnel in any suits brought against the company.

Principally, it is stated, the action was taken because of the all-industry suit in which Leon Goldberg, treasurer, and Malcolm Kingsberg, vice-president, are named as co-defendants.

Other companies are said to have taken similar action, which has not been publicized. The B. F. Keith move is noted in an interim report filed with the securities exchange commission.

Nat'l Theatres Heads on Coast for Conference

LOS ANGELES—Spyros Skouras, Harry Cox and Peter Levathes, all of National Theatres, are here to spend about three weeks checking up on the coast theatres and conferring with Charles P. Skouras before the latter starts his second swing of the circuit's divisions in connection with the Spyros Skouras Showmanship Campaign. Charles is field marshal.

RE IS A GREAT PRODUCER...

Today—even in the face of difficult times and restricted markets—United Artists holds its 21 year leadership firmly, with the largest number of distinguished producers in its history. These producers realize that today, more than ever, outstanding productions are needed and will continue to back their judgment with their own personal fortunes and resources in the creation of the finest product our organization has ever been privileged to handle. With complete freedom for individuality, their plans for the 1940-41 season will give an impetus to the box office of theatres everywhere.

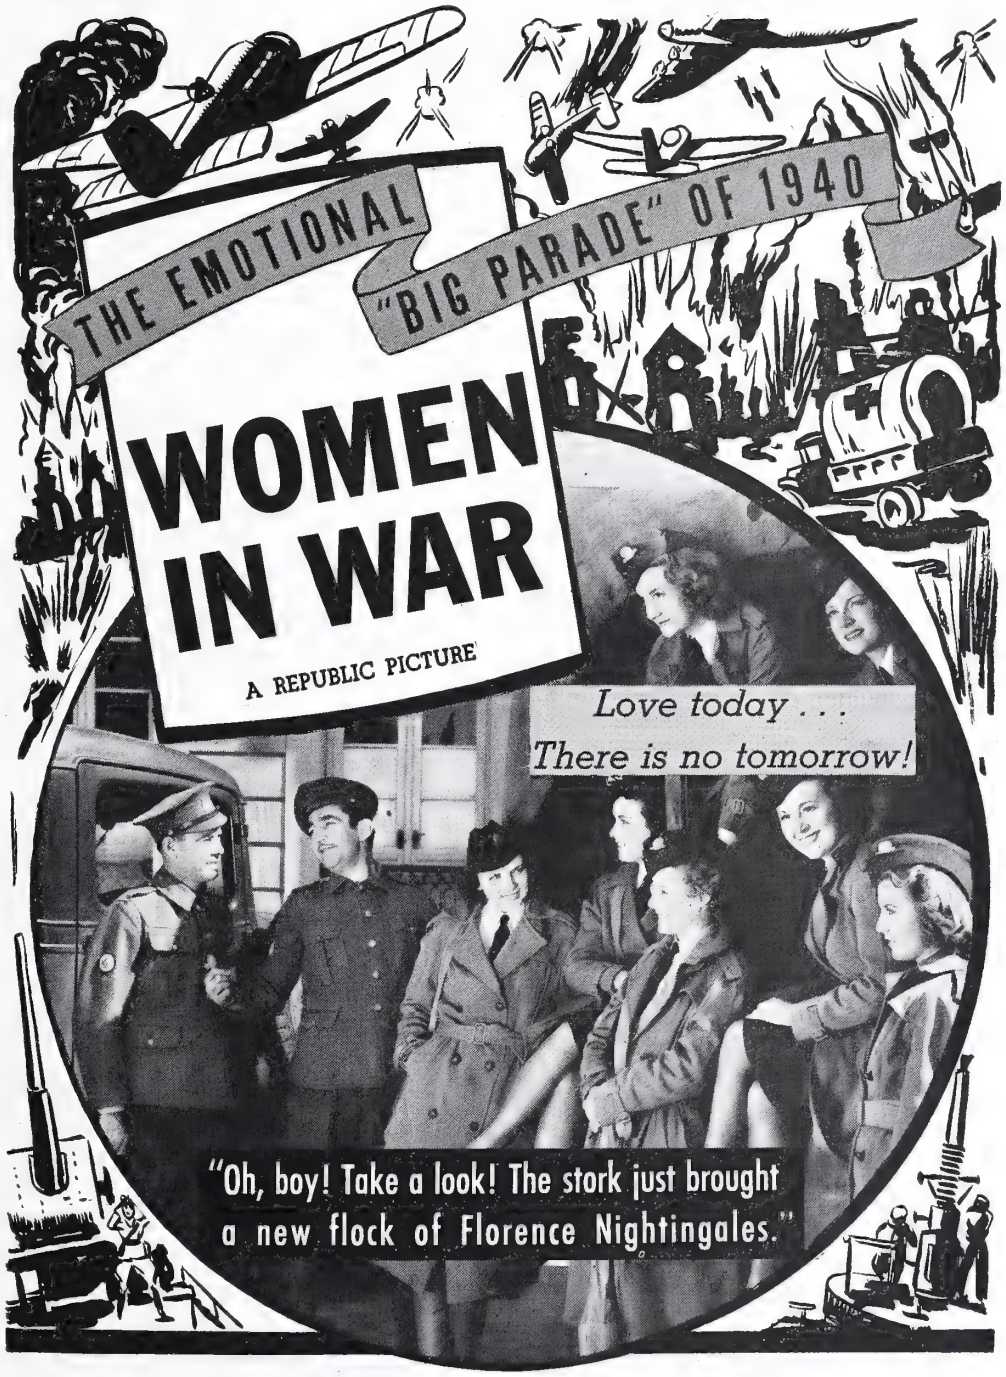
Raider" with Henry Wilcoxon, Carole Landis and Onslow Stevens; "Three Men From Texas," tentatively titled, but with William Boyd, Russell Hayden and Andy Clyde; "Comin' Round the Mountain," featuring an all-star radio cast headed by Bob Burns, Uncle Ezra, Una Merkel, Don Wilson and Jerry Colonna; "A Date With Destiny," starring Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew and John Howard, and The Aldrich Family in "Life With Henry" with Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst and Eddie Bracken.

Present from New York will be Barney Balaban, president; Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, and Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board. The convention itself, of course, will rest in the hands of Agnew, assisted by his three district sales managers: J. J. Unger, who handles the east; Charles M. Reagan, who handles the west, and Oscar Morgan, in charge of the south. Other representatives of the home office distribution department will include G. B. J. Frawley, once more in charge of general convention detail; Larry Flynn, again in charge of transportation; H. J. Lorber, A. J. Dunne, M. R. Goodman, F. A. Leroy, John Roper, G. K. Haddow, Jack Barry, Sam Palmer and Myke H. Lewis.

Department Heads Attend

Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity, will have three representatives on hand. These will be Alec Moss, Al Wilkie and P. Scollard. Austin C. Keough, vice-president and head of the legal department, will be another. Heading the foreign department delegation will be John W. Hicks jr., vice-president in charge of overseas sales, and with him will be George Weltner, his assistant; Albert Deane, in charge of foreign publicity; George Fraser, A. Reyes and F. Kennebeck. A. J. Richard of Paramount News will constitute a one-man delegation from that end of the company, while guests will be A. O. Dillenbeck and Donn Gibbs of Buchanan and Co., advertising agency which handles the Paramount account. Naturally, Y. Frank Freeman and William Le Baron will be present as representatives of the studio.

Forty members of the New York, New England, Philadelphia and Washington exchange territories concentrate for a joint departure from New York on Monday. Pickups are being made at Albany, Buffalo, Chicago and Kansas City en route west.



Aside from various home office executives, the conventioneers will include district and branch managers in the United States and Canada and members of the Paramount 100 Per Cent Club, made up of crack salesmen. The field list includes the following:

Albany: C. G. Eastman, manager.
Atlanta: Harold F. Wilkes, district manager; J. F. Kirby, manager.
Boston: William H. Erbb, district manager; A. M. Kane, manager, and J. Moore.

Pittsburgh and Clinton Wax Festive on "Lillian Russell"

By BILL ORNSTEIN

PITTSBURGH—With Rodney Bush and Christy Wilbert of 20th-Fox handling the arrangements, "Lillian Russell" premiered here at the Alvin and Senator theatres after a two-day fanfare which included a parade from the airport to City Hall where Mayor Scully officially welcomed Alice Faye and Edward Arnold, a dinner at the Urban Room of the William Penn with a tariff of $100 a plate and another parade in which the American Legion, city schools, police and fire departments participated.

Jacques Bustanoby, who prepared the menu and served a similar dinner to Lillian Russell and Diamond Jim Brady "in the good old days," functioned as maitre d'hotel at the "soup-and-fish" dinner.

Ira Cohn, local exchange manager, had plenty to do with the rounding up of cooperation from the various organizations. Also Edgar B. Moss, district manager.

Trade paper and newspaper representatives arrived here in droves Tuesday morning. Important circuit and independent exhibitors from the local and surrounding territory also made the trip.

Among the newspaper gentry were: Charles Howard, Boston Globe; Marjory Adams, same paper; Helen Eager, Boston Herald-Traveler; Prunella Hall, Boston Post; Ed Harkins, Boston Record; Peggy Doyle, Boston American; John Hutchins, Boston Transcript; Winsor French, Cleveland News; Arthur Spaeth, Cleveland Press; Harold C. Eckert, Ohio State Journal; A. S. Kany, Dayton Herald; Charles Gray, Dayton News; Al Weitschat, Detroit News; Charles Gentry, Detroit Times; Frank Farrell, New York World-Telegram; H. T. Murdock, Philadelphia Public Ledger; Elsie Finn, Philadelphia Record; Elizabeth Copeland, Richmond News-Ledger; Edith Lindeman, Richmond Times-Dispatch, and Fred K. Schuler.

Circuit representatives included: Morris Mechanic, New, Baltimore; Harry Browning, M. & P., Boston; Harry Remington, Fox, Detroit; Everett Callow, Warner circuit, Philadelphia.

Dan Mich of Look, Frederick James Smith of Liberty and Frances Simon of Pic represented the magazine field. From the trade papers were Hollis Kennehan of Film Daily, Theodore Sullivan of Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily; Lew Mentlik, the Exhibitor, and "Chick" Lewis, Showmen's Trade Review.

CLINTON, IA.—This town did itself proud as it forgot routine business affairs and returned to the Gay Nineties for the three-day festivities in connection with the opening of "Lillian Russell" at the Capitol and Rialto. Citizens paraded the town in costumes of the period while merchants dressed up their windows and shops to keep in harmony with the celebration.

Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Mary Healy and Arleen Whelan came on from the 20th-Fox studios to add luster to the event. Visiting newspaper men and trade paper representatives arrived on the new streamline "Treasure Island" train.

Gov. George H. Wilson and Mayor Pape of Clinton were hosts for the visitors. There was a parade in which the town took part. This was followed by a civic luncheon by the chamber of commerce.

Among the newspaper and trade paper representatives were: L. Shainmark, Chicago Herald-American; Luke Hunt, Chicago Daily News; Karin Walsh, Chicago Daily Times; W. S. Brons, International News Service; George C. Gallati, same syndicate; Frank Leary, United Press; Russell C. Landstrom, Associated Press; A. E. Neumann, Acme News Pictures; Buck Herzog, Milwaukee Sentinel; Merle Potter, Minneapolis Times-Tribune; Earl Pomeroy, Minneapolis Morning Tribune; Jules S. Steele, St. Paul Pioneer-Press; Keith Wilson, Omaha World-Herald; Barney Oldfield, Lincoln Journal & Star; Ken Clayton, Des Moines Register and Tribune; Ted Metzger, Associated Press; Winthrop Lyman, United Press; Walter Simmons, Sioux Falls Daily Argus-Leader.

From the circuits were Bill Hollander of B&K in Chicago; Charles Winchell, Minnesota Amusements, Minneapolis, and Ted Emerson, Tri-States, Omaha.

Earl Wingart, assisted by Eddie Solomon, from the 20th-Fox home office, handled all details for the company.

Theatre Investments Total $12,917,643

New York—Twentieth Century-Fox's investments in world theatres, as revealed in the company's SEC report for 1939, total $12,917,643 and shape up as follows:

National Theatres, $8,859,886.

GB circuit in Great Britain, $1,640,342 and "advances" of $2,097,415.

Roxy, New York, $893,636.

Hoyts Theatres, Australia, $320,000.

20th-Fox Paid MPPDA $146,019 Dues in '39

New York—In its report to the SEC covering 1939, 20th Century-Fox reports it paid the Hays office $146,019 in dues for that year.

To check percentage engagements, the company paid Ross Federal $305,685.

Parts With Shirley; $300,000 Involved

NEW YORK—A couple of days after Darryl F. Zanuck had told BOXOFFICE 20th Century-Fox probably would cancel its deal, the company terminated its contract with Shirley Temple. It is understood the player's pact had about 14 months to go.

To cover the unexpired portion of the agreement, and as a condition of abrogation, the company paid the starlet's parents $300,000. Unreleased and now the final Temple on the Fox program is "Young People."

Parents Plan Comeback When Shirley Grows Up

HOLLYWOOD—Shirley Temple will go to school until she is 16. When she has grown up, it is her parents' anticipation she will resume work in pictures.

Mrs. Temple, in a statement, indicated dissatisfaction over story material. "The studio now feels there has been a change—that Shirley is not the No. 1 star of the screen. Technically, that may be true, but personally we feel that it is not a question of Shirley's personal appeal but rather a matter of stories," she said.

Shirley in Tenth Place In BOXOFFICE '39 Poll

In the All-American Favorites Poll of 1939, annual poll conducted by BOXOFFICE for BOXOFFICE BAROMETER, Shirley Temple rated tenth place among the first 12 female players. She was outdistanced by Judy Garland, who earned ninth place. Shirley was No. 1 in 1937 and No. 4 in 1938.

Gov't Skirts Factual "Meat" In Pre-Trial Examinations

from the coast William P. Farnsworth and Paul Williams had been persistently after 20th-Fox counsel to produce the vice-president in charge of production. Zanuck, accompanied by William Goetz, his aide, visited the federal building several times during their stay in town on other business, but at no time did the department call them for examination.

However, if both men are called during the trial, of course they will have to be produced and tell their story then. Film counsel views this as a likelihood, although there is no telling what the department will finally decide to do. Plans for the presentation of the trial are being changed daily now that the government's battery of attorneys has arrived from Washington and is making headquarters in the federal building. Williams heads the staff of ten.

Donovan in Hollywood on Mysterious Conferences

HOLLYWOOD—William J. Donovan of Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, counsel for RKO in the all-government suit, has been spending the week here in important conferences. He flew in from Washington over the weekend and plans to be back in New York by May 20.

Whether or not he has been discussing a possible settlement of the impending suit as a result of his visit to Washington is not known, but it is understood he has participated in some of the talks with the department of commerce in that connection.

Time Out for Food at UA Convention— —Metropolitan Photos

Chaplin's Film at $2,500,000 UA's Costliest for New Year

NEW YORK—At a $2,500,000 cost, Charles Chaplin heads the UA producer list for 1940-41 in terms of most expensive negatives, Murray Silverstone told BOXOFFICE at the conclusion of the company's eastern regional meeting at the Waldorf. UA's 13 producers will spend close to $30,000,000 on the new program and there will be no shorts, he added.

Breaking down various producers' budgets for BOXOFFICE, Silverstone supplied these figures:

David O. Selznick's program will cost approximately $4,000,000 for two pictures, as yet undesignated.

Hal Roach's program will cost $6,000,000.

Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner" has been completed at a budget of $1,800,000.

James Roosevelt will spend from $800,000 to $900,000 on "Pot O' Gold," depending on a star he is after for the lead. Horace Heidt and his band already have been signed.

David Loew, in conjunction with Albert Lewin, is planning a $1,000,000 budget for "Flotsam."

Alexander Korda is spending $2,000,000 on "Thief of Bagdad" and plans to spend $1,250,000 on "Woman Hunt," his first UA production to be made in California, with Vivien Leigh. Also $1,000,000 on "Lady in the Dark," with Merle Oberon and Melvyn Douglas.

Walter Wanger's schedule calls for $1,500,000 for "Foreign Correspondent" and $1,000,000 for "The Long Voyage Home," the latter being directed by John Ford.

Edward Small has set $800,000 for "South of Pago Pago;" the same amount for "Kit Carson;" $1,000,000 for "Son of Monte Cristo," with Joan Bennett, and $1,500,000 for "Two Years Before the Mast."

Richard A. Rowland will spend from $750,000 to $900,000 on "Cheers for Miss Bishop." The increased cost depends on whether or not he can secure a certain star he has in mind.

Gabriel Pascal will spend $750,000 for "Major Barbara," by Bernard Shaw.

Although Goldwyn was scheduled to speak on Tuesday afternoon, he did not and the report circulated around the hotel he was advised by counsel to refrain from talking at the sales session. However, later the same afternoon, he was host to the sales staff convening here at a cocktail party in his suite in the same hotel. Selznick and Sol Lesser were producers who spoke Tuesday. Roach and Roosevelt outlined their plans Monday.

Reports of a settlement of the Goldwyn differences were denied by Silverstone. He said he knew nothing about the reported settlement and referred all further questions to Goldwyn himself. The producer merely said, "It is untrue."

Sales policy was given to the delegates Wednesday. Silverstone may go to the coast after the Chicago conference. He added if he did there would be no particular significance to the trip.

Goddard Indicates Fox Stays in Suit

NEW YORK—Although Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard reserved decision on 20th Century-Fox's application to dismiss the all-industry suit against 19 of its officers and directors, it seems a certainty the film company will lose its plea. At the conclusion of extended argument on both sides, Judge Goddard turned to John Caskey, Fox counsel, and declared, "While I'm not going to give a hump-backed decision from the bench, I am inclined to deny your motion." He granted both sides until May 24 to file briefs.

Caskey, at the outset of the hearing, introduced ex-Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, a 20th-Fox director since 1932 and a defendant in the action, and had the judge admit Hastings to the bar so that he might plead his own cause. Caskey's arguments were based on the principle that each of the 133 individual defendants involved is entitled to a definite statement of the charges against him, and those charges being lacking, the suit should be dismissed. He stated the government had proven no cause of action and could prove none. "Since the start of this action," orated the Fox attorney, "I have examined 219 of the 229 anti-trust cases of the department of justice, and this one is the most meagre." Caskey also caustically remarked, "I presume even the government will concede some of our activities are occasionally lawfull." A defendant cannot be made to sit in court for two years to discover if any charges will be brought against him, Caskey continued, and are not necessary in any decree which might be secured.

Says Acts Sincere

Then Hastings spoke on his own behalf. He told the court that he was perhaps a little "more sensitive" than other defendants at being included, because as a senator he had fought for laws, not to break them. He mentioned that the only crime he might have been guilty of was not inquiring too deeply into the affairs of the company, but that all his acts were sincere, as were those of the other directors. He then asked the suit be dismissed as against himself.

Paul Williams, government prosecutor, in rebuttal, pointed out the supreme court does not admit good intentions as a defense. The government, he said, does not accuse the officers and directors of wrong doing, or challenge the integrity of any of them. However, a corporation cannot function without some human beings and, in this case, it is the officers and directors who approved in the course of everyday business the monopolistic practices of which the government is complaining, he said. The government's theory, he added, is that through vertical integration these violations came into being.

Williams pointed out to Hastings that, if he resigned tomorrow, he would be dropped as a defendant or even if he waited until the last day before a decree was entered the same procedure would follow, with his successor named as a defendant.

Blumberg: He Sets Up Theatre Pools

Columbia product.

Mort Singer, who had leased the Orpheum in Minneapolis from RKO, made a pool in that town with Minnesota Amusement. RKO had a one-third interest in the Singer circuit and the Seventh St. Theatre was being operated by RKO for the bondholders.

Warner had the Lake and Hippodrome in Cleveland before the pool, while RKO had the Palace. The Allen was later added. RKO had RKO, Columbia and Universal, while Warner had Warner and 20th-Fox product.

In Los Angeles, the witness explained, a pool previous to the Pantages arrangement had been made between RKO and Warner, but after a year was discontinued because it did not work out very well. The Pantages deal was made because RKO had RKO product. Pantages had Universal which worked out satisfactorily when a day-and-date policy was instituted for Los Angeles and Hollywood.

Blumberg's recollection of the Orpheum, Kansas City, was that it was not involved in the Paramount and Fox Midwest arrangement because the theatre was being operated by the bondholders. Paramount had the Newman and Fox Midwest, the Tower. The witness' recollection of whether the Uptown was brought into the deal was not clear, he said.

On Sioux City Pool

In 1933, the Orpheum in Sioux City, Ia., was involved in a pool which was terminated by receivership. Singer then took over the house and Blumberg had nothing to do with the theatre from that point on. The receiver also disposed of the Orpheum in Omaha to Singer who later acquired the Brandeis.

Much ado was made by John F. Clagett, the examiner, over clearances in Omaha and Cincinnati. The questioning reached the point where Edward C. Raftery, counsel retained by Universal for the suit, objected to what he termed "re-trying the Youngclaus case."

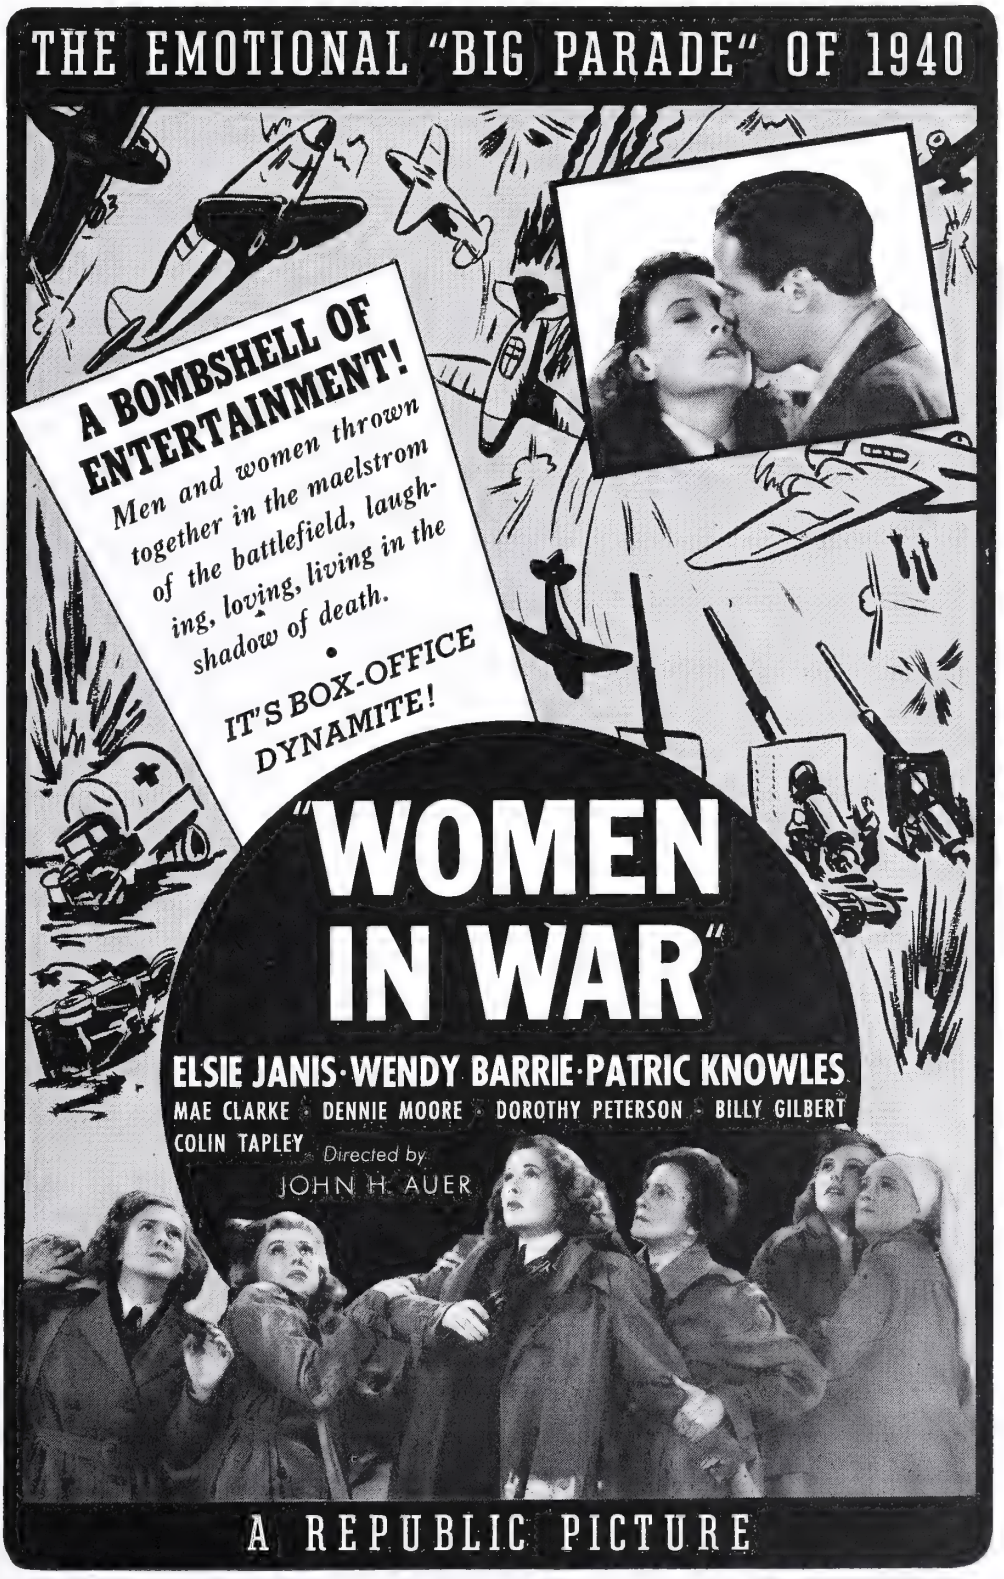
Later on when Blumberg was being pressed on what factors determine buying of pictures for the RKO circuit, Raftery again interposed an admonition by telling the examiner not to go into the merits of the Neely bill.

Blumberg was in a happy frame of mind and lightened the tension by a humorous incident which led to RKO being dispossessed from the Orpheum at Omaha. He also stated that during RKO receivership he often wondered what his title was. When the interrogator asked about first runs in the Albee, Brooklyn, Blumberg said he never regarded the borough as a first run, but subsequent to Broadway.

In his dealing with RKO's distributing department as well as others, he made many requests for reductions, he said, and "they wouldn't even give me the right time."

None of the RKO circuit contracts had any provisions for product for theatres to be acquired in the future.

Blumberg declared he never received a complaint from the Omaha Chamber of Commerce and he never sat on the local board which set up a zoning schedule there. Raftery told Clagett "the clearance schedule was set up by your clients and shoved down our throats."



A year before he came to New York for RKO, the circuit lost about $2,500,000, Blumberg stated. In 1933, his first year in the saddle, the loss dwindled approximately $500,000, and a year later went into the black.

The cost of film was the least problem when circuit losses were discussed. Each theatre can earn only so much, based on its gross, he said.

There never was a situation in RKO where the circuit extended playing time and cancelled out pictures by doing so. "As a matter of fact, we never had enough product," the witness asserted.

Because the theatre and distribution department are highly competitive friction always existed, he said. The theatres began making a little money and when the distribution department saw that it wanted the circuit to make a better deal, "which we wouldn't give them," he added.

When asked what determines the amount to be spent on top bracket pictures, the Universal head answered, "It is very difficult. If we had the answer to that, we'd have no problems in the industry." However, among factors taken into consideration are the number of theatres to play the picture, he said.

Moskowitz: Tends To His Own Knit

being pooled with RKO.

Insofar as Denver is concerned, the witness merely knew that Loew's was interested in the Orpheum, but whether the circuit owned the house or pooled it with RKO was something he could not answer.

Loew's recently added the Palace to the operation of the State in Memphis. The Palace was taken over from Malco. Moskowitz said Loew built the house, but was not familiar with the lease to M. A. Lightman.

Before Loew's built the State in St. Louis, it had the Garrick. In Washington, it is his understanding, Loew's Columbia plays continued runs after the Palace and Capitol.

Under his supervision are 73 theatres of the 130 in the entire circuit, Moskowitz averred. The 73 include the Capitol, Astor and Criterion on Broadway in a territory which embraces the metropolitan area, northern New Jersey, four theatres in Westchester, and houses in New Rochelle, White Plains and Long Island.

The Capitol here plays the largest proportion of Leo's product.

Gallup Poll on Duals To Start in Month

NEW YORK—Dr. George Gallup of the American Institute of Public Opinion, at the suggestion of Samuel Goldwyn, will conduct a nationwide poll on double features.

The investigation, to start in a month, will be independently pursued and not financed by the industry or any producer. It will consume two months and include 1,000 investigators interviewing 30,000 people in all social strata.

nation, effective June 1. This is two days ahead of the trial start.

Farnsworth was slated to handle the New York and northern New Jersey and part of Connecticut presentation of the all-industry suit, which, apparently, will be turned over to Seymour Krieger, who has spent some time interrogating a number of prospective witnesses in the early stages of the suit.

In private practice handling theatrical accounts before he lined up with the government staff, Farnsworth again will devote his time to his own business after June 1.

He is the second assistant to the attorney general who has been active in the big case to quit before trial.

SETOA Postpones Annual Convention Till July

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—The annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Ass'n, which was to have been held here June 23-25, has been postponed to an as yet unset date in July. Reasons advanced for the move are the current hearings on the Neely bill in Washington, the all-industry suit and the numerous sales conventions by film companies.

Republic Regional Dates Are Expected Next Week

HOLLYWOOD—With the arrival from New York of Herbert J. Yates for new season production conferences, Republic is expected to set dates for its regional sales conferences next week.

Studio Exemptions In Wage Act Loom

WASHINGTON—Several hundred types of jobs in the Hollywood studios may be held not to come under the wage-hour act as a result of an investigation now being made in California by Eldred M. Cocking, recently transferred to the wage-hour administration from the department of labor.

Acting to remove some of the classification uncertainties raised by the refusal of his predecessor, Elmer F. Andrews, to issue any definitions, Administrator Philip B. Fleming announces that the 615 work classifications contended by the producers to be executive or professional would be surveyed and made the subject of official ruling.

The first of a number of industries to be similarly investigated, the film industry has been selected, it is explained, because while "in the motion picture industry, which is one of the highest paying industries in America, the minimum wage is not a problem, the division has been asked to review the industry's classification of its employes as executives and professionals because of problems raised by the overtime requirement of the law."

Representatives and counsel of a number of the producers unsuccessfully urged such a determination upon former Administrator Andrews some 18 months ago, shortly after enactment of the law, but were told that there was no provision in the act authorizing the administration to make such interpretations.

Following the completion of Cocking's survey, Administrator Fleming will hold a public hearing to receive argument on any recommendations with which producers or unions may not agree. A final decision is expected to be rendered some time this summer.

Clarke Heads Carriers 8th Consecutive Term

NEW YORK—James P. Clarke of Philadelphia was re-elected for the eighth consecutive time as president of National Film Carriers, Inc., at the annual three-day convention held at the Park Central. He also is treasurer. Thomas Gilboy of San Francisco continues as vice-president and Clint Weyer of New York remains as secretary.

It is probable the next gathering will be held in San Francisco, but this is to be decided later by the executive committee comprising George Callahan of Pittsburgh, E. E. Jameson of Kansas City, Harold Robinson of Detroit, Clarke and John Vickers of Charlotte.

At a luncheon held the final day, Harry Mersay of 20th-Fox, Al Schwalberg of Warner, Henry Anderson of Paramount and M. Waxberg of RKO spoke to the assembled delegates.

Technicolor Dividend

NEW YORK—Technicolor has declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, payable June 15, to stockholders of June 3.

Names Pass Out, But Studios Learn It Last, Says Goldwyn

NEW YORK—"A lot of film personalities are dead and we producers don't know it—in fact, we're the last to find it out." So declared Samuel Goldwyn in the course of an interview that revealed some of the reasons the producer sought and won the decision of the American Institute of Public Opinion to conduct a nationwide poll on the double features.

Dr. George Gallup, head of the institute, nodded approval of Goldwyn's observation, but added he has not yet concluded whether his poll will delve into the question of players' boxoffice appeal.

Goldwyn was most enthusiastic about the poll—"I'm flattered that they have consented to do it." The survey is in "the public interest," he said, adding he thought it would also be of invaluable aid to Hollywood. With producers smugly settled in the studios, "miles away from the public," they do not have an accurate gauge of how well pictures are received, or if they are not well received why not, he declared. Neither do producers keep their pulse on what the public wants in the way of film entertainment. "Let's find out what the public thinks," he said, as a final boost in commending the projected poll.

Seeks Impartial Survey

Gallup will not accept a fee for conducting the survey. It will be without any financial aid from film interests so that it may be independent and impartial in its quizzing. "We feel it is of the same public interest as our political polls," Gallup said. In this respect Goldwyn asserted he has for the past 10 years been attempting to determine if the public really wants two features coupled with long trailers, games, dishes and other forms of inducements. The producer said that he, personally, cannot reconcile the attitude of exhibitors in sponsoring this type of policy since it defeats the very purpose for which producers are striving.

"No good picture can be good if the audience is tired and bored from a lot of other stuff," he observed. Asked if the poll should indicate a majority preference for duals would he alter his production policy to so conform, he replied: "You don't have to go out and make bad pictures—you make a lot of 'As' and sometimes you wind up with a lot of 'Bs.'"

See Washington Decision Vitiating Copyrighting

NEW YORK—The decision in Washington by Judge Bailey confirming the lack of discretionary powers of the register of copyrights is interpreted in copyright circles here as in line with the recent trend to vitiate the formalities that hitherto have been required in establishing copyright protection. In fact, these sources say, pending legislation such as the bill drafted by Professor Shotwell's committee is designed for taking even further discretionary powers from the register of copyrights.

The controversy which brought Judge Bailey's ruling arose when Clement L. Bouve, the register, refused to accept the deposit of 20th Century-Fox, or the claim of copyright, on a 20-chapter serialization of the story on which "In Old Chicago" was based. The serialization was intended for distribution to newspapers for publication in serial form. In defending the action brought by 20th Century-Fox, Bouve took the position that, under section 2 of the copyright act, he was vested with discretion, and that in the exercise of his discretion, he decided the material offered "did not constitute the form of deposit required by section 12 of the act."

Holland Market Loss Is Blow to Majors

NEW YORK—Loss of Holland is a big blow to American distributors, according to Reginald Armour, continental manager of RKO, who declares the German occupation of the Netherlands completed the disruption of operations in Europe.

Importance of Holland, aside from its source of revenue, is that the country is used as a clearing center for prints shipped to other countries and moneys coming from Eastern Europe usually clear through Amsterdam, Armour reveals.

He admits he does not know what possibly can be done about operating in Europe. Future policy of RKO will be decided after Armour confers with Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales.

Armour also believes continental Europe is gone as a revenue-bearing market for the duration of the war.

M. P. Biblioaraphy Holds Exhibit on May 20-24

NEW YORK—The Motion Picture Bibliography, a unit of New York City WPA Writers' Project, will exhibit its work at 345 Hudson St. May 20-24. "The Film as Art," first of the three-volume annotated Film Index being compiled by the project under the sponsorship of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, has been completed and is being indexed. The second volume will cover "The Film as Industry," and the third, "The Film in Society."

Bill in Harrisburg May Legalize Bank Night

PHILADELPHIA—Exhibitors are wondering whether Bank Night would become legal if a bill just offered in the Harrisburg legislature by Representative Francis Falkenstein should be passed.

His measure would legalize lotteries with the provision that 20 per cent of the receipts be used to aid the state's aged citizens. A companion measure would set up a "State Protective Investment Annuity Commission," which would sell "lottery shares" at $1 each, handing out prizes of $5,000 for 6,250 "investors."

In a Less Serious Vein

ATLANTIC CITY—To the tune of the pounding surf, Universal's eastern sales gathering of over 100 strong conducted its sessions at the Ambassador Hotel. All swimming was confined to the indoor pool; the ocean was too cold.

Brothers Jake and Dave Lutzer, Dallas, were kinda sad because no one wanted to play poker. And Jake is considered the best of them all.

The shooting galleries got quite a play with Bill Heineman, Frank McCarthy, Tom Mead and Joe O'Brien, giving one custodian of the clay ducks the best business he had since last summer. Heineman caused more damage than McCarthy and therefore was adjudged the better shot.

Genial Cliff Work got a nice welcome from the boys with a lot of comments about his increased girth.

After being with the company for more than 20 years, Shorts Subjects Sales Manager Leo Abrams delivered his first convention speech.

Although applause generally was waived at the sessions to speed things up on Bill Scully's request, the boys gave Andy Sharick a big hand for the decorations.

Hal Roach and Sol Lesser were the only two producers of the UA lineup of 13 to show up for the opening day's events. Louis Hyman, special representative for Lesser, also was there. Mary Pickford was the only one of five owners present at the initial luncheon.

Harry L. Gold, who conducted the local sessions, was all business and very little kidding. Whenever Harry gets nervous, he likes to clip buttons from the jackets of reporters. He refrained from this at the Waldorf where he met the press formally and very sedately.

Pittsburgh's Jimmie Nash claims the reason he did not get any rest in New York is due to the fact he lost the key to his room. A reward was offered to anyone who can reveal his whereabouts from Sunday eve to early Monday morn.

Atlas RKO Status Holds As Aviation Merger Flops

NEW YORK—With mutual abandonment of the proposed merger of Atlas Corp. and Curtiss-Wright Corp. the investments held by the former in RKO will not be affected. Among the provisions when the aviation merger was originally considered was an exchange of stock entitling each holder of one share of common to receive 65/100 of a share of the continuing company.

Such holder would have also received one share of common of a new Atlas Corp. which would have held approximately 40 per cent of the present assets of Atlas. These assets included the "so-called special situations" in which Atlas has investments, such as the common stock of RKO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO—Pete Wood, secretary of the ITO, is urging Ohio exhibitors to keep an eye on itinerant theatres which he says are increasing, and to report instances where such theatres show films without the state censorship seal.

Moskowitz Can Explain Those Graying Locks

New York—Take it from Charles C. Moskowitz those gray hairs on his head are there for a good reason. A very good reason.

He explained, in part, why to John F. Clagett, government examiner, the other day.

The differences which exist between Loew's and M-G-M in making a product deal are no different from those between the circuit and any other company, he said.

"Certainly we have difficulty buying M-G-M," he insisted. "Look at all these gray hairs," he advised, pointing to them. "It is not easier to make an M-G-M deal than with Paramount."

The Oranges Enjoy An Edison Pageant

EAST ORANGE, N. J.—Without a Thomas A. Edison there would never have been an "Edison, the Man." And without an "Edison, the Man" a large portion of the state of New Jersey would never have turned out by the thousands to witness the three-day "Edison Pageant of Progress," which wound up Thursday evening with the simultaneous world premiere of the film at six theatres in the Oranges. So the question would not be whether it was in respect to Edison or the film that the populace became enthused over. Suffice to say that the pageant was one of the most tasteful, colorful and publicity valued affairs ever conceived in the large-scale exploitation field.

Officialdom played a large part in the proceedings, so far as the details in rigging up the gala event was concerned. Governor A. Harry Moore proclaimed Thursday to be a state holiday. The governor and Mrs. Moore, U. S. Minister to Canada James H. R. Cromwell and Mrs. Cromwell, Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Mrs. Edison-Hughes, wife of the late inventor, and more than 100 civic, state and national leaders participated in one or more of the various functions that made up the pageant.

Spencer Tracy, star of the film; Rita Johnson, who has the feminine lead, and Clarence Brown, the director, came from California especially for the affair. They seemed to relish the excitement and were warmly received by crowds that witnessed the parade that culminated in the planting of a white oak in tribute to Edison.

There were numerous activities honoring the accomplishments of the late inventor. To mention a few: a charity ball at the Orange Armory, the unveiling of a 22 by 28-foot photograph in front of the West Orange Municipal Bldg., the opening of a flash of frozen light with a temperature of 320 degrees below zero that gave off a sensational display of varicolored lights, a concentration of a provisional battalion of mechanized military units, a parade including 45 floats and bands and other festivities.

Ickes Facing Foes Over Park Films

WASHINGTON — Senatorial enemies of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes —and they are many—are expected to take full advantage of the opportunity to put the interior department head "on the spot" when the Ashurst resolution for investigation of charges recently imposed for the making of pictures on the public lands comes up for consideration soon.

The resolution was approved Thursday by the Senate Committee on Public Lands.

Charging the secretary with having usurped the authority of Congress to deal with the public lands, Senator Ashurst of Arizona introduced his resolution April 24, providing for an investigation by the public lands committee of "the filming of motion or sound pictures on areas under the jurisdiction of the department of the interior, and any other matter with respect to the filming of motion or sound pictures on land belonging to the United States which the committee may deem it appropriate to investigate." A fund of $6,000 would be provided for the inquiry.

A few days later, during consideration of an appropriation bill, the Senator again attacked the fee impositions, which run as high as $500 a day, and secured Senatorial approval of a rider to the measure prohibiting the department from making any charges for the taking of pictures on public lands other than the national parks.

Since the interior secretary has made many enemies in Congress in the handling of the vast PWA funds which he administered until recently, it is believed the resolution will receive strong support.

Early Slapstick Product Offered by M. H. Miller

Sound Alikes: Buffalo Branch Manager John J. Scully and his brother, Bill.

Busiest man at the session was Tom Murray of the home office who handled all the arrangements. But nothing seemed to ruffle him, for he strolled calmly around the hotel with his new cigarette lighter.

Dave Levy and Max Cohen took advantage of Sunday's sun and sat out on the piazza for awhile.

Jack Skirball flew in and left the same night. Although rushed, he found time to hurry down the boardwalk to buy some salt water taffy for Martha Scott. Skirball swears she's Hollywood's new Duse.

Posted on the bulletin board was this wire to Scully. But Bill said it was a frame. Quote: "Listen you (censored) you're the swellest (censored) and you deserve all the (censored) credit in the world." Unquote. And it was signed "Margie." Frank McCarthy asserted solemnly he had nothing to do with it.

A friendly feud between Kreisler and Lapidus got off to a fine start at the banquet Sunday night. The boys are wagering the train fare to the coast on next year's results.

Solemn-looking Dave Miller, eastern district manager, proved to be a raconteur extraordinary at the banquet and had the boys rolling in the aisles with some choice anecdotes.

Joe Kauffman, Cleveland manager, scored with a witty dissertation on how to be a successful branch manager without working too hard.

Overage, Underage New to Him

New York—Asked if he had ever discussed overage or underage of pictures at the end of each season before making new deals with distributors, Charles C. Moskowitz, testifying in pre-examination before trial in the government suit, was stymied for a moment and asked the examiner, John F. Clagett, to explain what was meant by the words used.

The government interrogator gave a brief account of what he thought they meant, following which Moskowitz said, "I don't know as I ever heard of overage and underage before."

Whereupon Clagett, in all seriousness, said, "If you read the government's petition, it is in there."

The witness confessed quite frankly he never set eyes on the petition. John W. Davis, counsel retained by Loew's for the big suit and sitting hard by Moskowitz, remarked in his soft voice:

"It's an interesting piece of literature."

Schenck Opposed to Individual Selling

By BILL ORNSTEIN

NEW YORK—If pictures are sold individually the plan would work a hardship on every exhibitor in the country, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's and M-G-M, stated in his pre-trial examination by John F. Clagett, assistant to the attorney general in the all-industry suit.

Recalling the days of 1924 when Paramount decided to sell in blocks of five, Schenck declared the policy was abandoned shortly thereafter because "they took a terrific loss and couldn't afford to continue that way."

Percentage Is "Fairest"

Sales in blocks depend on the quality of pictures offered, the witness asserted. He declared the "fairest way" is to sell by the percentage method, "the way M-G-M is doing."

The larger part of M-G-M's product is being sold that way, Schenck said. "We believe in this policy because the exhibitor pays only what the picture earns." He declared if a picture cost $3,000,000 and does not return that amount to the company on percentage, "it is our mistake."

He emphasized the fact that in offering product on percentage there "couldn't be a fairer way. You either get money or you don't, based on the pictures' drawing power."

Pressure against this method comes from the exhibitor, the witness held. "He doesn't like to pay that way. There are continuous wrangles, but the situation is getting better as far as we are concerned."

Per Cent Policy Started in 1924

Schenck pointed out that M-G-M started the policy back in 1924 when "The Four Horseman" was the first one sold by the company on percentage. This was shortly after the old Metro company was acquired from Richard A. Rowland and his associates. Then the company began selling one and two a year on percentage but over the years increased the policy until today most of M-G-M's output is sold that way.

The witness held he did not believe guarantees were provided for as a rule and that "pictures pay what they earn." He also discussed the "Gone With the Wind" situation, adding the company has had very little trouble placing the picture in every situation at 70 per cent of the gross with a guarantee of 10 per cent profit. He cited an instance where B&K first refused to play the film whereupon it was sold away "until they realized they made a mistake and bought it for a good many theatres in Chicago."

M-G-M first attempts to deal with its regular customers in every first run situation, Schenck asserted in stating it was his belief "every film buyer would have a terrific task on his hands if he had to buy on a picture-to-picture basis. It would be hard to live from hand-to-mouth, not knowing where the next picture was coming from."

Insofar as his company is concerned, not more than three or four unreleased pictures have been on hand at any time. He believed the same situation prevailed with other distributors, the point being that it would be a hardship on any buyer to buy singly when a whole program would assure him of a year's booking in advance.

Early History in Industry

Schenck cited his early history in the industry, recalling how he joined Loew's and refused to take a salary until he first learned what the business was all about. Vaudeville in the days of 1907 were the vital factor in the existence of all theatres, he said. As time passed, films took its place, he narrated.

How Loew's acquired the old Metro company, Goldwyn Pictures and brought in Louis B. Mayer and his associates to improve the standard of production were told by the Loew-M-G-M president. He was also queried on the then alleged threat by Paramount to Loew's supremacy in New York theatre operation. He also discussed deals made for three theatres with Century circuit in this area and touched lightly on personal conversations with the late A. H. Schwartz on the inability of the latter to secure product for some of his houses.

"Schwartz did not complain the clearance was wrong," said Schenck, "but asked us to give up pictures from time to time." The same also applied to RKO.

His Houses No M-G-M Feeder—Moskowitz

New York—At one point in his examination, C. C. Moskowitz was asked would it not be better for the profit and loss statement of Loew's to pay M-G-M more money for its pictures than for others.

Answered the theatre executive, "My job is to make a profit. I'd be a sucker to do that!"

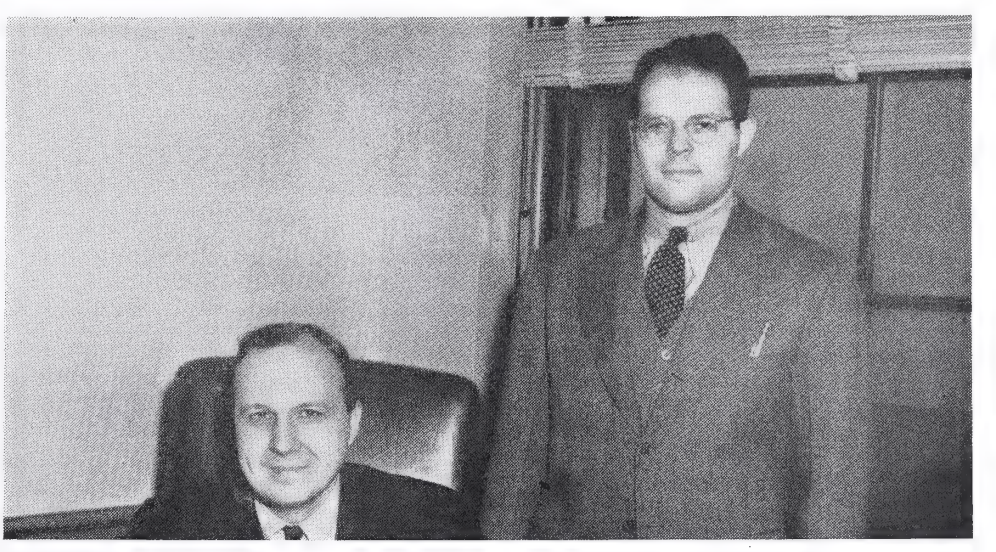
When he was asked if he wouldn't like to buy all his pictures on flat rental, the witness's response was:

"I would, if I found that my flat rental bill was cheaper than my bill on percentage."

Says He Knows of One Zoning Plaint

NEW YORK—With the exception of one case, no clearance complaint in the metropolitan New York territory against the Loew circuit has been brought to his attention since the demise of the NRA, C. C. Moskowitz stated at his pre-trial examination. The one instance was that of Morris Lane of the Lane, Washington Heights, who wanted the circuit to remove protection by the Rio.

Loew's has operated this way for years and regards the Lane as competition to the Rio, Moskowitz held. "I didn't think the complaint well founded and told him so."



When asked if there was any policy at Loew's for handling clearance complaints, the witness answered in the negative. He added, however, that, even during the NRA, there were not many squawks filed against the circuit on clearance.

Into Days of NRA

The government examiner, John F. Clagett, who participated in the famous St. Louis equity and criminal anti-trust suits for the government, then delved into the NRA and how the boards were geared to handle clearance.

Moskowitz admitted Century circuit made complaints at the time and, while Clagett mentioned the Patio in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, the witness said he was not certain whether this was among them. The examiner at this point mentioned the Kingsway and Kameo as Loew houses and Moskowitz corrected him by turning the Kingsway back to its rightful ownership, Century circuit.

The discussion ended abruptly on this phase when Clagett found himself misinformed. He then proceeded to inquire on how clearances were set up locally on Paramount product in respect to Century circuit.

They Round Out the Gallery—

In addition to the seven government lawyers pictorially recorded last week in BOXOFFICE are these two, Robert L. Wright, who has been handling the examinations before trial, and Seymour Krieger. The latter is the government investigator who has interviewed dozens of exhibitors in New York, New Jersey and New England on alleged complaints.

52 From Metro for New Season; Star Batteries Again Stressed

NEW YORK — As anticipated, M-G-M will adhere to its policy of 52 for 1940-41.

Probably the opener of the new season will be "Escape" from the novel by Ethel Vance starring Norma Shearer and Robert Taylor. As listed, the lineup follows:

Katharine Hepburn will play the lead in "The Philadelphia Story," her successful Broadway play. This film, incidentally, places her under the M-G-M banner for the first time.

Greta Garbo will star in "Madame Curie," based on the book by Eve Curie.

The Marx Brothers in "Go West."

Myrna Loy and William Powell in "The Thin Man's Shadow." Miss Loy will be starred also in "Third Finger, Left Hand" and "The Road to Rome," the latter based on Robert E. Sherwood's play.

Clark Gable co-starred with Miss Loy in "The Great Canadian," story of a hockey star. Other Gable vehicles will include "Witch of the Wilderness," a melodrama with a South American jungle background; "The Life of Simon Bolivar" and "Osborne in Sing Sing," in which he will co-star with Taylor.

Spencer Tracy is down for at least three, "The Ex-Mayor of Boys Town," a sequel to "Boys Town;" "Sea of Grass," based on Conrad Richter's novel of New Mexico, and "The Yearling," adaptation of the novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings.

Three by Shearer

Norma Shearer will make three, "Tonight at 8:30," adaptation of Noel Coward's series of nine one-act plays; "The World We Make," based on Sidney Kingsley's play, and "Forever," an original.

Joan Crawford in two. One will be "Bombay Nights," adaptation of the story by Louis Bromfield, and "Woman's Face," tentatively titled vehicle in which James Stewart probably will co-star.

Taylor, also, will appear opposite Lana Turner in "Tropical Hurricane" and in "Cause for Alarm" and "Flight Command."

Wallace Beery will star in "Wyoming" and "Combat Car."

The Hardy and Dr. Kildare series will be continued. In addition to the Hardy group, Mickey Rooney will star in at least three on his own, co-star with Tracy in "The Ex-Mayor of Boys Town" and in "Strike Up the Band" and "Babes on Broadway," both musicals with Judy Garland as running mate.

James Stewart will do "Wings on His Back," but there are to be others so far unlisted.

Robert Montgomery's first will be "I Had a Comrade."

Ann Sothern's first starrer for the new season is to be "Dulcy."

An ambitious musical is to be "Ziegfeld Girl" with Stewart, Hedy Lamarr, Eleanor Powell and Miss Turner. Miss Powell also will appear in "Broadway Melody of 1941."

Stressing a drift toward musicals, M-G-M also lists "Little Nellie Kelly," the George M. Cohan play; "Bitter Sweet" by Noel Coward, and "I Married an Angel." Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald will co-star in the latter two.

Miss MacDonald, in addition, will do a straight dramatic role in "Smilin' Through."

Story properties from which the program will be built include "Our Home Town," "Countess Maritza," "Beau Brummel," "The Canterville Ghost" by Oscar Wilde; "Great Laughter," by Fannie Hurst; "Good News," "Mister Co-Ed," "Rage in Heaven," "War Eagles," "Adventure for Three," "Whitechapel," "Dawn's Early Light," "Two Sons," "Clear All Wires," "Fingers at the Window," "Cathleen," and "Soapy Smith."

While no assignments are designated for them, the company states these stars will appear on the schedule: Lionel Barrymore, Robert Donat, Greer Garson, Rosalind Russell, and Margaret Sullavan.

The short subject lineup will total 78 releases in 84 reels in addition to the usual 104 issues of News of the Day. There will be six "Crime Does Not Pay" two-reelers, 14 Pete Smith Specialties, nine documentaries in John Nesbitt's "Passing Parade" series; 10 "Miniatures," narrated largely by Carey Wilson; 18 Technicolor cartoons divided between Hugh Harman and Rudolph Ising; 12 FitzPatrick Travel-Talks in color, essentially devoted to the United States and nine "Our Gang" comedies. All but the "Crime Does Not Pay" group will be single reelers.

M-G-M's advertising appropriation is set at $2,750,000, the bulk of which is to be spent in daily newspapers by Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity. The lineup was divulged to the eastern sales regional meeting at the Astor. The group also was told Fred Quimby, short subject manager, had concluded there was an increase in anti-double bill sentiment and a greater interest in shorts as the result of an exhibitor-exchange survey.

Fourth Metro Regional Meeting in Capital

WASHINGTON—M-G-M's fourth and final sales regional will be held at the Shoreham Monday and Tuesday. This follows previous meetings held in San Francisco, Chicago and New York.

From the field will be these representatives:

Atlanta—Roy Avey, manager; Lafayette Butler, Louis C. Ingram, Joseph Markowitz and Charles McGuire.

Cincinnati—Edwin M. Booth, manager; John S. Allen, William A. Carroll, Milton Jacobs, William F. La Sance, Harry J. Sheeran and Lou Marks.

Cleveland—Frank D. Drew, manager; Edwin H. Brauer, Jack Sogg and Bryan D. Stoner.

Dallas: Leroy Bickel, manager; Clyde W. Houston, Charles D. Lyne, Roland G. Taylor and Louis J. Weber.

Memphis—Frank Willingham, manager; Maurice L. Basse and Jacques C. Reville.

New Orleans—Clarence J. Briant, manager; Virgil H. Bridges and Gerard Hirsch.

Oklahoma City—William B. Zoellner, manager; James N. Byrd and H. Russell Gaus.

Pittsburgh—Burtus Bishop jr., manager; Milton Brauman, Harry H. Fendrick, Saal Gottlieb and Jacob B. Mundstuk.

Schenck Opposed to Individual Selling

the witness stated. Requests for day-and-date playing arrangements were denied, "because we couldn't do it."

Asked to compare production in 1924 with methods today, Schenck said it was impossible because times and conditions have changed considerably. And to bring his point home he asked the examiner to look at a picture made about 20 years ago with those of today for the answer.

Various questions dealing with present and former theatres operated by Loew's in a number of out-of-town cities apparently were answered to the best of Schenck's knowledge. He emphasized that such executives as William F. Rodgers, Thomas J. Connors, Charles C. Moskowitz and Joseph R. Vogel are on their own and that it is up to them to produce to the best of their ability for their respective departments. If they cannot get together on a product deal or some theatre or distribution problem arises, Schenck said the difficulty then is discussed with him. But under no circumstances does he interfere with the various departmental operations. He makes suggestions, if called upon, but as a general rule each man is on his own, Schenck insisted.

At Ease During Session

At ease during the two and a half hour meeting, Schenck smiled throughout the session, explaining various situations with the graciousness and poise for which he is known.

During the examination, a question arose about the extent of his participation in problems where difficulties may have arisen. Schenck replied he was a busy man and has no time to delve into unimportant disputes. Apparently, Clagett took the hint and called it quits at 12:30 p. m., in time for lunch, which satisfied all present including John W. Davis, J. Robert Rubin, Edward McLean, Jay Eisenberg, Laurence Bunker, Louis Phillips and Albert Bickford, legal array. Robert L. Wright, Seymour Krieger, and J. Stephen Doyle jr., of the department of justice, sat in for a short spell. At no time did they ask a question.

Mannix Calls Off Trip to England

NEW YORK—On the advice of Nicholas M. Schenck, E. J. Mannix has called off his trip to England and returned to New York. He was preceded by Irving Asher. Due to new war developments, a survey on British production has been postponed.

Darryl F. Zanuck, William Goetz, Sol Wurtzel and Mack Gordon also have returned from the east.

Leon Errol for 12

NEW YORK—Leon Errol's new RKO contract provides for the comedian to star in 12 pictures for the new season. Six will be feature length and six two reelers.

THEY came, they ate, they congratulated and then went back to the assembly lines, those friends of Art Schmidt who attended a farewell dinner on the occasion of his severance of seven years' association with Loew's theatres to take the post of M-G-M publicity manager. Monroe Greenthal got in the best lick of the affair with a wire to Art that read: "Going from Loew's to Metro is like taking money out of one pocket and putting it in the other. You have advantages, though. Dietz is a better ping-pong player than Doob and Seadler is a better rhumba dancer than Emerling. Here's hoping you get a lot of laughs out of your new job." Among those present were Anna D. Ellmer, Eddie Dowden, Teddy Arnow, Phil Besser, Sam Coolick, Caryl Dannenberg, Artie Egberts, Abe Fishman, Carl Fishman, Robert Frankl, Gertrude Gelbin, Leon Goodman, Howard Haik, A. R. Hamerslag, Sol Handwerger, Arthur Herschmann, Gertrude Katz and May Levitan. Also Al Lippe, Pete McCarty, Helen Manheimer, Henry Marcus, S. Leonard Mayer, Joseph Moeller, Robert Rigby, Tom Rogers, Ben Serkowich, Bert Shopenn, Jerry Sager, Herman Silver, Irving Snyder, Stanley Stern, Arnold Stimmel, Morty Tauber, H. R. Hal Roach chose the Broadway Limited for his return to the coast after UA sales meetings here and Chicago in the nature of preliminary research on account of his schedule for the new season calls for "Broadway Limited" . . . Mort Blumenstock, eastern head of Warner advertising and publicity, was in South Bend, Ind., over the weekend conferring with Charles Einfeld, the subject being the forthcoming production of "The Life of Knute Rockne." Both men are due at the home office in a few days . . . James R. Grainger, Republic president, is en route to the coast for production powwows, with stopovers scheduled for Chicago, Kansas City and San Francisco. Before he left he conferred with Exchange Managers M. E. Morey of Boston; Sam Seletsky, New Haven; Arthur Newman, Albany; Jack Bellman, Buffalo, and Sam Seplowin, Detroit.

Harry Tierney, who wrote the original music for "Irene," which has been filmed by RKO, is here from the coast with an offer tucked away for re-adapting another of his musical successes—"Rio Rita," which was originally filmed by RKO in 1929—for another major studio. He also has some ideas, and these center around the opinion that there is a trend toward more musicals because of "troubled times, when there is always a greater demand for light entertainment" . . . From an opposite clime, Nova Scotia, comes Frank Sobey, co-owner of theatres at Stellarton and Westville, with the view that business up northeast way so far this year is ahead of 1939 and that product is generally of a better calibre. He also believes the war is largely responsible for he boxoffice spurt . . . Norman Elson, Film Alliance sales manager, is on a trip to the coast visiting franchise holders . . . Jasper D. Rapoport, Paramount's Havana branch manager, i due next week on a vacation-business visit . . . Former Mayor James J. A Saga of Westchester

ROGERS' BOWLING ALLEYS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—Major Leslie E. Thompson and his son, Junior, are undisputed bowling champs of the area bounded on the north by the railroad tracks and the south by Freddie Meyers' house. With a gallery consisting of the John J. O'Connors and the Bucky Harrises, the major and his son whacked the stuffins out of Freddie and his son, "Duke." The Thompson combination won by one pin, even though Harris kept score.

Meyers was obviously nervous when he began swinging, having been told, gaglike, that photographers were hiding in the place. His first two balls went down the gutters, but his second and third frames showed strikes. Anyhow, the Mighty Meyers copped the first game, the Terrific Thompsons took the second, and Freddie was four pins ahead in the tenth frame of the rubber game when he either lost control or remembered he forgot to turn the water off in the bath tub. With two mighty heaves he managed to knock down three pins. The Thompsons walked in and the rest is history.

NEW YORK—A consolidated net profit of $353,376, after federal tax, is reported by 20th Century-Fox for the 13 weeks ended March 30, comparing with $1,224,250 for the first quarter of last year and $238,218 for the final 1939 quarter.

Ballyhoo and Economy Warner Watchwords

ALBANY—Intensified exploitation and ballyhoo, as well as the effecting of even stricter economy in house operations, during the summer, were urged upon managers of Warner upstate theatres, by Zone Boss M. A. Silver, at meetings in Buffalo and Albany. During the Buffalo session, Silver announced transfer of western district offices from Jamestown to Elmira, effective in late June. District Manager Ralph Crabill will have headquarters in the Strand Theatre Bldg. at Elmira.

Silver declared that a shortage of product is already evident and that it will become more acute during the summer. To maintain grosses, in the face of this, he said the augmenting of selling campaigns on all exploitable films was absolutely essential. He called upon the managers to "make the public more show conscious by reviving tried-true attention-getting stunts and spectacular ballyhoo." No ticket-selling angle on any picture must be overlooked, Silver told his men.

"Time to Increase Pace"

General Manager Joseph Bernhard wired the Buffalo meeting that "Now is the time to increase the pace instead of slackening." Pictures and theatre problems were thoroughly discussed at both meetings.

J. E. Curley, advertising manager, Contact Manager James P. Faughnan and Feature Booker Max Friedman accompanied Silver to Buffalo from Albany. Others in attendance at Hotel Lafayette were: District Manager Crabill, Managers R. H. Booth, Lafayette and New Family, Batavia; Dalton Burgett, Capitol, Dunkirk; Edward Yarbrough, Keeney; Mel Conhaim, Regent, Elmira, and Ray Fahrenholz, Strand, Elmira; William Leggiero, Steuben, Hornell; Al Newhall, Palace, Jamestown; Cliff Schaufele, Diana, Medina; Murray Lafayetta, Haven and State, Olean; C. L. Hollister, Babcock and Temple, Wellsville.

Will Try Independent Chain for UA Outlet

CHICAGO—Sol Lesser, producer, has abandoned his proposal that United Artists acquire or build its own circuit of large key city first-run houses. The action, he said, was determined upon advice of a member of the department of commerce. This official is said to have warned against the plan and expressed his belief the department of justice will win its suit to divorce distribution and production from exhibition.

Lesser had planned to propose the circuit idea to United Artists exceutives at the sales session here, but says he now plans to interest independent exhibitors in setting up a nationwide chain to serve as an outlet for UA releases.

Must File Particulars In the Griffith Case

UA Promotional Program Is Set at $3,000,000

CHICAGO—There is to be no retrenchment in United Artists' advertising and promotional campaigns, Lynn Farnol, director of advertising and publicity, told the western sales force at the UA regional meeting in the Congress Hotel here.

He said that approximately $3,000,000 will be spent during the coming year in promoting the 22 pictures that represent the new season's program, the six features held over from the previous season, and in institutional advertising.

Included in the budget is trade paper advertising, "on which," Farnol said, "United Artists spends twice as much per picture as to any other distributor.

"To as great an extent as possible," Farnol said, "United Artists will follow a policy of advertising test engagements on important pictures to experiment with a picture and the capacity of different advertising themes to attract people to that feature. This, naturally, is one of the duties of our new field exploitation staff."

Five More Properties for New 20th-Fox Schedule

NEW YORK—Less than a month after its Chicago sales convention, 20th Century-Fox has acquired five additional properties for its 1940-41 schedule. Viewed by the company as important additions, they are:

"Lucky Baldwin," based on a racing story by C. B. Glasscock. Frank S. Nugent, former critic of the New York Times, is working on the script.

"Wild Geese Calling," from a novel by Stewart Edward White.

"Man Hunt," based on Geoffrey Household's best seller, "Rogue Male."

"Chad Hanna," a novel by Walter D. Edmonds, who wrote "Drums Along the Mohawk."

"Tin Pan Alley," a musical "scheduled to be Zanuck's most impressive undertaking in this field."

Zanuck flew to Hollywood over last weekend, accompanied by Sol M. Wurtzel and Nunnally Johnson, both associate producers. Before their departure, Zanuck and Johnson held their first powwow on script and production of "Chad Hanna." This story appeared serially in the Saturday Evening Post as "Red Wheels Rolling."

Another Week's Work for D. J. Deputies

Approximately another week's work in connection with the compilation of data on various production phases remains for Albert J. Law and Harold Collins, department of justice deputies stationed here, who for the past several months have been shaping up a report for use by the government when trial of its anti-trust action against the majors begins in New York, June 3.

Collins, reiterating that neither he nor Law has been either officially or unofficially informed of any further postponement of the action, declared neither of them has as yet been notified as to whether they will be required to journey east for the suit. Their report, now nearing completion, contains testimony from a number of independent and major producers, as well as writers, directors and others connected with production.

The government's criminal contempt suit against Fox West Coast and nine major distributors has been tabled indefinitely, Collins said, and probably will not reach the courts until after the anti-trust suit has been well-launched.

War News Relegates Labor as a Topic

Perhaps overawed by the magnitude of current developments in the European War, a prime conversational topic in the film colony, activities on Hollywood's labor front have been shoved back into second place for the time being.

Of first importance are the negotiations between the Screen Writers Guild and the producers whereby the former is seeking a closed shop. Producer attorneys are analyzing the SWG's demands, which include a maximum one-year duration for the proposed contract; a maximum three-year contract for individual writers at any one studio; a minimum wage and the banning of so-called "flat deals" for less than $5,000. The SWG's executive board held a meeting to map final details of the negotiations under the direction of President Sheridan Gibney. At the same session Ralph Block was appointed to travel to Washington, May 25, as the SWG's representative in opposing passage of the Neely anti-block booking measure.

Jurisdictional Issue

A jurisdictional battle looms with the Screen Office Employes Guild, an independent organization, and the American Federation of Office Employes, an AFL affiliate, as the opponents. The AFOE has already filed demands for a closed shop, 40-hour week and $25 weekly minimum wage for employes at Central Casting Corp., among whom it claims to have a 75 per cent majority. The union also challenges the SOEG's jurisdictional claims at several studios. The SOEG, meanwhile, has completed its amended petition seeking certification as sole bargaining unit for white-collar workers in the studios, and the document has been forwarded to the NLRB in Washington.

The Screen Directors Guild meets May 19 to select officers for both the senior and junior divisions for the coming term. Frank Capra is currently the president of the senior group. The Unit Managers Guild, formerly a part of the SDG, meets May 21 to choose its new pilots.

A routine board meeting, at which plans for greater harmony among the "A" and "B" groups were discussed, was held by the Screen Actors Guild. After the session it was announced negotiations for wage increases and reclassification of extras will not be resumed until the standing committee has completed its survey of the situation some time in June.

The Society of Motion Picture Film Editors has filed demands with producers for a six-day, 48-hour week. It asks that an assistant cutter be employed on every feature and requests a new classification—that of music editor—at a $100 weekly minimum.

To discuss plans for revising its by-laws in order to provide for expansion into a national organization, the executive board of the Screen Publicists Guild met May 16.

Paramount Will Release Two for Boris Morros

Boris Morros has secured a Paramount release for two forthcoming National Pictures productions, "Second Chorus" and "The Life of O. Henry." Douglas Fairbanks jr. will be starred in the latter, screenplay for which has been completed by Sheridan Gibney. Morros resigned as head of Paramount's studio music department about a year ago to enter independent production.

Says Studios Learn Name Fadeouts Last

NEW YORK—"A lot of film personalities are dead and we producers don't know it—in fact, we're the last to find it out." So declared Samuel Goldwyn in the course of an interview that revealed some of the reasons the producer sought and won the decision of the American Institute of Public Opinion to conduct a nationwide poll on the double features.

Dr. George Gallup, head of the institute, nodded approval of Goldwyn's observation, but added he has not yet concluded whether his poll will delve into the question of players' boxoffice appeal.

Goldwyn was most enthusiastic about the poll—"I'm flattered that they have consented to do it." The survey is in "the public interest," he said, adding he thought it would also be of invaluable aid to Hollywood. With producers smugly settled in the studios, "miles away from the public," they do not have an accurate gauge of how well pictures are received, or if they are not well received why not, he declared. Neither do producers keep their pulse on what the public wants in the way of film entertainment. "Let's find out what the public thinks," he said, as a final boost in commending the projected poll.

Seek Impartial Survey

Gallup will not accept a fee for conducting the survey. It will be without any financial aid from film interests so that it may be independent and impartial in its quizzing. "We feel it is of the same public interest as our political polls," Gallup said. In this respect Goldwyn asserted he has for the past 10 years been attempting to determine if the public really wants two features coupled with long trailers, games, dishes and other forms of inducements. The producer said that he, personally, cannot reconcile the attitude of exhibitors in sponsoring this type of policy since it defeats the very purpose for which producers are striving.

"No good picture can be good if the audience is tired and bored from a lot of other stuff," he observed. Asked if the poll should indicate a majority preference for duals would he alter his production policy to so conform, he replied: "You don't have to go out and make bad pictures—you make a lot of 'As' and sometimes you wind up with a lot of 'Bs.'"

Eight Communities Premiere Centers

What with two films being screened in a total of eight communities throughout the country during the week, and still another lavishly-bedecked premiere scheduled for May 21, Hollywood's studio exploiteers can, with a certain amount of justification, file their claims for overtime for the period.

Sole bid for Hollywood patronage came from 20th Century-Fox, which simultaneously premiered "Lillian Russell" at the Chinese Theatre here and in Pittsburgh and Clinton, Iowa, May 15. Stars and civic notables enlivened each of the showings. To Clinton, birth place of Miss Russell, went Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Arleen Whelan, and Mary Healy. Edward Arnold and Alice Faye, who stars in the film, were dispatched to Pittsburgh, accompanied by John B. Harris, in whose Alvin Theatre there the picture made its debut. The Hollywood showing, first top-hat and ermine event for several weeks, found in attendance such industry notables as:

Marlene Dietrich, Erich Maria Remarque, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks jr., Constance Bennett, Kay Francis, Elsa Maxwell, J. Walter Ruben and Virginia Bruce, Errol Flynn and Lily Damita, the Frank Capras, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Z. Leonard, Jane Withers, Gene Markey and Hedy Lamarr, Harry Joe Brown and Sally Eilers, Edward G. Robinson, Sonja Henie, Tony Martin, Ernst Lubitsch, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Roach, Sidney Toler, the Darryl Zanucks, Mrs. William Goetz, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Rogers, the Lewis Milestones, the Milton Brens, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rapf, Mr. and Mrs. Y. Frank Freeman, Claudette Colbert, Ben Thau, Henry Ginsberg, William Koenig, Robert Riskin, Irving Cummings, Pandro Berman, Mervyn LeRoy, William Anthony McGuire and Kenneth Macgowan. The Chinese Theatre was bedecked with stands to seat the spectators and autograph hounds and boasted the other appurtenances associated with a first-night in Hollywood.

With Spencer Tracy as the leading personage in attendance, M-G-M's "Edison, the Man" was given its world premiere May 16 in Orange, East Orange, West Orange, South Orange and Maplewood, N. J., as the highlight of a three-day "Edison Pageant of Progress." Howard Strickling and Mrs. Tracy accompanied the actor east. They were preceded by Bunny Dull, production aide to John W. Considine jr., who planed to New York to assist in handling the arrangements.

Paramount steps into the picture May 21 when "Those Were the Days" is world-premiered in Galesburg, Ill., home of Knox College, where much of the film was produced. On hand will be Judith Barrett, J. Carrol Naish, Lynne Overman, Muriel Angelus, and Producer-Director Ted Reed and the picture will be screened at the Orpheum, West, Colonial and Gala theatres. A four-day celebration with a "turn of the century" motif preceded the event. Handling the premiere for the studio are Publicists Ralph Ravenscroft and Ed Churchill.

"Those Were the Days" was given its press preview here May 14 at the Westwood Village Theatre.

In typical motion picture colony fashion, floodlights, celebrities and limousines dotted the scene for the formal opening of the Hawaii, the first de luxe, Class A theatre to open in the Hollywood sector for several years. Below is a scene of debut of the Albert Galston-Jay Sutton enterprise. Above, James Roosevelt, one of the many film notables who were on hand, is introduced at the microphone. Modern and streamlined in every respect, the Hawaii is estimated to have cost more than $500,000.

Film Factories Hum As Europe Is Torn

Whatever the uncertainties as regards the foreign situation, now more serious in aspect than ever, they seemingly have not sifted through to Hollywood, where the major plants, lining up their schedules for the balance of this month, June and further on into the summer, apparently have but one goal in mind—turning out films at a record speed.

To that end, Universal has shaped up Producer Milton Feld's schedule solidly for the next three months, handing him "When the Daltons Rode," "Invisible Woman," "Fireman Save My Child," "Back Street" and "Riviera" to turn out during that time. Also added to Universal's 1940-41 schedule is an untitled vehicle co-starring Martha Raye and Bob Burns.

During the remaining days of this month, Columbia will launch production on "Gribouille," re-make of a French film which B. B. Kahane will produce, and "He Stayed for Breakfast," a B. P. Schulberg production. May 27 will find camera work underway on Monogram's "Queen of the Yukon." Twentieth Century-Fox will gun "Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum" and "The Ghost of the Cisco Kid" May 27, following them with "The Great Profile." The lineup for Harry Joe Brown, associate producer at the studio, for the summer will include "Down Argentine Way," "Western Union," "Left at the Altar" and "Down to the Sea in Ships."

"Fiesta in Manhattan," "House on the Hill," "Flowing Gold" and "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" have been placed on Warner's June schedule. During that month Paramount will start work on "Moon Over Burma," "The New Yorker," "Virginia" and "Arise My Love." The Fred Allen-Jack Benny comedy, which has been titled "Love Thy Neighbor," rolls in July. The lineup for Producer Paul Jones has been expanded to include "Hunger," a late summer starter.

Taking off at M-G-M in June will be "Flight Command," as well as "Dulcy," "The Yearling" and "Wyoming." RKO Radio will gun "Men Against the Sky" May 22, following it May 24 with "Laddie;" June 1, "Photo Finish" and, a few days later, "Too Many Girls."

McCarey and RKO Unable To Agree on New Terms

Unable to come to terms on a new deal, Leo McCarey and RKO Radio have called it quits after a two-year association, during which McCarey turned out "Love Affair," and "My Favorite Wife." The producer-director disclosed he will plane to New York shortly to discuss several offers for a new berth.

Barrymore, Himself

Twentieth Century-Fox has signed John Barrymore for the title role in "The Great Profile," based on his own life story, which Walter Lang will direct from a script by Hilary Lynn and Milton Sperling. Picture rolls within two weeks.

EASTMAN NEGATIVE FILMS

Let him who is without sin cast the first stone . . . . .

DEACON JIMMIE FIDLER becomes considerably exercised because he fears that "previews of the past few months indicate we're due for another cycle of risque (to put it mildly) pictures —and, of course, an inevitable clash with censorship."

Making it clear that he is "neither a Puritan nor a Little Lord Fauntleroy," the erstwhile air gossiper laboriously takes the industry to task for having produced such pictures as "My Little Chickadee," "The Primrose Path," "Too Many Husbands," "Strange Cargo" and "My Favorite Wife," in each of which he seems to have found "smut," "naughty flavor," "double meanings," "pansy gags" and other assorted evils.

He follows his moralizing with "Idol Chatter," headed by: "It will undoubtedly surprise most males to learn that Dorothy Lamour has two eyes, also . . ." and he recently reported, with precedental bad taste, that Lana Turner, paying a visit to her doctor to determine whether she is to become a mother, assertedly was told that such was not the case.

Even forgetful Hollywood will remember that it was this brand of "Idol Chatter" which caused the industry and those interested in its desirable public relations so many headaches during the years Fidler was on the air as the top commentator on matters cinematic—and which, probably, was largely responsible for his losing his sponsorship.

The one and only cheerful note concerning the European war comes in a Warner publicity release, to wit:

"Sinking of the Sando when the vessel struck a floating mine off the coast of Sweden caused loss of a consignment of prints on 'The Return of Dr. X' bound for that country from England."

Universal currently is making "I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now" as the fourth in its batch of pictures finding their titles and inspiration in yesteryear's songs. Why not carry the idea further? The following additions to the cycle might have possibilities:

"She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage"—and it shouldn't be a turkey.

"I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier"—guaranteed to be popular and timely.

"I Met a Million-Dollar Baby in a Five and Ten-Cent Store"—a cinch to put the marquee decorators in straight-jackets.

"Everybody's Doing It"—dedicated to the government suits.

"You Made Me What I Am Today"—page Charles R. Rogers.

"I Want a Girl Just Like the Girl That Married Dear Old Dad"—screenplay by Warner LeRoy in collaboration with Papa Mervyn.

And, speaking of titles, it looks as though Russell Birdwell may have established a dangerous precedent when, after months of intensive publicity, he made the letters GWTW synonymous with "Gone With the Wind" in the minds of the trade and the public. Now the Warner orchid growers are doing their best to accomplish the same for ATAHT—"All This and Heaven, Too." Lo! the poor readers of fan fodder when they find FLPAHTG in their favorite columns and have to determine that it refers to "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew;" or RRNOTGWT for the actioner released as "Renfrew Rides North on the Great White Trail."

But, regardless of how far the trend may reach, C. O. D. will still be the industry's most popular letters. And S. R. O. will continue to do okay as a runner-up.

Paramount has added "Hunger" to its summer production schedule and Producer Paul Jones wants it known that he is not interested in hiring tradepaper men as technical advisors. Freelance publicists can stay home, too.

BALLYHOODLUMS: This week's un-Nobel Prize for being last with the news when it ain't news goes to Paramount's welkin-ringers for the startling announcement that an orange helium-filled balloon (to scare fliers away) was hoisted over the studio—just about a month after such balloons had become fixtures at every other lot in town . . . Between publicizing art exhibits, polo matches and a motion picture now and then, John LeRoy Johnston is busier than the proverbial lady of the evening with two rooms . . . Harry (Hi-Ya Kid?) Brand takes a belated step forward by appointing John Campbell, a bright newcomer to his department, as an exclusive tradepaper contact, thereby duplicating a setup which Warner and Paramount have been successfully utilizing for many months—Howard Strickling please note . . . The fact that Russell Birdwell is still planting publicity on David O. Selznick's activities gives the lie to printed report that the King of the Freelancers had feuded with DOS and lost his No. 1 account . . . Reported that members of the vested freelance gentry are registering long and loud squawks because they claim rates quoted by Gabe Yorke's Screen Publicity Bureau of the SPG are too low and are creating unfair competition. It is quite possible that the rumblings are engendered because Yorke's efficient aggregation is doing a job for its clients and some of the white-haired boys will have to start giving their lucrative accounts a run for their money in order to hold them.

Archaic, Austere, Alacritous, Active

The week's preview lineup, with an independent exhibitors' convention forming the second line of defense, made things very easy on the food budgets of Hollywood's sandwich-snatching reviewers. Two of a coterie of six features were unfurled to the accompaniment of free groceries, while the gathering of Pacific Coast showmen was the excuse for several dinners and cocktail parties. Cinematic fare was a bit more varied than the deluge of scotch and hors d'oeuvres, with two of the sextet rating places in the first division.

In "Our Town," for United Artists release, Sol Lesser presented a feature that, by every Hollywood standard, amounts to nothing less than a paradox. Not only is it an artistic achievement of the first rank, but it also qualifies on every count as the type of fare from which average audiences can derive the utmost pleasure. Lesser stuck firmly to his original intention of pursuing the same unusual treatment that made Thornton Wilder's stage play so outstanding; and, with the motion picture medium at his command, was able to amplify on that treatment through the use of the screen's wider scope, narrative power, motivation and technical details. Masterful in his understanding and restraint, Director Sam Wood piloted a cast that is ideally tailored to the well-known story of the lives of ordinary Americans at the turn of the century. Wilder, Frank Craven and Harry Chandlee fashioned a screenplay of compelling simplicity and power.

Somberly conceived, executed and played, Metro's re-make of "Waterloo Bridge" is an excellently-handled story of a tragic and unfortunate love, definitely a heavy bidder for feminine patronage, and carrying the additional marquee magnetism of Vivien Leigh in her first American picture since "Gone With the Wind." Producer Sidney Franklin overlooked no element that could possibly contribute to the picture's value, while Mervyn LeRoy directed with sincerity and obvious conviction. Robert E. Sherwood's original play was given an authoritative polish by Scenarists S. N. Behrman, Hans Rameau and George Froeschel, who added to the World War story a modern touch by tying it in to Europe's present conflict.

Stacking up as above-par program material was a trio comprising Paramount's "Those Were the Days," RKO Radio's "You Can't Fool Your Wife" and Universal's "La Conga Nights."

The first-named, based on the famous Siwash College stories by George Fitch, should find a ready market among the young, both those youthful in years and those youthful in heart. Its vintage 1900 backgrounds, the buoyant cast, and the breezy, winsomely spontaneous air of the finished product stamp it with exploitation elements that should enable it to do well for itself everywhere. Don Hartman's screenplay, stressing the romantic and comedy elements, was adroitly wrought, while J. Theodore Reed did himself proud in his twin assignments as producer and director, paying particular attention to the recreation of the details and atmosphere of university life during the era of mutton-chop sleeves and peg-top trousers.

RKO Radio has a smartly-turned-out domestic comedy, unpretentious but thoroughly entertaining, in "You Can't Fool Your Wife." The sparkling screenplay by Jerry Cady, based upon a story by Richard Carroll and Ray McCarey, is freighted with enough laugh lines to keep any audience in high good humor throughout; besides which there are two or three genuine guffaws to enliven the proceedings. McCarey gave it spirited direction and the playing throughout is more than capable. Cliff Reid can take a bow for producing a worthwhile programmer.

Strictly lightweight musical stuff, "La Conga Nights" has its share of hilarious moments, particularly when Hugh Herbert is on the scene. It is a bit weak as to story, however, the original script by Jay Dratler, Harry Clork and Paul Gerard Smith showing evidence of having been whipped out in a hurry. Nevertheless it measures up as supporting material of fair quality.

Harry Sherman's contribution was another in the popular "Hopalong Cassidy" series, this one making its appearance under the title "Hidden Gold." Not quite up to the standard set by previous entries, it is still first-class action fare in Sherman's usual two-fisted, straight-shootin' style. Its chief shortcoming is the script by Gerald Geraghty and Jack Mersereau, which carries less impact and does not tackle the issue as directly as did most of its predecessors. Lesley Selander's direction and Sherman's production mounting are up to par.

Edwin L. Marin Leaves Metro Roster June 1

Edwin L. Marin, M-G-M director, has disclosed he will leave that studio's contract roster when his contract expires June 1. His last assignment was on the Winfield Sheehan production, "Florian." He has announced no future plans.

Other Changes

After six months with the studio, Max Siegel has resigned as an associate producer for Columbia. During his sojourn there Siegel had several vehicles in preparatory stages but never brought one before the cameras.

Added to the Paramount staff as assistant to William Meiklejohn, new head of the merged talent and casting departments, is William Russell. He has been a dialogue director and dramatic coach.

Bobby Webb has been named casting director at Republic, succeeding Harold Dodds, who turned in his resignation recently.

RKO Release Secured By Independents

Two newly organized independent companies have secured release deals through RKO Radio. Lou Ostrow, former associate producer at M-G-M, incorporated Vogue Productions and signed with President George Schaefer of RKO Radio to turn out four features for the 1940-41 program. Ostrow has taken office and shooting space on the RKO Pathe lot. Schaefer also set a deal with Jerry Brandt and Charles E. Ford to distribute a series of films based on Clarence Budington Kelland's noted fictional character, "Scattergood Baines," for screen rights to which Brandt and Ford paid the author $100,000. The producers have also secured studio space on the RKO Pathe lot.

Other Activity

C. C. Burr's Spectrum Pictures has begun filming "The Lone Prairie," second in a series of eight Fred Scott westerns, for Monogram release. A schedule of one film every five weeks has been set up. The initialer, "Riding the Trail," was turned out before the Monogram deal was set, and will be released July 1. Aiding Burr is John Cosentino.

A new entry into the dime-in-the-slot production field is the Techniprocess and Special Effects Corp., headed by Mario Castegnaro. Production has been launched on five short subjects featuring name bands, dancers and singers, with Ralph Hammeras supervising, and which will be sold in the open market, Castegnaro said. Shorts are being produced on 35mm film, which will be reduced to 16mm for projection.

Ben Hecht, scenarist-playwright who recently formed an independent production unit, arrived in Hollywood to seal a distribution deal with Columbia for his first picture, "Before I Die," and signed Douglas Fairbanks jr. for the starring role. He was accompanied here by Harold Godsoe, associated with him in the undertaking.

Permanent headquarters on the Universal lot will be established by Frank Lloyd Productions, which will turn out six pictures for that company during the next three years, when Lloyd has completed "The Howards of Virginia" on an independent basis for Columbia release. Lloyd's associate, Jack Skirball, currently is in New York.

In order to utilize his frozen assets in England, Samuel Goldwyn has announced he will produce "Undersea Boat" in London, with David Niven as its star if an eight-week leave of absence can be arranged for the latter through the war office. Plans are to produce the picture at Denham studios with Archie Mayo directing. The story is by the late Sidney Howard.

New "Thin Man"

Another in the "Thin Man" series has been placed on schedule at M-G-M as a Hunt Stromberg production with W. S. Van Dyke directing. The William Powell-Myrna Loy co-starrer has been titled "The Shadow of the Thin Man."

Bounds Sundered by Production Schedule

The sky is apparently the limit for Hollywood in its current production boom, which has reached a new altitude record with the major studios now listing a total of 55 features in production. This aggregate includes 13 new starters.

Columbia spurred "The Durango Kid" and "Military Academy" to raise its total to seven. Metro is filming a like amount, having launched "Escape" and completed "The Captain Is a Lady" and "One Came Home." Monogram is idle, having wound up production on "On the Spot" and "The Last Alarm."

Paramount hit a new high—10 in work—when it gunned "Victory" and "Doomed Caravan." Republic unleashed a barrage by gunning three—"The Girl From God's Country," "Fighting Marshal" and "Carolina Moon"—to give it a four-picture total. Into the cutting-room went "Grand Ole Op'ry." RKO Radio, launching "The Other Man" and "Stage to Chino," broke even by completing "Cross Country Romance" and "Millionaires in Prison." It is filming six.

Four are in work at 20th Century-Fox, where "The Bride Wore Crutches" went on the sound stage and "Four Sons" was completed. United Artists, with no new starts, lists four in work also. Six are being filmed at Universal, newest of them being "Argentine Nights." Warner gunned "River's End" to raise its total to seven.

Bronston Productions Will Bond Directors to Budget

Setting a precedent in motion picture production policy, all directors signed to pilot a film for Samuel Bronston Productions will be required to post a bond guaranteeing the picture will be completed within the allotted budget. This announcement was made by Bronston, president of the company which recently merged with James Roosevelt's Globe Productions, with the explanation that "with the international situation as it is we cannot afford to take chances on having picture production dragged out until costs rise above those set upon, and if a director is satisfied with story, script and budget set we do not feel it is asking too much to ask that director to guarantee he will do the job at the stipulated cost."

Coincident with this statement of policy by Bronston, Edward H. Schwab, chairman of the company's executive committee, declared he has no intention from withdrawing from the setup, while Bronston asserted he has been authorized by Roosevelt to brand reports that Roosevelt is withdrawing to join a major company as completely false. Bronston declared that "we are not announcing our program until we are positive of our every move," and said that upon the return of Roosevelt and Vice-President Frank Perry from the United Artists convention in New York, a definite product announcement will be made.

Racing Enthusiasts Strain for Track

It's nearly turf time again for the film colony's addicts of the sport of kings, and from every advance indication the summer racing season at Hollywood Park—otherwise known as the Inglewood subsidiary of the Warner film-making emporium in Burbank—will be characterized by new heights of enthusiasm on the part of screen folk who have been denied the privilege of watching the nags go by since Santa Anita's season closed some months ago.

The assay of screen names among turf-club members, boxholders and horse owners is higher this year than at any time in the park's history, according to its spokesmen. When the season gets under way Memorial Day — May 30 — continuing through August 3, the horses churning up the track will wear the colors of such film notables as:

Louis B. Mayer, Harry M. Warner, J. Walter Ruben and Virginia Bruce, George Raft, Mrs. Spencer Tracy, Myron Selznick, Mervyn LeRoy, John Considine jr., Bing Crosby, Lin Howard and Judith Barrett, Bob Howard and Andrea Leeds, Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck and Zeppo Marx (the Marwyck stables), Don Ameche and Chester Lauck, and Raoul Walsh.

In the stands will be Mr. and Mrs. Jules Furthman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hitchcock and their daughter, Patricia, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Kalmus, William LeBaron, Al Lichtman, Eddie Mannix, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Pendleton, Bob Riskin, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Stromberg, Ben Thau, Joseph Mankiewicz, Jerry Mayer, Frank Orsatti, Al Rogell, Joseph M. Schenck, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Stahl, George Stevens, Darryl Zanuck, Phil Berg, Sam Bischoff, Sam Briskin, Mrs. Leo Carrillo, Jack Chertok, Irving Cummings, Vina Delmar, Cecil B. DeMille, Walt Disney, Leo Forbstein, Bryan Foy, Mark Hellinger, William Goetz, M. C. Levee, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Z. Leonard.

Piece de resistance of the meet will be the Hollywood Gold Cup event, for which a $50,000 prize has been posted.

Film on Old Siwash A 'Welcome' Package

Hollywood—On the campuses and at the crossroads, the youngsters, those who think they are young and those who wish they were—which includes virtually everybody—will welcome the breezy, winsomely spontaneously diversion to be found in Paramount's "Those Were the Days."

Based on the famous Siwash College stories by George Fitch, an adroitly-wrought screenplay captivatingly unfolds a collegiate romantic comedy, vintage 1900. From this vehicle and the services of a youthful and enthusiastic cast, J. Theodore Reed, functioning as both producer and director, has fashioned a photoplay which should conduct itself creditably in all situations.—SPEAR.

Conventions Incentive To Executive Visits

Having set deals for product with two more independent units and completed details of the 1940-41 production schedule with his local staff, President George Schaefer of RKO Radio has returned to New York to be on hand for the company's annual sales convention May 27-29. Preceding him east were Ned Depinet, general sales chief, and S. Barret McCormick, publicity-advertising director, who sat in on Schaefer's huddles with Harry Edington, J. J. Nolan and other studio executives. Leda Bauer, RKO's eastern story editor, also checked out, having completed her series of conferences with Collier Young, studio story chief. Nolan and Perry Lieber, advertising-publicity director at the Gower Street plant, leave May 21 to attend the sales parley.

His arrival delayed a few days, Herbert J. Yates, chairman of Republic's board, has checked in at the North Hollywood studio on one of his periodic visits. He is expected to set starting dates on two or three important features and will confer with M. J. Siegel, studio production head, on the summer lineup.

New Loan for Monogram

Shortly after a press conference at which he branded as "a lot of bunk" rumors that Pathe of America is taking over the company, W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, checked out for New York for conferences with W. J. Gell, managing director of Pathe in London, who is now in the east. Johnston was accompanied east by Ralph Bettinson, Pathe of London's representative at the studio. At the press conference Johnston disclosed that Monogram's weekly business is highest in its history and predicted an even higher figure will be established during the summer. The foreign market, he said, has not affected Monogram as seriously as it has some of the major companies, while Gell has predicted a continual increase in business in London because of the daylight saving hours now in effect. The company president announced that Monogram's franchise holders have acquired another $100,000 in Monogram stock and said the Guaranty Trust Co. has loaned the company $300,000, placing Monogram in a shipshape financial position.

James Roosevelt, chairman of the board of Samuel Bronston Productions, left for New York to attend the United Artists convention, with a stopover scheduled in Chicago for UA's regional meet there. Sol Lesser also pulled out for the UA conclave in New York, and will attend the world premiere of his "Our Town" in Boston, May 23.

Representing Frank Lloyd at Universal's convention in Atlantic City was Jack Skirball, who went from there to New York to confer with Columbia executives on "The Howards of Virginia," which Lloyd is producing for that company.

From the M-G-M plant Sam Katz, Fred Quimby, head of the shorts department; William F. Rodgers, sales manager, and Edward Saunders, Rodgers' aide, left for Chicago to attend the company's regional meeting, which opened May 13. They continued on to New York for the eastern meet and are scheduled to journey to Washington, D. C., for the final meeting May 20-21.

Joseph M. Schenck planed out for Gotham for a week of huddles with 20th Century-Fox homeoffice executives. Arriving at the studio were Darryl Zanuck, William Goetz and Sol Wurtzel, where they talked over production plans with eastern officials. Also heading east from the Westwood plant was Julian Johnson, studio story editor, who will spend three weeks in New York looking over current plays and literary properties.

After spending a few days in San Francisco, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, returned to the studio to resume his huddles with Y. Frank Freeman, William LeBaron and Henry Ginsberg. As advance man for the company's convention, scheduled to open here May 24, Sam Dembow of the theatre department, has arrived at the studio. Also expected in was Frank V. Kennebeck, Paramount's general manager for India. Griffis is to check out for New York shortly, returning here in time for the convention, at which time he will be accompanied by President Barney Balaban and other executives.

E. J. Mannix and Irving Asher have returned to M-G-M from New York, their plans to fly to London scrapped because of European war developments. Clarence E. Ericksen has checked in at Walter Wanger's headquarters after spending three weeks with United Artists homeoffice executives mapping campaigns for Wanger's "Foreign Correspondent" and "The Long Voyage Home."

Charlie Einfeld, Warner's publicity-advertising head, trained out for South Bend to huddle with members of Knute Rockne's family and officials of Notre Dame on "The Life of Knute Rockne." He is to continue on to New York for conferences.

Los Angeles—The board of trustees of the PCCITO and the board of directors of the ITO of So. Calif. and Ariz., have appointed Robert H. Poole, the PCCITO's executive secretary, and Hugh W. Bruen, conference trustee, as delegates to attend hearings on the Neely bill in Washington, D. C. Poole trained out for the national capital May 15, with Bruen scheduled to follow by plane May 18.

Sponsored Film Nets FWC a Damage Suit

Los Angeles—On the grounds that, in order to see the main feature on the program, he was forced to sit through a showing of a one-reel subject, "Your Town," in which process he became so indignant that his health has been seriously impaired, John E. Miller has filed a precedental $20,000 damage suit against Fox West Coast; Lou Harris, manager of FWC's Alexander Theatre in Glendale; the National Ass'n of Manufacturers; Audio Studios; Modern Talking Pictures Co. and Standard Talking Pictures Co. in superior court here.

Miller charges that the booking of the one-reeler constitutes a conspiracy to defraud both himself and the general public, and alleges that he was compelled to "suffer the tortures" of witnessing it through which he developed a serious cardiac condition. He asks $10,000 general and $10,000 punitive damages. His complaint asserts the film was sponsored by the National Ass'n of Manufacturers and is "malicious propaganda" presenting an 'anti-social theme denouncing unionism." It was produced at Audio Studios in New York and is being distributed by Modern and Standard.

Miller's attorney, A. A. Golden, declared representatives of all the defendants have been served.

Beyond declaring they will "handle it in the usual course," FWC's legal department had no comment to make on the case, believed to be the first of this nature ever filed.

Hollywood Admiral Opens With Foreign Pictures

Hollywood—With John Loder, British star, headlining a coterie of film names in attendance, the Admiral, newest showcase to open on Hollywood Boulevard, made its formal debut May 16. Opening attraction at the 700-seat house, under the management of A. E. Rice, was "His Majesty's Mistress," a French film co-starring Loder and Danielle Darrieux, and "Torpedoed," starring H. B. Warner and Richard Cromwell, made in England.

For the time being, Rice plans to continue operations on a foreign-picture policy, but eventually intends to shift over to American product, he said. Current admission scales are 30 cents for matinees, 40 cents for evening performances and loges at 55 cents.

Brief Dissidence Dispelled at PCCITO's First Convention

Los Angeles—Barring one flareup of dissension, which was quickly quelled, the first annual convention of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners carefully followed the course of peace, harmony and conciliation which had been mapped for it during the three-day session which ended May 10.

After two days of social and business routine two attending delegates—Mike Barovic of Puyallup, Wash., and Fred Mercy jr. of Seattle—unleashed a short-lived display of pyrotechnics by demanding more action and less speech-making, asserting that they had come to the convention on the promise that a plan of action was to be charted to rid the industry of many of its complaints. Oil was poured on the troubled waters by Bob Poole, general chairman of the conclave, when he informed the two objectors their charges would be thoroughly discussed at the open-forum meeting the following day, May 10.

At the forum, a closed session, the exhibitors' suggestions for industry improvement were incorporated in a PCCITO program similar to the MPTOA's 10-point program. Among the items to which official PCCITO objections were filed were:

1. Non-theatrical pictures and 16mm films for dime-in-the-slot projectors, civic clubs, churches and schools.
2. Participation in exchange drives.
3. Raised prices for advertising accessories and trailers.
4. Changing of the second feature on holdover bills.
5. The dual-bill booking policy.
6. Duplication of payment for trailers.
7. Rentals on a percentage basis in subsequent runs.
8. Too high a percentage of the picture's gross to the distributor.

Also adopted was a resolution urging trade publications to give more accurate and authentic reports on exhibitor activities than in the past.

Lukan Leads Against Duals

L. O. Lukan, PCCITO trustee who indicted dual-bills in one of the convention's keynote speeches, was appointed chairman of an anti-dual bill committee and announced he is scheduling a nationwide tour to enlist the support of independent exhibitors everywhere. Delegates voted unanimously to use every means to abolish the double-billing situation.

Their action in this regard was spurred by the receipt of a telegram from Samuel Goldwyn, in New York, in which the producer declared:

"I earnestly urge and hope that your entire membership will use their great power to remedy this evil and lead the way to restoring motion pictures to popularity and importance they once had with the public. Only by encouraging production of greater pictures and quality entertainment can the public be brought back to the motion picture theatres. Your stand against double bills will have powerful effect in changing course of entire industry as it faces its greatest crisis in decreasing audiences and restricted markets abroad, making production of outstanding pictures virtually impossible unless exhibition conditions change.

"Production of quality pictures is vitally endangered by double features. The public certainly is in rebellion against them. If the producer, the exhibitor and the public don't want double features, why have them,"

Four Meetings Annually

It was announced by Poole after the convention officially closed that hereafter the PCCITO's trustees will meet four times yearly. The first session is scheduled for August in Seattle, when the trustees will confer with the membership of the ITO of Washington, northern Idaho and Alaska.

Thursday's session—May 9—included an address by J. M. Hone on "Legislation," a discussion of advertising accessories by Arthur Aronson of National Screen Service, and two of the convention's most significant speeches—an address by Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, and a talk by William F. Rodgers, Metro's distribution chieftain. In a talk on "Theatre Sound Standardization," John K. Hilliard, chairman of the theatre standardization committee of the Academy Research Council, detailed the present technical coordination between the production and distribution ends of the industry, through which, he said, exhibitors are getting maximum benefit from every dollar spent on equipment replacement or maintenance.

Exhibitors on that day were guests at luncheon of Universal, with Al O'Keefe, western district manager, introducing such studio executives as Matty Fox, Jack Gross, Milton Schwarzwald, Milton Feld, Jules Levey, William Seiter, George Marshall, Ben Pivar, Ken Goldsmith and Joseph Sanford.

Keynote of the convention opening May 8 was a talk by Hugh Bruen, Whittier theatre operator and PCCITO trustee, whose topic was "Organization."

"The independents are the least considered and the most dominated group in the industry," Bruen charged. "But the industry could not exist without the independents." He asserted that the independents "who have direct contact with social, service and civic organizations" carry the load, and declared that in the PCCITO "we have the seed of a streamlined organization that is designed to be familiar with the problems of the smallest yet has proved before its first convention that it is strong enough to deal with the strongest opposition.

"Producers and distributors must be prepared to make concessions," Bruen continued, "unless they want to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs." He urged film executives to "look at PCCITO as we see ourselves" and declared if they did they would "find an agency for fair and friendly dealings."

LOS ANGELES

HERE'S THE height of something: Theatre owners, used to giving away crockery by the ton, found themselves on the receiving end when a local premium outfit handed out samples of Bakerite ware at the Pacific Coast Conference convention. Revealing hitherto unsuspected musical talents, Bob Poole, Hugh Bruen, Manny Hoffman and L. O. Lukan rendered "Moonlight and Roses" to signify the conclusion of the first session.

Dorothy Benson, who operates the switchboard at the M-G-M exchange, is vacationing for a week at Santa Monica Beach . . . Another potential exhibitor made his appearance May 8 when Harold Glass of the Gordon Theatre became the father of a baby boy.

In observance of the funeral services for Marshall McCarroll, Paramount newsreel cameraman who was killed in an airplane accident last week, the Paramount exchange was closed all day May 13 . . . Honoring George "Daddy" Hines, veteran operator of the Ambassador Theatre, a dinner dance will be held at the Ambassador Hotel, June 7. Hines will be 83 years old on that day. In charge of arrangements is Guy Gunderson, United Artists salesman.

Al Bowman, Universal salesman in San Francisco, stopped off here for a short visit en route to the convention in Chicago . . . G. A. Acosta, assistant manager at the Azteca exchange, pulled out for San Francisco on a business jaunt . . . Mike Levinson has booked his "White Zombie" into the Broadway, Oakland, for an indefinite run.

In for bookings: Lorraine Valuskis, Bell Theatre, Bell; George Diamos, Diamos circuit, Tucson, Arizona; the Harry Naces (senior and junior), in from Phoenix; Louis Olivos of Walker's Princess in Santa Ana; Mrs. V. Araiza, Iris, Carlsbad.

John Ludwig, who operates the Melvan in Hollywood, has pulled out for Milwaukee for a three-week stay, during which he will look over his theatre and distribution interests there . . . RKO Radio held a trade showing for exhibitors of "My Favorite Wife" at the exchange May 13 . . . A visitor at the RKO studio and exchange was James Brennan, who operates 11 houses for RKO in New Jersey.

Katherine Sessions, secretary at the Monogram exchange, is back on the job after a three-week vacation in Minneapolis, her former home town . . . J. Bezahler, head of the M-G-M homeoffice contract department, and Eddie Aaron, his assistant, have returned to New York after spending a week at the local Metro branch.

"Torpedoed," a Film Alliance release, was booked into the new Admiral on Hollywood Blvd. for a first-run beginning May 16. A. E. Rice is the owner and operator of the house . . . A pair of visitors checked in from down Arizona way—Frank Martin, who operates houses in Clifton and Morancia, and Frank Plumley, booker for the Griffith-Long circuit in and around Phoenix.

Bill Moen has relinquished his post as an M-G-M shipper to accept a position with a local aviation company . . . Booking visitors included Chick Sturdivant, Orpheum, Yuma, and Bill Swanson, Ojai, Ojai.

S. A. Lynch, a Florida circuit operator, visited the Warner lot and was a luncheon guest of Jack L. Warner and Hal Wallis.

Sherrill Cohen, managing director of the Orpheum in downtown Los Angeles, planed to New York for a ten-day stay, during which he will round up talent for his stage attractions . . . O. J. Miller, secretary treasurer of the Independent Theatre Owners of Oregon, took such a liking to Southern California when he came down for the PCCITO convention that he has decided to prolong his stay for another week.

Mike Newman, Columbia exploiteer headquartering here, off on a two-week tour of the northwest on business . . . Henry Sonnenshine of Premiere Pictures is back in town after a trip to San Francisco.

Carroll Peacock, Paramount's branch manager, is at home battling a pneumonia attack . . . In for bookings were Irwin Kanowitz, Union Theatre, and Murray Hawkings, managing director for the Swan circuit.

Adapts "Western Union"

HOLLYWOOD—Robert Carson will adapt "Western Union" from the Zane Grey novel for Producer Harry Joe Brown at 20th-Fox.

SALT LAKE

THE chamber of commerce here sponsored "Community Laff Day" with Gracie Allen featured, as well as other Hollywood stars. A parade proceeded through the main streets with Gracie riding beside Mayor Ab Jenkins in his racing car. Gracie was guest of honor and principal speaker at a dinner attended by the mayors of surrounding towns as well as Salt Lake's mayor and other civic personalities.

Monogram's branch manager, W. W. McKendrick, is leaving for a sales trip . . . Frank Murphy is expected back from an extended sales tour of Montana where he has been contacting exhibitors with Mercury's lineup . . . George D. Pyper, for many years manager of the old Salt Lake Theatre, returned a few days ago from Hollywood. He served as technical advisor on 20th Century-Fox's "Brigham Young."

Amateur vaudeville and "Spelling Bees" continue to attract large crowds to the Capitol . . . "Northwest Passage" is going great at the Gem, local second run . . . "Buck Benny Rides Again" moved to the Studio for an extended run after a stay at the Centre.

Panic-stricken when fire broke out in the projection room, scores of children attending a motion picture in the crowded Harvard L. D. S. ward hall here escaped without injury when attendants quickly halted a mad rush for the main exit. About 300 children were in the amusement hall when a roll of film broke and was ignited by the arc lights in the projection machines, sending flames to the ceiling of the fireproof inclosure.

Lon Hoss, city salesman for Universal in Los Angeles, accompanied by Mrs. Hoss, visited in Salt Lake City . . . Al Shepherd, RKO, has been transferred to Montana.

SEATTLE

A ROUGH summary of the census shows this city to have lost a few thousand people since 1930. City officials are calling on all people to register if they were missed by the census taker. All theatres are cooperating by running trailers. This loss of population means a big drop in revenue from the state, for all grants are based on population . . . Correction! A letter from Popcorn Smith tells us it was 2,000 bags of popcorn, and not $2,000 worth that was sold at the opening of the ball season. Makes a lot of difference, eh what! . . . Gracie Allen's campaign for president may reach Seattle this summer. Glen McLeod, head of the annual Montana picnic, announces Gracie will appear in person at the picnic if she can duck her radio and picture assignments long enough to get here.

Death claimed W. C. Meagher, widely known theatre official. Meagher years ago worked for Sullivan & Considine and for years worked in the office of Jensen-von Herberg . . . Word from Los Angeles that L. O. Lukan was one of the principal speakers at the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners. Lukan, representing the Washington-Northern Idaho-Alaska district at the conference, denounced double bills on the grounds they tire the mind; they induce eyestrain and mean late hours for children; they increase operating expense without increase in revenue. If both pictures are good, neither seems to be as good as it should be. If one is good and the other bad, the audience goes away always remembering the bad one.

Betty Saffle, daughter of Maury of Metro, and Don Condon, booker for Sterling Theatres, announce they will tie the knot on July 26. The wedding will be a church affair. Good luck and best wishes to both of you . . . Oscar Paisley, exhibitor from Missoula, Mont., announces a new theatre for Osborne, Ida. The new spot will be a 600 seater and is near completion. Will open end of May . . . J. J. Whalen, father of Frankie Peacock, is back home in Vancouver, B. C., after spending the past few months in California. Whalen tells of attending the fights in Hollywood and some thief picking his wallet. The strange part was, the wallet was mailed back to Whalen at his hotel, minus the money.

Managers of Al Rosenberg's division of the Evergreen State Theatres, in attendance at a meeting here, included: Joe Rosenfield, Buck Seale, Oscar Nyberg and Jimmy Ewing from Spokane; Morrie Nimmer, Wenatchee; Hal Murphy, Olympia; Lynn Peterson, Bremerton; Billy Hartford, Everett; Al Baker, Bellingham, and O. T. Taylor, Aberdeen . . . John Pollock, brother of Playwright Channing Pollock, in town in advance of Raymond Massey, who is to appear at the Metropolitan in the stage version of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" . . . Harry Landstrom, Universal salesman of Salt Lake City, and his son Louis, who is with 20th Century-Fox in Salt Lake, here for a vacation visit and greeting old friends on the Row . . . Al Bloom in from eastern Washington, to leave with Manager Pete Higgins and A. J. Sullivan for the United Artists' convention in Chicago. The party will pick up Jack Kloepper and Jack O'Bryan at Portland.

Maury Saffle, Mac Rubenfeld and Wally Rucker back from the Metro gathering in San Francisco . . . Frank Sabin of the Majestic, Eureka, Mont., has gone to Detroit and will drive back in a new car . . . L. J. McGinley and Mrs. McGinley off for Omaha, Neb., for a visit with his brother. From there L. J. will proceed to the Universal convention in Chicago and Mrs. McGinley will go to Indianapolis to visit Mrs. Gordon Craddock. Also leaving here for the Universal get-together are Les Theuerkauf, Art Kallen and M. G. Whitman . . . Art and Mrs. Slater to New York to attend the National Film Carriers' convention at the Park Central . . . Celia Estill flying to Chicago and planning to drive home a new car. Her hubby, Bob, has resigned as head booker for Paramount to join a non-professional firm in Oregon. Max Hadfield moves into Bob's spot at Paramount with Gordon Waldo taking over Max's duties as assistant booker.

Bjarne Moe reports a concerted drive to finish the new Irvin Fey theatre in Renton. It is now in the hands of painters and decorators and will be ready for opening, June 1 . . . Eddie Lamb, Pete Higgins, L J. McGinley and Neal Walton, all over to Spokane to attend a serious business meeting . . . Barclay Ardell, local manager for Altec, expecting a visit from E. C. Schriver, district manager, and Stan Pariseau, branch manager for the company . . . Mike Newman, that demon publicity hound from the Columbia studios, in town in the interest of their latest production . . . Art Gollofon, apart from winning the rod and reel for his large fish, also won the second grand prize of a row boat . . . Charley Comfort of the Star leaving his drama desk piled with work a week ahead, while he hops the plane to attend a preview in Hollywood.

Kelly, of the Northwest Film Club, announces he and his wife have adopted a boy . . . Jesse Beckman down from Alaska for a few weeks vacation . . . Bud Benson in from Anacortes and introducing a charming daughter . . . Charley Beale of Juneau, Alaska, after spending a few days here, is extending his vacation in Iowa. While Charley is on the mainland, Mrs. Beale is taking care of the theatres in Juneau . . . Zella Lamb entertaining her sister-in-law, Mrs. Florence Calder, of Victoria, B. C., and a group of friends, all here to enter a bowling tournament in Tacoma.

PORTLAND

AN APATHETIC pre-election campaign warmed up slightly in the final week with Bonneville Administration support propping up the faltering public power forces seeking creation of a people's utility district within the Portland city limits. Attempts to make organized vice an issue in the city election were overshadowed in the exchange of amenities between the public power forces and a volunteer committee of some 2,000 citizens, organized to fight the PUD. It was generally conceded the expected defeat of the public power plan would mean a repetition of the fight next November.

Charlie White's "Star Room" collection of stills, books, magazines and press books of the film world left for the San Francisco World's Fair in 11 packing cases weighing a ton and a half, and Charlie himself made the rounds of Filmrow to say goodbye before following the shipment south. Tommy Luke, Portland florist, came up with a cooperative plan whereby feminine film stars who visit Charlie's display at the Fair will receive a bouquet of "Portland Roses" by air express—that is, if Charlie is warned of their visit in time.

Portland Civic Theatre rings down the curtain for the season with the current run of "The Play's the Thing" . . . Hamrick-Evergreen staged a benefit for the Ramblers' Club scholarship fund with a midnight preview of a new film . . . The Orpheum got a good press on A. B. Marcus and his "La Vie Paree" show opening last Wednesday.

Filmrow welcomed the return of H. S. McLeod of TUSCO following his recent auto accident and consequent sojourn in a hospital . . . Fred sr. and Edgar Mercy of Yakima were Portland visitors . . . Jack O'Brien and Jack Kloepper of the United Artists branch headed east for the company convention.

Friends here learned of the recent death in Seattle of Bill Meagher, former auditor of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit and a long-time resident of Portland . . . Dan Cupid has enticed Paloma Haley from the Paramount cashier's cage into matrimony. The marriage was last Sunday . . . Bob White returned by air from the independent exhibitors' convention in Los Angeles following the death here of his mother.

Janice Gardner, booking department secretary at Universal, is vacationing on the Oregon coast . . . Tilly Maki has returned from her's . . . Walter Fenney, Mayfair chief, has succumbed, deserting the ranks of pedestrians to drive a horseless carriage—a Buick.

S' FRANCISCO

A CONDENSED version of George White's "Scandals" takes over at the Golden Gate, May 22. The production has been trimmed to approximately 60 minutes and has the original cast with the exception of Willie and Eugene Howard, who left the show at the end of the two weeks run at the Curran here. Ella Logan, Ben Blue, Ann Miller, Billy Rayes and the "Scandal" gals will be on view.

Building and renovation seems to be the order of things in this territory just now. Dan Nunan is renovating his New Turlock in Turlock; Fox West Coast is building the Carlos in San Carlos; Arthur Fukuda will soon open his new Royal in Guadalupe; and the new Bijou in Visalia will have a late June opening. On the other side of the ledger, work on the Renie in Brisbane has stopped and indications are the project will be dropped.

Fifty thousand visitors are expected at the annual Frog Jump at Angel's Camp on May 17, 18 and 19. In addition to the big attraction, the frog jumping contest, there will be outdoor shows, numerous other contests and exhibitions . . . Rotus Harvey, president of the northern California ITO, trained out for Washington to testify against the Neely bill . . . The local ITO met May 14 to discuss resolutions and other business transacted at the PCCITO convention. Speaking of the convention, all delegates came back with cook books under their arms. They were pased out to all exhibitors by Pacific Premium . . . Tory Roberts, Sacramento Valley salesman for Columbia, is driving a flashy new Buick.

Arundel "Kokie" Keane is handling publicity for Neil Hamilton's Exposition attraction, "Hollywood Stage 9." Keane, formerly with the United Press in the Orient, handled news releases for Sally Rand last year . . . Mina Rott, Warner inspectress, is back on the job after a few days illness . . . Willie May McNett, stenographer at National Theatre Supply, is off to Seattle and Puget Sound on her vacation.

Jules Levy of Premier Pictures was a visitor, stopping over on his way from Seattle to Los Angeles . . . The St. Francis brought "Lost Horizon" back to Market Street for a limited run . . . Bill Tam of the Amidor in Jackson is building himself a new home and reports coming in from that area say the new manse is a real showplace . . . "Wahoo," the latest house game to hit San Francisco, didn't stay very long. The President booked it on a seven-nights-a-week basis, but held it only three days.

Unusual interest is being shown in the Larkin Theatre's summer revival season inaugurated last week. Programs include two features that have proven worthy of a repeat date. Opening bill was "The Petrified Forest" and "She Loves Me Not." The theatre, operated by Charles Rosener, was on a foreign picture policy previously . . . Dan McLean has entered his boat, Nadinot, in the Hearst Regatta, and while Dan does not rate among the favorites, the Row boys are pulling for him.

One of the best known film figures in the city, Herbert "Dutch" Riemer, died May 11.

Italian Franchise Holder Says Imports to Continue

LOS ANGELES—The present European war will have little effect on the production and importation into this country of Italian-made motion pictures, according to Lionel V. Bonini, manager of the Papalini Film Exchange, with offices in Hollywood. The Papalini office has exclusive western distribution on all foreign product imported by the Esperia Film Distributing Co., of New York and currently has three Italian-made films in distribution in this territory—"Stella Del Mare," "Giovanni de Medici" and "Love in Old Naples."

Bonini bases his opinion that production in Italy will increase, rather than decrease, because of the war on the fact he has had word from Rome that producers there are anxious to bring in Hollywood talent. They are prepared, Bonini reports, to reimburse Hollywoodians in American dollars, payable here and protected by bond prior to their departure for Italy. Efforts have already been made to interest Madeleine Carroll, Ann Sothern and George Raft in Italian deals.

Los Angeles Oriental Raises Price Nickel

LOS ANGELES—Irving Carlin and Max Sinker have boosted admission prices at their Oriental from 20 to 25 cents, effective immediately.

Opening June 3

VENTURA, CAL.—A June 3 opening has been scheduled for Mrs. Jenne Dodge's new Mayfair. An 816-seater, it will be operated on a 35-cent admission scale.

REVIEW FLASHES

HIDDEN GOLD (Para)—To those multitudinous fans who relish wholesome, red-blooded action entertainment, there just cannot be such a thing as a bad "Hopalong Cassidy" picture and so this qualifies as first-class action film fare, although it falls somewhat below the high standards established by most predecessors in the popular series produced by Harry Sherman. Lesley Selander directed.

YOU CAN'T FOOL YOUR WIFE (RKO)—Domestic comedy whose modest budget proves no handicap to a sparkling screenplay boasting enough laugh lines to keep any audience in high good humor throughout. Capable acting and spirited direction also contribute to its status as worthwhile program material. Cliff Reid produced; Ray McCarey directed.

COMPLETE REVIEWS on the above pictures will appear in an early issue of BOXOFFICE.

Union Restrained From White Center Activity

SEATTLE—Superior Court Judge James B. Kinne has granted an order temporarily restraining Operators' Local 154 from using sound truck equipment or distributing handbills in the vicinity of the Center Theatre at White Center.

At the same time, he denied a request by the union, in a cross-complaint, seeking an order to restrain W. T. Coy and Ernest Lindgren, co-partners of the theatre, from "any acts of violence" against union members. The court ruled the union failed to prove the theatre management was involved in pouring boiling water on two union members recently near the theatre or that a shot fired into a sound truck was the act of the management.

ATOI Mid-Summer Convention Set

INDIANAPOLIS—The convention committee of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana announces the group's third annual mid-summer convention will be held June 25-27 at Spring Mill Park, near Mitchell, Ind.

Earlier announcements gave the meeting place as the Spink-Wawasee Hotel at Lake Wawasee, Ind., where the conventions heretofore have been held, but the committee decided to give exhibitors in the southern end of the state a break this year after many requests.

The annual golf tournament will be held as usual. It will be played on the beautiful course at Bedford.

ATOI Directors Complete Summer Convention Plans

INDIANAPOLIS—At the regular monthly directors' meeting of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, plans were completed for the group's mid-summer convention, and much discussion was given over to "Primrose Path" and "Strange Cargo" as to what action should be taken on requests from various religious groups that theatres not play the films.

The regular June meeting will be postponed until the first night of the summer convention, June 25, which will be held at Spring Mill Park near Mitchell, Ind., it was decided.

Roy Harrold to Washington For Allied Board Meeting

INDIANAPOLIS—Roy E. Harrold, president of ATOI, left Friday afternoon for Washington, D. C., to attend the national Allied board meeting scheduled for Saturday morning. He will stay over to attend hearings on the Neely bill, which started May 13.

Warner May Invite Some Exhibitors to Conclave

CHICAGO—Prominent exhibitors in this area are expected to be invited to sessions of the Warner convention to be held here June 17-19 at the Blackstone. This western division meeting will follow by a week a similar eastern session June 10 to 12 in Pittsburgh. The 1940-41 product lineup will be announced to the men at both sessions.

All Warner executives are expected to attend, headed by the Warner brothers, Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager; Hal B. Wallis, executive producer; Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres; Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director; Carl Leserman, assistant sales head; Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity in the east; and others.

Rodgers Is Proud Of Leo's Lineup

CHICAGO—William F. Rodgers, M-G-M general sales head, while telling the midwestern sales conference about plans for next year during the conclave here at the Drake Hotel, took time out to show the salesmen what "an outstanding late spring and summer lineup we have available starting immediately for the exhibitors."

Rodgers said he saw in final or rough form eight productions, all to be ready within the next month or so. "I have never before seen any one company to have available for exhibitors such an outstanding lineup, especially in the so-called 'dog-days.'"

The lineup, Rodgers announced, consisted of "Edison, the Man," starring Spencer Tracy; "Waterloo Bridge," starring Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor; "New Moon," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy; "Susan and God," with Joan Crawford and Fredric March; "Pride and Prejudice," with Laurence Olivier and Greer Garson; "Boom Town," Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr; "Andy Hardy Meets a Debutante," with the usual Hardy cast, plus Judy Garland; and "The Mortal Storm," with Jimmy Stewart, Margaret Sullavan and Frank Morgan.

After conducting the local sales meeting, Rodgers was expected to head east, accompanied by Edward Saunders, western sales manager, for the premiere of "Edison, the Man" in six theatres simultaneously in the four Oranges, North, East, South and West, of New Jersey on Thursday night.

Rodgers had no further comment to make while here on his recent attack on the Neely bill before the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners in Los Angeles. He merely reiterated that M-G-M would have to cut its film output by 25 per cent if the Neely bill is passed, because "we would have no 'Hardys' or 'Kildares,' for we could not afford to experiment with such pictures as we now do."

Among those in the group are Morton Van Praag, Chicago district manager; Lou Patz, Milwaukee branch manager; Chris Chinn, Henry Kohn, Sam Stein and Ben Miller, National Screen; Verne Touchett and Roy Pierce, Fox-Wisconsin Theatre district managers; Eddie Weisfeldt, Riverside Theatre; William Koster, Miller Theatre; R. P. Williams, Brodhead, Wis., and Bernice Robb, Warner-Saxe Theatres.

Rowe Hot on Paper; To "Pour It On"

ST. LOUIS—Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe jr., who recently sentenced Ralph Coghlan and Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, employes of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, to jail terms and fined them and the Pulitzer Publishing Co. for contempt of court, has revealed his intentions to "pour it on the Post-Dispatch."

Part of his campaign against the newspaper is to ask the June term grand jury of the circuit court for criminal causes, when it convenes on June 3, to investigate the actions of the newspaper with a view to determining whether there is reasonable grounds to return indictments charging criminal libel.

At a recent meeting of the St. Louis Bar Ass'n, Judge Rowe spoke his mind concerning the Post-Dispatch, saying: "The contempt case is just the beginning—just a part of it. I'm going to have the grand jury look into all this criminal libel they've been printing. Not civil libel, criminal libel.

"Contempt is just part of it. That's first. Then comes the matter of criminal libel. I'm going to pour it on the Post-Dispatch. I'll give them all the jury trials they want.

"Maybe Mr. Pulitzer will be indicted. How will he like that?"

Judge Rowe is known to have unburdened his views on sundry other occasions. So it looks like a war to the death between the judge and the newspaper.

As has been printed, the Missouri supreme court has accepted complete jurisdiction of the contempt of court case, and it also has permitted the Missouri Press Ass'n to intervene as a "friend of the court." Judge Rowe rejected a request of the association to exercise this function when the matter was before him. He fined the paper's publisher $2,000. Coghlan received a $200 fine and 20 days in jail and Fitzpatrick, a cartoonist, a $100 fine and ten days in jail.

Judge Rowe objected to two editorials and a cartoon commenting on his action in freeing John P. Nick, former IATSE vice-president, under a demurrer in his trial on a charge of alleged conspiracy to extort $10,000 from motion picture theatre owners in the fall of 1936. Later, on advice of Judge Rowe, Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller dropped the companion charge against State Representative Edward M. Brady.

"Edison, the Man" Opens At the United Artists

CHICAGO—B&K opened M-G-M's "Edison, the Man" here at the United Artists a day after the premiere of the film in the Four Oranges, West, East, North and South Orange, N. J. The film opened there Wednesday night, and here on Thursday (May 16).

It Looks Like a Tent for Chicago

Chicago—Clyde Eckhardt, speaking briefly at the Tippy Harrison testimonial, let it be known efforts are being made to form a Chicago tent of Variety.

"I can say definitely now," he said, "that there will be a Variety Club in Chicago."

Press "Going College" At Galesburg Debut

GALESBURG, ILL.—Midwestern newspaper and tradepaper writers will "go college" next Tuesday, May 21, when Paramount world premieres "Those Were the Days" ("At Good Old Siwash") here. The film is a picturization of college life 40 years ago at Knox College.

Galesburg merchants are cooperating with Paramount and Great States to put on the premiere at the Orpheum here. It will be a two-day affair, with the arrival on Monday of the All-American College Queens as guests of Knox College students. Town and townsfolk will be arrayed in 1904 decorations and costumes. There will be an old-time college campus rally, with a huge bonfire, military review and a reception.

Tuesday will see a dress parade in the afternoon, a press banquet, followed by an NBC broadcast over 90 stations originating from here, of the Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson "The Battle of the Sexes" program. The premiere in the evening will be followed by a movie ball.

William Holden, Bonita Granville and Judith Barrett, of the film's cast, plus J. Carrol Naish, Lynne Overman and Muriel Angelus, in addition to Ted Reed, producer-director of the film, are expected here. Mrs. George Fitch, widow of the author of "Good Old Siwash," is also expected, as are scores of newspaper and magazine representatives, motion picture tradepaper reporters and newsreel cameramen.

Ralph Ravenscroft, of Cliff Lewis' studio publicity department, has been handling details of the event.

Vaude-Film Policy Will Reopen Chicago Palace

CHICAGO—The Palace is expected to reopen about July 26 or August 1, with a vaude-film policy, it is understood.

Meanwhile, the Universal and RKO product becoming available during the interim will be used by Jones, Linick & Schaefer at the Oriental, where a vaude-film policy is now in effect. The initial offering at the Oriental was Milton Berle on the stage, with Universal's "If I Had My Way," the new Bing Crosby film. The Oriental is getting a 65-cent top, with the morning and afternoon prices, 35 and 50 cents.

A Ruling Is Due on "Birth of Nation"

CHICAGO—Judge Donald McKinlay was expected to give his decision Friday of this week on whether "Birth of a Nation" may still be shown in Chicago proper.

In court for several months now has been the problem of whether the film should still be shown. Producers of the film have had a permanent injunction since 1917 restraining the city police department from interfering with its showing. However, a synchronized sound version is now available, and the city contends the old injunction does not cover such a film.

Meanwhile, the Society for the Advancement of the American Negro has taken up the problem with Judge McKinlay as to whether the film itself can be shown, in view of a state statute passed a few months after the original injunction was given in 1917. This statute prohibits the showing of any films holding up to ridicule or derision any race or creed, and Earl Dickerson, Negro city alderman, arguing for the group, contends that statute covers "Birth of a Nation."

Likewise, the Civil Liberties Committee, headed by Ira Latimer, has gone into the argument. Latimer contends the city ordinance governing censorship of films and the state statute, are both unconstitutional, since they do not guarantee freedom of speech in motion pictures.

"Motion pictures today are more than entertainment," he said. "They are mediums for the transmission of ideas and information and as such are not subject to any more censorship than newspapers. Newspapers can comment on anything political, and so should motion pictures, which cannot under the present system of censorship in Chicago. We are still seeking the change of this censorship system here, seeking only to permit censors to pass on obscenity in films."

Press to South Bend for Shooting on "Rockne"

CHICAGO—Chicago newspaper and tradepaper writers were to go to South Bend this week to see actual shooting of scenes on the Notre Dame campus for the Warner production, "The Life of Knute Rockne."

Graduation scenes of the young Rockne, played by Pat O'Brien, and the burial of the great coach, were to be filmed while the newspaper contingent looked on. It is understood scenes to be made inside the Notre Dame Cathedral on the campus will be the first ever to be made there. Besides O'Brien, Donald Crisp, who has a feature role in the film, are in South Bend, in addition to a location unit of about 20.

Here handling publicity on the unit were George Shaffer and Bill Rice. Both are studio publicists.

Laughing With Leo

By GENE RICH

CHICAGO—The M-G-M regional closed here Tuesday night when all of the delegates, led by General Sales Manager William F. Rodgers, Western Sales Manager Edward Saunders and District Managers Jack Flynn and Harris Wolfberg, dined in dinner jackets at the Chez Paree. Sophie Tucker, headlining at the popular Windy City nitery, let the customers know Leo and his midwestern cohorts were in town, with special gags.

All of the delegates were provided with tickets to their choice of legitimate stage attractions in Chicago, Monday night. Practically everyone went to see Katharine Hepburn in "Philadelphia Story" at the Erlanger, which M-G-M will film starting June 4.

Julian King, Chicago salesman, was back in time for the convention, following a brief vacation at his home in Alabama.

Sandy Gottlieb, just promoted from student salesman to a regular on the Milwaukee staff, attended his first M-G-M confab as a full-fledged salesman.

When everyone went to the show Monday night, Bill Cameron, George Turner and C. R. Stoflet, Minneapolis salesmen, showed what he-men in the northwest are made of. They walked all the way from the Drake to the Erlanger, instead of cabbing it.

The two Shumows held their usual convention bull-session. Harry J. is branch manager in Omaha, and A. Jack is sales manager in Chicago.

J. L. Kelly, who has been assigned to the Chicago office, leaves soon to work out of the Minneapolis office.

John X. Quinn, St. Louis branch manager; W. E. (Doc) Banford, Chicago manager; Julian King, Chicago salesman; and Norman Pyle, Chicago exploiteer, talked over old times when they all worked out of the St. Louis and Kansas City offices.

Max Schwartz and Howard Beck, new to the Chicago sales area, almost sat in the wrong sections during the opening meeting. Reason: Beck was just transferred from Detroit, and naturally went to sit where Auto City Branch Manager Frank Downey and his crew were; and ditto Schwartz, just moved over to the Windy City from Milwaukee.

Bob Hope Tries Out Some Gags at Rialto, Joliet

Tippy Harrison Farewell Party Draws About 250

CHICAGO—About 250 men attended the testimonial dinner for Tippy Harrison at the Congress Hotel, given him in honor of his 22 years service in the motion picture industry as he left to enter the printing field.

Numerous speakers praised Harrison's efforts through the years. He was presented with a star-sapphire ring by Jack Kirsch, representing Allied Theatres, of which Tippy was a director, and those attending the dinner. Kirsch spoke briefly, wishing Harrison well in his new venture.

One of the big laughs of the evening came, though, when Lou Harrison, also of the Goodman-Harrison circuit, gave Tippy the dubious honor of credit for instigating double features over 20 years ago. "There is 'double-feature Tippy,'" quipped Harrison, as he "explained," that Tippy, when coming to work for the circuit in 1918 "bought 168 pictures from Paramount, so we had to play them off two at a time."

Julius Goodman, senior partner of the circuit, spoke briefly and said that "the doors of Goodman and Harrison are always open to Tippy if he wants to come back." Other speakers were Jack Rose, Clyde Eckhardt, Van Nomikos, and Jack Miller, who was toastmaster. Dick Sachsel topped the evening off with one of his humorous dialect gags.

Motion pictures were taken by Max Levy, well-known in the industry, who now heads Excel Movie Products Co. in the 16mm field. These were shown later in the evening, and presented to Tippy, together with a projector and camera.

Levine Closes at Sycamore

SYCAMORE, ILL.—Stanley Levine has closed the Fargo for the summer.

CHICAGO

EDWIN LEVIN, for nine years with Balaban & Katz in its publicity and exploitation department, was to leave this week for New York, where he becomes associated with the promotion department of the new tabloid afternoon daily, P. M., to be published by Ralph MacAllister Ingersoll.

George Dembow, vice-president in charge of sales for National Screen Service, was a local visitor . . . Mrs. Mannie Stutz, wife of the Sonotone owner, is spending the summer in California.

C. R. Long, home office checking supervisor for M-G-M, spent a few days at the local exchange, conferring with Bill Potts, Chicago checking supervisor . . . Speaking of home office representatives, reminds us of Jack deWaal, RKO's home office representative, currently at the local exchange. Jack wants it understood that he is NOT an auditor.

Stanley Johnson, of the Warner exchange billing department, has been promoted to a booker's spot . . . Johnson succeeds Ted Levy, who has been a Warner booker, but who has moved over to the RKO exchange in the same position, succeeding Dave Kimmel, who was transferred to Omaha by RKO.

Jack Osserman, RKO branch manager, is vacationing in Hot Springs . . . Florence Eisenberg is the new addition to the Indiana-Illinois office staff . . . Don Griffith is the new manager for the I-I Lex on the south side, succeeding Mel Bleiden, who resigned.

Harry Teitel of Indianapolis has returned after visiting his cousin, Abe Teitel. Both Teitels are in the film business . . . B. C.

Plea for Injunction On Bingo to Wait

MILWAUKEE—Pending a ruling by the circuit court as to whether questions put to Charles W. Trampe, exhibitor and head of Film Service, Inc., by William B. Rubin, counsel for the American Luther Ass'n, need be answered, Trampe's plea for an injunction to restrain the Luther association from playing Bingo has been adjourned.

In an adverse examination before Court Commissioner Charles Orth, Trampe refused to answer most of the questions asked of him on advice of his attorney, B. J. Miller.

Question put by Rubin indicated that he seeks to show that Trampe had not sued with "clean hands." Rubin asked, and Trampe refused to tell, whether he belonged to any organization or clubs that permitted Bingo or other games of chance. Miller also refused to answer similar questions.

In the meantime, the lack of enforcement on the part of local officials in connection with Bingo violations was brought into the open when a group of theatre men appeared before Chief of Police Joseph T. Kluchesky pressing for action.

Those calling on the chief included Trampe, Miller, Harry Perlewitz, business manager for the ITPA of Wisconsin; Howard J. Gleason, representing Warner-Saxe Theatres, and LeRoy Pierce, representing Fox Wisconsin Amusement Corp.

Following the exhibitors' request for action, the chief asked for a statement of policy from District Attorney Herbert J. Steffes, who reiterated the stand he took last November by declaring that he would issue no state warrants against charity Bingo in Milwaukee county.

Herman J. Eggert, proprietor of a south side bookstore who was one of a group of small business men which brought the first civil action against Bingo here in July, 1939, died last week after an illness of about three months.

For Boxoffice Supremacy—

Fanchon & Marco's first "Award of Supremacy" goes to that man who made famous the "Kollege of Musical Knowledge." Here, Harry C. Arthur jr., general manager of the circuit's theatre operations in St. Louis, awards the silver trophy to a fittingly outfitted Kay Kyser whose stage engagement at the 5,000-seat Fox shattered all existing attendance records of the St. Louis deluxer.

Kay Kyser and Band Win "Award of Supremacy"

ST. LOUIS—For breaking every existing attendance and gross record of the 5,000-seat Fox here, Harry C. Arthur jr., president and general manager of Fanchon & Marco Service Corp., presented to Kay Kyser the first Fanchon & Marco "Award of Supremacy" for "outstanding achievement in the field of theatrical exhibition."

The award was made by Arthur during the closing stage performance before a packed house of 7,500 patrons. Approximately 20 inches in height, the silver trophy features a statuette of a girl in a draped gown with hands outstretched and proffering a symbol of achievement.

The "Award of Supremacy," it was revealed by Arthur, will be presented wherever and whenever an outstanding achievement or event takes place, with at least three awards to be made annually for (1) the most outstanding boxoffice stage attraction; (2) the most outstanding boxoffice film production; and (3) the most outstanding film executive (distributor or producer) of the current year.

Weekend Suffers

CHICAGO—The warm weather delivered another weekend blow to the boxoffice this week. Both loop and suburban houses took it on the chin.

B&K Screening

CHICAGO—B&K screened Paramount's "The Biscuit Eater" at the Esquire for various women's groups, including Parent-Teacher Associations and the Better Films Council.

Seven Seek to Set Aside Stipulation

ST. LOUIS—The action late last week of seven defense intervenors in the receivership suit against Local No. 143 in asking Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley to strike from the files of the proceedings a stipulation presented on May 8 accepting the decision of Judge Oakley against the defense, presents a new angle to the proceedings.

The stipulation had been agreed to by John P. Nick, former international vice-president of the IATSE; Clyde A. Weston, former business manager for Local 143, one of their attorneys; counsel for the international union and several of the original defense intervenors, as well as the present officers of No. 143.

The seven men who now seek to set aside the stipulation are Leroy Stone, Arthur Wiegraffe, Henry Duncan, Anthony Cammarata, James Callahan, Joseph L. Peroutka and N. A. Polito jr. They hold projectionist jobs, but do not have cards in Local 143, having been at work under cards issued by the international union at the request of Nick. Under terms of Judge Oakley's ruling, these international cards would no longer be recognized.

These seven, through their attorney, have questioned the jurisdiction of Judge Oakley, contending he cannot act on the stipulation filed on May 8 because Nick and Weston have appealed to the Missouri supreme court. Further they contend defense intervenors who signed the stipulation were not acting for them. Part of the agreement entered into at the time the stipulation was signed is for Nick and Weston to withdraw their appeal to the supreme court.

In the meantime the question of fees to be paid receivers and their attorneys in the receivership proceedings is under consideration.

St. Louis Union Dispute Settled; F&M Parleys

ST. LOUIS—Settlement of the dispute for control of Local No. 143 of the operators union was reached last week in Judge Ernest F. Oakley's court when John P. Nick, former vice-president of the IATSE, and Clyde A. Weston, ex-business agent of No. 143, abandoned the fight against their ouster and in their turn, the new officers of the local relinquished all claim to the $48,399 which the court ruled several weeks ago was due the union from Nick and Weston. The appeals to the Missouri supreme court, taken by Nick and Weston, are to be dropped.

The agreement also paves the way for a settlement of the dispute that has been in progress since last September between Fanchon and Marco interests and the anti-Nick faction in the union. The dispute centers around the separate working agreements that F&M has with Nick supporters among the projectionists.

Plans Are Completed for Variety's Charity Show

INDIANAPOLIS—The local Variety Club announces plans are completed for its Charity Show to be held at the Lyric the night before the big 500-mile Memorial Day race, May 29.

An elaborate stage presentation as half of the two and one-half hour show to be given has been booked. The unit, now on a coast-to-coast tour, is Elbern Calvert's "The Egyptian Follies," which played for five months in London.

Charles M. Olson, owner of the Lyric, will soon announce his program for the week of the Variety Charity Show. He has offered to furnish the major portion of his program for the second half of the giant all-stage show.

Milwaukee May Review "Primrose Path" Permit

MILWAUKEE—Mayor Carl F. Zeidler has requested the motion picture commission to reconsider its approval of the film, "The Primrose Path," currently playing Fox's Palace here.

In making his request, the mayor said he had received numerous complaints about the film and took the commission to task in a letter by declaring, in part, that "it is intended to be a public body responsive to public opinion. It should not be a rubber stamp."

According to Frank B. Metcalfe, chairman of the commission, the picture was approved by that body after a careful review.

"Rebecca" Is Lauded by Film Council Listing

CHICAGO — The Chicago Better Films Council bi-monthly listing for April, included in the family group: Warner's "British Intelligence" and "Virginia City;" "It's a Date (Univ); "Seventeen" (Para't); and "Young Tom Edison" (M-G-M).

In the mature listing there were: "Adventure in Diamonds" (Para't); "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" (FN); "Half a Sinner" (Univ); "I Take This Woman" (M-G-M); "Too Many Husbands" (Col); "Louise" (St. Maurice); and "Rebecca" (UA), of which was said, "previewers . . . predict a place for it 'among the best of the year.'"

Trunick Is St. Louis Area Photophone Sales Head

ST. LOUIS—W. H. Trunick, formerly in the Chicago office of RCA Photophone, has been transferred here to take charge of sales in the St. Louis territory. He will headquarter at the L. T. Rockenstein Co., theatre supply dealers on Filmrow.

Trunick succeeds J. F. (Jack) O'Brien, who has been transferred to Boston where he is in charge of all RCA Photophone sound and reproducing equipment sales in the New England states. O'Brien succeeded H. C. Elwes, who is to take up special duties in the RCA home office in Camden, N. J.

Alexander of Alexander Film, just about the time you are reading this, is catching loads of fish (he hopes) in the Lake of the Ozarks.

Kay Morrison of the M-G-M office staff was in Billings Hospital this week for an illness checkup . . . "The Little Flower," a religious film, played this week at the Chopin . . . Bob Hartman is one of those "in and out again" guys. He flew back from Los Angeles after six weeks there, remained at his International Enterprises office here a day, and then planed out again for Atlanta . . . Incidentally, Cal Hermer, formerly with BOXOFFICE, is now in Los Angeles for International Enterprises.

Sam Kaplan of Al Dezel Roadshows is back after spending two months in the St. Louis territory booking "Paroled From the Big House" . . . Edgar E. Lloyd, New York distributor of foreign films, was here making deals with local exhibitors.

Sam Clark postcards several of his friends from Palm Springs where the Warner exploiteer is now recuperating from his recent sige of pneumonia.

Jack Hess goes in at Music Corporation of America as Chicago publicist June 1, succeeding Bill Green, resigned . . . Warner theatre managers in the Chicago area held a regular meeting this week.

Lou Hunt, formerly district manager for National Theatre Supply here, is back from Florida. Hunt, who retired last year, is considerably improved in health.

Bill Brumberg, Warner assistant branch manager, is worried about Tom Norman of the Pal, Palatine, Ill. He noticed Tom hobnobbing with Dorothy Nessel of the Daily News at the screening of Warner's "Cavalcade of Academy Awards." "What next," mused Brumberg, "after having met Ann Sheridan, receiving a photograph from Hedy Lamarr and hobnobbing with Dorothy Nessel."

The Ed Sullivan troupe, returning to the west coast, passed through Chicago before boarding the Santa Fe Chief. Also on the Chief were Kay Kyser and his band headed Hollywood-way for another RKO film.

Alice Faye and Edward Arnold stopped briefly at Chicago airport Tuesday en route on a TWA plane for the Pittsburgh premiere of 20th Century-Fox's "Lillian Russell," in which both appear.

Stuart Tomber of the B&K Garrick staff will become associated with Roy Bruder in his new bowling alley and cocktail lounge in East St. Louis, it is understood. Tomber is expected to leave about June 1 for East St. Louis to assist Bruder in plans for getting the venture started.

All Officers Re-elected By Indiana's Indorsers

FORT WAYNE, IND.—All officers of the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays were re-elected at the 25th annual state convention held here at the Hotel Anthony.

They are: Mrs. B. J. Roberts, Fort Wayne, president; Mrs. Ferd Lucas, Greencastle, first vice-president; Mrs. A. J. Hueber, Indianapolis, second vice-president; Mrs. E. L. Burnett, Indianapolis, third vice-president; Mrs. E. J. Finch, Indianapolis, fourth vice-president; Mrs. L. A. Fonner, Fort Wayne, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. D. Campbell, Fort Wayne, recording secretary; Mrs. Joseph McCord, Greencastle, treasurer; Mrs. H. D. Tutwile, Indianapolis, auditor, and Mrs. R. Earl Peters, Fort Wayne, parliamentarian.

Prof. Preston H. Scott, director of speech at Wayne University, Detroit, was guest speaker at the meeting, his subject being "Current Problems of Motion Pictures." Professor Scott, speaking on the matter of indorsing films, suggested "selectivity, not on a basis of pictures, but on a basis of people." He also discussed problems of producers and exhibitors and the effect of films on both adults and children.

About 100 women from clubs throughout Indiana attended the meeting.

Mrs. David Ross Talks on How Exhibitors Buy Film

INDIANAPOLIS—Mrs. David Ross, president of the local Indorsers of Photoplays, was guest speaker at a Women's Republican Club meeting. Her subject was, "How the Exhibitor Gets His Pictures."

Ex-Circus Man Dies

BLOOMINGTON, IND.—Henry B. Gentry, 75 years old, founder of the Gentry Bros. dog and pony shows and a former manager of the Sells-Floto circus, died here at the home of his sister, Mrs. Emma Evans.

BOWLING

MILWAUKEE—Duplicate silver loving cups have been presented to the teams of the Burleigh Theatre and the RKO exchange as co-champions of the Milwaukee Theatrical Bowling League.

Glenn Wood emerged individual bowling champ with a 187 average in 72 games bowled. Tied for second were Eddie Gavin and Nick Meuren with 186.

Final team standings:

	Won	Lost
Burleigh Theatre	50	28
RKO	50	28
Columbia	48	30
Paramount	46	32
Standard Theatres	44	34
Projectionists Union	40	38
Avalon Theatre	39	39
Film Service, Inc.	37	41
United Artists	37	41
Loew's	36	42
Warner	35	43
Republic	34	44
Saxe Circuit	34	44
20th Century-Fox	33	45
Universal	32	46
Monogram	29	49

Finishers among the first ten bowlers besides those listed already were: Elmer Klase, G. Graack and Charlie Trampe, 179; L. McDaniels, 178; O. Peterson and Jack Lorentz, 175; and B. Bristol, 174.

Brinkmeyer Observes 30th Anniversary of Theatre

ST. LOUIS—J. Fred Brinkmeyer, manager of the Hi-Way Theatre on No. Florissant Boulevard, is celebrating the 30th anniversary of his house.

Brinkmeyer, who formerly was general manager of the St. Louis Amusement Co., took over the management of the Hi-Way Theatre about six years ago. The house at that time was known as the Montgomery, and was operated by Harry Koplar and his brothers, who had bought it from the builder, the late O. T. Crawford. Three years ago the old Montgomery was completely remodeled under the supervision of Harold Koplar, nephew of Harry Koplar. At about the same time the street after which it was named became an extension of Florissant Boulevard, and the theatre became the Hi-Way.

Reins to Dorothy Arzner

HOLLYWOOD—Dorothy Arzner will direct "Dance, Girl, Dance," the Erich Pommer production for RKO.

Form Theatre Corporation In Cape Girardeau, Mo.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO.—The Shirley Theatres Corp. has been incorporated here with $2,000 capital to build and operate motion picture theatres. Incorporators were: Edward J. Rosecan, 59 shares; Olga Rosecan, one share; Victor Klarsfeld, 39 shares, and Shirley Klarsfeld, one share. Papers for the incorporation were prepared by Sam Friedman, Hannibal attorney.

The company contemplates the reconstruction of a commercial building here into a 500-seat theatre. The proposed new house will cost about $25,000.

Rosecan owns the 400-seat Rialto in Hannibal.

Sosnas Let Contract for New Theatre in Mexico

MEXICO, MO.—Building contract for the new 400-seat theatre to be opened here by Sam and Louis Sosna, of Moberly, has been let to I. N. Brown of this city.

Ludwig Abt, Moberly architect, is in charge of the plans for the new house. An existing one-story building is to be remodeled at a cost of about $10,000.

"Philadelphia Story" Will Be Filmed With Hepburn

CHICAGO—After a five-week run, which was none too generously patronized, "Philadelphia Story," starring Katharine Hepburn, was scheduled to close May 18, at the Erlanger. Miss Hepburn is due to report next on the M-G-M lot, where she will star in the film version of the play.

Use Lambert Profile

RACINE, WIS.—Stanley Lambert, manager of the Warner Rialto, got the local house some extra publicity when his profile was used in the Journal-Times as part of a series on Racine business and professional people in connection with a limerick contest.

Burlesk Adds Films

ST. LOUIS — The Grand Theatre has changed its policy from straight burlesque to a combination of films and burlesque. The house has been air-conditioned.

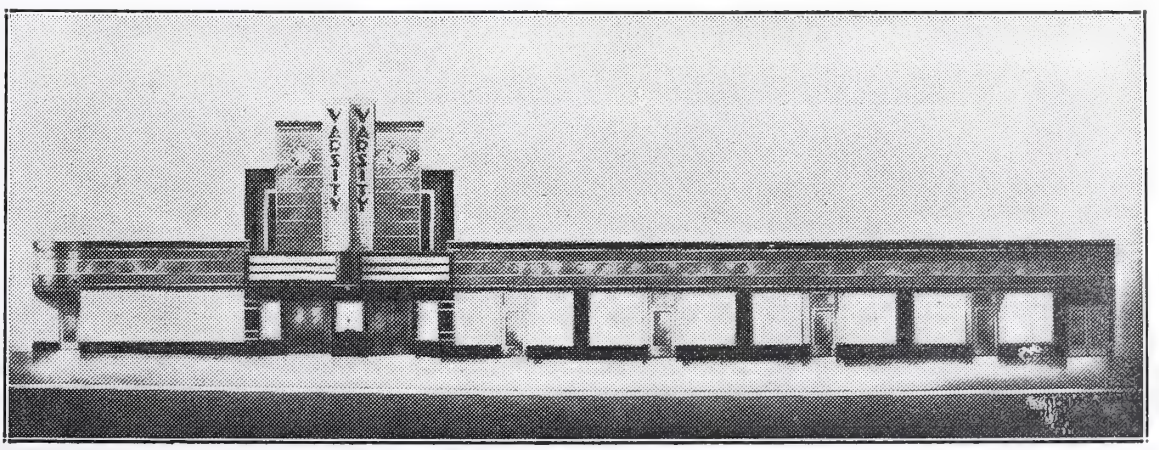
Lee Woodward, Racine projectionist for 13 years, died last week in Kansas City . . . The Grand at Wausau staged its second annual fisherman party with $150 in fishing equipment for prizes.

The Menominee, Mich., city council has approved a contract with National Theatrical Alliance of Stage Workers and Movie Operators covering the employment of stagehands at the Municipal Auditorium.

Zanuck Optimistic Over New Season Properties



CHICAGO—Stopping off in the Windy City en route to New York for conferences with home offices executives, Darryl Zanuck, general manager in charge of production for 20th Century-Fox, was optimistic about his company's next season's properties. He is expected to testify in the government suit while in the east.

With Zanuck was William Goetz, his executive assistant; Sol Wurtzel, producer, and Mack Gordon, of the song-writing team of Gordon and Revel, who is in charge of music at 20th-Fox.

Zanuck disclosed he had closed a deal for Stewart Edward White's "Wild Geese Calling." He paid $75,000 for screen rights to the best seller.

New Cairo House

The new "Varsity" at Cairo, Ill., being erected by the I. W. Rodgers Theatres, has a tentative opening date of July 1. It will seat 1,100 in a stadium type auditorium. The building also provides five shops and store rooms. O. W. Stiegemeyer, St. Louis, is the architect; Edgar Stephens of Cairo is the contractor.

Earl Cunningham announces that this month marks the 12th anniversary of the opening of the Fountain Square Theatre . . . Col. Ken Collins, manager of the Indiana, planned a real southern welcome for Anna Neagle, when she came here May 17 to appear at the theatre in connection with her new RKO picture, "Irene." Miss Neagle was accompanied by a dancing partner and Herbert Wilcox, her fiance as well as producer-director.

Filmrow reports that among those announcing wedding plans are Donald Cox, booker at RKO, who will marry Miss Helen Eldridge on June 22. Mary Lou Lindesmith, biller at Columbia, announced her recent marriage to Richard L. Chapman . . . Mrs. Wilma Feaster, of the Columbia exchange stenographic staff, is vacationing . . . Irving Tamler, operator of the Tuxedo, has appointed "Babe" Lambert his assistant manager . . . Sam Levinsohn, theatre chair salesman, was in town.

A. C. Zaring, operator of the Zaring, and Eddie Zeyen, manager, maintained their Mother's Day custom of long standing. All mothers past 50 were invited to be the theatre's guests last Sunday. The program included a musical tribute of two minutes played by "Burkie" Burkette at the organ console . . . Carl Niesse, operator of the Voge, is telling friends of his acquaintance with Robert Coote, a character player he met at the Variety convention in Dallas . . . Bud Holt, manager of the Cantor circuit's Emerson, announces plans are ready for a complete remodeling of the front of the theatre.

"Hoagy" Carmichael, former Indianapolis resident and now in Hollywood as a song-writer, is co-author of "Can't Get Indiana Off My Mind" . . . Claude Allison, manager of the Strand, noted for his strange exploitation stunts, recently topped them all in connection with the showing of the serial, "The Green Hornet." Allison says he will present guest tickets to the first 50 persons who bring him a hornet. It must be dead and pinned to a piece of paper . . . Thirty pupils at Manual Training High School have been formed into a Motion Picture Study Club. At their meetings they discuss and criticize films. They will attend a screening of "The Biscuit Eater" this week at the Paramount exchange.

Rud Lohrenz, district manager for Warner Bros., spent the greater part of last week at the local exchange conferring with Fred Greenberg, manager . . . Art Baker, manager of the Circle, was confined to his home for a few days with a nervous stomach disorder . . . Horace Spencer, head checker at the RKO exchange, underwent an emergency appendectomy at Methodist Hospital. He is recuperating very nicely . . . Carl Shalit, district manager for Columbia, was in town visiting at the local exchange . . . Roy Churchill, RKO branch manager, attended the world premiere of "My Favorite Wife" in Louisville.

As a result of the many protests received by theatres in Indianapolis requesting them to refrain from showing "Strange Cargo," a special screening was held for members of the Catholic clergy in an effort to iron the situation out. Many theatres with bookings on the picture already set, will go ahead and play the picture as per schedule.

Vote on Fast Time In Indiana Towns

INDIANAPOLIS—Daylight saving proposals in Indiana towns met with varied results when put to a vote.

Wabash residents rejected it by a vote of 1,499 to 1,141. Voters in Richmond have bitterly contested such a proposal for a number of years, and this year the idea was defeated by 684 votes.

Decatur voted 1,139 to 1,018 in favor. Immediately following the vote, the city council met and adopted daylight time which went into effect last Saturday, midnight.

The town of Berne also voted in favor of daylight time, but the proposal lost out in Portland, 981 to 934.

Softball Scores

CHICAGO—Scores of the first games in Filmrow Softball League were: M. J. Ingram Construction, 16, Spector Restaurant, 9; Henri Elmans, 21, National Screen Service, 6; 20th Century-Fox, 13, Hank Porters, 11.

MCA Publicist Resigns

CHICAGO—William H. (Bill) Green, who has been in charge of advertising and publicity for Music Corporation of America for the past two years, has resigned, effective June 1.

ST. LOUIS

THE first motion picture spotted at the Grand under its combination policy is "Marihuana" . . . "Ecstasy" is back for another trial heat at the Hollywood . . . "The Lash" is at the Lyric.

Midget automobiles that race at the Walsh Stadium on Oakland Avenue west of Kings Highway have been forced to muffle their noise. The city now has an anti-noise ordinance.

The French film, "The Story of a Cheat," played a four-night run at the S'Renco Art Theatre.

"Rebecca" is being played day and date at Ritz, Norside and Uptown in St. Louis, the Esquire in Richmond Heights, and the Varsity in University City.

Roger Gibbons of Peoria, Ill., seems to have something in those miniature Hollywood premieres he has been staging at various neighborhood and suburban houses. They gave the would-be Gables, Garbos and Powers a chance to strut their stuff and the other natives a chance to see how Hollywood is supposed to react to such affairs.

Members of the St. Louis Tent No. 4 of the Variety Club had a Bingo party Sunday in the club headquarters. A. L. Matreci is chief barker.

Miss Frances Elizabeth Barrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Barrett, on the afternoon of May 14 was crowned May Queen at Rosati-Kain High School. She was selected for the honor by the other members of the senior class of the school. Her father is St. Louis correspondent for this paper.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann has approved plans for the St. Louis Jubilee entertainment to be staged for nine days next September at the Municipal Auditorium to provide funds for the firemen's pension fund and charitable undertakings of the public employes welfare association.

It's Pyle's Latest

CHICAGO—Norman Pyle, M-G-M exploiteer who has been contacting small-town exhibitors playing roadshow engagements of "Gone With the Wind," has had some unusual experiences. His latest:

Pyle dropped in at Emden, Ill., a town of 500 where "GWTW" will play a one-night stand, May 30. It is being shown in the community hall, and R. L. McCormick, the local banker, is handling the details. Pyle had to drive three miles out of town to McCormick's farm home to confer with him and then found spring cleaning in progress. So McCormick pulled a table out of the house, set it up under a tree in the farm-yard and Pyle wrote the advertising and other exploitation copy there. The tickets will go on sale in the town's bank.

Circuits, Majors Sued By A. R. Johnson

MINNEAPOLIS—Alleging a conspiracy in restraint of trade to prevent him from obtaining screen product for his theatres, A. R. Johnson, former RCA Photophone representative and Time Theatre operator here, has filed a $523,000 anti-trust suit in U. S. district court at Sioux Falls, S. D.

Defendants named by Johnson are the Minnesota Amusement Co., the Welworth circuit and the Paramount, RKO, 20th-Fox, United Artists, Columbia, Warner Bros., Republic and Monogram exchanges.

Johnson had the Granada, Sioux Falls, S. D., and the Time and Pix, Aberdeen, S. D. He charges that the defendants conspired to put him out of business. The two Aberdeen houses recently were sold by Johnson to Ralph Green of Minneapolis.

Minneapolis Council Firm In Theatre Building Bar

MINNEAPOLIS—The Minneapolis city council once again went on record against any additional theatre construction at the present time. For the sixth or more time it rejected the application of E. L. Griffith to build and operate a $200,000 showhouse on a site owned by him.

On one occasion, during the several years fight which Griffith has waged, the council granted a permit to him. Later, however, it rescinded its action. He carried his battle into the courts without success.

Irving Gillman also waged an unsuccessful court fight to obtain a permit for a neighborhood theatre after the city council denied him a permit. Once the council lets down the bars, it has been indicated that anywhere from six to a dozen new theatres would be built.

Charlie Weiner to Leave Monogram on June 1

MINNEAPOLIS—Charlie Weiner, who has been sales head and part owner of the Monogram exchange here since its inception, is leaving the local office June 1. He plans an extended vacation in the east with his wife and family.

Since he came to Minneapolis from the west coast Weiner has won many friends.

Leo Peterson Acquires Two Houses in Pierre, S. D.

PIERRE, S. D.—Leo Peterson, formerly of the Black Hills Amusement Co., has acquired the Grand and Bijou theatres here—the Grand from Charles Lee Hyde and the Bijou from the Hipple estate. He will remodel the Bijou and re-name it the State.

More Royal Output

KANSAS CITY—William Pincus, manager of the Royal Film Exchange, announces the acquisition of 38 Producers Distributing Corp. releases and seven Judell films for distribution in the Kansas City area.

Kansas City Operators Agent Polling Public Film Taste

KANSAS CITY—In an effort to be helpful in a situation which, he feels, may force a dozen or more independent subsequents here to close their doors before fall, Walter Croft, business agent of the Motion Picture Operators local here, is conducting interviews with 1,000 members of the public to learn what they really want in the way of film programs and theatres in which to see them.

With the 1,000 interviews already one-third completed, Croft has found that only two per cent like the way films are being presented today in Kansas City. Of the more than 300 persons already contacted, 75 per cent have told Croft that whereas they used to go to theatres regularly three or more times a week, they now go only about once, not because of admission price but because "they do not like double and triple features, uncomfortable seats, poor sound and projection." Although about 30 per cent of those interviewed have been women, none of them is attracted to a theatre because of premiums or giveaways, and the men definitely do not want giveaways, according to Croft.

Ask for Shorts

What fans (and all of those interviewed admitted they liked films and went to see them) want is a variety program of one feature and short subjects. At least so they told Croft.

In order to assure himself of as honest a reaction as possible, Croft is doing the interviewing as a representative of a motion picture magazine. To get his interviews he has gone into grocery stores, homes, churches, clubs, etc. His coverage includes or will include factory workers, white collar workers, mechanics, business people, farmers, men on the street, and other types to give him a representative cross section of the film-going public in Kansas City.

"Ninety per cent of these people think there is too much entertainment," Croft commented. "They admit that if there are two programs, one with a double feature and the other with a single bill, they'll go to the double feature. Even though they don't like the double or triple feature type of program, they can't resist getting two or three for the price of one. They're psychologically Scotch. But they admit that they'd go oftener if they saw a balanced program of one feature and short subjects. In other words, the situation is such that they support a type of program they really don't want. Besides, today, the market is strictly a double and triple feature market. Only two theatres in town, and those in the higher admission bracket, offer single bills. People would have a devil of a time buying admission to a single feature program."

The solution, Croft believes, is for theatre operators to formulate a general amusement policy for the city; evolve a plan to get people into theatres instead of driving them out, which he says is being done. Film-goers are being weaned away from the theatre. The situation has got completely out of hand. The theory with dishes was that they would bring the women, and the women would bring the men. But more and more men are dropping their wives at the theatre and going on to bowl or do something else—or both are turning to other forms of amusement.

"The situation is really serious. There are a dozen or more independent houses in such shape right now that it seems impossible for them to manage to get through the slack summer months unless they get back to the show business. What's necessary is for exhibitors to quit worrying about competition of other exhibitors and start worrying about the competition of other forms of amusement; in other words, do something to bring people back into their theatres."

Differential Small

Croft thinks admission prices have little to do with current bad business in local houses. A nickel isn't going to make any difference in the frequency with which people attend the shows, his interviews show. But the lack of enough differential in prices between theatres does, Croft feels, have a bad effect. People won't wait six to ten weeks or more to see a show when the top price in town is 25 cents (first run balconies anytime) and the low is 15 cents (ten-cent nights ordinarily do not show No. 1 features). Naturally there are half a dozen day and date showings of the same program, which doesn't help any.

The type of program isn't the only deterrent to movie attendance, Croft found in the interviews. Judging from them, 25 to 30 theatres in Kansas City badly need new sound, new seats, redecoration (even to plastering the ceilings and walls where it has fallen off).

"Described by film-goers, the punishment of sitting through a three or four-hour program in some of the seats around town is horrible. No wonder people say they can hardly stand up afterwards, that they get out of their seats half paralyzed. Sound equipment in that many houses is poor, projection bad."

Commenting further on his findings with respect to premiums and giveaways, Croft

Public Ups Cartoons To Stardom

Minneapolis—Exhibitors here comment on the increasing popularity of cartoon comedies. The start of these shorts invariably is greeted with applause, they say. Also, it's common for applause to break out at their conclusion with adult patrons just as enthusiastic over the cartoon comedy shorts as the juvenile trade, according to the exhibitors.

Practically every program at loop first-run and neighborhood houses includes one of the cartoon comedies. Regarded as possessing substantial boxoffice value, they're being plugged in newspaper and other advertising and being exploited along with features in many instances.

Response to Cassil Suit Due May 22

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Film distribution companies and Dubinsky Brothers, defendants in a $450,000 conspiracy damage suit filed by Frank Cassil of the Rialto here, will file an answer or request for a bill of particulars on May 22. In event of the second response, defendants will have 30 days more in which to file answers.

At present, it looks like the case will come to trial in September.

25 Fox Employes Attend Variety Club Luncheon

KANSAS CITY—About 50, including 25 guests from 20th-Fox, attended the Variety luncheon Monday. Other guests included L. J. Hensley, guest of Nat Hechtman, Hollywood Advertising Co.; Charles Burton, architect for Paramount, New York, and a guest of Jerry Zigmond, manager of the Newman, and R. E. Griffith, Dallas, a guest of Ray Higdon and H. J. Griffith.

Chief Barker Jay Means outlined the purpose of Variety for the benefit of nonmembers, and read the Variety creed.

The party Saturday night will be one of the largest affairs ever held in the clubrooms, Jerry Zigmond, chairman of the entertainment committee, indicated. Judge Appleby's "Barrel of Fun" program is being brought over from WDAF, and film and theatre folk will get a chance to answer questions about the farm—for $1 each.

Bev Miller reported he sold 20 tickets to the party while in Chicago last week. Jay Means sold four to his projectionist.

Electric in St. Joe to Richard Murk Co.

KANSAS CITY—The Electric in St. Joseph, Mo., has been sold to the Richard Murk Amusement Co. of Kansas City by Frank C. Grubel, Kansas City, Kas., president of the St. Joseph Electric Theatre Co. The Murk company is a corporation of Ed Durwood, head of Dubinsky Bros.

The Dubinsky circuit has been operating the Electric, formerly a first run, now a second run, along with the Missouri and Orpheum, first runs. Grubel still has interests in the Electric, Kansas City, Kas., the Electric, Springfield, Mo., and the Paramount, Joplin, Mo.

Sale of the Electric in St. Joseph involved $75,000 cash and assumption by the Murk company of a $125,000 mortgage.

Clerics Endorse Neely

MINNEAPOLIS—The Neely bill has been indorsed by the Minneapolis Evangelical conference because of its anti-block booking provision. The conference is a large Lutheran church group and it has requested Minnesota representatives in Congress to support the bill.

MINNEAPOLIS

"GREEN HELL" doing surprisingly big business in the Twin City neighborhood and out-of-town situations, and LeRoy Smith, Universal branch manager, is crowing. Film also did a very big first week at the World downtown here . . . Jay MacFarland, National Screen branch manager, back from a Chicago sales conference . . . United Artists' "My Son, My Son" goes into the Minneapolis State and St. Paul Paramount June 7 . . . Al Stern, RKO office manager, continuing to take the measure of all opponents at ping-pong . . . Florence Stoller, secretary to Branch Manager Joe Podoloff at 20th-Fox, vacationing in the Minnesota north woods for a fortnight.

Out-of-town exhibitors visiting Filmrow included Charles Lee Hyde and Leo Peterson, Pierre, S. D.; Jack Heywood, New Richmond, Wis.; Don Buckley, Redwood Falls, Minn.; Leo Molitor, Norwood, Minn.; Mrs. R. K. Rasmussen, Perham, Minn.; Lyle Webster, Rice Lake, Wis.; Al Inman, Fairfax, Minn., and Bernie Larkin, Madelia, Minn. . . . Feminine members of the RKO office staff gave a farewell party for Helen Stoller who leaves on an extended vacation.

Universal bunch leaves for the Chicago sales convention May 18 . . . If matrimony is your goal get a job at Warner Bros. Two bookers there just have wed —Don Swartz and Gene Thorpe—and two of the gals are announcing their engagements. Helen Pauly, secretary to Branch Manager C. K. Olson, will become Mrs. Frank Adams—he's a school teacher—while Beatrice Vertelney of the office will plight her troth to Dr. Martin Even, a dentist. Since last October the matrimonial score for the office will have been seven.

Isabelle Adcock has resigned from the United Artists' office staff to devote herself to domestic duties . . . W. H. Workman, branch manager, headed the M-G-M sales staff that departed this week for the convention in Chicago . . . C. K. Olson, Warner branch manager, visited southern Minnesota accounts . . . Joe Garrison, who was appointed Universal district manager out of St. Louis, was branch manager for the same company here for several years.

Al A. Feinberg, the theatre air-conditioning man, recovering in St. Andrews' Hospital from a heart attack . . . Al Aved, Columbia salesman, proud daddy of an eight-pound boy—his first occasion for passing the cigars around . . . Martin P. Kelly, who formerly headed the Minnesota Amusement advertising and exploitation department, has resigned as St. Paul Winter Carnival managing director to manage the St. Paul Auditorium Winter Sports show next fall . . . Harry Dryer, Bijou owner, visiting his son, Sherman, in Chicago. The latter is managing director of the University of Chicago radio station and among his programs is the University of Chicago round-table discussions.

R. C. LiBeau, Paramount district manager, a visitor . . . W. A. Steffes, Northwest Allied president and World Theatre owner, has been released from Abbott Hospital and is recuperating at home after a heart attack . . . The Paramount exchange has gone on a five-day week . . . Tidings received here are to the effect that Erling Larson, who manages the Grand, Northfield, Minn., for his father-in-law, Everett Dilley, is the father of an eight-and-a-half-pound girl. It's the second child born to the Larsons . . . The Paramount Pep club held its spring party at Paul Mans' Uptown Recreation Center.

Spring is here. Mannie Goodman in town with his new line of theatre "cool" flags . . . The Thoreau of Palm Springs, Calif., is in town. He probably is better known as Louis Blumberg, former veteran Minneapolis film man, now retired . . . "Chuck" Rubenstein was out on the golf links the first sunny day, and, according to reports, this young Hollywood theatre owner is destined to be one of the film colony's top golfers this season. Billy Elson is another who's giving a good account of himself on the links.

Ernie Lund, United Artists' salesman, has resigned, with no successor appointed yet . . . Ted Bolnick, one of Eddie Ruben's aces, in from LaCrosse, Wis., where he handles the Welworth circuit houses . . . Bob Guiterman, one-time Finkelstein & Ruben manager and now a Wisconsin exhibitor in his own right, in the old hometown for a visit . . . Herman Field and Frankie Rubel, Iowa exhibitors, also in town for another look at their native stamping grounds.

Ben Spewak, theatre financier, followed the Vanderbilts' lead and offered his new yacht to the British government for the war's duration. He suggested that it be used for cruising duty in the Mediterranean . . . Sol Lebedoff, independent circuit operator, off to New York for a first-hand look at the baseball situation and to make deals for more Yiddish language pictures for his Homewood.

The new Puritan regulations in city law enforcement hit a new high when the baseball bookies were forced to run for cover, leaving several of the film boys with nothing to do . . . Theodore Hays, veteran Minnesota Amusement company executive, confined to his home by illness . . . LeRoy Miller, Universal branch manager, has taken a summer home at Mound, Lake Minnetonka . . . Twin City Variety club members miss Joe L. Stern's critical analysis of the war situation and hope that his present slight indisposition soon will vanish so that he can be in their midst again . . . Nadine Rifkin has been promoted to office manager of the new Ralph Green circuit.

Alexis Evidon, the same "A. K." Warner Brothers' advertising department head, apparently has given up his "dear editor" fight in the correspondence columns of the newspapers for a new baseball park. You'll find him at old Nicollet baseball park every Saturday and Sunday and seemingly enjoying the games as much as ever . . . Who is the stunning young girl that Harold Lyons, 20th-Fox salesman, took to a recent fraternity Barn Dance?

LINCOLN

FISH asleep in the Canadian mountain streams had better stir themselves, because Howard Federer and Don Monroe hopped into their car this week and betook themselves northward for a bit of casting . . . Joe Cooper came to town last week, insulted Joe Scott's "Blue Bird," smiled on Mance Lofgren's swelling take with the Nebraska amateur nights, and told stories about his attempt to enlist in the last war as an aviator . . . Wally Johnson will listen to any suggestion about how to hold a fire sale in a theatre.

Bob Livingston, celebrating the depression year of 1940, took the wife and made off to Chicago to watch a few ball games . . . L. L. Dent chose theatre Row's worst snooker player, Alvin Hendricks, for his partner, against Howard Federer and BOXOFFICE, and made a half dollar a game with disgusting regularity . . . Bob Huffman, recalling his mother used to sing "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," says he doesn't want to raise her to be a war-mother either . . . Note to Schoolmaster Jerry Zigmond: Bill Knight used one of your typical campaigns with "One Million B. C." and whaled with his opening to standee and standout business.

Capitol Beach, amusement park managed by Hoyt Hawke, broke over local show business scene Saturday, which means a new source of competition for the action theatres . . . Report is that Harry Schiller, Grand Island, after worrying himself into a beautiful head of gray hair, is thinking about touching it up. Can't be—any showman will tell you it's not good business to look unworried. It gives film peddlers confidence, and confidence there means higher rentals.

Double feature: Both Maynard Nelson and George "Hodge" Wright, opposition managers, are in the throes of building in Kearney . . . Jimmy Redmond and Ray Holtz are tighter about news from Fairbury than Nazi censorship . . . Mrs. Joe Scott, around after spending more time than she cared to in the hospital, is looking better . . . Vincent J. DiFiore's parents are on the west coast visiting his brother, Joe, member of the 20*th Century-Fox orchestra.*

Note to those Minnesota theatre managers in the immediate area around Camp Ripley. Probably a cinch that 16,000 or more men wlil be concentrated in your territory soldiering for at least two and maybe three weeks. May mean enough money to last awhile.

Ed Vaughan, commenting on Bob Huffman's golfing: "If he cut as much grass at home as he does in the rough, his lawn would win a prize for civic neatness."

Leaves Sales Post

MINNEAPOLIS—After 12 years on the M-G-M sales staff, Allen Clatworthy has resigned. Clatworthy, who covered northern Minnesota, will enter another line of business. No successor has been appointed yet.

Empress in Grand Island Is Sold to Youngclaus

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.—The estate of the late Senator W. H. Thompson, long-time holder of the Empress property here which has been leased for five years by W. F. Youngclaus, has sold it to Youngclaus.

The amount of money in the deal is not announced, and Youngclaus is quiet about plans. The theatre is now closed on a deal with A. H. Blank-Tri-States, the latter having shuttered the Majestic. Youngclaus, who now operates the Island, has secured leases on adjoining property which would allow him to enlarge the Empress if he chose to do so. Youngclaus is owner of the Island, too. This makes him wielder of an important part of the Grand Island situation, which, until the alignment with all showmen participating, was one of the worst in Nebraska.

Tuberculosis Campaign Makes Use of Films

DES MOINES—The Polk County Tuberculosis Ass'n has launched an educational campaign, which includes the showing of motion pictures to WPA, business, club and school groups. Des Moines doctors also are speaking about tuberculosis control on the programs.

"Times Do Change"

ONAGA, KAS.—C. E. Graff of this town harks back 22 years for a glimpse of how business was done then as compared to now. The medium is a letter written to Graff, when he had a theatre at Havensville, by J. J. McCarthy of the Kansas City Universal exchange.

"On the back of the envelope is a red sticker reading 'Crashing Through to Berlin,'" says Graff, and adds: "Now Berlin seems to be doing the crashing. Times do change."

The letter, which also constitutes some sort of commentary on film rentals:

"Your order for service received and the same has been taken care of. We have arranged to ship you a one-reel Nestor comedy at $1.50, Current Events at $1.25 and a three-reel drama at $3.00. Same will go forward to you c.o.d. as per your letter.

"Now, Mr. Graff, why can't we have your standing order for this service, and we will be able to quote you a little better price and undoubtedly serve you with better service if you would give us your standing order for every week.

"Kindly advise us immediately if you intend running regularly."

The letter was dated Oct. 8, 1918, at 214 E. 12th St., Kansas City. Universal was listed on the letterhead as distributing product from Universal Productions, Jewel Productions, Lois Weber Productions, Bluebird Photo Plays, Century Comedies, Lyons and Moran Comedies and LKO comedies.

IF WE type Art Anderfon instead of Art Anderson, and Ftan Mayer instead of Stan Mayer, or Bill Fchuyler for Bill Schuyler, excuse it, plez . . . it's only because we've been playing ball and that high fly from Ted Ashby landed on the end of our "S" finger . . . it's swelled this big and hurts like everything, but BOXOFFICE must be done tonight!

Lois Kennedy wears a dress with red piping around the hem which is a honey . . . this reminds us of husband Jack Kennedy who reminds us of M-G-M which has just cut a new tooth . . . at least Gloria Banta has, according to Jerry, and we have the word of two eye-witnesses. Yoo-hoo, Iles & McKinney! We are in desperate need of one of those swell Iowa Film calendars of yours for our den . . . how's about it? We need the whole shootin' match . . . we've given away the holder we had last year.

Jack Seigel, theatre candy man of these parts, isn't the only one who's been giving us sweets . . . Art Catlin of UA bowed to our weakness for the stuff with a nice two-pound box. Loyal little Mitzi innocently handed long-beaked, scrawny-looking, hard-working BOXOFFICE an A-1 Mother's Day present Saturday when she looked at those handsome 16x20 leg shots of some Paramount pretties on & Co.'s desk and said: "Those aren't you, Mommy, you're not that ugly." BOXOFFICE swelled with pride, but secretly decided to tote young Mitzi to an optician pronto.

Latest and most prized addition to our den decorations is a penny postcard written in pencil, and unorthodox spelling and signed, "Seat W" . . . smacks of the theatre and comprises exactly 1/12 of "Two on the Aisle" fan mail to date. Anyway "Seat W" will like knowing that its (we don't know what gender) flattering lines are tacked on our wall right under that picture taken of BOXOFFICE & Co. doing their radio program . . . Heavens! We almost forgot to tell you that "Seat W" said our program was stinko . . . It specified the talent, however, so we assume the script we write is unstinko in "Seat W's" learned opinion.

After the wire stories about Navy Secretary Edison surveying that M-G-M News of the Day reel, R&T newmongers dialed DD at 4-1104 for a rushing screen . . . only to find nothing suitable for newspaper reproduction that hadn't already been culled from the cans . . . Art Stolte was lolling in the back of the screening room with a camera in his hand, but we didn't hear a single shutter click . . . Stan Mayer dropped in to see that & Co. suffered no ill effects in Marshall county.

For gourmets only: George Beaumeister unloaded that new batch of chicks May 1 . . . which means they'll be ready for munching about June 15 . . . You can get in touch with George through the Waukee postoffice if the M-G-M exchange can't direct you to the correct crossroads . . . That mysterious 13-year-old who said he was "William Watson jr" and hid from juvenile authorities by sneaking into theatres here last winter, turns out to be Billy Lara, a Mexican-American boy from Mexico City, Mex. . . . His father writes the boy was inspired to leave his home on the trek north by the film, "Boys Town."

That box outside National Screen's door was put there by Boss Chick Friedman, who wants suggestions on where to go for his vacation, but isn't offering any prizes . . . Frank Greenland in the same office is working Sattidy nights and launching a personal blitzkrieg on all vacations till he gets his . . . After watching the modernistic touch with which he can apply $1.04 postage to a 9 by 11 packet, we suggest Frank spend his two weeks studying art . . . Sa pity to see the talent being wasted on the back end of a metering machine.

A work of art in the exploitation field is the red Studebaker firewagon Monroe Rubinger wheeled into town . . . Warner's Ruby was hitting the hay at 9:30 here, recuperating after that N. Y. junket on which he drew a 3-Z rating at the Beachcombers (on a challenge) . . . "The Man Who Came to Dinner" is getting rave notices from him with "The Male Animal" on his list as "adequate" . . . Jere Spandau indirectly engineered that Deanna Durbin-Baby Sandy break on Sunday's Register magazine cover, but it didn't land until Jere was gone.

Blocking traffic like Jack Benny's Maxwell in front of Bishop's last week was a cake of ice in which a frozen teddy-bear was labeled: "I am Carmichael. When the ice melts, take me to the Des Moines (Harry Holdsberg's the head man there) theatre for a free ticket to 'Buck Benny Rides Again.'" . . . Calling sales signals from a huddle despite the fact that football season is three months away, were Jimmy Winn, Warner's district manager from Kaycee, Sid Rose of Omaha and amiable Art Anderson of the private pine forest at Tenth and High.

By the time you're reading this, Wilsonne Long should be back at her National Screen, etc., desk following a trip to the minister and a Colorado honeymoon . . . Sumbuddy sez the lucky guy's named Jerry, but we haven't met him . . . Not so widely known is the fact that two (count 'em) more National Screen, etc., belles are on their toes getting set for rings on their fingers . . . One's slated in about three weeks, the other in September . . . but sh-h-h, sh-h-h . . . they're both a secret.

Eddie Dunn's got a personal grudge against Hitler, 'cause that trip into Holland and Belgium isn't doin' the space the Paramount sarong contest is generating any good . . . Couldn't find Copeland around the Paramount corner . . . What'll ya bet he wasn't in Omaha doing a little political fence mending on Gracie Allen's presidential campaign? . . . Bert Thomas let us down, too . . . We expected the lights to be on at Columbia EVERY night after you started checkin' 'em in and out there, Bert.

We don't mind RKO competing with our radio program by staging a screening of "My Favorite Wife" on Friday night, but we're gettin' burned up about 'em inviting us to a show we wanna see on a night when we can't . . . How about a rain check on that one, Lou? . . . The new gal up at National Screen or Advertising Accessories or whatever it is (it's above Columbia) is Sarah Marsh, who takes the place of Marian Drake . . . Benny Lass of the same triple-threat company, is being transferred to St. Looey this week to acquire an Ozark accent . . . Contemplated moving of Advertising Accessories into the National Screen quarters has the whole outfit left with a $25 pingpong table on their hands and no place to put it . . . Ennybody in a buyin' mood?

. . . . AW, SHUCKS! . . . . .

From the Tall Corn—By KEN and RENE CLAYTON

LEO WOLCOTT of the Grand in Eldora and head man of the Iowa-Nebraska Independent exhibs, apparently just can't help being top dog in whatever field he tackles. Lookee here what Sunday's Big Peach Sports section said:

"Leo Wolcott, former Iowa American Legion and three-time Central Iowa golf champion, set a rapid pace for early season golfers when he toured the rugged, rebuilt Pine Lake layout in 37-32—69. Par, which is seldom equaled or broken on the tricky course, is 35-35—70.

"Wolcott's son, 13-year-old Harrison Wolcott, is now playing nine holes in 45 strokes."

Don Olson, who master-minds at Marshalltown's new Odeon, says the public is still a little awe-stricken . . . But he gives 'em six weeks to start sticking gum on the bottoms of the seats.

A new theatre is scheduled at Cresco, Ia., as soon as J. A. Tuchek gets his building on Market Street enlarged and remodeled. He expects to start the turnstiles moving in about two months.

We've just found out that the Cozy at Fayette has been changed to the Fayette. William G. Leefers of Cedar Rapids is calling the turn at the house since it reopened. It was closed for more than a month while new seats were installed and the foyer enlarged.

Tom Gorman's tossing out $15,000 of RKO money for air conditioning at the Orpheum in Waterloo.

The name of C. A. Anderson's house over at Pella fitted right in with the tulip festival Dutch costumes last weekend. It's the New Holland. Anderson is counting on business when newsreels on the Nazi invasion of the Netherlands arrive in his Dutch community.

Emil Franke cut the "Bill of Divorcement" run to six days at his DM Orpheum. He's doing seven days with "Irene" but expects to get back on his regular schedule with an extra day of "My Favorite Wife."

Hayden Peterson came out of his brush with John Law on the nudist film unscathed and kept his State one of the talked-about spots of East Des Moines with a horror thriller—Boris Karloff in "Fatal Hour" and Bela Lugosi in "Human Monster."

M. L. Dickson lugged his smile up to the Row from his Colonial and Temple houses in Mount Pleasant.

The first 200 mothers attending the matinee at the Des Moines, Roosevelt, Paramount and Strand in DM last Sunday received roses. Mother's Day, you 'member.

There's no living in the same house with & Co. when he bathes since Earl Kerr got his radio crooning mixed up with Bing Crosby's. Earl and Speed Lambert were listening to "Two on the Aisle" up at the Marshalltown Odeon and we'd told them & Co. was to hum a ditty. But that was at the start of the program and what they heard was a Bing Crosby transcription in the middle. "Gosh, the kid really can sing," said Kerr.

The Jansen Super Service & Supply is passing out tickets for E. M. Garbett's Varsity Theatre in DM . . . But you gotta buy $1 worth of something during May to get one.

If any of the Row gets a look at that shot of Harold Barnes, Eddie Solomon and Lionel Wasson in "Gay Nineties" garb as part of the "Lillian Russell" promotion at Clinton, the laughs will echo clear up to the Central States office. The only thing lacking is tintype reproduction. Barnes is manager of Clinton's Rialto; Solomon is 20th Century-Fox press rep on the spot, and Wasson is the Central States exploitation engineer.

While the rest of you guys are quaffing coffee (prob'ly black) at 3 after midnight, Uncle Sam Horowitz is sipping a bedtime cup of tea (also black) at the cafe on the corner.

Call it a Pat & Mike story if ya wanna, but Mike Roskopf has his African hunting expedition down pat since he completed his one hundred and twoth jungle discourse. We're remembering the Marshalltown explorer's promise to tell us about elephants when we set up club date for him in DM—and if we have to fall back on the G.O.P. elephant for our wild life, we're gonna be mad.

Attribute Attendance Drop To Tensions Over War

MINNEAPOLIS—War developments apparently are causing many jitters hereabouts and affecting theatre patronage and film buying adversely.

The general public does not seem to be in a mood for theatre-going, according to local exhibitors who complain that there has been a perceptible drop in grosses the past week.

Because of the uncertainty in the situation abroad and the fears of possible repercussions here, there has been a slowing down of film buying which, up to this month, had been going along at brisk pace, according to exchange heads.

With real estate tax payment time right around the corner and spring having its first fling, the usual seasonal secession was to be expected at the showhouses, but the war is aggravating it, the exhibitors assert. The stock market break also has helped to tighten pursestrings, in the trade's opinion.

However, the present slump is expected to be of short duration, and if, as now indicated, crop yields are bountiful, theatres are certain to prosper later in the summer and next fall, the trade believes.

Parsons, branch manager; Roscoe Thompson, R. A. Morrow and Is Beiser, salesmen, and Bookers Ed Solig and L. F. Durland.

George Harttmann has installed a new pair of lamps and rectifiers in the Armour, North Kansas City. C. H. Badger of Stebbins made the sale.

Jack Langdon, formerly of Kansas City, and now branch manager for Universal at Denver, was a visitor.

Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity for Paramount, stopped off in Kansas City en route to the annual convention opening next Friday in Los Angeles. He also stopped over in Chicago.

"Lillian" Takes a Bow—

CLINTON, IA.—We're in the movies now. At least Burton Jerrell took a pot shot of our unostentatious arrival at the Country Club for the "Lillian Russell" premiere banquet . . . Nice gesture, Burton, even though we have to recommend that you save your celluloid for the Don Ameches and the Governor Wilsons.

That early morning phone call was from Barney and Vada Oldfield, who suggested that we meet them in the lobby for breakfast . . . that noise under our window was the bustling Clinton citizens assembling cars for the alleged auto-less parade.

That bevy of beauties in the Hotel Lafayette lobby did not come from Hollywood, but from DM and included Florine Wieland, Velma Oberg, Peggy Wasson, Dorothy Jerrell, and Mrs. Stan Mayer . . . Mr. Stan Mayer appeared in the flesh carrying a kodak and feeling in a very good mood . . . Stan decided that it always rained at the premieres we attended, so maybe we'd better quit coming.

In the coffee shop, Warner was well represented at the Fox affair by Gilly Wells, Art Anderson, and Monroe Rubinger . . . the trio discredited all suggestions that they were spying and said they'd just come for a good time.

A Boycott Business

After much horseplay, a breakfast was out of the way and we started for the station amid banners, bands, bustles, corsets, and unbrellas . . . en route, Oldfield, told us about the theatre he once owned a piece of in a little town of 500—none of which attended the movies. Jerry Greenabaum, Rialto manager, worked hard and even tried to kick us off the platform at the station, but he didn't get away with it . . . Jerry says he still has that stuffed pup which blinks its eyes, but that it has refused to blink since the last time we visited his office nearly a year ago.

We get a bird's-eye view of Burton Jerrell working like a dog at his News Flashing . . . We see Stan Mayer take a careful shot of the 45,000 crowd, and then moan, "I can't stop that guy, he's my boss," when Bill Gehring hugged Mrs. Mayer and presented Mrs. Gehring to the group . . . we meet Milt Howe, Lou Hechlinger, and Bob Milton . . . we see no point in standing in a drizzle to watch Don Ameche try twice and fail to bust the christening champagne on the streamliner . . . we decide we'll like Earl Wingert who stopped at our car to say howdedo.

Ted Emerson, looking very much like the Rotarian he's not, strolled by with Keith Wilson who said, "I'm tired." Eddie Solomon scurried around everywhichway and made at least two sluggish newsmen wonder where that little guy gets all the energy . . . that yard-long ear of Ioway corn tied with red-white-and-blue ribbon which was to be Ameche's key to Clinton, was all Eddie's doings down to the last little blue bow . . . and we'd say Eddie is an 'icity man of no mean calibre.

At the Club we meet Gene Rich of Chicago, and Charlie Brown of Iowa City who says our "Aw, Shucks!" column certainly does stand Iowa exhibs on their ears. We see M. E. McLain and meet his gorgeous wife, and discover that our McLain baby blurb is traveling under false pretenses. Don and Faye West look the perfectly turned out couple as is always the West custom, and Charlie Peterson turns up again but with the sweet little Mrs. in tow this time (wives are beginning to be acceptable at premieres, we find . . . probably the BOXOFFICE & Co. influence).

Chick Friedman appears with scallions for us because of that darned marriage rumor again . . . says he's gonna elope now just to spite us. Elmer Tilton minus a pink shirt (but wearing a shirt) talked business with Peterson . . . Art Anderson promises us a nice batch of news and says shush when he sees Gene Rich who might want it, too.

Tom Arthur and his man Jenson from Mason City finally wandered in after spending the night before at A. J. Diebold's place in Cedar Rapids . . . We hear great tales of Dee's house over there.

Bill Toney, Ray Blank, and A. H. were among the Tri- Staters who showed up at the luncheon . . . The Nate Sandlers and Lou Elman drove over with Chick Friedman from Davenport . . . Lionel Wasson was the man of the hour when it came to getting chores done and we heard the girl across from us at the table say, "Who's that swell-lookin' guy"—meaning Lionel.—R.&K.C.

A Paper Reader

LINCOLN, NEB.—Contractors almost did a "blitzkrieg" here on the Varsity.

It happened like this: City council has been talking of condemning the Varsity to put through a street, and before it was to be done, Nebraska Theatres, Inc., wanted to get the Liberty remodeled for a replacement and maintenance of continued operation.

Workmen had evidently been reading only about the Varsity, because Manager Howard Federer came to work early one morning (one of the few times), and found a guy all set to unhitch the marquee—a move which might have resulted in both houses being put out of commission.

Wally Johnson Undecided As to Course in Friend

FRIEND, NEB.—Wally Johnson, owner of the Plaza, 250-seater which was burned early this month, says he was undecided as to his future in the show business in Friend. Meantime, he has opened the Filmor in Exeter, a small town nearby, and is playing off some of his film commitments there.

Johnson owned the building and was covered with $4,500 insurance. The equipment was about half covered, he says, with $3,500 on it.

Fields Comedy for Cline

HOLLYWOOD—"The Bank Dick," next W. C. Fields comedy for Universal, will be directed by Edward Cline.

Kaycee IATSE Polls Public Preference

said that one film-goer pulled a premium out of his pocket after leaving the show, and found that it had fallen apart; he threw it in the street. The exhibitor protested he had paid 11 cents for the item! Women said that dishes they secured at the theatre break under hot water, crack standing on the shelf. Others said all they saw when they went into a theatre were (and these were some of the things mentioned) mattresses, springs, dishes, autos, groceries, furniture, radios, etc.

One of the three or four who indicated they liked present-day programs indicated he wanted more features—provided the theatre was comfortable, with cool air in summer and warm air in winter.

Croft said he would like to have seen a survey made by a disinterested agency, possibly an advertising agency, to learn exactly what people wanted in the way of film programs, but that no one seemed to be interested in the exhibition field. So he is making his own survey.

Pairing Is Faulty

One of the most frequent complaints of patrons to Croft is that they have seen one of the features on a double bill, and are just Scotch enough not to want to go to a double bill with only one picture they haven't seen. Which leads Croft to wonder why subsequent run exhibitors do not, more than at present, keep together the two features doubled on their first run showing. Because some exhibitors may not have purchased all the major product available, and also because some changes occur in the length of clearance as the picture goes down the line of subsequents, it is not altogether possible to keep features together from first run through all showings, Croft admits. He feels, however, it is possible to do it more than is now done. He contends the present wide variation in pairing cuts down attendance.

Most frequently used objection by exhibitors to a cooperative solution of some of these problems is that they can't get everyone together, that they have tried in the past and have been able to secure the cooperation of only about 90 or 95 per cent of the exhibitors. Croft believes 90 to 95 percent is enough, that such a group could be effective in swinging the situation back toward "the show business." The odd five or ten per cent can't show to everyone in town anyway, and Croft believes the public is ready to be "weaned" away from multiple features, giveaways, etc.

Detroit Blockade Threat Pales As Duals Spring Ten Weekly

By H. F. REVES

DETROIT—Double billing of first runs is currently releasing ten films a week in Detroit, not counting the Cinema, which plays foreign and special appeal films to a large extent. With this volume of films coming into circulation weekly, little chance for the much-discussed feature blockade is evident, although the situation is complicated by holdovers.

Of the five first runs, two, the United Artists and Adams, held over both features this week—the Adams for a third week in each case—counting in one week at the Fox. Net result is that only six new films were first-runs currently.

Unusual angle of the current vogue toward duals, in between stage show weeks at the Michigan and Fox, is the trend toward booking both films from the same releasing company.

Of the five houses, four had pictures from the same company currently. Paramount supplied "Dr. Cyclops" and "Women Without Names" to the Palms-State, and "Buck Benny Rides Again" and "Adventure in Diamonds" to the Michigan. M-G-M booked "20 Mule Team" and "And One Was Beautiful" into the United Artists, while Universal had both "If I Had My Way" and "Ski Patrol" at the Fox.

Detroit Traffic Head Menaces Light Signs

DETROIT—Theatre advertising signs are threatened by a new ordinance proposed by City Traffic Engineer M. W. Cochran. The latest Cochran proposal calls for elimination of red signs that may be confused with traffic signals. It is assumed that green signs might also be similarly barred.

This would apply particularly to neon signs, which have been notably close to traffic signals in color, and have been used extensively in recent theatre front work. High signs extending down the entire front of a theatre building might be exempted by their position.

Early Morning Parking Ban Protested by McGuire

DETROIT—New city ordinance barring parking on main streets between 2:00 a. m. and 6:00 a. m. was protested before the city council by Tom McGuire, director of public relations for Cooperative Theatres of Michigan. McGuire asked for an amendment that would prevent the ordinance from interfering with all-night theatre patrons.

Police have contended the no-parking rule was needed to make it possible to clean these streets, and cars of patrons attending late shows have been tagged as a result. No formal action was taken.

Special AMPTO Meeting Called by Herrington

PITTSBURGH—From the nation's capital this week, where the Neely anti-compulsory block booking bill was being given another public hearing, Fred J. Herrington called a special membership meeting of the AMPTO of W. Pa., Inc., for Monday afternoon, May 20, at local exhibitor headquarters. The local Allied secretary and M. A. Rosenberg, president, were in attendance at a national Allied directors' meeting at Washington and were visiting a number of Pennsylvania congressmen in the interest of the Neely bill. Final plans for the Allied convention, at Chicago, June 19-21, will be announced at the May 20 business session here.

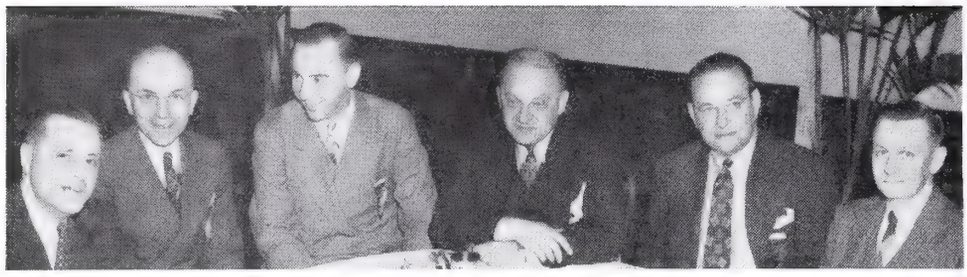
Patrons Pay Tax

DOVER, OHIO—Now in effect, Shea Theatre Corp.'s Bexley and State here and the Union at nearby New Philadelphia passed along the one cent state amusement tax to patrons. Tax previously had been included in the regular 25, 30 and 35-cent admissions.

Juvenile Admission Curb Considered in Columbus

COLUMBUS, OHIO—Columbus police authorities report they plan to confer with juvenile court and school officials on the introduction of an ordinance prohibiting theatres from admitting children during school hours or at late shows unless accompanied by their parents.

The move was suggested as the first step in the program to diminish juvenile crime in the city.



"Our chief problem, of course, is keeping these children off city streets late at night and while school is in session," an official said.

Detectives reported that during the past several days a large number of the youths found idly roaming the streets at night give the excuse that they are just returning from picture shows.

State Lottery Proposal Before Pa. Legislators

HARRISBURG — Representative Francis Falkenstein, Philadelphia Democrat, has again introduced into the legislature a state lottery bill. His similar bill died in committee in the 1939 session. The statewide lottery tickets would cost $1 each and pay on the basis of 5,000-to-1 for every 6,250 "investors." Falkenstein favors giving persons on relief free lottery tickets.

The special "non-controversial" session of the general assembly, in its second week, was "transferring funds" to meet emergency obligations.

"Adults Only" Fare Is on Three Detroit Screens

DETROIT—Sophisticated films, which started a mild "trend" here some weeks ago, are staging a comeback currently, with three houses featuring pictures "for adults only." The Cinema, a first run, brought back "Lucrezia Borgia" for a repeat engagement, doing particularly good matinee business. Wade Allen of the Fine Arts booked "Fools of Desire."

The Avenue, operating a combined film and burlesque policy, has "Victims of Passion."

Bishop Sells Biggios

CARROLLTON, OHIO—The Virginia, operated for the past ten years by Ralph E. Bishop, has been acquired by Biggio Bros., Steubenville exhibitors, who for the past 15 years have owned and operated the Grand, in the upper Ohio valley city. House is currently dark to permit modernization.

Film Evidence Is Out

PITTSBURGH—Because courts refused to accept them as part of the testimony, motion pictures of alleged drunken drivers were discontinued this week, according to Police Supt. Harvey Scott.

Scripting "Our Home Town"

HOLLYWOOD—David Hertz and William Ludwig are scripting "Our Home Town," which Jack Chertok will produce as his first feature assignment for Metro.

Signs Leon Errol

HOLLYWOOD—RKO has signed Leon Errol to appear in six features and six shorts. His next feature will be "Lord Epping Out West," to co-star Lupe Velez.

Weekly Runs Give Chinese Films Edge in Detroit

DETROIT—Chinese pictures have proved an unusual source of additional revenue at the downtown Lyric, operated by S. T. Congress and H. J. Cokimos. This 250-seat house, normally operating on a dime policy, is leased every Saturday and Sunday night for a midnight show by a Chinese group, who operate the theatre themselves and use the proceeds for welfare work in China, it is understood.

The pictures shown are of Chinese origin, and specially booked for the one show. How extensive this can be, in the course of a year, is shown by the fact that Chinese films reviewed by Police Censor Sergeant Charles W. Snyder in 1939 totaled 401,000 feet of film.

Chinese films are thus clearly far in the lead of all foreign pictures shown in Detroit, in footage, comparing with 274,000 for the next largest foreign group, German, although one theatre, the Europa, shows German films exclusively, and with 105,000 for Polish films (in 1939).

Vaudeville Policy Resumed By Fox Theatre, Detroit

DETROIT—Vaudeville has opened at the Fox, second major downtown house to go back to the policy this month, after nearly a year of straight films. Ted Lewis and his band were on the opening bill.

The policy calls for spot booking of stage shows, similar to the policy at the Michigan. The idea appears to be that the Michigan and Fox will alternate stage shows, as suggested in BOXOFFICE recently, with occasional weeks of straight films, either double or single bill, in between.

A tendency toward single bills is marked, particularly in connection with the stage shows, and occasional strong features in the straight picture weeks, but this has been offset by a series of double bills at the United Artists, ranked as the ace single-biller of Detroit. A number of weak bookings is described as the cause of the temporary duals at the UA.

Proposed VFW Tent Show Plans Snag in Detroit

DETROIT—Plans for a tent show, to run 18 weeks under sponsorship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, are at a standstill in the city council's refusal of a permit. It was found that the proposed lot was within the city fire limits, and safeguards were deemed inadequate.

Opposition to the show was voiced by exhibitors when it was learned that the show would run all summer. They told the council it would draw trade away from existing houses.

George Otte Injured

CANTON, OHIO—George Otte, 21, assistant manager of the Palace Theatre here, suffered lacerations and other injuries early this week when an automobile in which he was riding collided with another north of here. Otte was able to continue his duties at the theatre.

Operators Wind Up Bowling Season

PITTSBURGH—The Movie Operators' Bowling League of IATSE Local No. 171 staged its annual banquet at Angelo's Restaurant, with members and guests totaling 73. Prize money awarded was $308, and each member of the league received a leather wallet. Entertainment was provided by the Don D'Carlo theatrical agency.

Officers of the season were George Engstler, president; John Lengyel, secretary, and William Thompson, treasurer.

OTTO BRAEUNIG is back at his post as RKO office manager which he turned over to Joe Swee when he was assigned to a sales position . . . Harry Goldstein, Paramount district manager, and Duke Clark, branch manager, leave Monday for the Paramount convention in Hollywood.

Louis Gross was re-elected president of the Ohio Association of Film Carriers. Other officers were also re-elected for another year . . . F. H. Hathaway, who has theatres in Caldwell and Struthers, has extended his activities in Struthers by buying a building which he is converting into a bowling alley.

L. G. Baldwin, owner of the Almira, Cleveland, won't have to worry about what to do with his weekend gross. Two robbers got into the theatre, bound the custodian after he was forced to open the safe, and made off with approximately $200.

Last Monday was American Legion Night at Variety. Next Monday will be Father-Son Night, with Louis Gross and Eddie Johnson handling details.

Set Smiley Burnette

HOLLYWOOD—Smiley Burnette has returned from a five-week personal appearance tour to begin work in "Carolina Moon," Republic's next Gene Autry western.

A Warner Regional in Pitt on June 10-12

PITTSBURGH — Warner district, branch and zone managers from the Eastern and Canadian territories will attend the first of two regional meetings at the William Penn Hotel here on June 10-12, Harry Seed, local branch manager, was informed last week. Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, and other top executives of Warner and its affiliated companies will address the Pittsburgh meeting and the second session at the Blackstone, Chicago, June 17-19.

In charge of the local meeting will be Roy Haines, former local branch manager who is now Eastern and Canadian sales manager for the company. Ben Kalmenson, who succeeded Haines as local manager, and who now is Western and Southern sales manager for Warner, will preside at the Chicago convention.

Earlier plans to stage a national convention in Washington have been abandoned.

Two-State "Ecstasy" Ban Deemed "Inconsistent"

PITTSBURGH — Censorship inconsistency was brought to the attention of Sun-Telegraph readers this week by Karl Krug, drama critic, who pointed out that Pennsylvania and New York censors continue a ban on Hedy Lamarr's foreign-made "Ecstasy" while the picture has been exhibited profitably in the other 46 states.

"From a business standpoint," writes Krug, "New York and Pennsylvania theatres have undoubtedly lost a lot of money as thousands of patrons have traveled out of these states to see 'Ecstasy,' raised to an unusually high boxoffice plane by publicity attendant on censorship.

"There is something wrong when 46 states say you may see a film, and two states say you can't. Perhaps the New York and Pennsylvania boards should look at 'Ecstasy' again."

Bar to Well-Drilling Is Sustained in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH — City council sustained Mayor Cornelius D. Scully's veto of an ordinance granting permission to the Shadyside Amusement Corp., to drill a well through the sidewalk fronting its property at 5520 Walnut street for air cooling a proposed theatre. The mayor vetoed the proposal on the grounds that the city was in the water business itself and should sell the company water. Councilmen James L. O'Toole jr., Edward J. Leonard and A. L. Wolk voted to override the veto.

Scully said: "The city is in the water business and it is a bit inconsistent for it being in that business, and in derogation of its best interest as a supplier of water, to grant permits for the drilling of wells on its sidewalks, thus lose a customer for what had heretofore been considered normal use of water in the premises, as well as potential customers for water for the above purpose."

The Shadyside Amusement Corp., will drill on its own property, a situation these owners had hoped to avert as they wish to use the present structure on their property, which would necessitate inside drilling.

Nat Haase's time clock on the door looks like a good idea . . . Arthur Greenblatt of Alliance Films was a New York visitor to Excellent Pictures . . . Dick Flemion of Excellent has recovered from an attack of the flu.

Theatrical Post Doings—Harry Carson set the season bowling record with a 47—thought he was playing golf . . . Bill Marley, National Theatre Engineering, substituted for Roy Ruben at his first bowling session . . . Sam Harris' Stage Door will be headquarters for Poppy Day. Sam is back from Florida.

Mary Mielock, secretary to Jack Flynn, M-G-M division manager, is reported to be engaged. It's catching—her assistant, Ellen Johnson, just disclosed her nuptial plans.

Tom McGuire, Cooperative, dashing off to Washington re the Neely Bill . . . Warren and Pat Slee entertaining friends at Variety, after the Young School's swank recital . . . Jean Buermele's picture helped o. k. on publicity for the Variety Dance. (Mrs. Harold Sandelman nominated her, by the way.)

Bill Green, former Detroit booker and tradepaper writer, is resigning from MCA, to vacation in Mexico, with a new job up his sleeve, to be revealed June 15.

Bill Flemion, George McArthur and Roy E. Campbell all hail from Findlay, Ohio, we just learned . . . Mac used to be usher in the theatre there when Roy was in the stock company.

Roy Brosius, manager of Bill Schulte's Bagley, reports his mother seriously ill . . . Paris Bucci, Italian film specialist, is now operating under the name of the Cine Roma Theatre. He plans to have a second theatre in town soon for Italian pictures, besides the present Park.

Ed Kirchner, manager of the Family, returned as house committee chairman of Variety Club. Son Louis G. Kirchner is helping him . . . M. Wesson Dickinson, state superintendent of private employment bureaus, who is in direct charge of all theatrical bookings, is being boomed as next secretary of state . . . His assistant, Jack Walsh, was off on a tour of the resort areas, checking on bookings.

The J. B. Kosco, reported building a new theatre in Brockway, near Pittsburgh, reminded Detroiters of the late Joe Cosco, who once had a string of houses here . . . Jacob Schreiber, reported vacationing in Florida, left a memento of his Blackstone Theatre—a board sign covering the whole front at the top of the building about "Vitaphone Talking Pictures." You can see it from Griswold Street offices.

WOLVERINE DOINGS:

James Miller is managing both the Pine Grove and the Riviera at Port Huron for M. J. Chargot . . . Adolph Goldberg will have plans ready soon on that new house for Royal Oak.

Harrison Beach, of Grosse Pointe, who has been operating roadshows in schools for 20 years, is going to northern Michigan in June, but won't operate this summer . . . Earl Annett is revamping the Durand at Durand.

Raymond E. Moon, manager of Mutual Theatres, has added the Palace at Charlevoix to his booking list—owner is Mrs. Elizabeth Moon—and she's no relation at all.

O. A. D. Baldwin (are there any more three-letter showmen), owner of the Bridgman, Bridgman, was in town Wednesday and Thursday booking—and peeved 'cause there was no ball game.

Jeff Williams of Roseville and East Detroit collected over 1,000 old tires when he admitted youngsters to both houses for "one tire" admission.

Bill Schulte's Motor City at Van Dyke—the Vandale—is a neat looking house from the front . . . Roy Campbell, manager of Walter Shafer's Shafer at Garden City, lost his father a week ago Saturday at Findlay, Ohio.

Fairchild Theatre is the name of the new million dollar dual-unit auditorium at Michigan State College, East Lansing. It's named after the late Professor George Thompson Fairchild.

Detroit Projectionists' Club Elects Officers

DETROIT—The Nightingales Club, projectionists' bowling and social organization, held their annual banquet and election Monday night following the close of the bowling season. New officers elected are:

Gil Light, Michigan, president; Edgar Douville, Globe, vice-president; J. R. Davison, recording secretary; Sam J. Comella, Jam Handy Studios, financial secretary; W. R. Rickens, Beverly, treasurer.

The new bowling committee is headed by Jack M. Hall, with Robert E. Seeley and H. S. Morton as members. Douville also is secretary of bowling. A resolution of thanks for publicity accorded the club by BOXOFFICE was passed.

Staff Members Will Share "U" Drive Prize in Pitt

PITTSBURGH—The local branch of New Universal won the national company drive prize, the award having been announced at the "U" convention in Atlantic City over the past weekend. The Pittsburgh office maintained first place in the eastern division from week to week during the entire contest. Award of $1,500 will be distributed to members of the staff, Jules Lapidus, branch manager, stated this week. District bookers prize was won by Francis Guehl of the local office.

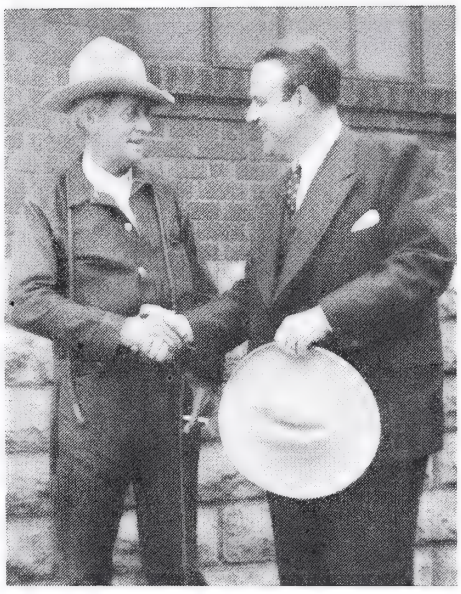
In addition to Lapidus and Guehl, Salesmen Dave Barnholtz, Si Feld, Lou Hess and William Satori attended the convention.

Harris Restores Newsreel Policy at Pitt Palace

PITTSBURGH — Harris Newsreel Palace, Diamond Street, which recently added a feature picture to the program, has returned to exclusive newsreel policy. The one hour show admission is 10 cents until 12:30 and 15 cents from that time until the close of the boxoffice. Harris circuit inaugurated a newsreel policy at one of its East Liberty theatres but this type of presentation was not popular and the house returned to a grind.

The Diamond Street newsreel house is undergoing interior alterations.

Para't 100% Club Rank Is Attained by Elmo



PITTSBURGH—George Elmo, Paramount sales representative, this week joined the company's honorary "100 Per Cent Club," in recognition of his good work, Dave Kimelman, branch manager, announced. As a result of this award Elmo will join with Kimelman in attending the annual Paramount sales convention which will be held May 24-26 in Los Angeles. Local Paramount exchange is observing May and June as a period of appreciation for Kimelman, with the result that many additional bookings are being received daily.

Shea Picks Builder

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO—Contract for the construction of Shea's new 800-seat theatre here has been awarded the Wendling Bros. of Dover. The completed theatre will represent an investment of $100,000, according to E. C. Grainger, general manager of the circuit. R. L. Hickman, district manager, will handle construction details and opening is planned for Labor Day. H. C. Holbrook of Columbus is the architect.

W. D. Davis Stricken

PITTSBURGH—William D. Davis, veteran East Liberty showman and former local Allied exhibitor organization president, will not testify at the all-industry monopoly case. Summoned as one of the first witnesses, the well liked showman is devoid of speech this week, having suffered a stroke Monday at the Veterans Hospital, Aspinwall. His condition was considered critical.

Pittsburgh Greeting—

modernization at Follansbee, W. Va. . . . Burtus Bishop jr., and his local M-G-M sales staff, including Saal Gottlieb, Harry Fendrick, Jack Mundstuk, Milton Brauman and Theodore S. Davis, the latter a student salesman, are attending a regional sales meeting May 20-21 at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C. . . . Abe Weiner, UA manager, and Harry Rees, William Scott and James Nash have returned from their company eastern convention which was held in New York.

Alvin Seiler, missing from these parts for six months, showed up at his Filmrow office Tuesday afternoon. With him was Malcolm Lawrence, sales representative for the theatre supply dealer. Julian "Dooley" Tonkay is office manager . . . Jules Lapidus, national winner in the Bill Scully drive for Universal, and Mrs. Lapidus, depart this weekend for a vacation in Florida . . . We are told that Mike Manos has taken steps to enter exhibition at Uniontown . . . R. J. Jeffries, Burch Popcorn Machine representative, has a new Chrysler . . . Anna Neagle, star of "Irene," and Herbert Wilcox, producer and director, will come here for the local opening, RKO announces.

William Thomas, booking here this week, reported that he has installed an air-cooling unit at his Strand, Zelienople . . . Mrs. Hazel Jennings Cullen, wife of Mike Cullen, district manager for Loew's, Inc., died Monday at Orlando, Fla., after a long illness . . . Members of more than 20 play-producing groups of western Pennsylvania will hear Martin Burnett, new manager of Loew's Penn, discuss various aspects of stage and screen at the annual meeting of the Federation of Non-Commercial Theatres Sunday afternoon, May 19.

Proceeds of the Diamond Jim Brady $100-a-plate dinner were to go to the Variety Club's Boys' Camp fund instead of the Norwegian fund as formerly announced.

Spend Dollars in Canada At Lower Exchange Rate

DETROIT—The war is responsible for a slight boom in theatre trade, along with other branches of industry and commerce, across the river in Windsor, Ont. The Canadian dollar is way down in exchange rates with the future uncertain, and Americans are going over to Canada to take advantage of the extra value which American dollars now have over there.

There are also some thousands of Canadian residents living in Windsor and working in Detroit, who commute across the border daily. There are also some Americans working in Canada and living in Detroit, but the number is relatively slight. This daily exchange of population has resulted in considerable dollars flowing back and forth despite the denunciation by Canadian authorities of individual Canadians who earn their money in Detroit but who fail to turn it into the proper Canadian exchange, selling their American money in the open market instead.

Canadian theatres, in particular, enjoyed direct American patronage when they showed films recently banned by the censor locally, as the theatre district is within ten minutes of downtown Detroit.

Holdover Pace in Detroit Struck by "Command"

DETROIT—"Dark Command" proved the surprise picture of the week, starting off to only fair business at the Adams, where it had moved after a week at the Fox, and then running up to boxoffice figures that justified a holdover, Sam Seplowin, Republic manager, disclosed. Co-featured on the bill was Columbia's "The Doctor Takes a Wife.'

Boxoffice returns were so startling at the Adams as to lead Manager Charlie Perry, who is usually conservative on exploitation, to insert large newspaper ads, reading, "We're flabbergasted! The audience reaction was terrific, which we expected, but the crowds we got amazed us —so-o-o-o- we're holding these swell movies for a third record week."

George Kirby Succeeds To Monogram Helm

CINCINNATI—George Kirby, long associated with Republic here, is the new manager of the local exchange to succeed the late Mark (Max) Margolis.

Agree in Columbus on Theatre Ordinance

COLUMBUS—After three weeks of dickering, the new city ordinance covering the operation of theatres has been finally okayed by the city council and mayor. The snag came when exhibitors discovered that the IATSE had inserted a clause giving them representation on the licensing board. The compromise, in form of an amendment, gives the exhibitors a member on the board.

Generally speaking the ordinance is of but little importance, merely bringing the city code up to date. Operators must now pay a yearly fee of $25, compared to $1 previously. Apprentices are now allowed in the booth while learning.

One clause, however, will some day make the ordinance the subject of some argument. This portion of the ordinance defines a motion picture theatre as "any place showing motion pictures or televised pictures," making Columbus the first city to make definite provisions for the coming of television. Likewise, the operators of the coin-in-slot picture machines must live up to the same restrictions as the exhibitors. The protective clause for the exhibitors shows clearly the handiwork of P. J. Wood, ITO secretary, who helped in drawing up the ordinance.

Teamed on "Lucky Baldwin"

HOLLYWOOD—Ethel Hill and Frank Nugent are scripting "Lucky Baldwin" for 20th-Fox.

COLUMBUS

CONSTRUCTION starts June 1 on a new theatre at Lilley to be operated under lease by "Pat" Russell, formerly of the Columbia and Pythian. Project will cost approximately $75,000, owner being Hal Dickinson. The 1,000-seater will be first in Ohio to be wired for television . . . Jim Hendel was east for the UA sales convention . . . Midnight shows have been dropped at the RKO Grand and Loew's Broad . . . P. J. Wood, ITO secretary, was in Washington for the Neely bill hearings this past week.

We're glad to report that Milt Jacobs, genial Metro salesman, is now at home after an eight-week stay in the hospital. He's coming along okay, should be back in the territory in a month or so . . . Elwood Engle has been dickering with A. A. Abel for the Oak . . . 'Tis rumored a Columbus nabe circuit is for sale . . . C. Harry Schreiber, RKO boss, was a business visitor in Cincy . . . Bill Blum and Dave Carter, also of RKO, were in on business.

Harold Eckert, Journal dramatic critic, and Bill Cunningham of the Citizen's theatre page, were in Pittsburgh for the premiere of "Lillian Russell" . . . Ted Gardiner (American Theatre Equipment Co.) has installed sound at the B. I. S. in Lancaster, also new arc lamps at the Liberty in that city . . . Ron Jacobs has left RKO to take a job with the government.

From F&Y we learn that "Contiglow" will be used in the Sunset, Cincy, and the remodeled Family in Covington, first time "dark light" has been employed in midwestern theatres. Also that the new Westmore in Huntington is scheduled for completion, September 15.

"Fast Time" Doesn't Interest Michigan

DETROIT—Michigan showmen, watching the worries of operators in neighbor cities over Daylight Saving Time, show no interest in the idea.

Detroit experimented with Daylight Saving a number of years ago, but the idea brought such a series of squawks from theatre men, merchants and the public generally, as well as industrial managers, that it was permanently dropped after the usual political delays.

Butterfield Circuit Is Adding Office Space

DETROIT—The Butterfield circuit is in the midst of enlarging its circuit offices, adding some 10,000 square feet of space. This will almost treble the present size of the offices.

No major changes of functions or additions to personnel are contemplated, officials state.

The new space will be largely shared by the booking, auditing and publicity departments, allowing for more efficient operation.

Divorcement Measure Is Under Scrutiny

NEW HAVEN—In order to acquaint Connecticut MPTO members with the new proposed Neely divorcement bill and adequately present the alleged merits and demerits of such legislation, Herman M. Levy, executive secretary, announces that a symposium has been arranged on the subject for the next luncheon meeting, at 12:30 p. m., Tuesday, May 21, at Ceriani's Cafe Mellone, 204 Crown Street. Arthur Lockwood, president of the organization, will present the arguments and analysis in favor of the bill; Bernhart E. Hoffman, against. The organization bulletin points out that this bill is not to be confused with the previous Neely bill, and exhibitors owe it to themselves to understand the proposal in order to take a definite stand.

Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut also will meet at luncheon on Tuesday, May 21, at the Hofbrau Haus Restaurant, with A. M. Schuman presiding. With the governor's safety campaign in full swing, the organization is distributing to exhibitors the ten specially made four-minute safety trailers, a voluntary co-operative gesture. Al Pickus, operator of the Stratford, is chairman of the project. A Community Chest representative will address the next meeting, and industry problems will be discussed. It was voted to hold regular bi-weekly meetings.

Belmont Selectmen Deny Graphic Sunday Permit

BOSTON—The Graphic Theatre circuit has been denied a Sunday license by the Belmont board of selectmen. The action followed a public hearing, attended by some 200 Belmont residents, at which proposed Sunday films were accorded unfavorable action.

The Kurson interests have been tentatively planning to put up a de luxe motion picture building in the Boston suburb but have indicated that they may withhold action on the project if a seven-day license is not forthcoming.

Court Holds Two Liable As Lyric Guarantors

BOSTON—Daniel J. Carroll of the Stuart here and Barnett Welansky, identified with theatre and distribution interests here, were both held liable in the sum of $44,134 to the Stuart Investment Trust as guarantors on the lease of a property to W&W Amusement Co., Inc. Judge Paul G. Kirk of Suffolk superior court, formerly head of the Sunday censorship bureau in Massachusetts, handed down the decision which regarded the Lyric Theatre property on Washington Street.

Gets Imperial Franchise

NEW HAVEN—I. Levine, former Grand National manager here, has taken over the Connecticut franchise for distribution of Imperial Pictures.

M&R Counsel Would Outline "Pattern of Conspiracy"

By BRAD ANGIER

BOSTON—"Sometimes when I hear the statements made about the effect on first-run revenue, I think of Carlyle's aphorism, 'teach a parrot to say "supply and demand" and you have a political economist.' We might well say here, 'Teach film men to say "first-run revenue" and you have a big-time distributor'," George S. Ryan stated in his concluding arguments, which continued this week, in the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust litigations.

"Throughout these cases," Ryan told Philip Hendrick, master, on the 201st day of hearings, "there runs a district pattern or outline of conspiracy. We find the plaintiff going into a town. The opposition resents it, and does whatever it can to injure the opposition. In each case, the opposition is very powerful and very unscrupulous.

"Monopoly" in Portsmouth

"In Portsmouth, in addition to the charge of conspiracy we have the charge of monopolizing, or attempting to monopolize, or combining, or conspiring to monopolize. For that reason in this case some specific attention will be paid to the acts of Maine & New Hampshire Theatre Co., evidencing an intention to monopolize.

"The plaintiff, Aetna Amusement Enterprises, Inc., secured a lease of the Arcadia on September 18, 1930. It began operation on November 14, 1930. This lease, was for a term of five years. It was extended to October 15, 1945. When the plaintiff took over the Arcadia it changed the seats, put in a modern booth equipment, RCA sound, some furnishings, and a new screen.

"In November of 1930 the Maine and New Hampshire Theatre Co. was operating, or had under control, three theatres, the Colonial, Olympia, and Portsmouth. The Portsmouth was closed and had been closed for some period of time. The Colonial was then operating on a policy of three changes a week, single-feature, first-run, major product, with admission prices of 25 cents matinee, 25 and 35 cents evenings, except on Friday and Saturday when vaudeville was used and the evening charge was 35 and 50 cents. The Olympia also was operating on a policy of three changes a week, first-run single-features. Its admission prices were matinees 15 and 25 cents, evenings 20 and 35 cents.

"The Maine and New Hampshire Theatre Co. was a powerful circuit. Except for Publix, it was the most powerful circuit operating in Maine. It had more theatres than any other circuit in New Hampshire. It was a subsidiary of Paramount-Publix Corp., which owned and controlled 50 per cent of its capital stock, either directly or indirectly.

"The evidence in regard to that circuit shows that it had competition in only a comparatively small percentage of the places in which it operated—Fitchburg, Burlington, Portsmouth, Concord, Rumford, and at one time in Gardiner, Me. Its 29 or 30 theatres, whatever the number was, were located in about 19 cities and towns. In all the other places there was no competition.

"In connection with affiliation with Paramount, there should be borne in mind that in 1930 or '31 Paramount controlled or had an interest in approximately 1,600 theatres. Many of these were large, first-run houses. The revenue which it gave the distributors amounted, in the case of the revenue going from Publix to Paramount, to about $10,000,000 a year. There were other figures of millions of dollars being paid to companies like Metro and Fox each year by this circuit.

Opposition to Circuit

"Publix and Paramount, therefore, were extremely powerful. No distributor could stay in business that didn't do business with them. One might figure the hundreds of theatres in New England alone controlled by Publix, add to them the Maine and New Hampshire circuit in which Paramount had a half interest, and then try to figure how many of the distributors could operate profitably in this territory without selling any of those theatres. We have noticed from the correspondence that the Paramount subsidiaries realized their power. They worked together. They worked in close harmony with the Paramount distributing branch.

"When the plaintiff went into Portsmouth, therefore, it started to operate in competition with a very powerful circuit. The evidence of Ford would indicate also that it was the intention of Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Co., as far as possible, to operate without competition. This circuit had franchises, either directly or through Publix, with Metro and the United Artists. There has been some evidence as to the cancellation or expiration of these franchises, and further evidence that Metro issued franchises later directly to the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Circuit. So far as Paramount was concerned, it was not necessary, of course, to have a franchise. With such a setup there would naturally be an understanding that Paramount products would be used in the Maine and New Hampshire theatres.

"When we come to consider the acts of Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Co. in an effort to eliminate the competition of the Arcadia, it is of importance to notice the seating capacity of the balconies of the theatres in Portsmouth. Counsel emphasized the seating capacity of the bal-

Airing in December Of N. E. Situation

Boston—It will be December before the New England film situation will be aired in the government's equity suit, it is indicated. Seymour Krieger, special assistant attorney-general who has been in Boston on several occasions to line up evidence for the department of justice, is expected to prosecute local angles of the litigation.

"Conspiracy" Pattern Traced by M&R

conies in Nashua but not in Portsmouth. The Arcadia Theatre had about 650 seats in the orchestra and 200 in the balcony. The Colonial had 691 seats in the orchestra and 469 in the balcony; there were 96 box seats. The Olympia had 598 in the orchestra, 378 in the balcony, and 22 box seats. The Portsmouth had 671 seats in the orchestra and 494 in the balcony.

"It will be seen from these figures that the balconies of the Colonial, Olympia, and Portsmouth theatres were important factors. It is for that reason that when the matter of competition is considered the prices of those large balconies will become of importance. Approximately 40 per cent of the seats in those Maine and New Hampshire theatres were in the balconies.

"When the plaintiff opened the Arcadia, it began to operate on a policy of three changes a week, double-features, admission 10 cents matinee, 15 cents, children 10 cents. The theatres were then operating six days a week because there was no Sunday license at that time in New Hampshire."

There was also testimony (John J. Ford, head of Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Co.) that this figure of 25,000 population in the summer included only those localities from which the theatres in Portsmouth might draw, which did not have theatres themselves, and that the theatres in Portsmouth actually did get some patrons from places that had theatres. Ford also testified that these places over which his theatres in Portsmouth had protection were potential customers. He didn't know the winter population of the places within a 12-mile radius of Portsmouth, although he did know they got business in Portsmouth from Exeter, which was eight to ten miles away.

"At the very commencement of operation here in Portsmouth, as in Nashua we find the defendant distributors, with the exception of Paramount, very willing to sell the plaintiff. It is operating at the low admission prices, but none of the distributors except Paramount makes any objection to selling. As we go along, I shall point out to Your Honor some memoranda and some contract recommendations of these distributors which indicate they knew this was a second-run house opening up in a situation where they had not before sold second-run, that they were not only willing but glad to sell it, and they felt that this was so much picked up additional revenue.

"In Portsmouth there was a closed theatre, the Portsmouth, which could be used as the Colonial in Nashua was used, as a fighting theatre, first, to frighten away competition, and second, if competition entered, to send that theatre out on the battlefield and fight the competition. We found that was exactly what happened in Nashua. Now we find the identical thing happening in Portsmouth. We will see here, as in Nashua, that Ford attempts to put the plaintiff out of business by low prices, by adding another theatre into a situation which he said was already overseated, and that then when he is unsuccessful in that policy he cuts off the supply of major product. Exactly the same pattern we find in Nashua! These exhibitors, who are monopolists, employ the same tactics."

Study Sales Policies

Turning to sales policies, Ryan said, "It was with considerable interest that I heard counsel for the defendants, in talking about selling or refusing to sell subsequent runs, say, that it was natural for these salesmen and branch managers to desire to sell subsequent-runs. He spoke about the fact that the general officers of the distributors were interested in the long-time prosperity of the company, and that the salesmen were anxious to make as large a showing as they could in the territories within their control. In substance, they were in the position that they wanted to sell as much as they could this year because if they did not make a good showing they might not have their positions next year.

"He mentioned also that the sales of first-run product were negotiated to a considerable extent at headquarters. The result was that the men away from headquarters, the district or branch managers, and conspicuously the salesmen, might have nothing to do but to sell the second-run product. Then he went on to argue that the salesmen in the territory had an incentive to sell second-run in a position like Nashua, because if he did not sell it, he would not have anything to sell in that particular situation.

SPRINGFIELD

THE 20 MULE TEAM hit this city last Thursday afternoon, after a great campaign by Loew-Poli Manager George E. Freeman and his assistant, Jack Foxe. Visitors in town that day from Loew-Poli offices in Boston and New Haven were Bert MacKenzie, Boston, and Lou Brown and Harry F. Shaw, New Haven. The stunt was stationed in Memorial Sq., for two hours, and from there marched along Main St., after which it headed for New York.

"Obviously such an argument is based upon the theory that in a situation like Nashua the local branch managers would desire to sell the subsequent-runs, and that a decision to refuse to sell was made at headquarters in New York, possibly during the course of the negotiations with the first-run exhibitor.

A Matter of Time

"If we could have had such an admission at the beginning of this case it would have saved a great deal of time. The plaintiffs went to New York upon the assumption that the decision not to sell was made there. In that city, they examined a great many of the witnesses of the defendant in general sales positions. Did they get such information in New York? Did they get such information from the branch managers and district managers? The evidence here, Your Honor, shows that throughout it was the attempt to shift the responsibility onto the branch manager, because ordinarily the duty of deciding whether an account should be sold and the terms on which the account should be sold is a local matter, dependent for decision upon the man in the field who knows the conditions intimately. They realized that fact. All the distributors knew that to be true. They knew that to be the ordinary custom in the industry. Apparently, they felt that if any decision not to sell subsequent-run on the ground of the merits of selling or not selling was made, that it should be made by the branch manager.

"If it is a matter of refusing to sell because of circuit pressure in New York, a combination existing there, that is something with which the branch manager has nothing to do. That is something which leads toward an inference of conspiracy. That was something that they wished to avoid. If, on the other hand, the decision were made here in Boston by the local branch and district managers, on influence by any consideration of pressure or threat by the first-run exhibitors, on influence by anything except the welfare of the company depending upon the revenue to be derived to by the sale, then the decision would be made by the local branch manager. It was for that reason that throughout this record you find days, and perhaps weeks or more, spent in examining witnesses to find out who made the decision. Even that one thing itself was something that for a long time it was hard to get definitely.

Office a "Barrier"

"In this testimony Your Honor will find that Mr. Wolf claimed to have made the decision for Metro, Mr. Cropper for RKO, Mr. Dervin for United Artists, Mr. Kelly, not definitely but in a general sense, for Universal, Mr. O'Toole for Columbia. The situation in regard to Warner was a little indefinite because of the change in the branch managers. And so far as Paramount and Fox were concerned, while Mr. Bailey was in charge it appeared that his desire was to sell and that he was prevented from selling by the New York office. Even on this particular situation which we are discussing in regard to Paramount in 1931 and 1932 in Nashua, the

Add an Optimistic Ending to "Grapes"

Hamden, Conn.—The Whitney is the first house known to add a new ending to "The Grapes of Wrath," played Wednesday and Thursday. Shots from a Paramount newsreel showing many Dust Bowl farmers going back to their homes are appended after a special trailer crediting Messrs. Steinbeck and Ford for a splendid expose, but wishing to inject a note of optimism by these scenes of attempts to deal with the problem.

Clements Elected to Head Entertainment Bookers

HARTFORD—A. J. Clements has been elected president of a new organization of entertainment bookers in Connecticut.

The group, which was perfected at a meeting last fortnight, has announced its object will be to promote legislation to license entertainment bookers and to eliminate the factor known as cut-throat competition which reacts to the disadvantage of actors and the amusement buying public as well.

Members of the new organization, under the leadership of Clements, include the Boston Professional Entertainment Bureau, Beverly Joyce, the Variety Entertainment Bureau, Samuel Wells, New Haven; Al Rich, Bridgeport; the Clements Entertainment Bureau, and Breck Lewis of Springfield.

Secretary is Miss Joyce, while Wells has been chosen treasurer. A series of conferences between bookers and acts will be arranged in order to arrive at standardization in price and for the improvement of actual working conditions.

Graphic Circuit Meeting Is Scheduled in Boston

BOSTON—A general meeting of Graphic Theatre circuit executives and managers was to have been held here late this week. Sam Kurson, operator of the circuit, planned to be on hand from Bangor, Me. Newell and Kenneth Kurson, local Graphic heads, arranged the schedule for the convention which was to have included both social and business functions.

Bank Night Cleared In Rhode Island

BOSTON—Bank Night was cleared of lottery charges in the Rhode Island supreme court in the climax to an action which had been pending for two years, with the Roy E. Heffner giveaway ousted from the state throughout much of the period. George S. Ryan, attorney for the Bank Night interests in New England, successfully cleared the premium in Rhode Island.

The finding, translated into the theatre idiom, holds that the fact that Bank Night increases audiences on the nights of the drawings can not, in itself, be indicative that admission prices are paid in part for participation in Bank Night.

The Bank Night proceeding was begun by an indictment in which it was charged that the big chief corporation, a Providence market, violated anti-lottery laws because it "did set up, put forth, carry on, promote, and draw publicly, a lottery, chance, game, and device, to wit, Bank Night."

A drawing held on June 21, 1938 was used in the test case. Jury trial was waived. The case was heard before a justice of the superior court, sitting without a jury, solely upon evidence set forth in an agreed statement of facts. The justice filed a rescript in which the defendant was found guilty.

Files Exceptions

Ryan filed a bill of exceptions in the state supreme court. It was in agreeing with the Boston attorney's pleas that the Rhode Island supreme court has cleared Bank Night in that state.

It is set forth in the agreed statement that the scheme was designed to increase attendance in the stores of the licensees, not only on the nights of its operation but on all other days of the week.

The supreme court held:

"That generally it has had that effect; and that in the week just prior to the night involved in this case about 5,211 persons had their registration cards 'qualified' at the market of the defendant and 161 new persons registered there.

"But the trial justice, in his rescript, found also, specifically or in substance and effect, that undoubtedly many persons who were present at the drawings on the evening of June 21 had bought merchandise from the defendant because they were brought to the market by their desire to register and to participate in the drawings and were led, either by their self-respect or by the attractiveness of the merchandise which they saw there, to make purchases; and that money was spent not only for merchandise but for the purpose of participating in the Bank Night.

"If these findings had been sufficiently supported either by express evidence or by necessary deductions therefrom, they would have constituted the premises for the above-stated reasoning of the trial justice.

"But, in our judgment, there is not sufficient support, by the evidence contained in the agreed statement or by necessary deductions therefrom, for a finding that anybody paid any money 'not only for merchandise but for the purpose of participating in 'Bank Night,' or even for a finding that many persons had bought merchandise from the defendant because they were brought to the market by their desire to register and so participate in the drawings.

"Therefore, we must hold that the above-stated reasoning of the trial justice cannot be applied in this case, especially as guilt must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. For that reason and because the decision of the trial justice cannot be supported on any other line of reasoning which we consider sound, the decision is erroneous."

Concluded the court: "The defendant's exception is sustained, and the case is remanded to the superior court with direction to find the defendant not guilty."

Summer Theatres Again Stir in New England

HARTFORD—Throughout New England, summer theatres are beginning to stir nowadays.

According to reports reaching this publication, the following "straw hat circuit" houses are slated to open sooner or later this season in an attempt to start new stars on their way to stardom and to present still another way of attempting to get cash customers away from motion picture houses: Bolton Lake, Conn., Playhouse; Lake Whalom, near Fitchburg, Mass., summer theatre; Canton, Conn., Show Shop; Marble Dale, Conn., Theatre-in-the-Dale; Suffield, Conn., Band Box, and Berlin, Conn., Playhouse.

Judging from the above, Connecticut, as has been its custom in years past, will sponsor quite a number of summer theatres.

Rumors have it that more summer theatres in New England are being planned for the season, although nothing definite has been learned as yet.

Pair Are Scissored by Sunday Censor Bureau

BOSTON—"Damn" was removed from two sections of the sound track of Northeastern Film's "The Bedroom Diplomat" and "all scenes showing dying, dead and wounded people on refugee train (and) all scenes showing burnt and dead cattle and sheep in fields" was clipped from "Lights Out in Europe."

These two films were the only motion pictures scissored in a group of 32 reported last week by the Massachusetts bureau of Sunday censorship. The 32 included 20th-Fox's "Girl of the Streets" and "I Was an Adventuress."

Six vaudeville routines were refused Sunday licenses, while four others were required to modify their routines. Sixteen acts were granted Lord's Day licenses.

evidence is clear from the exhibits and from the testimony of Mr. Bailey that he wanted to sell and that he was prevented from selling both by the general sales manager and by the legal department of Paramount.

"Joseph Walsh, former operator of the Metropolitan in Providence, testified that in all his experience he had never known of a theatre that was not able to get major pictures of some run. Walsh has been in this business as long as any man that testified here. He was a man of wide experience, a member of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and participated in conferences relating to the standard contract. He operated a number of theatres. He stated that in all his experience he had never heard of a theatre that was not able to get major product."

Ryan brought to the attention of the court the $100,000 suit of the A. & W. Amusement Co. which is being tried parallel with the Morse & Rothenberg cases. This regarded the operation of the Metropolitan in Providence by Joseph Walsh and Lou Ambers.

"The evidence from the offices of the plaintiff," Ryan said, "would indicate that during the period they operated they ran an independent picture about every day. The major pictures they got were spot-booked. They got a few pictures from Metro, perhaps one from RKO, one from United Artists, and perhaps one more from Fox.

Memos of Conversations

"In the course of their journeys around from Connecticut to Boston and back, from Connecticut to New York and back, and then from Connecticut to Boston and from Providence to Boston, Mr. Anger and Mr. Walsh had many conversations with the representatives of the defendants. During some of the visits they had a lawyer with them. Memoranda were made of the conversations, and after the memoranda were written up, they were typewritten. Walsh, Anger and Greenstein came in to testify, using the memoranda to refresh their recollection.

"It is suggested that there were some things not according to Hoyle in these men making such memoranda. The argument, apparently, was made in an attempt to convince Your Honor that testimony based upon such memoranda is not reliable.

"The fact is that everything testified to by these men from their memoranda has been supported by the testimony of the defendants' managers or by documents that came from the defendants. That is extremely important. These memoranda were written in 1935. Neither Walsh nor Anger nor Greenstein could have any idea what might be in the files of the defendants. They could not have any idea what the defendants' representatives might testify if they were not going to testify to the truth. As we go along, from company to company, we will find that the testimony of these men, based upon memoranda written in 1935, was true in all respects and corroborated by evidence which came from the defendants' files or the defendants' employes.

"Therefore, the testimony, being based upon something written in 1935, contemporaneously, and shown to be accurate, is worthy of the highest respect, not only in showing the honesty of the witnesses but in showing the accuracy of the facts to which they testified.

"The accuracy of this memoranda is established by the testimony relating to Paramount, for example, and Hays. I mention those specifically although it is also established by other testimony relating to other companies.

"If there were any reason for the writer or the editor of the memoranda to insert anything that was untrue in regard to any of the defendants that reason would apply with full force to Paramount. Both Mr. Anger and Mr. Walsh testified in regard to their visits to Paramount in Boston and in New York, to their conversations with Harris, with Stevens, the business manager, and with Erbb in Boston, and also to their conversation with Schaffer in New York.

"Orders Not to Sell"

"Mr. Walsh, for example, testified that on July 31, Gubbins, the salesman whom they knew, introduced them to Harris, the salesman for that territory. Harris said he had orders not to sell that theatre.

"Shortly afterwards they had a talk with Stevens, the office manager, Harris being present. Stevens said that he had orders not to sell that theatre.

"Mr. Anger testified substantially to the same effect. He added that Stevens said that they should take it up with Erbb and that he could not sell unless the orders were changed. Neither Mr. Harris nor Mr. Stevens has been called as a witness to contradict either part of that testimony. Mr. Walsh testified that they had a conference with Erbb. He said definitely that Paramount would not sell, that if the Metropolitan opened it would directly affect the first-run revenue. Walsh asked if the Metropolitan would affect the first-run revenue more than the other houses, and Mr. Erbb stated in substance that that was his judgment. Mr. Walsh made the comment that it was rather peculiar that exchange managers would sit in their office and say what theatres should be opened and what theatres should be closed.

On Erbb and Anger

"Substantially, the same testimony comes from Mr. Anger. Apparently this conversation with Erbb took place about August 20, 1935.

"Mr. Erbb testified that he told Anger and Walsh that he was not in favor of selling, that it was a big theatre and that it was built for spite. He said he had an excellent first-run and many satisfactory subsequent-runs and that the Metropolitan would be detrimental to his revenue. Then he told Anger and Walsh that if they did not want to take his judgment, they should take it up with the home office. He agreed that they asked for the earliest run available, that they told him the policy and said that the admission prices would depend upon the run they could get.

"The testimony of Erbb as to his reasons for refusing to sell was in substance that he felt that it would detract from the first-run revenue, particularly if operated at cheap admission prices.

"So far, we find that Mr. Erbb is in strict agreement with the plaintiff. The memoranda, made up in 1935, which have been criticized, is shown to be accurate so far as Mr. Erbb is concerned and, by inference, so far as Harris and Stevens are concerned."

Summed Ryan, "A theatre like the Metropolitan is a menace when it is in independent hands, but when it is in producer-controlled hands, it is a fine thing for the motion picture business in that city."

Providing entertainment at the Stagehands' dinner and dance at the Woodland Casino last Monday night was the White Trio, composed of Rena, Babs and Dan White, who danced and sang before a well-pleased audience.

Mike Cavanaugh, member of the New York exploitation department of Paramount, was in Hartford the other day planning with Manager Walter B. Lloyd, M&P's Allyn, about "The Biscuit Eater." Stunts lined up as BOXOFFICE went to press included a dog show at Colt's Park, a coloring contest in the Hartford Courant, and tieups galore.

Bloomberg First to Sign In at Loew Fair Booth

BOSTON—Phil Bloomberg, former Gloucester man now operating a chain of Salem houses, was the first exhibitor to sign in the World's Fair information booth which Loew's recently reopened in the middle of Broadway at 46th Street. Being first was no novelty to Bloomberg who is credited with being the original American theatre man to use radio audition nights as a crowd getter for motion picture houses.

Arrests Confirm Drive Against Overcrowding

BEACON FALLS, CONN.—Rocco Longo of Waterbury, operator of a theatre in Watertown, was arrested last fortnight on a charge of overcrowding the theatre. Arrested on a similar charge was Nicholas Del Rossi, also of Waterbury.

In recent weeks, BOXOFFICE has reported from different Connecticut spots cases similar to the above.

West Springfield House Acquired by Al Gould

BOSTON—Al Gould, operator of the Castle in Mt. Pleasant, R. I., has taken over the Majestic in West Springfield. Herbert Higgens, independent film booker, will buy and book for the Western Massachusetts situation.

Free Exhibitor Service

BOSTON—A free service headquarters for exhibitors has been set up at the Manco Service and Supply Co. here. Joe Cohen, William Mancuso and Phil Markell are operators of the new showmen's sanitation concern. The quarters also are available as film district offices for out of town film men.

Hurdle Union Opposition

BOSTON—Ringling-Barnum and Bailey Circus completed a ten-day stand at Boston Garden despite AFL opposition terming it non-union.

PORTLAND

THE Strand and Empire have changed program schedules, the former opening Saturdays instead of Sundays, the latter Sundays instead of Thursdays. Leo Young is manager of both houses.

For the second time within a year citizens of Gardiner will go to the polls June 3 to decide the local option question of Sunday films. The city council two weeks ago gave voters permission to ballot again on the question. Last fall no sample ballot was printed and the total vote was 304.

"Pinocchio" was held over three extra days at the Empire. The Portland, to attract patrons to "the grand opening," gave enamelware to the ladies. The Empire is sticking to dishes.

BRIDGEPORT

MANAGER MATT L. SAUNDERS of the Loew-Poli and Lou Brown, Loew's New England press chief, flew to Washington to be with the Post and Telegram carrier boys attending Loew's Capitol in that city. Arrangements for the boys to attend the theatre were made by Saunders . . . Also flying to Washington was Samuel Haddleman of the Capitol here. Sam hopped a plane to be on time for a party marking his daughter's first birthday.

George Smith, chief of service at the Warner, has resigned . . . Attending the Barney Pitkin dinner from here were Matt Saunders, Morris Rosenthal, Harry Rose, Lou Anger, Sam Haddleman and Fred H. Russell . . . Warner Manager Manny Kugell was the first of the theatre boys to get on the links and Morris Rosenthal was the first to compete with his wife . . . Morris won.

Robert Elliano, manager of the Palace, Torrington, was in town with his family renewing old acquaintances. Bob worked at the Loew-Poli here 13 years ago . . . New fluorescent light has been installed in the boxoffices of Loew theatres . . . The Majestic and Globe have organized softball teams . . . Rose Bartellini is back in the Warner ticket booth after an operation for appendicitis.

Death struck twice within a few hours on the same day in the family of A. M. Schuman, owner of the Black Rock Theatre. First Schuman received word of the death of his sister's husband, Nathaniel Preske, an insurance company employe at Hartford. Less than two hours later a telegram arrived from Birmingham, Ala., announcing the death of Mrs. Schuman's father, O. B. Alfred. Mrs. Schuman left at once for the Alabama city. Schuman is president of Connecticut Allied.

Morris and Molly Rosenthal celebrate their wedding anniversary May 20 . . . Frank Gaunt of Washington has taken over the Plymouth in Milford . . . Manny Kugell did well with a Saturday morning cartoon show at the Warner . . . Mrs. Ida Shaw is back from New York where she was the guest of her sister . . . The back of the wall frames in the Loew-Poli lobby are being given a coat of blue plastic.

Joseph R. Vogel, from the home office, and Harry F. Shaw, Loew's New England chief, were in to look over the vaudeville show at the Globe. The house has just switched from the Irving Barrett agency to the Loew Booking Office . . . Cooperating with the local Young Women's Christian Ass'n drive by running trailers on their screens were the Loew-Poli, Majestic, Warner, American, Strand and Rialto theatres here and the Community in Fairfield . . . Although Bridgeport is closed to carnivals three have already been booked into Stratford, just across the city line . . . Two new sound units have been added by the Globe for its stage shows . . . Jack Sidney, assistant manager at the Loew-Poli, has finally received that inheritance from Belgium and it runs into four figures.

Robert Carney of the Majestic, Jack Sidney of the Loew-Poli and Anthony Masella of the Globe went to Hillside Home and "adopted" a mother on Mother's Day.

"Million B. C." Production Stills Presented Museum

HARTFORD—Manager Jack A. Simons of the Loew-Poli announced last Wednesday to this publication that he will present a set of production stills from the picture, "One Million B. C." to the Children's Museum of Hartford.

"The picture deals with the inhabitants of the earth in prehistoric times," he said, "and I thought maybe the children who visit the museum would enjoy seeing how Hollywood has recreated them for the picture . . ."

A little fellow stopped Simons in the Loew-Poli lobby on Saturday afternoon, after having seen the advance trailers on the film, "One Million B. C." and asked, "Does a dinosaur yip, yowl, or yodel?" Shaken temporarily from his usual poise, Simons told the youngster to "come see the motion picture," to find out.

Wm. B. Hall Receiver of Forest Theatre Corp.

WEST HAVEN, CONN.—With the filing of a $5,000 bond on May 7, the appointment of William B. Hall of New Haven as receiver of the rents of Forest Theatre Corp., operator of the Forest Theatre, becomes effective.

Judge Daly denied the application, praying for the appointment of a receiver to manage, operate and conduct the theatre and business. Foreclosure suit was brought by Arnold Gordon, trustee and first mortgagee.

Incorporate Grand

HARTFORD—Corporation certificates were filed last week in the office of Secretary of State Sarah B. Crawford here for the firm known as the Grand Theatre Corp., New Haven. Capital for the venture is stated at $50,000; commencing business, $2,000; par, $50. Incorporators are Lucille M. Bradley and Susan G. Dwyer, both of New Haven, and Natalie L. Blake of West Haven.

Griffith Shuffles Around Personnel

OKLAHOMA CITY—Lou Chatham has been put in charge of all Griffith Southwestern Theatres in Tulsa and Springfield, Mo., according to a home office announcement.

Abe Rosewall has been transferred from the Delman, Tulsa, to Springfield as city manager. Charles Trego has been placed in charge of three theatres on Reno Ave. here controlled by Griffith Southwestern including the Joy, Reno and Isis. Johnny Ryan, manager of the Joy under the old Southwestern regime, has resigned.

Roy McCullough has been transferred by Griffith Amusement Co. from Hominy, Okla., to Pawhuska, Okla., in charge of recently acquired houses there. Fred Brewer, assistant manager of the Fairfax, Okla., houses, has been placed in charge of Hominy.

Kenneth Blacklidge has gone from Okmulgee to management of Bartlesville houses. Kenneth Taylor, assistant manager at Lubbock, Tex., has been promoted to manager of Clinton, Okla. Clark Abbott has been transferred from Clinton to manager of Okmulgee.

Promise Record Delegation For Louisville Conclave

HOUSTON—The sixth district of IATSE and MPMO, comprising all locals in Texas, will send a record-breaking delegation to the projectionists' parley at Louisville, opening June 3, says Eddie Miller, IA's international representative and secretary-treasurer of this area.

Speaking of the international convention as a whole, Miller says a fine brand of Kentucky hospitality will be dispensed, and there will be important business sessions. This year officers will be elected. It is noted that George E. Browne of Chicago, international president, is slated for re-election. Browne came into the high office in Louisville six years ago when the convention met in 1934.

Headquarters will be at the Kentucky Hotel. This is the organization's 35th annual session and a record turnout is expected, as membership gains over the last year have been pronounced.

Last year, at Cleveland, nearly 800 delegates were registered and the figure is expected to be about 1,000 at Louisville. In addition, many non-voting members will attend, and it is expected more than 2,000 projectionists and their wives will be on hand when the gavel is pounded Monday morning, June 3.

District meetings open on Friday, May 31, and continue through Sunday, June 2, in advance of the larger session.

Over Texas, many locals will send six or seven members along with the voting delegate. If this average is approximated in other states, attendance should attain an all-time high.

Griffith Defendants Block Gov't Dismissal Move

OKLAHOMA CITY—Matching the government's strategic default in its over-riding of response deadlines to a ruling for a bill of particulars in the federal anti-trust suit against Griffith Amusement and major distributors, defendant counsel Thursday won an order from Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught directing the department of justice to file its particulars without additional information that had been ordered by the court.

Defendants previously waived the furnishing by the government of additional data after the department of justice had apparently purposefully delayed reply beyond the time limit imposed in what was considered a maneuver into a position to request dismissal of the suit without prejudice. The move was interpreted as an attempt to prevent tipping of the deparment's hand in the all-industry trial slated to start June 3 in New York. Government counsel is said to have felt the order for particulars was too all-inclusive.

Seek Determination on Case

The defendants (the Griffith circuits and all major distributors) have 30 days from the date of the court's order to answer the government's amended petition.

The purpose of the defendant waiver, according to Henry S. Griffing, attorney for the Griffith individuals and interests, was to narrow the case to the point where it should either come to early trial or be dismissed on its merits. He said the defendant companies did not wish the dismissal of the case without a definite decision that would notify them of their future status in regard to the government's allegation.

Attorneys in court for the hearing were Griffing; J. B. Dudley, C. B. Cochran and W. W. McKenzie for the defendants and Charles E. Dierker, U. S. district attorney, for the plaintiff.

Texas Theatremen Report a Slump

DALLAS—While Texas has led the nation in prosperity and in the building of theatres over a two-year period, theatre business over the state has taken a nosedive, it is evident from common market talk and reliable reports. Some say the business bottom has dropped out completely, while others describe the slump in terms not so drastic.

From the Interstate general office it is learned business is off over the entire circuit. Key first runs have shown a greater proportionate drop. Tom H. Clemmons, official of Jefferson Amusement Co. with headquarters in Beaumont, remarked while in town recently that receipts were noticeably off throughout his circuit's east and south Texas theatres.

Some of those informed believe the present condition is quite beyond any seasonable drop. An Elm Street manager, however, believes that the opening of swimming pools and preparations for school closings are largely responsible for the slump in this area and that conditions will improve when school is out and the new wears off of bathing suits.

One east Texas circuit operator of three small houses said he couldn't complain. Another east Texas operator of six houses said his business was good. In adjacent towns to both groups, however, exhibitors have reported business off. Losses in the entire Rio Grande Valley area are directly attributable to lack of rain.

Dixie Film Will Set Up New Branch in Dallas

DALLAS—Within the next few days a branch of Dixie Film exchange will be opened here, according to Ted Toddy, vice-president, who was in town from Atlanta working out advance details. Toddy said he would announce the location in a few days.

Charges Price Curb Forced Him Out

Houston—Charging that he was forced out of business by the restriction of subsequent-run prices to 25 cents on pictures playing first run at 40 cents or higher, O. B. Bridges, former operator of the Zoe and Midway here, has filed suit against the Interstate Circuit and major distributors for $100,000.

The suit was filed by the law firm of Cole, Patterson & Cole.

Trial Against Morrilton Postponed; No Date Set

MORRILTON, ARK.—Trial of the suit brought by the Malco circuit, owners of the Rialto, against this city which was set for May 10, has been postponed.

The theatre firm is petitioning chancery court to enjoin the city of Morrilton from enforcing provisions of two ordinances, one seeking to regulate the number of theatres one person, firm or corporation may operate in the city, the other, imposing a chair tax, besides the regular fee, on theatres seating more than 300.

No new date for trial has been set.

Roy C. Lee Inaugurates Aerial Balloon Service

DALLAS—Roy C. Lee, who pioneered the idea of "Hollywood" premieres with powerful searchlights in this section, is inaugurating a new advertising service featuring aerial balloons.

Filled with helium gas, they carry the advertiser's message over a wide area. Lee has designed a special projector of high intensity for the projection of changeable messages on the sides of the balloons at night.

Lee, returning this week from Pittsburgh where he handled the searchlights for the world premiere there of 20th-Fox's "Lillian Russell," said he would next go to Hollywood to ballyhoo the opening of a new Dr. Pepper company plant there.

Lee's equipment is available on an outright purchase basis, or rental, or rental with servicing.

Begins Work at Once on New Plaza in Houston

HOUSTON—Lou C. Baxley, veteran Dallas film salesman, announces construction will start immediately on his Plaza, 3820 Broadway, in the populous Park Place area of East Houston. He plans to open the stadium-type, 785-seater, on Labor Day. Contract has been let to Charles Wygant, father of Robert Wygant, of the Heights Theatre.

Baxley has been working on the project since winter. Last week, following a trip to another Texas city, he teamed up with a well-known theatre man and formed the Houston-Plaza Theatre Co., Inc.

Park Place and surrounding area has 15,000 population, the nearest theatre being the Bluebonnet, an Interstate house, some 30 blocks away.

The former Dallas salesman now is working an encyclopedia deal with theatres, and says he will continue this project indefinitely.

In connection with Baxley's enterprise, it is noted Houston seemingly is the "settling down" spot for numerous Dallas film salesmen. Jack Groves, long a portfolio carrier, has the Queen Theatre; Jim McKinney, veteran Columbian, and B. C. Gibson of UA, are partnered in the Navaway. O. B. Bridges, former salesman, until recently operated two theatres in Houston.

Operators Throw a Party; Zrenner Made a Lifer

DALLAS—The Motion Picture Operators' Local 249 gave a big party the other night in the union hall just above the Palace Theatre on Elm Street. Members from Houston, San Antonio and Fort Worth locals were guests.

Among ceremonies was the presentation to E. C. Zrenner, Interstate's chief engineer and technician, of a gold life card in the Dallas union. Proud of the token, Zrenner was showing the coveted emblem to Filmrow friends during the week. A life card is also held by Zrenner in the Variety Club, Tent No. 17.

A boy handed him 50 cents to apply on a ticket, expressing fear he might not have it later and optimism that he could raise the balance before show time. Ernest Rockett, Pastime, Itasca, said the first reserved seat went to a woman who requested that a seat be "preserved" for her. According to Rockett, she said she was afraid she would spend the money if she did not buy her ticket on the dot.

By AL HENDERSON

BILL KELLER of the Liberty and Queen theatres at Eunice, La., and Lou Langlois, the old sportsman of New Roads, La., got together recently for a fishing trip. Hope they got the big ones.

E. V. Richards III, son of the Saenger mogul, is managing the Rex and Delta theatres at Opelousas, La., for Southern Amusements. He formerly was with Malco, managing the Memphian at Memphis. Was glad to hear that his small son who has been ill for many months is improving. Millard Lee, former manager at Opelousas is stationed at Lake Charles working with the publicity department. Really enjoyed the visit with these fellows.

Southern Amusement Co. of Lake Charles, La., has purchased a lot and plans to begin construction at once on a new house to seat 1,000 at an approximate cost of $100,000.

L. W. Marsh, for many years with the maintainence department for Joy Houck, has been transferred from the Rio at New Orleans to the Joy at Welsh, La.

Dropped in on Harold Blanchard of the Joy at Napoleonville, La., and found him busy installing a new cooling unit to take care of those hot summer days in south Louisiana.

Bill Jenkins of the Realart at DeRidder, La., has been improving his house by installing 40 new seats and erecting a new Neon sign. Tells us he had Tex Ritter for a one-night personal appearance and did a capacity business. Had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Jenkins.

Our old friend Joe Gordon, for many years with Saenger, is operating the Palace Park for colored at Shreveport. Joe has a ball diamond, wrestling arena and a dance hall to draw the patrons. Our best wishes to this old timer.

Frank Reese, formerly with Saenger at Shreveport and more recently with Southern Amusement at DeRidder, La., has resigned and gone to Jennings, Okla.

Had a pleasant visit with Jimmy King, an old timer who is managing the Uptown at DeRidder, and also supervises several other houses in that area for Southern Amusement. He reports business improving.

Called around to say hello to Ed Goldberg, who recently reopened the Gibsland at Gibsland, La., which seats 200. We found him improving the front and foyer of the house. Goldberg formerly was in the Film Express business in New Orleans. Best luck, Ed.

We understand that Milton Starr has opened his new theatre at Pensacola, Fla., and believe it is named the PICTO.

Capacity Crowd as Main In Granite Falls Bows

GRANITE FALLS, N. C.—The new Main was opened here May 10 to a capacity crowd. The $26,000 theatre is owned and operated by Colonial Theatres, Inc., of Valdese.

Mayor E. E. Moore made an inaugural talk which was followed by an address by H. R. Berry, president of the TOA of North and South Carolina. J. V. Benfield, secretary and treasurer of the Colonial Theatres, introduced the speakers.

O. K. Hogan is resident manager of the new house.

Wilkes Gets East Texas In Columbia Assignment

DALLAS—Leslie Wilkes, a Texas film man a long time, is now selling under the Columbia banner. He made his first trip this week into the east Texas territory. He formerly sold in west Texas for Warner Bros., and in previous years was branch manager for Paramount and First National.

Third in Taylor

SAN ANTONIO—Taylor Amusement Co. of Taylor, Tex., has started construction work on their third theatre in that city. Bid for the new $20,000 house went to the Ed Johnson Construction Co. of Waco.

Remodel in Ft. Smith

FORT SMITH, ARK.—The Mystic Theatre is to undergo extensive remodeling at an estimated cost of about $10,000. Plans call for the taking out of the second floor of the building to provide for a balcony.

Renovations at McGehee

MCGEHEE, ARK.—The local motion picture theatre is undergoing a remodeling process that will cost upwards of $3,000. The balcony will be changed and new washroom facilities will be installed. Also a new roof.

FitzPatrick Script Ready

HOLLYWOOD—Hugo Butler has completed the script of "The Life of Captain Cook," Technicolor feature which James FitzPatrick will produce for Metro.

SETOA Convention Postponed

Jacksonville—The annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Ass'n, set for June 23, 24 and 25 at Jacksonville, will be postponed until July, it is announced by M. O. Moore, president. He explained the hearings planned for the Neely bill, the New York all-industry suit and film conventions made it advisable to change the convention dates.

Suggested dates for the convention in July sent to the board of directors were July 14, 15 and 16 or July 21, 22 and 23. As soon as the choice of the directors is received the July convention plans will be announced.

Hitting Houston's Highspots

By A. JULES BENEDIC

HOUSTON—We hightail into Houston, and its just like 2-2-2 on Gallahadion to find some interesting mail, (with inclosures) from old friends over the Lone Star State. For instance, from Senor Roberto Salas-Porros, of the Mexican Amusement Co. at El Paso. Maggie E. Scott's actions speak louder than words—howdy, Mrs. Scott, how's everything at the Rio in Odessa? Not to forget a cheery greeting from Ed Edmonson of the Texas at New Gulf; ditto from Postmaster J. R. Kersey in far-off Ozona, owner-manager of the Ozona Theatre.

To say nothing of some intriguing matter from Charles Keeler of Waco, who presidents Local 597 of the IATSE, and of equal importance from C. K. Peters jr., secretary-treasurer of IA No. 548 at Greenville-Paris . . . As Billboard would say: Let's have some pipes from you other pitchmen! . . . A random thought: Jimmie Jukes of the Joy in Dallas—say it over twice—has the greatest show name in the business! . . . Say, what kind of a headline on this Houston business, when we roam all over Texas and haven't yet mentioned a Houston personality?

Bayoutown Banalities

Houston, one-time homely hamlet on Buffalo Bayou, now has more prosperity per square inch than any town in Texas, or, we believe, these United States . . . Some Houston exhibitors make fine taxi drivers. We refer to the quintette whom we blarneyed into driving us from their own theatres to others, (as the ancient Auburn still languishes in an Austin repair shop) . . . Sam Kirchheimer of the Northside chariots us to see Jack Groves of the Queen . . . Jack gets talked into a quick trip overtown to R. Z. Glass' swanky Stude, where the spell is broken for the time being . . . Later, L. E. Newton of Bluebonnet is let in for an eight-cylinder whizz to the Eastwood, while Lou Baxley, who'll open the Plaza, in early fall, goes hook-line-sinker for a long gasoline jaunt, winding up with the McKinneys at the Navaway.

Clarence Nelson, Alabama Theatre projectionist, has an uncanny invention. Instead of red lights or bells at the end of a reel, his gadget talks to the projectionist, telling him what to do! . . . Local No. 279 of IA is sending its entire executive board to the Louisville confab . . . 279's boys proved hospitable to your reviewer, not to forget the colored auxiliary, 279-A . . . Eddie Miller, secretary and international representative, one of the busiest guys in town.

Terrific Traffic Tolls

Fred Larned of Para, over the telephone, asks us out to the house . . . Al Lever of Interstate proves a pleasant call . . . Hugo Plath of the University turns up as an old-time acquaintance out in Temple, Tex., 'fore the war . . . Central Texas repair shops will sustain a fearful loss of revenue pretty soon now, when we trade off the Auburn . . . Midnight shows popular . . . Houston Electric Co. will declare a big dividend, following our one week's use of the trams . . . Taxi drivers (not the exhibitors, who don't get paid), also reaping big harvest.

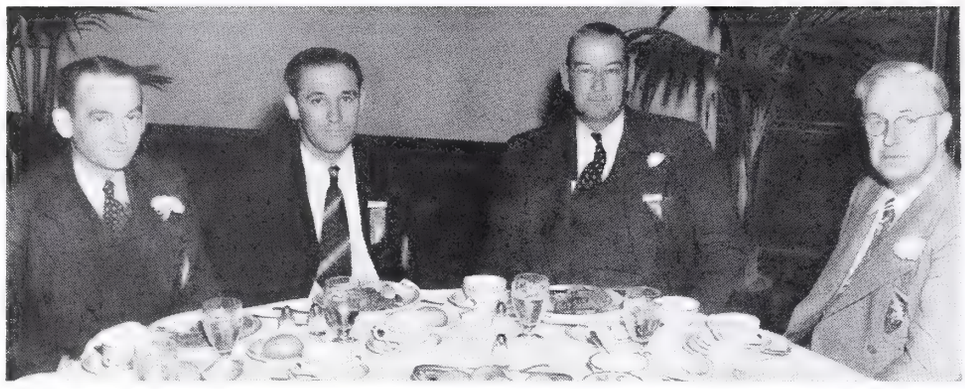
Speaking of Central Texas—L. L. Dunbar was sporting a new Buick when he was visiting his Mexia theatres after a run down to New Orleans . . . Bond's Cafe, in Beeville, after many years, has taken down its sign—High-Class, High-Priced Eats. The food still is high-class, Mr. Bond rightly avers, but the depression knocked out the later half of the unique advertisement . . . We forgot to mention that Milentz is erecting a swanky theatre for colored folks out East Commerce way in San Antonio . . . Our gambling luck holds out. In a 50-cent pool on the Derby we picked Pictor, running an ignominous eighth . . . Horwitz managers now 100 per cent BOXOFFICE.

Note to V. W. Crisp: Please lay off editorial reference to Shoemaker's Barbecue Emporium in Dallas (adv't.) What with South Texas exhibitors already taking the sheet as numerous as Chamberlain criticisms, there's no telling when we'll need exclusive sandwich credit with this account.

Goodbye now; we gallop to Galveston.

Norfleet Goes to Town In Selling "Command"

DALLAS—The campaign on "Dark Command," current this week at the Majestic, drew much comment from theatre men. Hal Norfleet, back with Republic for the assignment, was in charge.



Roy Rogers and George Hayes were here in person and did five-a-day Saturday on the Majestic stage. They autographed in the lobby and appeared at a kids' show in the Sanger department store. Norfleet planted three column photos of Rogers and Hayes getting a lift on the highway from Los Angeles to Dallas. Another showed Rogers cutting Gabby's hair for the trip. A dozen other newspaper photos were accomplished.

The Sunday News used photos of Claire Trevor and a story on the picture. Costumes actually used in production were secured by Norfleet and displayed in downtown windows.

OKLA. CITY

EMPLOYES of the Victoria, Standard suburban house here, have been given two weeks notice and the house may be closed after that time presumably for remodeling . . . Work of remodeling the Folly Theatre, also a Standard house which has long been closed, is in progress and reports are that it will operate on a double-bill grind policy at 15 cents, although other reports has it that it will be a newsreel and short subject house exclusively . . . George Smith, manager of the Orpheum, Tulsa, operated by Ralph Talbot Theatres, has resigned, leaving Ralph Drury temporarily in charge of all four Talbot houses there, the Orpheum, Ritz, Rialto and Majestic.

The Villa, Oklahoma City, has cut admission from 20 to 15 cents for the summer . . . H. L. (Robby) Robinson, auditor from the New York office of Warner Bros. Theatres, was in town the past week at the Standard main office . . . Mrs. Wilma Morris, who is well known in local film circles, having been cashier of the Criterion here many years, is the mother of a baby girl . . . Joe Wallace, chief of service at the State, is in Wesley Hospital recovering from an appendectomy last week.

Ben Hill, Paramount exploiteer, is back in town working on "Typhoon" and "The Light That Failed" . . . Griffith Stone jr. is field manager here for the newly created "Competitive Awardnite" in which plan customers give a title for the picture they have just seen and best names are awarded cash prizes up to $50 at the theatre during the next week.

Ushers and doormen at the State, Oklahoma City, are wearing the plus ultra in uniforms this summer. They are equipped with extreme drape, peg trousers, pleats, zippers and padded shoulders. The Coronado, Bethany, operated by Cecil Davis of Yukon, Okla., is now using the aforementioned "Competitive Awardnite."

The State here will finish decorating its Auditorium this fall . . . The Pix on Reno Ave. was advertised in local newspapers as ready to open last week, but the house. now controlled by Griffith Southwestern Theatres, Inc., is still dark.

Only Walls Remain After Fire in Hendersonville

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.—The Carolina, leading local theatre, was destroyed, May 10, by a fire that left only the four walls remaining of what was one of west North Carolina's finest picture houses.

The building was valued at $50,000. A total of $5,000 worth of redecorating work had just been completed on the theatre. The building was owned by Captain Ellison Smyth and the theatre was operated by the North Carolina Theatres, Inc.

H. E. Buchanan, local manager of the house, and H. F. Kincey, general manager of the company, have conferred with the owner of the building relative to the immediate rebuilding of the structure.

NEW YORK—Henry Lazarus of New Orleans has withdrawn from the national and the Louisiana units of Allied, according to a wire, bearing Lazarus' name, received at the New York office of this publication.

Chodorov on Kingsley Play

HOLLYWOOD—Edward Chodorov is scripting "The World We Make," from the play by Sidney Kingsley. Norma Shearer will star in the Metro production.

NEW ORLEANS

OUTSIDE of the "regulars" who make weekly trips, there were very few new faces on the Row this week. However, Manager Marrelo of the Rendevouis, Grand Isle, La., was in the city . . . Claude Darce came in from the Opera House, Morgan City . . . All the major newsreel men in the city, seven of them, were in Baton Rouge this week taking shots of the inauguration of Gov. Sam H. Jones.

Years ago the downtown houses vied in furnishing entertainment for the kiddies Saturday mornings. Now they have forgotten it, and plug midnight shows. There is a new crop of theatregoers coming up. Why not educate them?

Coming out of M-G-M Monday was Mrs. Henry Lazarus, who reports that Henry, under the weather for some time, is getting OK now.

W. H. Cobb, who not so long ago operated the Fox in Houma, La., and a show at St. Martinsville, has leased the Isis, recently closed, and will open about May 20. Cobb will not operate the house personally, but will place a house manager in charge.

Word was received here that R. L. Riley of Logansport, La., has resumed control of the New Tex in Newton, Texas . . . The new house of William Castay, which he is erecting at Bridgedale, La., will be ready in about 60 days . . . R. H. Preston has opened a colored airdrome, named the Jacksonian, in Jackson, Miss., and reports good business.

An ice carnival is scheduled for the Municipal Auditorium June 16-29 with a two dollar top.

Newsreel men in the city for the past week "shot" Adam Billiot as he won for the fifth time the annual pirogue (hollow-log boat) race on Bayou Baratia . . . Over 15,000 men, women and children assisted in the official opening of City Park May 12. Newsreel men caught the event.

Ontario's Theatres Mount During Year

TORONTO—The number of theatres operating in the Province of Ontario is 391, according to a current statistical compilation, this being an increase of 19 over the figure of one year ago when the total was 372, the number in 1938 being 354 and in 1937, 329, or an increase of 20 per cent in four years. The great majority of new theatres are located outside of the city limits of Toronto.

During the four years, the number of licensed halls has shown a substantial decline from 3,344 in the spring of 1937 to 2,554 for the present time. These are premises licensed for entertainment purposes including the showing of 16mm films and for which an annual license fee of only $10 is imposed by the Provincial Government. The greatest decrease in the number of halls was in 1938 when the total dropped to 2,921 from 3,344 one year before. During the last 12 months there has been a decline of 182 in the total of hall licenses.

Traveling shows have also shown a considerable decline from 326 in 1937 to 133 which is the present total. This indicates that a large number of itinerants have ceased to operate.

More Projectionists

In keeping with theatre expansion, there has been an increase in the number of projectionists but there has been a proportionate decrease in the listed apprentices. Qualified operators now total 733, or an average of less than two per theatre but there are a number of rural houses which employ only one projectionist. The total of "A" and "B" operators in 1937 was 628 when there were 329 licensed theatres. The apprentices have dropped from 354 four years ago to a total of 290. These figures indicate more regular employment of qualified men throughout the Province.

During the past year, 32 theatres underwent substantial alterations in keeping with the requirements of the Ontario government regulations which included the installing of concrete floors. Fifteen were altered during the previous 12 months. The number of new theatres erected during the past year was 21 but the total of licensed theatres increased by 19, the difference being due to the closing of two houses permanently. With the outbreak of war, all theatres in Ontario were required to install independent emergency lighting systems to forestall possible sabotage.

Fox Wins Action

WINDSOR, ONT.—Casper J. Casper and Essex Theatres, Ltd., of Leamington, must pay Angus C. Fox $938.32 for materials and labor expended by Fox in the construction by the former of a new theatre in Leamington, Judge Mahon ruled following a two-day trial here in the supreme court of Ontario.

Current Film Supply Nails Fears a Shortage Nears

By MILTON GALBRAITH

TORONTO—The trend of film supply has been brought out in a report dealing with the release of product to Ontario theatres covering the past three years and this is held to demonstrate no probability of a growing shortage of features for the present at least. In fact, the reverse is evident. During the 12 months ending March 31, last, 654 features were made available for presentation in this province, as compared with 494 during the previous year and 620 for the year ending March, 1938. The total for the year just closed shows that any one theatre could offer a different double bill for each week day during the whole year and there would be still 28 more features which could not be played for lack of dates—unless a triple bill were tossed in occasionally for extra measure.

The statistics reveal, on the other hand, that the number of comedies has dropped appreciably during the three years, probably because of the increased use of double-feature programs. During the past year the available comedies totaled 199 as compared with 232 for the previous year and 363 for the 1937-38 period.

Because of the tense international situation, with accompanying war atmosphere, there has been a marked increase in the number of newsreels released. For the past 12 months the total was 284, as compared with 213 and 214 for the preceding years.

The number of British films for the past fiscal period is given as 54 and this compares with 80 for the preceding 12 months and 77 for the 1937-38 year.

The number of foreign films of 35mm width available in Ontario has taken a sudden and perhaps permanent drop. For the year ending Mar. 31, 1938, the imports of such productions totaled 39 but the desire for propaganda by European countries boosted the total to 97 for the next year and the trend slumped to 28 for the past 12 months because of official discouragement. These figures are for pictures other than those from France which provided 276 films last year and 333 during the previous 12 months.

It is interesting to note that 23 Russian features circulated in Ontario in 1938-39 but the Soviet showing dropped to two films in the past 12 months, both of which were approved before the start of war with Germany. Polish films dropped from 13 two years ago to two while pictures from Hungary tobogganed from 14 to zero. Four German pictures were circulated in Ontario in 1938 but there were none in 1939-40. Five Italian pictures are in the 1940 total as compared with six in the preceding 12 months.

Trenton, Ont., Capitol Offered for Sale

TORONTO—The Capitol at Trenton, Ont., has been offered for sale by the owners. Formerly a popular theatre, it has been closed since silent films fell by the wayside and the structure has been used intermittently for various purposes over a period of years. Trenton, which has taken on renewed activity because of the proximity of an air force station, has two theatres, the Trent operated by Famous Players, and the Century, recently opened by 20th Century Theatres as an independent house. The Capitol seats 515.

Lawn Bowling Game Threatens Grosses

Toronto—A new menace looms for the theatres of Ontario in the introduction of "hazard lawn bowling" as a successor to miniature golf which swept the continent some years ago. A Toronto company is promoting the vacant lot feature and is preparing to install a number of so-called courses. The sport consists of a combination of golf and lawn bowling with 18 greens, the approaches to which are provided with mechanical and natural hazards through which the participant must roll a fairly large ball. The promoters are selling the rights to the game.

Language Bar Ends Film Pact for the Quints

TORONTO—The official guardians of the Dionne Quintuplets have been advised that the exclusive film contract for the famous babies will not be renewed by 20th Century-Fox Films following the making of the next and final feature under the agreement in the near future.

The reason for the decision is unique. The Dionnes, of French-Canadian parentage, have been schooled only in the French language and it has been intimated that the film company does not want to use the five girls in talking roles unless they converse in the English tongue.

Fraser to Trenton

TRENTON, ONT.—New manager of the Century is Wilson Ernest "Ted" Fraser who comes here from the helm of the Holland at Bradford. He succeeds Thomas Naylor who has managed the house since its opening last November. Naylor has been promoted to a post in Toronto.

Change Ushers

TORONTO—Girl ushers have been replaced by male attendants in another unit affiliated with the Famous Players' chain, the Uptown of Winnipeg, seating 1,750. Very few circuit houses in the Dominion are continuing with female ushers.

TORONTO

COL. JOHN A. COOPER marched at the head of his troops again with the keen interest and loyal pride which has marked his life-long military career when his 198th Canadian Buffs paraded to the annual church service in Toronto. Col. Cooper commanded the battalion in France during the last Great War and now is serving with the Red Cross in addition to his work as president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada.

E. A. Whelpley, a film exchange branch manager for more than a score of years, has resigned as St. John representative of RKO Distributing Corp. of Canada and has been succeeded by Leslie Plottel of Toronto headoffice. Leslie is a member of the Plottel family which has representation with various film companies in different cities of the Dominion.

Bill Redpath of General Films, Ltd., has been very busy on a contract which resulted in the sale of 39 projection machines to the Dominion government for the use of the armed forces of the department of national defense.

William Brady, manager of the Madison, has intimated that the theatre is to be sold or leased to permit dispersion of the assets of the late John C. Brady, once famed as the fiery leader of the MPTO of Ontario which has been succeeded by the Independent Theatres Ass'n . . . Will McLaughlin is once more a father—for the third time. McLaughlin is the veteran film critic of the Ottawa Journal and is known far and wide in film trade circles.

There were many laughs at the Lions Club Frolic at the Prince of Wales Theatre, which was organized by Manager Bill Summerville jr., apart from the special film and vaudeville program. In the lucky draw for 265 prizes, a small boy won a lady's fur neckpiece, a man took dainty underthings and a lady earned a man's hat.

Robert Syrett has started a film comment column in the London Free Press, London, Ont., which is in addition to the usual advance notices and reviews . . . "French Without Tears" stayed for a third week at the Eglinton, managed by Bob Eves, and, not to be outdone, Manager Jay Lewis held "Break the News" for a third week at the Avenue, across the street from the Eglinton. The latter is a circuit unit while the Avenue is independent.

Toronto Loew's has plenty of waiting product following the eight-week run of "Gone With the Wind" and one apparent result has been the doubling up of features by Manager Jules Bernstein. "Strange Cargo," about which there had been some censor publicity, and "Slightly Honorable" played on one bill but the crowds forced a holdover for a second week. This program is being followed by "Young Tom Edison" plus "Nick Carter, Master Detective."

The Capitol in North Toronto was the scene of a rush on Saturday afternoon when juveniles were admitted on the presentation of Salada Tea package labels in connection with the promotion of the Salada Stamp Club. Manager Ron McClelland handled the traffic . . . Making the calls was Robert Stevens, owner of theatres in Sudbury, Creighton Mine and Sturgeon Falls, busy northern Ontario mining centers.

L. M. Devaney, general manager of Canadian RKO, has made quick recovery from an operation for appendicitis which prevented his attendance at the inaugural gathering of the Canadian Picture Pioneers. By the way, Ben Cronk, veteran of the Allen and Famous Players' chains and an authority on art displays, was the one who created the theatre front and stage in the dining room of the Royal York Hotel for the Pioneers "floor show."

Film Revives Civic Interest in "Edison"

Toronto—The playing of "Young Tom Edison" in Ontario theatres has revived interest in the life of the inventor to the extent that a campaign has been started for the restoration of the Edison family cemetery in the village of Vienna in this Province and to maintain it as a shrine in tribute to the years which Thomas A. Edison spent in Canada. His grandparents and other relatives are buried in the private plot and it is pointed out that Edison's mother was a school teacher at Vienna.

National Film Society Has Screened 22 Films

OTTAWA—The close of the season's activities of the National Film Society, Ottawa, has brought the report from E. W. Harrold, chairman of the program committee and also critic of the Ottawa Citizen, that 22 films, including features and shorts, had been screened at the six performances in the theatre of the national museum sponsored by the society. A number of these were from Europe and were foreign language productions in 35mm width.

The society has reorganized for the 1940-41 season but, because of the war situation, there will be considerable difficulty in securing further foreign films and the organization will have to depend upon the western hemisphere for supply.

WINNIPEG

USE of films to sponsor enrollment has been undertaken here for the first time by the University of Manitoba. A short subject entitled "And So to College," sponsored by the public relations committee of the University, has been shown at a number of public schools in the city. The showing illustrates to students the routine of registration, the buildings, and life at college at Manitoba's campus.

The mezzanine floor of the Metropolitan is carrying an exhibit of telegraphic equipment dating back to the days when Thomas A. Edison worked as a dispatcher for the railways. The display is being shown in connection with the feature, "Young Tom Edison."

Visiting high school boys and girls will appear on the stage of the Capitol next Thursday night when Harold Bishop presents the Detroit Lakes school band and high school choir, two separate units, at his house as a special attraction.

Members of the film fraternity here were saddened by the passing this week of Mr. A. R. McGinley, film editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, whose weekly column, "Looking Them Over," had become a well-established feature . . . The Famous Players western managers' convention, which had been scheduled for Jasper, Alberta, will take place instead at Vancouver on July 29-30-31.

Eddie Newman, Lyceum manager whose growing golf prowess is fast establishing him as the threat of the links, has not lost his touch at bringing the cash customers to the boxoffice. Showing a current bill which includes as its highlight, "The Earl of Chicago," Eddie played his opening night to SRO audiences.

The Capitol scores a scoop with first scenes of the invasion of Norway in this week's newsreel . . . Dewey Bloom, promotion representative of M-G-M, stopped over briefly here on his way back from the coast . . . Lloyd Fox, formerly doorman at the Capitol, has been promoted to the position of assistant manager at the Colonial at Port Arthur.

Syl Gunn made the front page of the Free Press with a cut of himself buying a tag in connection with St. Jon's Ambulance tag day held here last week . . . Saturday night crowds at the Metropolitan necessitated running shorts far past midnight, leaving Assistant Manager Harold Gray and Head Usher Bobby Smythe all in from their efforts to please the public.

Canadian Fair Exhibit Centers on Theatre

MONTREAL—"Canadian Cinema" is the sign in big block letters over the door of the theatre in Canada's exhibit at the New York World's Fair.

It is a small theatre, fully sound-proofed and air-conditioned, with comfortable seats for about 200 spectators. A year ago it was the art gallery of the Canadian pavilion.

In it the Dominion government plans to show the people of the United States what Canada offers to the tourist and sportsman.

Creation of the theatre, and a new and spectacular system of lighting so that the representations of Canadian scenes and products upon the walls of the pavilion stand out in full color, constitute the main changes in the Dominion's exhibit at the World's Fair which reopens Saturday for its second season.

Pictures to be shown in the little theatre will be supplied through the government's motion picture bureau at Ottawa. Present plans call for the showing of scenic and sporting pictures, travelogues and similar films. It is believed the pictures of the Royal visit to Canada last summer, or part of them, may be shown and also films portraying various aspects of Canada's war effort.

These latter films would be taken by the government motion picture bureau in cooperation with the bureau of public information such as "Atlantic Patrol" portraying the work of the Canadian navy in Atlantic convoy work, which is being shown currently in some Canadian cinemas. The bureau shortly will release another war effort film showing the Canadian troops at Aldershot and another is in production relating to women's part in the war.

VICTORIA

THE Dominion has been very busily engaged reseating and reflooring the theatre. British Luxury seats with plush backs, leather seats and rubber cushioned arm rests have been installed, and in order to add to the comfort of the patrons, wider seats were used. The balcony has been completely refloored with hardwood and new aisle lighting installed.

For the showing of "Northwest Passage" at the Capitol two authentic 12-foot Indian totem poles were placed in the lobby as advance advertising. The carvings on the poles were in flamboyant color which was very suitable for the picture which was in Technicolor. Lifesize pictures of Spencer Tracy were placed outside the theatre along with a banner across the front of the theatre.

For the showing of the "Blue Bird" at the Dominion a tieup was arranged with a local jeweler featuring a full window display on bluebird diamonds.

MONTREAL

EVIDENCE of government relaxation of the ban on admission of juveniles to motion picture theatres is becoming more marked each week. In current advertisements it is noted that children are being admitted to showings of "The Blue Bird" at the Imperial, Shirley Temple in "Pauvre Petite Fille," "Therese Martin" and "Dick Tracy's G-Men" at the Maisonneuve, and "Gulliver's Travels" at the Orleans.

B. E. Norrish, managing director of Associated Screen News, represented the theatrical industry at the closing banquet of the YMCA War Service campaign . . . Associated Screen News cameramen were invited to cover the initial demonstration of the new mechanized transports for the Canadian Active Service Force. After recording the maneuvers for the newsreels, the cameramen returned to Montreal, voluble in their admiration of these new vehicles.

Dominion Sound Equipment convention of sales representatives from Halifax and Toronto was visited by Les Abbott, sales manager of Motiograph, and George Smith assistant sales manager of Celotex Corp., whose product is represented exclusively in Canada by Dominion Sound. Lloyd Pearson, general sales manager, presided at the convention.

Hon. James H. R. Cromwell, United States minister to Canada, is the proud possessor of a photograph of his voice given him by Roy Tash, Associated Screen News photographer, following a newsreel interview. Tash enlarged a film frame of an interview with Cromwell.

Date of the Filmrow bowling league banquet is still unfixed, but that, it was explained, does not mean that it will be abandoned as a war measure . . . Around Filmrow were noted Eddie Beaumont, of the Francais, Quebec; Mort Prevost of the Mason-Prevost circuit; Bedford and Chambky, and Georges Champagne of the Roxy and Auditorium, Shawinigan Falls.

Burglars who entered the Victoria, Quebec, through the window in the manager's office, removed the safe, then dumped it on the outskirts of a nearby village, after extracting several hundred dollars.

Returned from a tour of California, Leo Dolan, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau, announced that Canada would be the mecca of Hollywood motion picture stars this summer. Amongst those who have arranged to spend their vacations in the Dominion are: Gary Cooper and his wife, Sandra Shaw, Clark Gable and his wife, Carole Lombard, Spencer Tracy, with his wife and daughter, and Frank Morgan . . . Mary Pickford donated a gold mesh bag, emblazoned with sapphires and diamonds, and valued at $1,500 to the Toronto Citizens' Committee to be raffled in order to purchase sports equipment for soldiers.

Hiding in the Imperial after the show a trio of bandits tied up the watchmen and were proceeding to rob the safe in the office of Howard Knevels, manager, when they were interrupted by a group of charwomen. Two escaped, and the third fell from a fire escape and was discovered by police and taken to a hospital with a fractured skull and back injuries.

Maurice Duhamel, manager of the Hollywood, found "Professor Mamlock" a popular attraction in his St. Lawrence Boulevard Theatre . . . Fern Hall, a 22-year-old former Toronto blonde, has been chosen to play the part of "Miss Spiritual America" in an anti-vice film sponsored by Rev. R. A. Jardine, now of Hollywood, who, as a Yorkshire vicar, attained fame by performing the marriage ceremony for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Nova Scotia, as well as Quebec, imposes restrictions on admission of children to theatres, but in the seaboard province the restriction applies only to children under ten who are not allowed to attend theatres unless accompanied by adults. Exhibitors are trying to get that section of the statute repealed in Nova Scotia.

W. J. Singleton, sales manager of Associated Screen News, has been elected a director of the Advertising Club of Montreal . . . Belmont Park, Montreal's only outdoor amusement center, which includes a motion picture theatre, was previewed at the weekend, following which it was closed to permit workmen to put the finishing touches for the gala official opening May 18.

Mannie Brown, manager, and Tom Dowbiggin, sales manager of Paramount's Filmrow office, leave May 20 for California to attend Paramount's annual convention . . . Relieved of his legislative duties, J. P. Caron, former member of the Quebec Legislative Assembly, is now concentrating on adding to the already considerable popularity of his motion picture theatre, the Royal, at Louisville, Que. Caron dropped in at the new offices of Regal Films in the Tramways building on a recent visit to the Canadian metropolis. Other visitors at that office included Mel Lodge, who owns three theatres, the Magnet at Danville; Clubhouse, Asbestos, and Richmond, Richmond, Que., and E. Beaumont of Quebec and Levis.

"Flotsam" to Cromwell

HOLLYWOOD—John Cromwell will direct "Flotsam," the Erich Maria Remarque novel, for Loew-Lewin Productions. Fredric March will be starred and UA will release.

Sask. Permits "Beau Geste"

Toronto—Although "Beau Geste" continues to be withheld in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec at the request of the French government, the censor board of Saskatchewan in western Canada has lifted the ban on the feature for theatrical presentation. Its first run was at the Capitol in Regina, a Famous Players' house.

Bishop Launches Into Dynamic Exploitation

WINNIPEG—Harold Bishop covered the town backwards and forwards in his campaign on "Pinocchio." A display of Pinocchio merchandise was on exhibit in the Portage Avenue lobby during Easter week. Recordings from the show were played at intervals. Study guides were mailed to all school principals, private schools and libraries. Tie-ins with various manufacturing firms secured numerous displays in stores throughout the city.

Radio stations pluggd hit numbers and music stores featured music from the film. Window displays were carried in the leading department stores.

Charles Clay, book reviewer of the Free Press, was invited to see the show and came through with a fine plug in the book review page.

Perhaps best touch of all was a street ballyhoo which took the form of a little man dressed in "Pinocchio" costume and covered with a mask reproducing the features of the hero of the film. Schools were covered at noon hour and four o'clock by this intriguing walking advertisement.

Credit for all the hard work and thought that went into this campaign is divided between Harold Bishop and his two assistants, Nestor Novak and Lloyd Fox.

"Atlantic Patrol," government film board short dealing with the work of the Canadian Navy, was screened by Bishop for the local unit of the RCNVR and arrangements were made for the entire unit to parade to the theatre on opening matinee.

Editorial writers from the Tribune and Free Press were invited to review the film and the Free Press came through with an article in its editorial columns.

Bishop contacted Associated Screen News in Montreal to include shots taken here of the Cameron Highlanders church parade in his Paramount newsreel and then invited the O/C and staff in to see it which resulted in word being passed along to the entire battalion.

"Little Men" to McLeod

HOLLYWOOD—Norman McLeod will direct "Little Men," next Gene Towne-Graham Baker production for RKO. Film, which rolls the middle of June, will be based on the novel by Louisa May Alcott.

The heat which the title indicates is something of an understatement. This one is hotter than the proverbial fire-cracker; so scorching, in fact, that it should burn out the bearings in the theatre's cash register. And if it doesn't, it's because the customers aren't in a mood to buy a prize package of action-laden, laugh-inciting entertainment. Two factors are the largest contributors to the feature's wide appeal: A screenplay which literally bristles with bright dialogue and wisecracks, and a cast which knows exactly what to do with lines and situations custom-built to its individual and collective styles. The Cagney-Sheridan-O'Brien combination is perfect for this brand of hard-boiled comedy-drama and there are a half dozen or more minor portrayals comparably impressive. Directed by William Keighley.

This has its moments of hilarity, chiefly when Hugh Herbert is on the screen and particularly when the woo-woo artist is in the midst of portraying six separate and distinct characters—all of them screwballs. Otherwise it is strictly lightweight musical stuff showing evidence of having been dashed out in a hurry, and which will pass muster as supporting fare. Two or three musical numbers enliven the proceedings. The story—or what there is of it—concerns Dennis O'Keefe, a taxi driver, and Constance Moore, a singer, who reside in a boarding house which, through financial difficulties, is about to be seized by Herbert, a real estate tycoon with a penchant for swing music. The place is turned into a night club and Herbert, promised that he can play the trap drums, tears up the lien. Lew Landers directed.

Remarkably well performed and expertly directed, "The Crooked Road" is an entertaining film that will give its spectators nary a dull moment. The elements of drama are compactly knit into the story fabric. Action spices the pattern. There is no dearth of movement as the story gets going. Edmund Lowe becomes involved in the killing of a would-be extortioner to cover up his 20-year-old criminal record so he can respectably marry Irene Hervey. Police investigation, following carefully laid clues left by Lowe, nails a seemingly innocent man. Henry Wilcoxon, lawyer friend to Lowe and Miss Hervey, takes the convicted man's case. His investigation leads the trail to Lowe who gives up and is sentenced to death. Other events shed new light on the killing and Lowe is cleared of the blame. He goes to England to serve time. Wilcoxon marries the girl. Director: Phil Rosen.

Paradoxical according to established Hollywood standards, here is a picture that attains the nth degree of artistry and still succeeds in fitting the average entertainment taste with the comfort of an old shoe. Producer Sol Lesser's film version of Thornton Wilder's stage hit is an innovative treat. It pursues the same unusual treatment that made the original presentation outstanding and amplifies thereon by taking full advantage of the widened scope the screen affords in narration, motivation and technical details. It is hard to conceive the selection of a cast more ideally suited to the conscientious interpretation of the story of provincial Americana in its most rudimentary and delightful concepts—a story covering one decade in the life of ordinary people at the turn of the century. Sam Wood's direction is masterful in its understanding and restraint.

Future exposers of film on the saga of the west might well take "West of Carson City" as a model. As far as story, action and the like are concerned, it is a perfect blend. Everything pertaining to the western scene is thrown in from a stagecoach to a stud poker game, the latter treated to a couple of laughs. Gold is struck in Ridgeville. With the rush of claim stakers comes vice and corruption. A villain named Gorman has the town's law and order system jumping through his hoop until Johnny Mack Brown, a local rancher; Robert Homans, a judge and Peggy Moran, his daughter, come to clean up the place. This they do, but it takes a lot of fists and bullets. This one is recommended unreservedly as first-rate western.

Gene Autry's latest is mainly a musical, although his fans will not complain because the film is graced with an enjoyable score. Dramatic continuity between song sequences is inadequate and on the threadbare side. But Autry delivers strongly with some catchy numbers, including the popular "Gaucho Serenade" and "The Singing Hills." He has good support from a newcomer, Mary Lee, a refreshing youngster with a winning personality and a pleasant voice. Miss Lee shapes up as a potential Judy Garland for the Republic studio. Half the footage is unreeled before Autry saddles a horse, and only in the final minutes is there any shooting and riding. Autry and Smiley Burnette prove the benefactors of a man framed for embezzling, and a society girl, June Storey, who changed her mind at the altar. Frank McDonald directed.

Conceived and executed in somber tones, this tale of a tragic and unfortunate love will find lacy handkerchiefs fluttering in all its showings—and fluttering in sufficient quantities to render it a profitable investment for any exhibitor. It is definitely a woman's picture, bolstered by the marquee magnetism of Vivien Leigh in her first new film since "GWTW," and Robert Taylor, herein seen in a more mature and ingratiating role than any he has ever had before. No production investiture was overlooked, either in the supporting cast or the settings, which place the story in London during the first World War. Miss Leigh fulfills her assignment with a sincerity and conviction that place her in the front rank of talented actresses, proving beyond doubt her brilliant work in "GWTW" was no flash in the pan. Mostly on the somber side is this drama which draws most of its inspiration from events which enter into the realm of the spiritual. The film's appeal appears to be neutralized by the ghostly aspects of the story. Even though John Howard Lawson is listed as one of the screen authors, the story has little emotional lift considering its theme. Briefly, Warner Baxter is called back from his second honeymoon on a ruse by a former flame, Lynn Bari, the wife of his best friend. She kills him and her husband, Henry Wilcoxon, takes the blame. Baxter, who is now the wraith of himself, can find no release from the earth. Only when his psychic message gets through to his wife, Andrea Leeds, whereby his love for her is vindicated, Baxter's soul finds peace. It will be quite obvious to audiences that view this western that it needs a carbon job. The carbon is not in the projection machines, either. Tim McCoy is the featured player, but his talents are going to waste on offerings like these. The carbon removal job is needed in the story department. However, westerns satisfy a thirst and this one is a good long drink. McCoy is a marshal who is ordered to investigate the wave of lawlessness in Rawhide. Before he gets there, an outlaw is inadvertently killed. McCoy takes his name, gets in with the gang, passes himself off as a bandit and proceeds to get the lowdown on the higherups. The obvious eventually happens, righteousness is triumphant and the hoodlums and their leaders properly liquidated.

(March of Time, Vol. VI, No. 10)

The Philippines, which get independence from the United States in 1946, are worried now whether they should sever the strings. Japan, as the March of Time editors show, is what is disturbing the native peace of mind. The potential menace of the Japanese in the Far East is not minimized and the infiltration of the Nipponese into the life of the Philippines is graphically depicted. With the possible chance that the Japanese might grab off the Dutch East Indies, and the fact that the Philippines lie between the two, the subject is one of current interest.

At least half of the reel is devoted to Autry and has every indication of being just what audiences want.

Norway, latest battleground of the Allies and Germans, is the subject of this reel. Commentary is supplied by Johannes Steel, noted foreign writer. Although Steel is inclined to get excited about his continuity, there is little in the reel to justify such enthusiasm. The subject is a compilation of clips about the physical aspects of Norway and its people. Exhibitors probably can capitalize on the curiosity of what Norway is like.

Gun Dog's Life

Vitaphone (Color Classic) 10 Mins.

Mama setter and her brood are photographed in color. Narrator John Deering takes up his script and the audience is treated to a number of interesting views of setters and pointers and retrievers in action. The narrative is good, the photography effective. All dog lovers will go for it.

SHORT OF THE WEEK

Television Preview

Paramount (Paragraphic) 10 Mins.

In view of the current interest and development in television, this short has excellent potentialities. For once Ted Husing is serious as he describes the men behind the medium, technical aspects, finished receivers and how they will work. On the comic side Bob Burns tells how in the new medium, he can be seen to full advantage playing his bazooka. Akim Tamiroff gives out with a horror version of a bedtime story and Bob Hope takes up the advertising end. He demonstrates how the sponsor can plug his product without interrupting the program. To achieve this, Hope sings "Thanks for the Memory," while a sandwich man's sign dangles from his neck. It's a timely item on a timely subject.

You Ought to Be in Pictures

Vitaphone (Looney Tune) 7 Mins.

During lunch at the Schlesinger cartoon factory, Porky Pig, urged by Daffy Duck, sees the boss and tells him he wants to go into the big time, like playing with Bette Davis. Schlesinger tells him to go ahead. Porky then proceeds to get into all sorts of scrapes and embarrassing situations that eventually bring him back to Leon's Place. Leon takes him back into the Looney Tune fold. That's all there is. But it is cleverly presented half cartoon, half actual photography. The superimposition is a clever revival note. Worthwhile.

Cavalcade of Academy Awards

Vitaphone 31 Mins.

The history of the Academy Awards, together with scenes from various award winners, from 1928 to 1939, is documented herein. Frank Capra supervised and Carey Wilson does the narration. Here is the sort of thing that audiences have long read about but never sit in on—an actual Academy Award dinner—in this case the last one. Bob Hope gags. Sinclair Lewis

MARK HELLINGER says...

DARK COMMAND

"Fine performances by Claire Trevor and John Wayne and a superb job of direction by Raoul Walsh combine to make 'Dark Command' an action melodrama that should coin dough at the nation's box offices. Moves at a whirlwind pace and winds up as a distinctly thrilling piece of film fare. It is definitely recommended."

Selling Seats

PRACTICAL IDEAS BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Increase Efforts to Sell Wider Use of Shorts

CHICAGO—An abundance of promotional material is currently augmenting the efforts of local exchange managers to impress the seat-selling value of short subjects to the trade.

Particular shorts whose value current events have greatly enhanced are the travelogues, apropos of which, Jack Flynn, Metro district manager, and Bill Bishop, Chicago district exploiteer, have issued a bulletin calling exhibitor attention to their timeliness. Branch Manager Banford also has utilized a bulletin to call attention to timely patriotic shorts.

Also in the foreground of those seeking to win greater recognition for the short subject is Warner Bros. whose patriotic shorts in Technicolor, Exploiteer Fred Bartow is busy publicizing. Children's morning matinees in downstate Great States theatres are providing an occasion for the short subjects to "do their stuff."

Clothesline With Diapers Proves Attention-Getter

BRANTLEY, ALA.—Felix Tisdale of the Ritz got attention for "Brother Rat and a Baby" by stringing an old-fashioned clothesline across the front of the theatre, decorated by a dozen diapers. At the center of the line, Felix affixed a poster reading: "We are ready for 'Brother Rat and a Baby' Sunday and Monday." He also had a play pen in the lobby for baby parking.

An "Okie" Line—

How Manager A. J. Mealey of the State and Lodi at Lodi, Calif., got over the theme of "Grapes of Wrath" before police wrath reminded him he should not string clotheslines across the main street. An "Okie" car was fitted out with occupants applying for relief and generally attracting attention.

Spring Into May—

When Frank La Falce, in charge of publicity and advertising for the Warner Earle in Washington, decided to prolong the "Spring Hit Parade of Hit Pictures" into the month of May he merely changed the phrase into "May Parade of Hit Pictures" on the existing display as pictured above.

One Answer to Torn Silk Stockings

NEWARK, N. J.—Know what to do when a lady complains that a rough chair in your theatre has caused a run in her stockings? Here's how Richard C. Carton of the Mayfair in Newark worded a letter to a complaining patron:

"Dear Madam:

"Thank you for your letter calling attention to a run in your stockings which you say was caused by a chair at the Mayfair.

"We regret that you did not call our attention to the incident at the time so that we might have established with some accuracy whether we were at fault and to what extent. An attendant must establish the cause of the run and determine at the time whether there has beer any unusual roughness which might show the run to have been caused by our negligence. You will agree that this is a necessary procedure in view of the fragility of silk stockings.

"If, after considering, you feel that your evening at the Mayfair has been a disappointment, it is our desire to have you as our guest. Enclosed find admittance for two given in the spirit of good fellowship."

Any showman will admit that Carton was in a delicate position. He gets to the heart of his problem with "An austere or severe attitude expressed to the individual may cause loss of prestige in the neighborhood, so a soft but firm answer is called for. I hope this will help out some other showman who might encounter a similar situation."

Opening Shift Played Up in Advertising

MILWAUKEE—Charles H. Wuerz, manager of Fox's Palace, has emphasized in advertising the house's new policy of starting its programs on Wednesdays.

"No 'Top Hats' Allowed!" copy in connection with one Tuesday advertisement was captioned, followed by: "You don't have to dress up in fancy clothes to be one of our Wednesday evening 'FIRST NIGHTERS' . . . And you'll have the time of your life enjoying the BIG pictures FIRST."

Another Tuesday ad was captioned: "You, Too Can Be the Life of the Party!" and continued: "Everybody listens when somebody starts talking about the new motion pictures . . . And that somebody will be YOU if you attend our Wednesday evening 'first night' show and see all the BIG pictures FIRST!"

The Warner, which previously started its new show on Fridays, has moved up to Thursdays, while Fox's Wisconsin and Strand continue to retain Fridays as their starting day for new programs.

Pre-Sell "Pinocchio"

COLUMBIA, MO.—A week before it opened at the Uptown, "Pinocchio" was presold here through a number of merchant tieups including window and counter displays and cooperative advertisements in the local paper.

New Hoss Race—

Or how Jerry Zigmond of the Newman promoted a contest at the Missouri State Druggists convention in Kansas City for "Buck Benny Rides Again." He staged a derby, per the above, on those double-crossing little hobby horses that have been used largely as hilarious bruise coaxers in night clubs.

School Journalists Publicize 'Lincoln'

PROVIDENCE—Putting a press agent at work in every Providence high school was the achievement of Manager George French and Publicist Bill Morton for "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

Two members of schools' newspaper staffs were assigned by principals to attend a lecture on film exploitation given by Morton at the Albee Theatre. Students then were given press books and stills and instructed by teachers to work out a campaign and ad schedule; being given credit for their work in school ratings. The Albee got a two-column break on Sunday Journal school page, plenty of publicity among student bodies, and kids who took part in the stunt got passes for the show—the total expense to theatre.

Other publicity in the campaign for the film included an interview and fashion layout of pictures of Ruth Gordon, who was in town a week before the booking; spot announcement on radio following Lux Theatre broadcast April 22; tieup with Providence Public Library and its seven branches; display of stills at Brown University library where world's finest collection of Lincolnania is housed; all Lincolns in the Providence phone directory were guests of the theatre on opening day; 200 heralds and letters with new Lincoln penny pasted on same sent to picked mailing list and a telephone chain stunt in which 5,000 members of the R. I. Federation of Women's Clubs were contacted in connection with the film's showing.

Torchlight Parade Sells 'Dark Command' in Mass.

FALL RIVER, MASS.—A bang-up campaign for "Dark Command" was delivered by Manager Bill Canning of the Empire. His advance ballyhoo included a stagecoach with a four-horse hitch through town; a 52-piece fife and drums corps leading a torchlight parade of Sons of Union Veterans; lighted 24-sheets on every entrance to town; two very large banners hung in front of a new theatre under construction; and imprinted napkins distributed at numerous banquets.

"Physician of Laughter" Prescribes Theatre Date

PHILADELPHIA—Pedestrians got free prescriptions for what ailed them from a white-suited "doctor" who walked around with an imposing medical kit. He handed out prescription sheets, topped with his name, Dr. Hilarity, P.L., (Physician of Laughter), and reading:

"Rx: A spring tonic and laugh treatment with lovely Loretta Young and Ray Milland in 'The Doctor Takes a Wife' at the Stanley."

Mobile Milk Station—

Manager Jack W. Fretwell of the State at Harrisonburg, Va., is displaying (at the left) his early farm training. The medium is the portable display he used for a campaign on "The Farmer's Daughter." A 4-H Club benefit was arranged, with members selling tickets in advance. "Goin' to see the farmer's daughter" was the slogan used by the farmer and his bovine friend in jaunts along the streets. "That's the cow in the center," chuckles Jack.

Encourages Student Ads In "Seventeen" Contest

DETROIT—Teen-agers were stimulated to personal interest in "Seventeen" by a contest staged by United Detroit Theatres, before the picture played the Michigan.

All high school students were invited to submit advertising layouts and copy on the film, some of the best of it to be incorporated in the theatre advertising.

NUGGETS

WARNER has launched a national preselling campaign on "Torrid Zone" with tieups with the House of Westmore, Auto-Lite Sparkplugs, and the Goldman Co., manufacturers of play clothes. Specially-made display pieces will be used at all retail outlets.

The ads for "Rebecca," which were designed and created by the members of the staff of the United Artists, San Francisco, met with such response, according to Manager Charles Schlaifer, that he has had requests from theatres all over the country to use them.

For "The Grapes of Wrath," Manager E. R. Erickson of the Rhodes, Chicago, constructed a map of flour and salt covering the trek of the Joad family. Another was a large 40x60 card which had a small picture of the Joads. To the easel was attached a magnifying glass. Copy read: "Quit your kicking! You're Mighty Lucky. How Would You Like to Be in Their Boots Yes, Go Ahead and Use the Magnifying Glass."

Cash prizes were offered to readers of Atlanta Constitution who sent in the oldest copies of the original Nick Carter thrillers as part of the "Nick Carter, Master Detective" campaign put over by Manager W. T. Murray and Publicity Director Sidney Dell of the Rialto, Atlanta.

Columbia

Blondie Brings Up Baby
These Blondie pictures always please our small town patrons. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fine. Admission: 30-10. Small town patronage. Population: 600. Capacity: 300.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star, Hay Springs, Neb.

His Girl Friday
Another good picture from Columbia that failed to draw, and also failed to please. I thought it swell, and it was, but my opinion is not the one that counts. I believe it was too fast and too much fast talking that killed it. My patrons are stubborn about this one thing. This type is never liked here. Wed., Thurs. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

Too Many Husbands
The picture is a fine bit of relaxation and went very well with those who saw it in my town. Preferred over a Metro—good production. I think in some spots the idea got rather weak, but Jean Arthur pulls it through regardless. Sun., Mon. Weather: Warm. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Balalaika
No small town picture. It is strange that Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald would be drawing cards even in the small town, and yet when separated neither will gross film rental. It's been that way every time. My higher class patrons thought this extra good, but of course they are few in number. Thurs., Fri. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

Congo Maisie
While this picture was fairly good, I am doubtful if the Maisie series will ever prove to be one that the patrons look forward to seeing. John Carroll very good, and if Metro selects the proper vehicles for him I believe he'll build fans rapidly. Business just average. Thurs., Fri. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

Judge Hardy and Son
Good picture. Did an excellent business. The Hardy pictures go over in any town. We hope Metro keeps up the good work. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fine. Admission: 25-11. Local patronage. Population: 1,500. Capacity: 300.—J. L. McRae, Rex, Collins, Miss.

Man From Dakota, The
Well, we've seen better Beery pictures but believe this satisfied the Beery fans. Fri., Sat. Weather: Cold. Admission: 30-10. Small town patronage. Population: 600. Capacity: 300.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star, Hay Springs, Neb.

Shop Around the Corner
A fine production with a very good cast; however, give us Frank Morgan in the regular Morgan role, don't like him so tragic. We need all the good old comedy we can get and his is tops. Not anything extra as my patronage would rather see Gene Autry on Sunday than this midweek and "Elizabeth and Essex" never. Thurs., Fri. Weather: Fair. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

Strange Cargo
Certainly this was off the beaten path and believe it satisfied fifty-fifty. We enjoyed it very much. Sun., Mon. Weather: Unsettled. Admission: 30-10. Small town patronage. Population: 600. Capacity: 300.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star, Hay Springs, Neb.

Paramount

Gulliver's Travels
Not the best job in the art shop on Gulliver but the rest were fine and the music will stay with you. Personally the story was not half long enough. People came out saying it was too short, others held their noses. Barnum was right—please what you can. Tues., Wed. Weather: Fair. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

Our Neighbors, the Carters
This was an interesting picture which means very little at the boxoffice. It was allocated low and I played it on Bank Night, and still did not do the usual gross. No complaint from those that came in. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Cloudy. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Remember the Night
Swell picture but no business. Sun., Mon. Weather: Cold and rainy. Admission: 30-10. Small town patronage. Population: 600. Capacity: 300.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star, Hay Springs, Neb.

Remember the Night
Strictly adult fare, which caused business to drop below normal Sunday matinee. However, it is a good entertaining picture for adults and Fred MacMurray carried the part of District Attorney convincingly. Miss Stanwyck as the crook was well chosen. Sun., Mon. Weather: Ideal. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Rulers of the Sea
A washout all around. No business to speak of. Picture did not have boxoffice appeal and no names to draw them in. Plenty action, that's all. Fri., Sat. Weather: Chilly. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Santa Fe Marshal
Hopalong is still okeh. Although this one is not up to the standard, maybe because our hero is out of costume, our Saturday crowd liked him for all that. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

Republic

In Old Monterey
Another boxoffice stimulant by Gene Autry. The public can smell these good ones just like it can the bad ones. This was good and did above average business. Saturday. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

Jeepers, Creepers
Played this one on Saturday instead of the usual western, and it took very well. Many favorable comments, and it would have pleased a lot who were afraid to take a chance on it, if they had just come. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

South of the Border
We ran this one on Sunday and I held my breath for the tryout but it was surprising to see the people who had never seen an Autry western come out saying it was fine. And it was a truly different Autry that went right to all who saw him. The story having the locale it did, helped a lot to put it over. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

RKO Radio

Flying Deuces
Good comedy, fine for small towns. Did good business in two-day run. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Good. Admission: 25-11. Local patronage. Population: 1,500. Capacity: 500.—J. L. McRae, Rex, Collins, Miss.

Marines Fly High
This is a pretty good programmer, in fact better than the usual B stuff. Dix, like lots of the oldtimers, is still good. Although most of them came to see the western, many claimed they liked this one the best. Lucille Ball did a nice job as did all the others. The picture could be criticized just like all the others but my audiences are a good judge on this one. Saturday. Weather: Warm. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

That's Right, You're Wrong
Kay Kyser and his band presenting "Kollege of Musical Knowledge" towards the end of the picture is just about tops for the younger set. Business for two days held to a satisfactory gross and everyone present had a good time. Fri., Sat. Weather: Chilly. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

20th Century-Fox

Everything Happens at Night
This picture disappointed me much more than the usual picture that falls down, because it means that another star (Sonja Henie) has lost her drawing power here. Every single picture since her very first has grossed slightly less than the one before. Barely average business. Tues., Wed. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

He Married His Wife
Some thought this real cute, but the tremendous majority knew nothing about it because they stayed at home, or went elsewhere. Fox was wrong if they thought one picture ("Jesse James") would make a drawing card out of Nancy Kelly. It didn't, and never will. Tues., Wed. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

High School
In my opinion this was up to standard for Jane Withers, but they stayed at home in droves, so what I think means nothing. It seems to me Jane has just lost her "pull." I'm hoping her next with Gene Autry will establish her here. Her last few have not been so good. Tues., Wed. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

High School
For a double bill (played with RKO's "Sued for Libel") these two pictures proved their worth on bargain night. It brought out the kid trade and that's hard to do during the week, while school is still in session. Tuesday. Weather: Damp. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Swanee River
In Technicolor and entertaining with good music. It held to a fair gross for a two-day engagement with universal satisfaction. Sun., Mon. Weather: Fair. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Swanee River
While I was expecting a big crowd for this, I underestimated it by about 30 per cent. In fact it made me mad when I thought of how many people must have been present for the first time in many months, and why was it that I just couldn't get them out for other pictures. Don't underestimate it. They'll all love it. Thurs., Fri. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

Too Busy to Work
The only trouble with studios today is that whatever Johnny is doing "Whaaaaa I wanta do ut." Phooey. If Metro releases "GWTW" now, exhibitors hold your breath while someone comes out with HERE WITH THE BREEZE or something on that order. Oh, well, I guess the Jonseses are okeh for the double bill that just needs a filler but now then why not forget the double bill then the filler becomes unnecessary only in the form of shorts. The picture is very weak. See one, you've seen 'em all. Tues., Wed. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

Warner Bros.

Brother Rat and a Baby
Here was the biggest disappointment in months. Everyone expected something as good as "Brother Rat" and very few cared for it. Why would they feature a character that was as big a sap as the one played by Wayne Morris? Sun., Mon. Weather: Fair. Admission: 30-10. Small town patronage. Population: 600. Capacity: 300.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star, Hay Springs, Neb.

Four Wives
This picture failed to draw. While I had bad weather plus school house opposition, I still don't believe it would have been a profitable picture. A fine story, but not quite all the elements necessary to provide general entertainment for the masses. Tues., Wed. Population: 800. Capacity: 280.—J. Foster Bailey, New, Coffeeville, Miss.

Granny Get Your Gun
This is one of the best and most well-liked pictures we have had midweek for a long time. The Little Old Lady is surefire for action as well as drama. Believe me, she hit the spot in this one. May Robson may be 72 or thereabouts but Thar's Gold in Them pictures. Yep, they really took it in. Tuesday. Weather: Fair. Admission: 35-10. Mixed patronage. Capacity: 375.—J. R. Wills, Loma, Socorro, N. M.

Cutest Baby Contest Sells "40 Mothers" in Philly

PHILADELPHIA—Big displays on the Record's women's page were captured for two weeks by Warner publicity men by a stunt for "40 Little Mothers." The idea was simply a contest for Philadelphia's cutest baby, to match Baby Quintanilla in the film.

Pictures of several of the contestants were printed every day, plus a story. The ten finalists competed at a "highchair luncheon" sponsored by the paper and the Earle Theatre. Winner, chosen by a committee of bachelors, got a silver loving cup from Eddie Cantor and a $50 merchandise certificate from Gimbel's.

Short Subjects

makes a speech. Judy Garland sings. Hattie McDaniel almost cries when she gets her award. Everybody who is Hollywood is at the dinner. The camera catches them all, including the brothers Warner. Brief scenes from "Gone With the Wind" conclude the film, a shrewd showman's gesture for whetting the appetites of potential spectators. It's a bit on the overlong side, but withal interesting.

Granite Hotel

Paramount (Stone Age Cartoon) 7 Mins.
More or less regulation and familiar stuff along cartoon lines is offered in this item. The laugh content depends on a burlesque of "Grand Hotel." All sorts of hotel gags and business are animated for their laugh worth. Makes for satisfying action.

The Dipsy Doodler

Vitaphone (Melody Master) 10 Mins.
Larry Clinton and his orchestra bang it out in good style; Bea Wain sings; the Philharmonicas blow merrily and Gower and Jean dance. It is nicely done, tuneful and pleasant.

Playmates From the Wild

Paramount (Sportlight) 10 Mins.
Emil Liers and his trained otters frolic on Daytona Beach, dash through cypress swamps and cavort under water in this issue. It is done in fine photography and with appropriate comment by Ted Husing. Little else could be said about it except that it is a top-ranking bit of entertainment and will please.

A Kick in Time

Paramount (Color Classic) 7 Mins.
Spunky runs off after a fake mule and falls into the hands of an auctioneer who sells him to a junk man. He has a hard time of it in the city pulling a heavy wagon and suffering the abuse of his owner. In good time his mother, Hunky, comes looking. She finds him and they go back to the wide open and free spaces. Average cartoon stuff in fine Technicolor.

He Builds Five Nights; Lets Weekends Alone

DETROIT—Special attractions are being used to build business on five nights a week by J. D. Tabor, manager of the Chandler for Joe Mellon.

The Monday-Tuesday change is double dish night. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday are ten-cent nights. Saturday and Sunday bring in enough business without extra attractions.

Ten-cent nights draw bigger crowds than dish nights, Tabor reports, with SRO a common occurrence. However, dish nights draw more women, and the crowd is considerably quieter, he claims.

THE WHISTLE FINDS ITS ECHO

YOUR OBSERVER was observing on this very page as far back as October 28 last year that the hit-and-miss planning which distinguishes this industry would have to give way for something more scientific one of these days. That's a difficult yardstick to apply to this business of temperament, guesswork and flying leaps into the unknown. Yet it is not quite so fantastic a possibility to consider at that.

Anyhow, on that October day the reflections were turning, even as early as that, toward the war, self-sufficiency in the home market and related matters. It was remarked at the time, and certainly many times since, that the need to concentrate chief attention on the home market, always the best market, was becoming the more pressing. It was in connection with this very need that some questions were sprung. Here are those questions:

What has the industry done by way of scientifically ascertaining its possibilities right here in America?

What steps have been taken to get at the facts?

For instance, how accurate is the current estimate of an 85,000,000 weekly attendance and is it not the truth this figure, because some figure had to be arrived at, was more loosely than analytically reached?

But accepting it in lieu of anything better, although some researchers declare they can satisfactorially prove 60,000,000 is closer to it, what has been attempted by anyone in any direction about combing additional possibilities? Or about endeavoring to discover ways and means of persuading those who now attend to come more often?

Who can tell how many more might be regarded as potential customers? Or who they are? Or what walks of life they traverse? Or if they are intellectuals or morons? Or if they are economically equipped to "go to the movies" once a month, once a week or not at all?

Aside from hit-and-miss approaches and the conclusions which may be inconclusively drawn from the performance of specific pictures, what does this industry know about the types of attractions the public will support? If a film, popular in point of story and cast appeal, does $1,500,000 in this market, could it have done more and by what means?

You will get answers to these obvious questions, of course. But the answers will not be scientifically adduced. They could not possibly withstand any thorough, statistically-grounded counter attack, because no one in this wide-flung business is authoritatively equipped to reply.

It seems ironic and past all understanding that this business can find $1,000,000 to finance the greatest contest in its history and not a penny for market research.

Why?

The whistle, rattling hollowly and lonesomely all these months, now finds an echo.

Dr. George Gallup of the American Institute of Public Opinion, it appears, has accepted a suggestion of Samuel Goldwyn's. On his own and without benefit of retainer, Gallup declares he intends checking into double features—why, how and who wants them.

A beginning is just that and ought not be passed up. Thus, Gallup's proposed checkup is of great potential interest. The surveys conducted by his organization enjoy a substantial standing and, as research of this nature goes, are accepted generally and publicized widely.

This, precisely, is sufficient reason to wonder why the contemplated analysis employing 1,100 investigators and reaching 30,000 individuals of all ages, both sexes, different modes of living and assorted economic levels should begin and end with this one question, important as it is.

At the minute, Hollywood is hot about increased admissions and trying to warm the theatreman to the idea. It would be extremely pertinent, and serviceable, too, for the Gallup poll to dig into that one for a reaction.

Hollywood wants a price hike and insists it has to be.

The customers ought to have an opportunity to lighten their chests. After all, they are the customers.

MUSICALS AGAIN REGISTER GAIN; VIEWED AS GLOOM CHASERS IN LOWERING PALL OF WAR

Nearly All Studios in Trend With Increase Of 100 Per Cent

HOLLYWOOD—An increase of 100 per cent, perhaps more, in the production of that step-child of pictures—the in again-out again musical—over the number of tunefilms turned out for 1939-40 looms for the 1940-41 season, as predicated upon product lineups currently available on the major lots. Consequently, and possibly because of a constantly more gloomy international aspect, the manufacture of lighthearted films in which vocal and orchestral interludes constitute an important factor, is to show a gain for the second successive year; the season just closing also having registered an increase over 1938-39.

For the year to come, M-G-M at present holds front rank in the amount of musicals to be produced. Already completed is the Nelson Eddy-Jeanette MacDonald co-starrer, "New Moon," while "Strike Up the Band" is in production. The future lineup includes "The Girl With the 'Cello," "Good News," "Ziegfeld Girl," Eddy and MacDonald in "I Married an Angel" and "The Vagabond King," "Tonight at 8:30," "Little Nelly Kelly," with Judy Garland, and "Broadway Melody of 1941."

On Universal Slate

In work at Universal for the new season are "Spring Parade," starring Deanna Durbin, and "The Boys From Syracuse." Listed to follow are two more Durbin songfilms; two starring Gloria Jean—"A Little Bit of Heaven" and "Straight From the Heart"—an untitled Mayfair production starring the Ritz Brothers; "Margie," "Riviera," with Allan Jones, and "Argentine Nights," featuring the Andrews Sisters, vocal trio.

Paramount is currently filming "Dancing on a Dime;" a Bing Crosby-Mary Martin co-starrer, "Ghost Music," and "Comin' Round the Mountain," a hill-billy musical. Miss Martin is next to be starred in "Miami." Crosby and Bob Hope will co-feature in "The Road to Zanzibar" and "Blue Lagoon." Also in preparation are "Broken Heart Cafe" and "Interlochen," story of a summer camp for youthful musicians.

Another Kyser Musical

RKO Radio's schedule will include "Too Many Girls," to be produced by George Abbott from his Broadway stage hit; another Kay Kyser musical, and "Kiki." Republic is filming "Scatterbrain," starring Judy Canova, and has completed "Grand Ole Op'ry." Scheduled for a July start is "Hit Parade of 1940."

Already premiered by 20th Century-Fox is "Lillian Russell," in which Alice Faye sings a number of past and present popular melodies. For the new season Irving Berlin is preparing "Say It With Music," while "Down Argentine Way" and "Tin Pan Alley" also are on schedule.

Warner, once the home of the musical, has but two in preparation for 1940-41. One, "The Desert Song," will be a remake. The other is a campus comedy, "For the Rich They Sing." Columbia's schedule includes only one songfilm, an untitled Tony Martin starrer. Monogram lists Charles Wakefield Cadman's "The Land of the Sky Blue Water." Boris Morros' National Pictures will produce "Second Chorus," starring Artie Shaw and his band. For United Artists Hal Roach will make "Fiesta," with a Mexican background, and Samuel Bronston Productions lists "Pot O' Gold," based on the Horace Heidt radio show and featuring that orchestra leader. James Roosevelt will be the executive producer.

"U" An Enthusiast

Universal has been the most enthusiastic proponent of the musical during the current year. In addition to two Deanna Durbin starrers, "It's a Date" and "First Kiss," the studio turned out "The Under-Pup," featuring Gloria Jean; Bing Crosby's "If I Had My Way" and a series of pictures using the names of popular songs for their titles, such as "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love," "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me," "La Conga Nights" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love." Metro delivered "Babes in Arms," "Balalaika," starring Nelson Eddy, "The Broadway Melody of 1940," with Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell, and "Two Girls on Broadway." Paramount released two Bing Crosby starrers, "The Star Maker" and "The Road to Singapore," as well as "The Great Victor Herbert."

Three by RKO

Completed recently for RKO Radio by Herbert Wilcox was "Irene." This studio also turned out "That's Right, You're Wrong," featuring Kay Kyser and his orchestra, and released a Sol Lesser production, "Escape to Paradise," starring Bobby Breen. The music which Republic injects into its Gene Autry and Roy Rogers westerns bubbled over into "Village Barn Dance" and "Jeepers Creepers." The 20th Century-Fox entry was "Swanee River," Warner put in its bid with "An Angel From Texas," Columbia produced "Music in My Heart," starring Tony Martin, and, for United Artists, Samuel Goldwyn brought Jascha Heifetz to the screen in "They Shall Have Music."

European War No 'Springboard' For Settlement of Trade Suit

WASHINGTON — Administration officials concerned with the all-industry film suit scheduled to go to trial in New York June 3 saw little in the international situation this week to influence the dropping of that proceeding.

The attitude, in general, was that difficulties in the foreign market were no excuse for condoning monopolistic or trade-restraining practices domestically.

Rumors in New York that the department of commerce might take steps to halt the suit were received with some amusement in Washington, where it was pointed out the Hopkins agency has no standing in court. Reports that the department of justice would not be consulted in any action taken to relieve the companies were dismissed as "pure tripe."

Discussing the situation informally, officials here characterized the rumors as "just another effort on the part of the majors to kill the suit."

They declared the cry that the companies would be ruined is not only without foundation, but premature.

They pointed out that it is generally admitted the trial of the New York suit will take ten months or more and that any decision made by the district court is bound to be appealed, it being estimated that the litigation will run for two or three years.

The cry that the suit and the Neely bill were a double-headed threat was likewise dismissed, it being pointed out that the latter gives a year in which the companies can revamp their selling methods.

In other words, it was asserted, the companies are using the present foreign situation as the basis for an appeal for relief from something which cannot happen for at least one year and is more likely not to happen for several years—if it ever does happen at all.

Accordingly, it was said, there is no reason why the government should drop its suit. By the time the issue is decided, the foreign situation may well be totally different from that of today. But most important, it was declared, is the principle that trade in the United States must be unrestrained; unfair trade practice within the country "cannot be continued simply because the perpetrators of such practices are having difficulties in foreign markets."

SCHENCK'S PRE-TRIAL TESTIMONY REGARDED AS HIS ANSWER TO THE NEELY BLOCK BILL

Sees Single-Film Sale "Terrific Hardship" Upon Exhibitors

NEW YORK—Regarded as his answer to the Neely bill, Nicholas M. Schenck, in his pre-trial examination in the all-industry suit, stated that in his opinion "to distribute picture for picture in this country would be a terrific hardship on exhibitors" and "the fairest way of selling is the way M-G-M is today, meaning trying to sell as much on percentage as possible."

Selling percentage, the witness stated, does away with a great part of so-called blind buying where the exhibitor does not know what he is getting and takes a chance.

No matter how much M-G-M may spend on a picture, the exhibitor only pays what a percentage film earns, he added. "If we make a mistake and spend $3,000,000 and the picture does not live up to it, the exhibitor does not pay for it if he plays on percentage," was his explanation.

"If we had to sell the picture to the exhibitor in block, we would consider that in advance when we sold it the exhibitor would have to pay his share. That is the difference in block and percentage selling. There couldn't be any fairer way than selling on percentage any more than you would pay rent or you would pay anything else. This way you take no chances at all. You either get money or you don't. The picture does it."

The first picture M-G-M sold individually was "The Four Horsemen," Schenck said, and later two pictures a year were sold that way until today most of the company's program is sold percentagewise.

"Pressure comes from the exhibitor who does not like to play percentage. It is a continual wrangle and persuasion to try and sell him that way. It has been getting better. As far as our company is concerned, I don't think we have much trouble in most instances."

At no time did M-G-M require guarantees, the witness believed.

With the exception of the larger theatres there is no resistance to buy flat. Where larger houses do not want to buy that way they don't purchase smaller budgeted films at all, he said.

Considerable success had been noted in selling "Gone With the Wind" on 70 per cent with a guarantee of 10 per cent profit for the exhibitor, Schenck stated. He pointed out a situation which developed between the company and B&K in Chicago. "They refused to pay this or meet our arrangement and we sold it away until they realized the mistake. Since then B&K has bought the film for a good many theatres in Chicago."

"Every theatre buyer would have a terrific task on his hands if he was to buy picture-for-picture," Schenck asserted. He said Loew's has always bought in blocks "because that has been the system, plus the fact it is very hard to live from hand-to-mouth by buying one picture and not knowing when you will get the next one.

"If every company had a year's product on hand, exhibited them and sold it after you saw it and they were ready to deliver then it would be the same thing. Block booking then would not mean anything. But where no company has many pictures on hand"—and he included M-G-M in this category—"we are always trying to put a picture into the theatre as best we can." He added the most M-G-M has unreleased at any time was three or four.

Before the Examination—

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., and M-G-M, as he arrived at the federal building in New York for a pre-trial examination. J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel of M-G-M, accompanies him.

Deny Expansion Hits Independents

WASHINGTON—Press releases from the department of justice that producers and distributors are expanding their theatre holdings to the detriment of independent exhibitors are denied by major companies in a letter to Senator Neely requesting an adjournment of the hearings on his divorcement bill until the New York all-industry suit is over.

The letter further states exhibitors not affiliated with the majors claim they are rapidly being driven out of business. "Statistics prove quite the contrary . . . It is obvious that the claim of an emergency consequent upon the rapid disappearance of the so-called independent theatre is baseless."

Film companies expressed agreement with the department's attitude it did not want to be embarrassed at this time by taking up the issues soon to be presented in court. The letter also referred to a statement by Thurman Arnold when he appeared before a sub-committee last month that the divorce bill "is declaratory of the common law" and counsel for the distributors asserted "we do not know what this statement can mean or what purpose it has."

"The supreme court recently pointed out there is no federal common law," they wrote, "and neither the courts of England, whence we derive our common law, nor the courts of any American state have ever said that the law forbids a manufacturer and a distributor, or either of them, to sell direct to the public by the use of their own facilities.

"If Mr. Arnold's statement is intended to refer to the statutes against monopolies and restraints of trade, he assumes as the basis for the bill the uncontroverted existence of the very monopoly and restraint which is alleged in the government's suit, which the defendants emphatically deny."

Quality Reason for Big Cost Increases

New York—The quality of production has changed tremendously over the years, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, stated. "It is not believable the difference between the picture of 1924 and today."

From the time Louis B. Mayer and his associates joined M-G-M, the average for the first year was $146,000 a picture. Today, the average is approximately $850,000.

Owns 15% of Two 42nd St. Theatres

New York—Aside from Loew's, Nicholas M. Schenck has a personal interest—15 per cent to be exact—in two theatres on 42nd St., he stated in his pre-trial examination. One is a burlesque house and the other is being operated by Harry Brandt.

Both houses formerly housed legitimate attractions and are controlled by a corporation in which Schenck has the 15 per cent.

Notes to You from Red Kann

ACCORDING to the schedule, trial in the government suit is virtually at hand. All preparations are completed, yet even now that does not block off considerations being directed toward possible results or advantages if the action runs its trial course or if it is terminated, after all, by a consent decree.

The reason for the unsuccessful frenzied activity in the cause of a decree before the trial got under way has been reported before, but it is important to repeat that the forced draught measures at the time tied in with Section 5 of the Clayton act. Under it, a decree entered upon before any evidence at trial had been recorded does two things: It sets aside the possibility of future litigants, filing private lawsuits, using any terms of the decree as a basis for their litigation. And two, it rules out the possibility of using consent decree terms in support of litigation, once filed. The majors interested in a decree formula, therefore, felt this would serve as a stopper to any flood of new suits which might have trailed a settlement before trial. However, the decree negotiations froze.

Parallel in Oil

Some lawyers now see great danger in allowing the case to run to the end of trial. It seems quite definite the U. S. supreme court will determine the final issue. If the majors should lose and the high court sustains the lower court's decision, a parallel to the Madison oil case is envisioned in some quarters. This is what has happened thus far in that litigation, with the end not yet in sight:

The supreme court sustained the lower court, which had found 12 oil corporations guilty, on May 6. Very closely held is the fact that, already, $80,000,000 in private litigation has piled up, the basis for alleged injuries stemming from oil company violations; the court's ruling of guilty, of course, is being used as the wedge for claims of alleged injury. In short, the plaintiffs in these new cases appear merely to have rested on their haunches, placed as evidence the indictment in the oil case and proceeded to sue on the strength of the highest tribunal's decision.

It is felt in this and that direction the same situation easily could confront the majors in this industry.

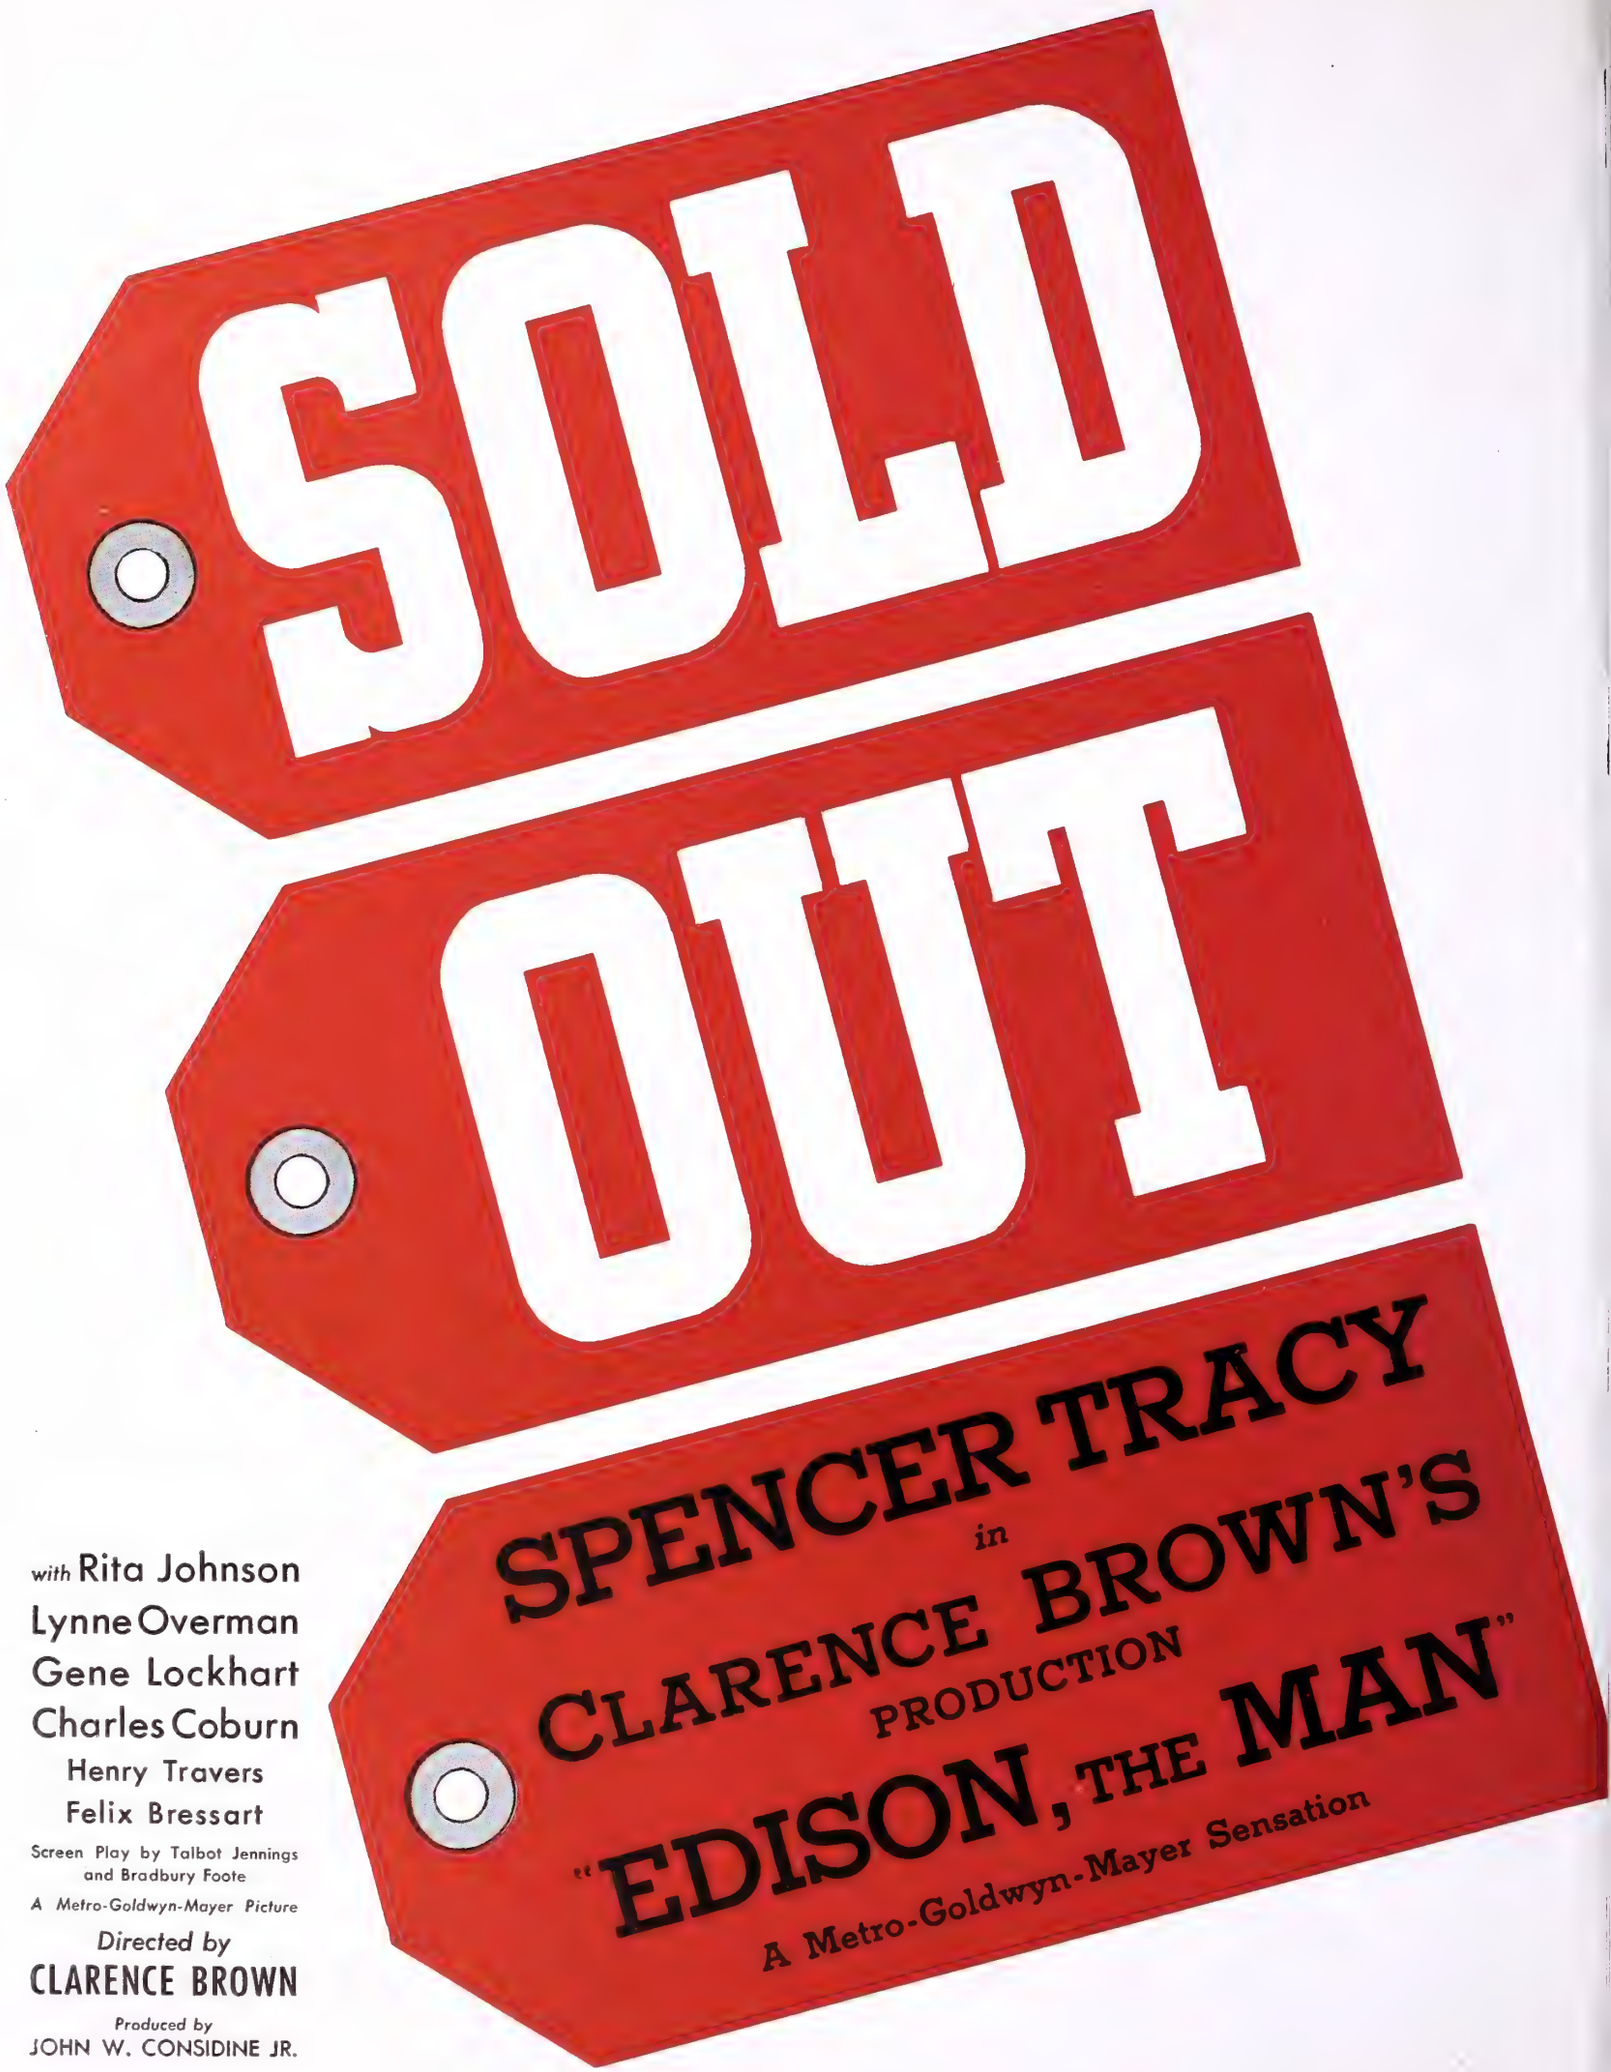
This leads to consideration of the advisability of a decree sought after the film trial is under way. A thoroughly seasoned and reasoned legal mind seems dubious about this. He is fearful over a potential tidal wave of alleged violations cropping out all over the country. He points out that every film salesman is a potential carrier of decree transgressions, basing this very broad approval on the statement no court yet has determined where persuasion in selling effort ends and coercion, as the buyer views it, might enter. It depends upon who would indulge in the interpreting and from what seat he launched his approach.

Before and After

It also is felt that entering upon settlement via decree once the trial starts enjoys considerably less value than before trial. In this connection, it is suggested that it must be borne in mind a decree connotes an admission of guilt, as well as a promise not to repeat on the guilty acts. Thus, another lawyer takes this view, "What's the point of being adjudged guilty before the issues have been explored to the fullest possible extent? We might save a little expense in lawyers' fees, but that's about all."

Under Section 5 of the Clayton act, testimony taken during trial which may be terminated by decree is held not to be admissible as evidence in private litigation which follows except where testimony is of a "relevant nature." However, it is believed testimony might be used and to a somewhat damaging extent for purposes of cross-examination. The value to private litigants here is that, while the testimony would not be admissible as evidence, it could be built up to attack a witness' character and credibility and thus, conceivably, bear on the outcome of the action involved.

By "relevant nature" would be meant remarks by a defense witness in the key suit where, for example, he would admit a deal for a particular product had set back an independent theatre from a third to a fourth run. The operator of the theatre, if he should sue, could use this testimony to further his action.



There still is another angle. This space will discuss it next week.

MORE BIG PICTURES, CONCENTRATION UPON DOMESTIC REVENUE, RKO SCHEDULE KEYNOTE

Schaefer Announces 48 Features and 81 Shorts For New Program

NEW YORK—More big pictures than ever before and concentration on domestic revenues in face of declining returns from Europe will keynote the RKO sales convention which gets under way Monday at the Waldorf Astoria.

During the past year, President George J. Schaefer has made numerous trips to the coast signing new producers, realigning studio personnel and acquiring important properties to bolster the 1940-41 lineup.

On his arrival from the coast, Schaefer announced 48 picture and 81 single and two-reel shorts, in addition to newsreels. Tim Holt replaces George O'Brien as star in the western series of six. In addition, Holt may be featured in one or two other features.

Within the past week or so, the producing company formed by Jerry Brandt and Charles E. Ford has been signed for a series of six pictures based on Clarence Budington Kelland's short stories, "Scattergood Baines," which have appeared in American Magazine. Lou Ostrow, until recently with M-G-M, has organized Vogue Productions to make four, the first being "Li'l Abner," based on a comic strip.

Reports Erich Pommer is to become executive producer could not be confirmed at the home office early in the week, the indication being an official announcement will be made at the convention. Pommer, incidentally, is now producing "The Other Man" with Charles Laughton and Carole Lombard with Garson Kanin handling the direction.

With Max Gordon and Harry Goetz now on the coast looking for material, the indications are "The American Way" will be temporarily abandoned. They are slated for two next season.

George Abbott is a new acquisition to the lineup. He will produce "Too Many Girls," successful stage play which just completed a long Broadway run.

Herbert Wilcox, producer-director, will star Anna Neagle in two.

The William Stephens-Howard Lang combination will continue to turn out three "Dr. Christian" features.

Harold Lloyd will produce "Three Gobs and a Girl."

New Producers Supply Important Portion; 300 at Parley

Clem Beauchamp, assistant director, has been promoted to associate producer under Lou Brock, in charge of shorts.

Lee Marcus, Gregory La Cava, Cliff Reid and Howard Benedict will also find their niche on the forthcoming roster.

J. J. Nolan, vice-president in charge of studio operations, and Perry Lieber, studio publicity head, arrived over the weekend from the coast to attend the convention.

More than 300 home office executives, division, district and branch managers and salesmen will attend, in addition to representatives of Walt Disney Productions, March of Time and Pathe News. From the foreign field there will be 10 to 12.

Closing the meetings will be a banquet Wednesday night with entertainment the highlight. Speeches are out, but tuck and bib will be the order of the night.

Among the delegates attending the four-day session are:

Albany: B. G. Kranze, manager; G. F. Tucker, L. A. Herman, salesmen.

Atlanta: H. M. Lyons, manager; F. W. Salley, P. Harrison, R. C. Price, N. J. Colquhoun, salesmen.

Boston: R. C. Cropper, manager; W. H. Gardiner, H. F. Goldstein, F. G. Ross, C. L. De Vizia, M. M. Ames, salesmen; C. McGerigle, office manager.

$25,000,000 ON 44 TO 50 FROM PARAMOUNT FOR NEW SEASON; MORE ON THE BIG FILMS

Pin High Budget Hopes On an Increase From Domestic Market

LOS ANGELES—There will be no cut in the Paramount production budget for next season and the $25,000,000 schedule will be maintained in an effort to attract increasing revenue from the domestic markets, despite war conditions in Europe which continue to threaten returns from these sources.

With this in mind, the production force will turn out 44 to 50 features, six of which will be westerns starring Bill Boyd and produced by Harry Sherman. In addition Sherman is slated to make two large scale pictures, one tentatively titled "Cherokee Strip." The other will be based on Peter B. Kyne's "Parson of the Panamint." The short subject lineup embraces 86 subjects, plus two weekly issues of the newsreel.

Cecil B. DeMille is down for two in addition to "North West Mounted Police" which is scheduled to be released in the current season. One of the new titles, which is tentative, is "The Queen of Queens," a biblical story.

Details by Agnew

Details of the forthcoming lineup were given by Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager, to the 125 delegates assembled at the Ambassador Hotel. He said the fact that the company planned fewer pictures next season means approximately $100,000 per negative more on big features. Conventionites included an executive group from the home office, the 100 Per Cent Club winners for the past year, division, district and branch managers.

A $2,000,000 advertising budget was announced by Agnew to promote the new lineup.

After the meetings which wind up here Sunday, district and division managers will tour various exchanges under their supervision for individual meetings to explain the product to sales staffs in the field.

The lineup, as announced, follows:

"Virginia" with Madeleine Carroll, Franchot Tone, Ray Milland and Carolyn Lee to be directed by Edward H. Griffith.

"I Want a Divorce" co-starring Joan Blondell and Dick Powell.

"The City That Never Sleeps" starring Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck and Eddie Bracken. This will be produced by William A. Wellman.

"There's Always Juliet" starring Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray. Edward H. Griffith will direct.

"The New Yorkers," a Preston Sturges picture, with Dick Powell and Ellen Drew.

"Skylark" co-starring Claudette Colbert and Melvyn Douglas. Mark Sandrich directs.

Claire Boothe's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" starring Mary Martin and Ray Milland.

Cecil B. DeMille will follow his "North West Mounted Police" with two productions, one of which is tentatively titled "The Queen of Queens," the story of Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

"Dead on Arrival" (tentative title), a chiller along the "Dr. Cyclops" line to be produced by Jack Moss under the direction of Stuart Heisler.

"The Silvery Queen," with Claire Trevor. Directed by Allan Dwan.

Boris Morros and Robert Stillman will produce two under their new company name of National Pictures. The first will be "Second Chorus," starring Artie Shaw and his band; the second "The American Vagabond," based on the life of O'Henry, to star Douglas Fairbanks jr.

Orrin Tucker, his band and Bonnie Baker also will appear in a musical.

"Texas!," starring Ellen Drew and John Howard with May Robson, Akim Tamiroff, Broderick Crawford and Anthony Quinn. James Hogan will direct.

"A Date With Destiny" and "Man in Half-Moon Street" with Basil Rathbone. The former also features John Howard and Ellen Drew.

"Mystery Sea Raider" with Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon and Onslow Stevens.

"Love Thy Neighbor" co-starring Jack Benny and Fred Allen and directed by Mark Sandrich.

"Rhythm on the River" with Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone and Oscar Levant. Victor Schertzinger will direct.

Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in "The Road to Zanzibar."

"Dancing on a Dime" featuring Grace MacDonald, Robert Paige, Peter Hayes, Eddie Quillan, Frank Jenks, Virginia Dale, Carol Adams, Lillian Cornell and William Frawley. Joseph Santley will direct.

"There's Magic in Music" starring Allan Jones with Susanna Foster.

"The Shepherd of the Hills," based on the novel by Harold Bell Wright which Henry Hathaway will direct, to co-star Betty Field and Robert Preston.

"Rangers of Fortune," with Fred MacMurray, Patricia Morison, Gilbert Roland and Albert Dekker, directed by Sam Wood.

"Aloma of the South Seas," co-starring Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour.

Joseph Conrad's "Victory" starring Fredric March and Betty Field with Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

"Sunrise in My Pocket" with an all-star cast which Henry Hathaway will direct.

Two Harry Sherman westerns, one tentatively titled "Cherokee Strip," and the other Peter B. Kyne's "Parson of the Panamint."

"Birth of a Hero" with William Holden, Maria Ouspenskaya and Albert Dekker.

"I Wanted Wings," a story of America's air heroes.

"The Roundup" with Don Wilson of radio fame in the role created by Macklyn Arbuckle.

"Arise My Love," starring Claudette Colbert and Joel McCrea. Mitchell Leisen will direct.

A sextet of the Hopalong Cassidy westerns starring Bill Boyd and produced by Harry Sherman.

There will be five additional features, as yet unlisted, included in the lineup.

The shorts' lineup includes 12 Max Fleischer "Popeye" cartoons; eight Paragraphics; eight Max Fleischer "Gabby" cartoons; eight Headliners; 13 Grantland Rice Sportlights; six Popular Science Cinecolor subjects; six Unusual Occupations also in Cinecolor; "Raggedy Ann," a two-reel cartoon in color; six Travelogues in Technicolor; six single reel comedies starring Robert Benchley.

There will be 104 issues of the Paramount News.

Paramount Board Selection Near

NEW YORK—The re-election for one year of Paramount's 16-member directorate comes before stockholders at the company's annual meeting June 18.

The notice states the aggregate paid to directors and officers of the corporation for the fiscal year ended Dec. 30, 1939, "considered as a group, for services in all capacities, was $853,514." Of this amount, $236,635, not including $20,800 allowed for expenses, went to Barney Balaban, president, for the year's compensation which includes $14,705 "as his share payable by B&K under a contract of employment dated Dec. 28, 1935."

Directors are Neil F. Agnew, Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Y. Frank Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, John W. Hicks jr., Austin C. Keough, Earl I. McClintock, Maurice Newton, E. V. Richards, Edwin L. Weisl a.. Adolph Zukor.

No Change in M-G-M Top Line Percentagers for New Season

NEW YORK—M-G-M enters the 1940-41 selling season with a repeat general policy of four top pictures at 40 per cent, 10 at 35 per cent and 10 at 30 per cent, coupled with a determination to widen its market within the American borders.

The latter element, which is said to have been strongly urged at closed sales meetings in San Francisco, Chicago, New York and Washington, is in line with a purported theory that "the only way the company can offset its foreign losses is through finding new ways to help exhibitors get more money for our product and thereby assure us greater returns than we have heretofore had," according to one source.

Must Be "Properly Sold"

Sales personnel is understood to have been told that the "market can only stand what you can get," and that any widening of the company's markets either numerically or in increased rentals is almost wholly dependent upon the aid that can be given to exhibitors in selling M-G-M product to the public. In this respect salesmen were urged to work personally with their accounts to see that the new season lineup is "properly sold." This embraces active participation in booking suggestions and other efforts to secure local publicity and cooperative assistance for accounts.

Instances are said to have been cited to convention delegates where identical groups of houses in small situations have returned an increase from an average single picture rental of $15 to $31 over a five-year period, due almost entirely to the efforts of salesmen in getting exhibitors to apply better methods of showmanship.

35 Are Assigned

Of the 52 which the company plans, M-G-M lists 35 properties, definitely selected and already assigned to various stars. These are:

Definite assignments follow:

Wallace Beery—Starred in "Wyoming" and "Combat Car."

Joan Crawford—Starred in "Bombay Nights," adapted from the story by Louis Bromfield, and "Woman's Fancy," with James Stewart as probable co-star.

Nelson Eddy—Co-starred with Jeanette MacDonald in "Bitter Sweet," the Noel Coward musical, and "I Married an Angel."

Clark Gable—Co-starred with Myrna Loy in "The Great Canadian," story of a hockey star; starred in "Witch of the Wilderness," melodrama with a South American jungle background; "The Life of Simon Bolivar," based on the career of the South American patriot, and "Osborne of Sing Sing," in which Robert Taylor will be co-starred.

Judy Garland—Co-starred with Mickey Rooney in "Strike Up the Band" and "Babes on Broadway."

Greta Garbo—Starred in "Madame Curie," based on the book by Eve Curie.

Katharine Hepburn—Star in "The Philadelphia Story," film version of her long run Broadway stage play.

Hedy Lamarr—Co-starred with James Stewart, Eleanor Powell and Lana Turner in "Ziegfeld Girl," planned in the ambitious manner.

Myrna Loy—Co-starred with William Powell in "The Thin Man's Shadow;" starred in "Third Finger, Left Hand" and "The Road to Rome," the latter based on the Robert E. Sherwood play. She also will co-star with Gable in "The Great Canadian."

Jeanette MacDonald—Co-starred with Nelson Eddy in "Bitter Sweet" and "I Married an Angel;" starred in a dramatic role in "Smilin' Through."

Marx Brothers—Starred in "Go West."

Robert Montgomery—Starred in "I Had a Comrade," slated as his first of the season.

William Powell—Co-starred with Myrna Loy in "The Thin Man's Shadow."

Mickey Rooney—Will continue in the Hardy series, co-star with Spencer Tracy in "The Ex-Mayor of Boys Town," a sequel to "Boys Town;" co-starred with Judy Garland in "Strike Up the Band" and "Babes on Broadway," both musicals.

Norma Shearer—Co-starred with Robert Taylor in "Escape," based on the novel by Ethel Vance; starred in "Tonight at 8:30," based on a cycle of nine one-act plays by Noel Coward; "The World We Make," Sidney Kingsley-Theatre Guild play, and "Forever," an original.

Ann Sothern—Starred in "Dulcy," as her first of the season.

James Stewart—Starred in "Wings on His Back;" co-starred with Joan Crawford in "Woman's Fancy," and co-starred with Hedy Lamarr, Eleanor Powell and Lana Turner in "Ziegfeld Girl."

Robert Taylor—Co-starred with Norma Shearer in "Escape," co-starred with Clark Gable in "Osborne of Sing Sing," co-starred with Lana Turner in "Tropical Hurricane;" starred in "Cause for Alarm" and "Flight Command."

Spencer Tracy—Co-starred with Mickey Rooney in "The Ex-Mayor of Boys Town," starred in "Sea of Grass," based on Conrad Richter's novel of New Mexico, and starred in "The Yearling," adapted from the novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings.

Lana Turner—Co-starred with Robert Taylor in "Tropical Hurricane;" co-starred with James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr and Eleanor Powell in "Ziegfeld Girl."

In the starring battery, but unassigned, appear Lionel Barrymore, Robert Donat, Greer Garson, Rosalind Russell and Margaret Sullavan. As the season progresses, the anticipation is they will be cast in vehicles to be determined.

Aside from the "Crime Does Not Pay" group of six two-reelers, M-G-M's shorts lineup will be solidly single reel.

UA to Distribute Own Accessories

New York—Sale of UA accessories will not be handled through Advertising Accessories, Harry D. Buckley, vice-president, informed the company's sales staff at the two regional conferences.

Salesmen have been offered a 15 per cent commission on sales of accessories above the regular quotas, Buckley informed the men. Since the acquisition of a number of independent poster renters by AA, the UA accessory department says it has noted an appreciable increase in business.

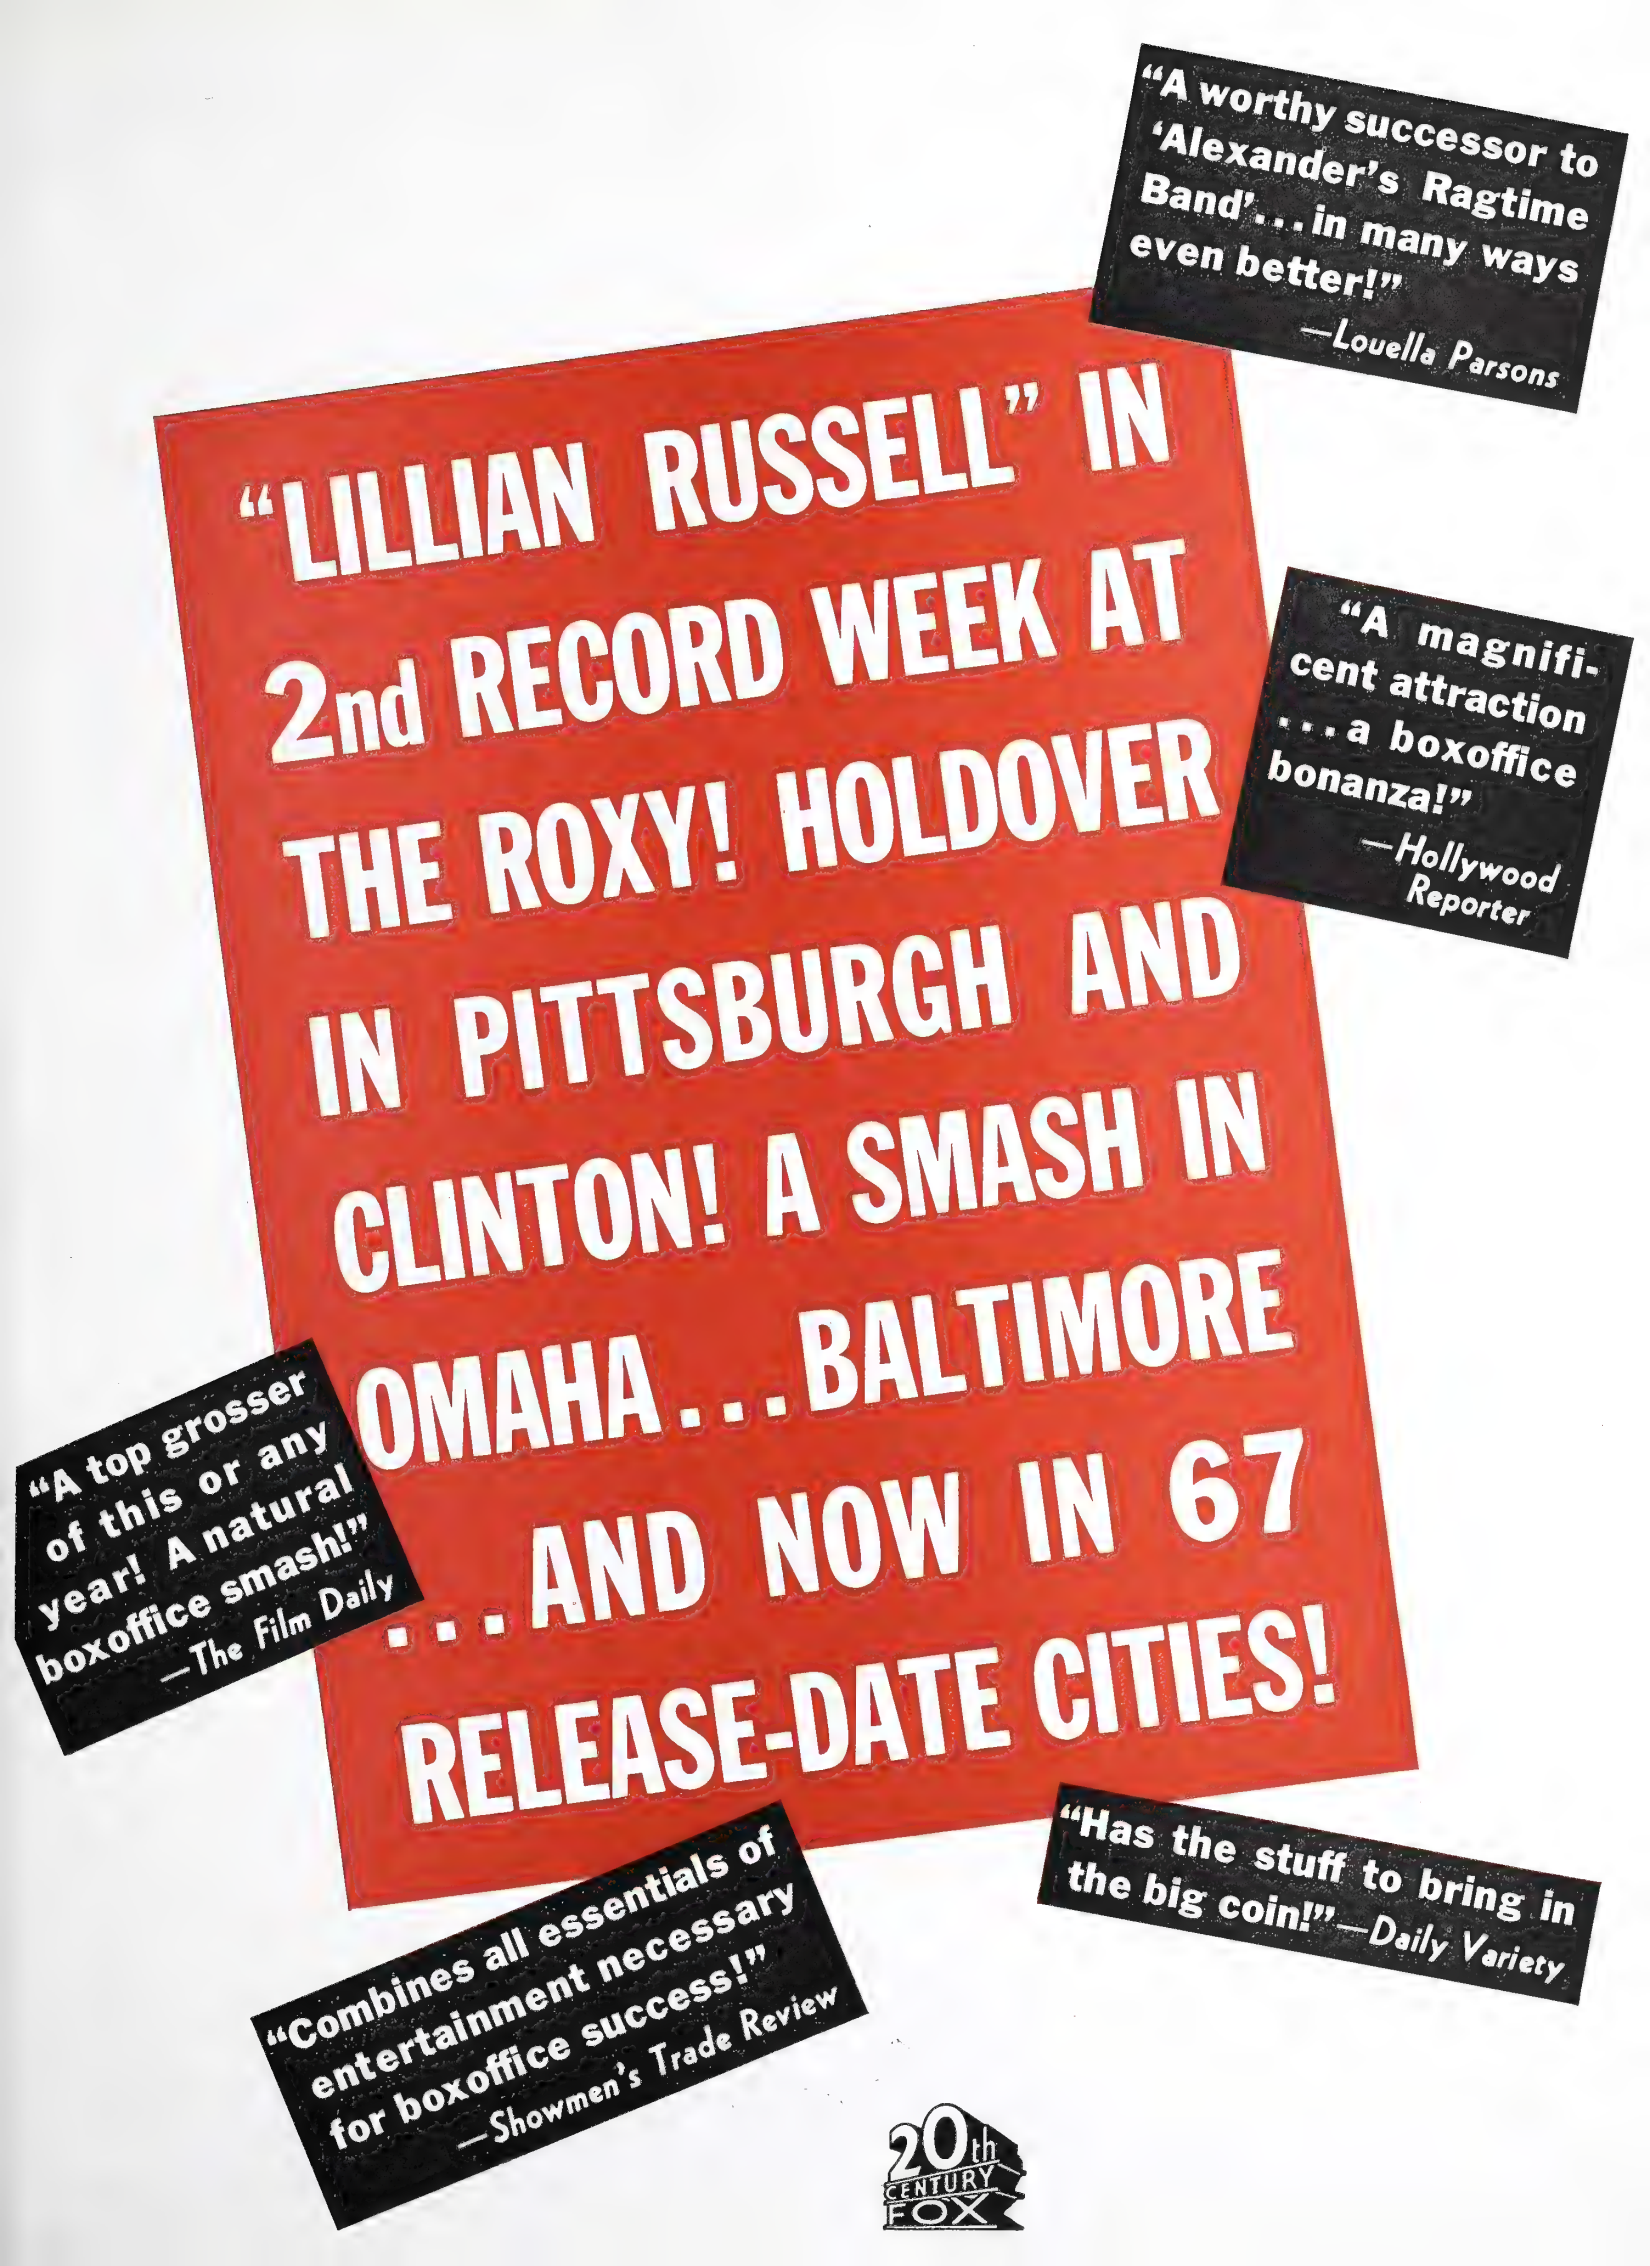
At Least Nine From UA on Percentage

NEW YORK—Of UA's program of 22 for next season, there will be a minimum of nine to be sold on percentage, it is learned. During the current season there was no specific number sold this way. Top terms will be sought for the nine pictures, two of which will be produced by Alexander Korda and as many by Walter Wanger.

The group of nine top percentagers include "The Westerner," recently completed by Samuel Goldwyn; an untitled Ernst Lubitsch production; "Flotsam," on which David L. Loew and Albert Lewin are now working; "The Long Voyage Home" and "Foreign Correspondent," from the Wanger unit; "Corsican Brothers," to be made by Edward Small; "Pot O' Gold," the first James Roosevelt production; "The Thief of Bagdad" and "Woman Hunt," from Korda.

No sales policy is set on the untitled Charles Chaplin picture estimated at a cost of $2,500,000. Executives are waiting until a final print is received and screened before setting terms. Because of the cost, a policy similar to "Gone With the Wind" may be adopted.

Selznick's in Top Bracket



With two David O. Selznick productions slated for release, it is pointed out these were sold this season in a group of four pictures from the producer. They are in the top bracket.

Small has yet to deliver "Son of Monte Cristo," "South of Pago Pago," "Two Years Before the Mast," "The Life of Rudolph Valentino" and "Kit Carson," all of which were sold on current season's pacts.

Lubitsch has one coming on the current program, as well as the one slated for next season.

After a number of sales were made on "Thief of Bagdad," Korda ordered it stopped. The picture will be sold as part of the new season's output where it had not been previously bought.

A clause in UA's contract provides all of the 26 pictures sold for 1939-40 will be delivered to accounts provided they are completed by April 15, 1941.

Two-Week Gov't Tip on Areas Supplying Suit Witnesses

NEW YORK—Government and distributor counsel in the all-industry suit have reached an agreement whereby Paul Williams, in charge of the prosecution, will notify major lawyers two weeks in advance of the territory from which exhibitor witnesses will be called, it is learned. The understanding not only eliminates the element of surprise on the government's part, but also will give distributors a chance to check on research material from the particular sections involved and thereby obviate delays in the progress of the trial.

Daily meetings are being held by Williams and his retinue of assistants to the attorney general now making their headquarters in the federal building here. As a further indication Philadelphia will be the first area to lead the government's attack is the inspection of M-G-M and Loew contracts undertaken by Robert L. Wright and Seymour Krieger the early part of the week. In most instances, records sought dated back a year or two, but those as far back as 1931 also have been looked over.

Records Destroyed

During the early stages of discussion on Philadelphia contracts, the department of justice was after records for 1915 up to date. Distributors objected on the grounds contracts and other records are destroyed after 10 years.

Meanwhile, additional industry executives have been subpoeaned. Within the past 10 days service has been accepted for Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, E. M. Saunders, western sales manager for the company; Al Lichtman, vice-president, and Sam Katz. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, was served some weeks ago and with the postponement of the trial the May 1 date on the summonses has been continued to June 3 automatically.

In some quarters, it is explained the move to subpoena executives headquartering in New York is to make certain they will appear on short notice. It had been felt the government would only employ the service method for witnesses to be called 100 miles or further from New York.

Subpoena Elmer Pearson To Testify for Government

NEW YORK—Elmer Pearson, who preceded Joseph P. Kennedy as president of Pathe, has been subpoenaed by the government to testify in the all-industry suit. He has been virtually inactive in the business since he stepped out of Pathe. In addition, Jesse L. Goldberg, independent producer, has been notified he will be called upon to testify for the government.

Atkinson Services

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—Funeral services for William Edmonds Atkinson, former president and ancillary receiver of Fox Theatres Corp., former M-G-M vice-president, and former vice-president and general manager of Roxy Theatres Corp., were held here.

Loew Bought M-G-M To "Protect" Circuit

New York—The fact that Famous Players Lasky started acquiring theatres had an important bearing in the late Marcus Loew's decision to acquire the old Metro company in 1922.

According to Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew believed that Famous Players' theatre expansion program was getting "the picture business in a hole with the public and he felt that protection for the properties our company had at the time would have been a business deal to acquire a company producing pictures."

Pittsburghers Among First to the Stand

PITTSBURGH—Several exhibitors from the local territory are expected to be among the first called by the government shortly after opening statements are made before Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard in New York.

All probable witnesses have been subpoenaed to appear in court June 4.

Among the exhibitors are Al B. Weiss of the Liberty and Capitol, McKeesport, Pa.; Tom Gilbert of the New Oakland in the Oakland section just outside Pittsburgh, and William Davis of the Triangle, this city. Davis has been seriously ill at Veterans' Hospital for many weeks and, according to his friends, is not expected to make the New York trip.

12-Year-Old Grievance

Weiss, in an interview with BOXOFFICE, stated he will appear. About 12 years ago, the exhibitor continued, he filed a complaint against the Warner circuit with the department of justice. His testimony will review the grievance and bring the situation up to date.

Whether or not the Pittsburgh exhibitor contingent will be sandwiched in between independent operators from the Philadelphia area is not known. It has been indicated the Quaker City group will be called to the stand first, but the men subpoenaed in this are insisting they have been instructed to be in court June 4 with every indication they will go on shortly after that date.

First Executives Are Lined Up

NEW YORK—Confirming a BOXOFFICE exclusive from Washington on May 11, the department of justice has lined up the first batch of industry executives to be called as witnesses in the all industry suit. The apparent reason for calling these men to testify immediately after opening statements are made to the court is the government desire to give the trial judge a picture of how the industry originated and developed from the lips of the men who created it.

Those subpoenaed so far include Neil F. Agnew, Barney Balaban, Nathan J. Blumberg, Ned E. Depinet, Harry Gold, J. R. Grainger, Sidney R. Kent, William Kupper, William P. Philips, William F. Rodgers, Jack Schlaifer, Gradwell Sears, David O. Selznick, Maurice Silverstone, Spyros P. Skouras, William A. Scully, William Sussman, Truman Talley, Herman Wobber and Adolph Zukor. To this list the government will make additions from time to time as the occasion demands.

The department has not been lax in subpoenaing its own witnesses, and so far has five from California; T. L. Tally, Richard Rowland, I. E. Chadwick, William W. Hodkinson and Jesse Goldberg. Charles Morse of Boston is the only one from Massachusetts so far.

However, from Pennsylvania, the first government center of attack, the department has called 36 witnesses. They include David Barrist of Philadelphia, H. A. Batastini, Alpine, Punxsutawney; Allen M. Benn, Belmont, Philadelphia; Joseph Conway, Egyptian, Bala-Cynwya; William Davis, Triangle, Pittsburgh; Herbert Elliott, Fern Rock, Philadelphia; Ben Fertel, New Colonial, Philadelphia; Albert Fischer, Keswick, Glenside; Harry Fried, Suburban, Ardmore; Henry Friedman, Lansdowne, Lansdowne; Thomas A. Gilbert, New Oakland, Pittsburgh; William Goldman, Philadelphia; George T. Graves, Carman, Philadelphia; Robert H. Hexter, Point Breeze, Philadelphia; Melwin Koff, Darby, Darby; Chris Lampros, Capitol, Farrell; Thomas Lazarick, New Ritz, Philadelphia; David Milgram, Philadelphia; George Naudascher, Cambria, Philadelphia; M. E. Ouslander, Pinebrook, Scranton; Harry Perelman, West Allegheny; Milton Rogasner, Iris; Henry Rosinsky, New Broadway; Sam Somerson, Palm; William Spiegel, New Lyric, and Charles Segall, all of Philadelphia; Harry Stahl, NuLuna, Sharon; Columbus Stamper, Rivoli, and Samuel Waldman, Garden, Philadelphia; Al Weiss, McKeesport; Joseph and William Weiss, McKeesport; Joseph Wodock, County, Doylestown; G. F. Wielland; I. Yaffe, Unique, and David Shapiro, Admiral, all of Philadelphia.

Monogram's Convention Schedule May Shift

NEW YORK—In order to secure accommodations at Adolph Zukor's estate at New City, N. Y., which is operating under private lease and open to the public, Monogram may push its eastern regional sales meeting up a week to June 7-8-9. This would automatically set the western conclave ahead one week from a scheduled session on June 21-22-23 to June 14-15-16. The eastern meeting at the Zukor estate is expected to bring about 45 delegates from Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Boston, Buffalo and New York.

RKO Has 113 Houses; Owns 49 Outright

NEW YORK—RKO, according to information filed with the New York Stock Exchange, owns, leases and operates 113 theatres of which 49 are owned outright, 10 were built upon leased land and the remaining 54 leased from others.

Of the 49 owned outright, the breakdown shows 20 are located in New York City, and two each in Dayton, Ohio, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Yonkers, N. Y. The company owns one outright in each of the following cities: Albany, Boston, Champaign (Ill.), Cincinnati, Denver, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Lowell (Mass.), Minneapolis, Montreal, Mt. Vernon (N. Y.), Newark, New Brunswick (N. J.), New Orleans, Ottawa, Rochester (N. Y.), St. John (New Brunswick), San Francisco, Schenectady, Trenton, Troy, Washington and Winnipeg.

Of the 54 leased, 16 are located in New York City, six in Cincinnati, five in Trenton, three in Syracuse, two each in New Brunswick, New Rochelle, Union City and Yonkers, and one each in Albany, Boston, Champaign, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kearney (N. J.), Mt. Vernon, Rochester, Rutherford (N. J.), St. Paul, Schenectady and White Plains, N. Y.

Of the 10 built on leased land, two each are located in New York City, Cincinnati and Cleveland, and one each in Columbus, Minneapolis, Providence and Syracuse.

Atlas, RKO, Rockefeller Own Most RKO Shares

NEW YORK—Atlas, RCA and Rockefeller Center, Inc., are the three largest stock holding interests in RKO, according to information filed with the New York Stock Exchange.

Number of shares owned by Atlas includes 29,216 of the six per cent preferred, equivalent to 22 per cent of the total outstanding; 719,518 of the common, equal to 26 per cent of the total outstanding, and 327,811 option warrants, or 12 per cent of the total outstanding.

RCA owns 44,757 of the six per cent preferred, equal to 35 per cent of the total outstanding; 316,327 of the common, equal to 11 per cent of the total outstanding, and 555,253 option warrants, equal to 21 per cent of the total outstanding.

Rockefeller Center, Inc., owns 563,629 shares of common, equal to 20 per cent of the total outstanding.

RKO has no funded debt, the report shows. The aggregate principal amount of the outstanding funded debt of the subsidiaries of the corporation which were included in the consolidation on January 1, 1940, was $21,833,957.

Pettijohn in Neely Anti for Majors

By EARLE A. DYER

WASHINGTON—Charging that "community freedom" sought by the public groups actually is "pressure censorship," C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of Amercia, opened the producer-distributor side of the Neely block booking measure at the hearing here. He predicted the proponents of the legislation would be "sadly disappointed" in its results if it ever were enacted.

As an answer to proponent contention block booking encourages the production of low moral content pictures, Pettijohn submitted the condemned list of the Legion of Decency, pointed out that none of the 14 pictures thereon was made by companies under the code administration supervision of Joseph Breen and remarked that each of the condemned features was sold singly.

Cites Playdate Data

To defend the majors against the charge that exhibitors are forced to buy a company's entire output without any privilege of rejection, Pettijohn presented data on the disparity in the number of playdates and cancellations among a number of good and inferior pictures.

Supporting the opponents, Representative John M. Costello of California warned the committee against "legislation which proposes serious injury or irreparable harm to the motion picture industry."

Analyzing the measure, the congressman declared there is nothing in it "to enable the public to influence selection by exhibitors" and that there can be no such thing as "community selection unless you actually establish a community board of censorship. The only way in which the people of a community can exercise any influence on the selection of pictures is through the boxoffice," he contended.

Defining block booking as wholesale merchandising, and blind selling as "really blind buying," Costello asserted that the only "compulsion" involved was that brought upon the exhibitor to take the number of pictures for which he had contracted.

Scores Moral Help Angle

"This proposed legislation cannot in any way tend to alter the type or moral fitness of the pictures produced," he told the committee. "That can only be done by censorship or boycott. The latter method was very effectively employed by the Legion of Decency."

Costello contended that if the bill were enacted exhibitors would have to buy their pictures one at a time, making from 52 to more than 200 contracts each year. Chairman Lea questioned the accuracy of that statement and the congressman explained that while the bill would permit block sales, the provisions of Section One were so written that if an exhibitor contracted for five films he might later allege that he was forced to take that number.

"If that were done," Costello said, "the producer might find himself liable to lawsuits. The wise thing for the producer to do would be to sell each picture individually."

He also criticized the synopsis provisions, asserting it was practically impossible to produce a picture which does not deviate from a synopsis in some way, and predicted that such variations, no matter how trivial, would be used by exhibitors as an excuse for the rejection of poor boxoffice films. At the same time, the congressman raised the question of what an exhibitor would do for product where he had rejected a picture he planned to show.

Allied Leaders Appear

Witnesses who appeared in support of the measure late last week and early this week included Col. H. A. Cole, president of Allied; Sidney E. Samuelson, formerly president of Allied of New Jersey and now identified with the Boston unit; Mrs. Ernest W. Howard of the District of Columbia Women's Clubs; Mrs. Sylvia T. Bushness of the Boston chapter of the Motion Picture Research Council; Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Miss Mary Leeper of the Association of Childhood Education.

Isaac E. Chadwick of Los Angeles, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Ass'n, declared that none of his group is active today because of block booking.

Ten years ago, he said, there were 34 independent producers putting out from 175 to 250 pictures a year; today there are 11, all of whom are awaiting passage of the Neely bill to restore their opportunities.

Chadwick laid all the ills of the independents at the door of block booking, which he said has filled the playing time of the theatres so that they have no room for independent productions.

"So tightly have the majors tied up the situation," he declared, "it is not only perilous but insane to attempt to produce under present conditions."

Explaining that he has not even started on production for the 1940-41 season and has no plans, the Los Angeles producer told the committee he has been selling the story properties he owned. He sold the rights to "Wizard of Oz" to Sam Goldwyn who, in turn, resold them to M-G-M at "not less than $75,000."

The majors are "doing a fine job as far as producing is concerned," he said, but the "major is a prisoner of his own device of B picture production," which was adopted, he charged, "to drive the independents out of business."

Chadwick testified that instead of 160 independent producers in Hollywood, as claimed, there are "less than 50," but that enactment of the bill would lead to a revival of both independent production and independent distribution.

"Quality Maintenance the Problem"

Washington—The real exhibitor problem in the immediate future is going to be how present quality standards can be maintained with 30 to 35 per cent of the industry's revenue cut off by the war, C. C. Pettijohn, MPPDA general counsel, warned at the Neely block booking bill hearing here.

"I don't see how it can be done," he said, "unless we take the 50 outstanding boxoffice attractions and play them, not at 30 per cent, on a 50-50 basis and raise admission prices to 65, 75 and 85 cents where they are now 25 and 35 cents."

"Women in War" Is A "Timely Hit"

Hollywood—At any time and under any circumstances, Republic's "Women in War" would command attention as a strong contender for substantial patronage and enthusiastic audience reception. Given the additional impetus of current world affairs, it is highly improbable that the picture can miss the hit class, particularly if treated to the intensive merchandising indicated by its inherent entertainment qualities.

The story is wisely constructed and phenomenally prophetic in its timeliness; the cast—with Elsie Janis, Wendy Barrie and Patric Knowles very impressive in the toplines—is excellent; and production and direction, contributed by Sol C. Siegel and John H. Auer respectively, are definitely of the big league calibre.—SPEAR.

Three Current Releases In Legion "B" List

NEW YORK—Three current releases from the majors are rated in the Class B—objectionable in part—division by the National Legion of Decency. They are:

"Torrid Zone," Warner, because of "suggestive and double meaning dialogue; lustful situations."

"Waterloo Bridge," M-G-M, because of "impressions of fatalism, suicide of heroine suggested in plot solution; too detailed references to and treatment of the heroine's moral lapse which, however, is presented as evil, unfortunate and unattractive."

"You Can't Fool Your Wife," because of "suggestive lines."

20th-Fox Gross $966,335 Weekly in First Quarter

NEW YORK—Gross income of 20th Century-Fox ran at the gait of $966,335 a week for the 13 weeks ended March 13, or a total of $12,562,362 for the period which represents the first quarter of the current fiscal year.

Net operating profit was $353,376, comparing with $1,224,250 for the similar quarter last year and a profit of $238,218, exclusive of $756,000 in dividends from National Theatres for the final quarter of 1939.

Asserts Neely Would Doom Subsequents

WASHINGTON—Declaring that double features are giving the public "movie indigestion," Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA of New York, told the House committee considering the Neely bill Friday that the independent subsequent run exhibitors are paying more for film now than they can afford and would be driven out of business if the anti-block booking measure were passed.

Brandt charged that the evils of the industry are the fault of the producers, distributors and affiliated theatres, but asserted that the Neely bill will do nothing to correct them.

Present Cancellations "Adequate"

Explaining that a house making five changes a week on a double feature basis uses 312 films a year, Brandt testified that present cancellation allowances are adequate.

He told the committee frankly the exhibitor bases his cancellations on purely economic reasons, but said he had not had a single complaint on moral grounds in the past three or four years.

Under the bill, he said, "pressure groups" would seek to control exhibition. "Very easily," Brandt continued, "a 'fifth column' squad could be built up in the United States on the basis of small organized groups forcing the small theatres to show pictures they think the public should see."

The great need of the industry today, in Brandt's opinion, is "honest arbitration," with the independent given a fair show on arbitration boards. He added, however, that he felt the problems of the industry should be worked out by the industry.

Sees Arbitration Hope

"Do you feel that the situation is promising enough that legislation should be deferred with the idea that the industry could produce a solution of these problems?" he was asked by Chairman Lea.

"If in the next six months honest arbitration does not come into our industry, our organization will be right in the front-line trenches to prepare a bill for this industry to be governed by the Congress rather than by the men who now are governing it," Brandt replied.

Inventories of the producing companies would be increased 50 to 100 per cent, requiring an additional $100 000,000 to $200,000,000 capital, and costs of distribution would be increased 25 per cent under the bill, Herman Wobber, general sales manager of 20th Century-Fox, testified.

One of the most drastic effects of the bill will be to take American pictures out of the foreign market, he said, not as a result of any provision in the legislation itself but because of the deterioration of quality which would follow.

Answering a question by Representative Patrick as to the effect of the bill upon the public, if all increased costs were passed along, Wobber estimated that admissions would have to be increased 15 to 20 per cent.

Arbitration Today "Rare"

In response to a question by Representative South, the witness denied that Brandt's appeal for "honest arbitration" meant that arbitration now was not honest, but admitted that arbitration today is "not very satisfactory and that the matter deserves careful thought." However, he said in answer to a question by Representative Ryan, arbitration is "very, very rarely resorted to" at the present time.

Wobber explained that the cancellation clause operates only where full output is bought, on the ground that when an exhibitor buys less he exercises his rejection privileges when he selects which of the company's pictures he will take. He added that the exclusion of pictures on racial, religious and moral grounds did not apply against any other cancellation, and told the committee that the exhibitor is the sole judge of the fitness of a picture on those grounds, and his decision is never contested by his company.

The hearings wound up for the week with testimony by Judge Roy L. Walker, president of the Theatre Owners Protective Ass'n of Texas, who attacked Allied's claims that Texas exhibitors are for the bill. More than 99 per cent are opposed to it, he said, outlining the bitter fight that has been waged over the measure in his state.

It Was a Misprint, Myers Insists

Washington—Came the clash between C. C. Pettijohn and Abram F. Myers long awaited at the Neely bill hearings:

Pettijohn said the Allied chieftain was a "representative of the distributors" under the Allied contract with Tiffany-Stahl Productions in 1929, which he submitted.

"That's a misprint," Myers shouted. "I was a representative of the exhibitors."

The contract stated that "Abram F. Myers, a representative of the producers," and one other person were to be members of an arbitration board.

Charts Metro's Course Under Neely Bill

WASHINGTON—M-G-M will immediately reduce production 25 per cent if the Neely anti-block booking bill is enacted, Wm. F. Rodgers, Metro general sales manager, told the House committee hearing arguments here, and would abandon the making of all but sure boxoffice pictures. It would sell singly only, because of fears of the synopsis provisions, and it might well be that costs would go up to exhibitors who could recoup themselves only by increasing admissions, with considerable question as to whether the public would pay more.

Only two companies, one his own, would be able to stand the burden of inventory and distribution expense imposed by the Neely bill, Rodgers asserted. "The present," he contended, "is no time to tamper with a system which has proved successful."

"Only Allied Dissatisfied"

The only exhibitor organization dissatisfied with present methods is Allied, and not all Allied members are in favor of the bill, it was asserted by Rodgers.

Rodgers, addressing himselves to questions put to C. C. Pettijohn, MPPDA counsel, regarding the possibility of a negotiated settlement of controversies, told the committee of the efforts made last year which resulted in "an agreement in principle with all groups of exhibitor bodies, including Allied."

"They later denied they had reached an agreement," he added, "but over many years of experience that has not been unusual, for them to deny agreements which have been made."

Assistant Attorney General Arnold was told of the effort before it was started, he said, and he told the distributors they would have to be guided entirely by advice of their attorneys. After the initial agreement was made it was sent to the department; exhibitors protested some of the provisions and a new draft was written, also sent to the department; further changes were sought and made and a third draft sent to the department. None received more than a mere acknowledgment of its filing. Then, the exhibitors pressing for action, the distributors went to the department, he said, and told Arnold they were going to put the trade practice code into effect in ten days. Almost immediately, Arnold announced that if they did so, they might face additional prosecutions.

Pettijohn dug up the Tiffany-Stahl contract of 1929 with Allied to argue that the exhibitors themselves were guilty of the practices which they now denounce and "carried them far beyond anything attempted today."

The contract, Pettijohn said, required the exhibitor to take the entire feature output, together with all shorts, for a period of five years at prices later to be set on the basis of an exhibition value three times the production cost, and required the exhibitor not only to pay for the pictures but to show them—with no cancellations.

Economy Programs Grip Studios

Hollywood—Sweeping retrenchment programs resulting from apprehension over the European situation swept the studios this week following the initial move taken earlier at a Warner economy meeting.

Twentieth Century-Fox executives were the second to act through the launching of a rigid economy regime throughout the studio with the immediate dismissal of more than 100 persons. Other plants are expected to follow with similar moves. Early effects of the retrenchment are registering in the publicity departments.

Jack L. Warner earlier called an "emergency meeting" of producers and department heads to launch a drive for stringent economies and the elimination of all waste motion in the studio's picture-making operations. Indicating there would be no slashing of personnel, Warner urged closer cooperation among all departments.

Metro Acquisition by Loew's Is Recited

NEW YORK—At the time Loew's acquired the old Metro company in 1922, Nicholas M. Schenck did not want to play the producer's product and was literally forced to book the pictures, he informed the government when questioned in the all-industry suit examinations. As the product improved, the pictures became an invaluable asset, but that was not until Louis B. Mayer and his associates revamped the studio setup.

Discussing clearance and acquisitions by Loew's, the head of the company explained the former has been in existence ever since he could remember and theatre additions were made because of sound business practice.

Herewith are a number of government questions and the witness' answers, as they appear on the record.

Q: After Loew's acquired Metro you used the Metro pictures in Loew theatres?

A: As little as I could possibly use.

Q: Do you agree with Mr. Loew's statement that the pictures were not very good at that time?

Cites Advantages

A: Not only agree, but I almost had to be forced to play them. I didn't like them. I didn't think they were good enough for our theatres at that time.

Q: What advantages did you obtain from this affiliation with production and distribution?

A: Well, after we started to make our pictures they got better and better and got to the top, as we are today—if I may say so—it almost sounds silly for me to say it; but nevertheless, that is a fact. Of course we got tremendous advantages, meaning that our producing company started to make real money and the pictures we played were a tremendous help for our theatres, because pictures which are very good are a great advantage to the theatre as well as the company making them.

Q: Did it, as a matter of fact, give you a competitive advantage over theatres in competition with you?

A: We didn't buy pictures exclusively. Everybody has a chance to buy good product.

Paramount's theatre expansion in 1920 and alleged threats to take the product away from Loew's resulted in the following:

Q: This matter of threatened competition by Paramount. Did it affect your going into production?

A: At that time it was a matter of investment. Should we throw our investment away or should we try and correct it and pull it out and get the fine results we have now? Fortunately, it happened to work out as I suggested.

Whether or not a theatre is affiliated with a producing or distributing company has no bearing on negotiations for first and early M-G-M runs, the witness declared.

On Clearance

Q: Have you established any policies with respect to clearance. On M-G-M product?

A: No. It is a matter of each individual situation, I think, controls that.

Q: Do you know whether at the time of the Metro acquisition Metro pictures were sold or distributed with clearance for or against particular theatres?

A: Clearance has been in existence as long as I can remember.

Q: Have you been active in arranging clearance for Loew theatres in New York City?

A: I do not remember how it developed. That is so many years back. As a matter of fact the clearance for many years was for a longer period than it is today.

Q: Haven't you extended the clearance held by Loew theatres over certain other theatres from time to time.

A: I don't think so. Just the opposite. We have given up clearance and shortened the time in between.

Q: Suppose a new theatre was constructed at the beginning of a season. How would you arrange clearance if you took clearance on that theatre?

A: The same as the rest of the Loew theatres. If we get seven days' clearance we would get the same on that theatre; that is all we get in New York.

Century's complaint against Loew was not on clearance but for a run of pictures. Referring to the late A. H. Schwartz, whom Schenck regarded as "a very good friend of mine," the witness said he was asked to give up some pictures and refused. Not only did Schwartz complain to Loew, but also RKO, which likewise declined to grant the request.

Determining exhibition values in advance is something Schenck is noted for, he said.

Q: Have you ever conducted any studies to determine the best way to return the maximum film rental on your pictures?

A: When you say "studies"—experienced men who have been in the business for as long as myself and for most of our people there is no reason for studying. We know, we feel it, we sense it. That is our business. I look at a picture, for instance, and

Capitol Important In Goldwyn Merger

New York—Do you remember the circumstances which led up to the merger between Metro and Goldwyn, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, was asked by the government examiner, John F. Clagett.

Replied the witness: "Why, there was an opportunity for us to firstly acquire the finest theatre at the time. It was doing a tremendous business at 51st St. and Broadway. Goldwyn owned the Capitol. It was a great asset. And also the studio property, man power and other facilities which they had.

"We believed they were in a very good position to make good pictures and I believe at the time they were making good pictures. Plus the players, and so forth, that they had, we thought it was a very good buy for our company."

Moskowitz, Vogel "Good, Able Men"

New York—Charles C. Moskowitz and Joseph R. Vogel, under whose guidance all theatres in the Loew circuit operate, were given a proverbial pat on the back by President Nicholas M. Schenck in his pre-trial deposition.

Asked if he ever called the men in for discussion on exploitation problems, the witness said "very seldom. But once in a while, naturally. I would want an opinion when I am in doubt.

"They have fine experience. They are good, able men."

Upholds Increasing Production Costs

NEW YORK—Defending Hollywood for increased costs of production, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, outlined reasons for the approximate rise of an average of $700,000 per picture in the past 16 years for M-G-M.

Improvement in quality is responsible, he asserted. "There is not a single thing that does not go into the making of a film, with the exception of raw stock, that is not more expensive. Everything has gone up and for very good reasons.

"Brain power. We get the best there is today. That goes for writers, producers and directors; it goes for stars and every department—art, scenic, etc.—every part that it takes to make a picture. It is the same the world over."

The questioning then veered to story material and Schenck was asked if the masterpieces are still used today.

"We do, but the way we develop them is something different. Talk about the days of 1924 and today there is no comparison. That goes for every company."

The examiner graciously agreed Schenck was correct.

There is no difficulty getting back increased costs on good pictures, the witness held. He also said he did not want to see low percentages for pictures because the only way to encourage good production is to keep percentage figures up.

Schenck With Loew's 33 Years, He States

New York—"I'm an old man now," Nicholas M. Schenck told the government examiner who asked him his early history in the business.

Going back over the years, the witness said he started with Marcus Loew in 1907 as a general all-around man and declined to take any salary while he was learning.

One thing he manages to do and that is visit the circuit's houses every once in a while. For 30 years he made the tour of local units every night.

I pretty nearly know how much that picture is going to gross, purely from experience. I know what the public, as a whole, wants. We may make mistakes, mind you, but on the whole I am pretty nearly 99 per cent right, so they say, in our industry. They say I am pretty good at it. Very often they ask me to see a picture, the other companies do, to tell them what I think it will do.

Loew's tried exclusive run policies in Atlanta, Ga., and Houston, Tex., but they didn't work out. It was an experiment, Schenck explained, and discontinued after a short while.

Q: What was the purpose of acquiring Loew's Ohio Theatres in 1928?

A: Well, that is our business, to get theatres when you can, and if they are a good buy. This was purely a good business deal.

"Purely Expansion"

Q: Did you acquire those theatres for an assured outlet for M-G-M product?

A: When we bought it there was no thought of that at all. It was purely a matter of expansion in our careful way of our theatre department. We have been going slow as no doubt you know by the record. We acquired in what we thought was a fine business section, where we didn't interfere with our customers.

The Poli New England theatres also were a "very nice buy," the witness said. Sylvester Poli "wanted something like $18,000,000 to $20,000,000 and we were not prepared to pay any such price. Eventually we bought it for very little money."

Q: Do you recall whether Sam Katz was interested in those houses about the time Loew acquired them?"

A: Never heard of it.

Loew's operates 73 theatres in the Greater New York area, including the Capitol on Broadway.

Q: Did you read your answers to the government's interrogatories?

A: I never looked at them.

Q: Do you have any definite purpose in acquiring additional theatres?

A: The business purpose of buying. We don't buy anything or don't develop a situation unless it looks like it is going to give us a good return as a theatre venture.

Q: Did you, Mr. Schenck, acquire an interest in the Willard, Mt. Vernon and Plaza from Century circuit?

A: We have a deal with them. That is correct.

Q: Do you have an interest in the theatre properties or an interest in the revenue?

A: Some we have an interest in the property and some in the revenue.

Schenck said that the circuit had been considering building a house in Corona at the time Schwartz came to him with the Plaza deal.

He was next questioned on the State, Los Angeles, and Warfield, San Francisco being taken over by Fox West Coast. Schenck said all his dealings were with Spyros Skouras, first as an independent and then representing FWC.

Operations in Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Memphis and other situations were then gone into in detail.

Q: Your distribution department has an assured outlet for the M-G-M pictures in Loew theatres?

A: That is correct with the exception that that is no help to them because there is no problem of having an outlet for M-G-M pictures.

"Don't Always Agree"

Q: Do Mr. Rodgers, Mr. Moskowitz and Mr. Vogel always agree with your suggestions?

A: We haven't any yes men. We have a very nice organization and very able men and we argue it out. Out of that comes a decision.

Q: Do you frequently make suggestions to Paramount and Warner on ideas for their pictures?

A: No, very seldom. The boys know I am a busy man. They can't get to me as often as they like to. I really am a busy man.

Q: What do you actually do in order to get a theatre back in the black?

A: We struggle with it. We do all kinds of things. That is showmanship. We do the best we can. We have theatres we turned from a loser to a good theatre.

Schenck cited an incident at the Lexington where a patron told him to have patience. Six months after hiring a hostess for the house it was back on its feet and "is one of the nicest houses we have."

In detail, the M-G-M president explained the formula on which the company loans out talent. It is similar to other producers, he said.

Q: Have the Loew theatres ever acquired an M-G-M franchise?

A: At no time.

Explains Loew-M-G-M Individuality

New York—Does Loew's operate independently of M-G-M, and vice versa? Here is the way Nicholas M. Schenck explains the individuality of both companies.

"Every once in a while the theatre department comes in with a complaint that Mr. Rodgers or Mr. Connors, or whoever they might be dealing with, want too much money and they can't afford to pay.

"I say 'don't pay them.'

"Then Mr. Rodgers will come in and tell me the other men don't pay enough, and I tell him, 'You go and get as much as you can.'

"It is a very good way of doing it. You get the best results that way."

Now supposing some theatre in Moskowitz's division was operating at a loss. Schenck would not wait to call for Moskowitz and discuss it. "I want to know why the theatre is losing money and his answer will be that it just can't get the clients.

"But I keep riding him about that."

It works out very well, he said.

SPAG Is Expected to Vote For Affiliation With SPG

NEW YORK—Membership of the Screen Publicity and Advertising Guild will vote Monday night on affiliation with the Screen Publicist Guild. The SPAG's advisory council already has approved the plan. SPAG members, who are employes of home office publicity and advertising staffs, are expected to vote overwhelmingly in favor of association with the coast unit.

Negotiations for contracts, it is said, will get under way shortly thereafter. Maximum and minimum wage standards are now being worked out with the SPAG's contract probably paralleling the SPG's standard of $100 weekly for senior members (three years and over) and a scale of $50 to $60 for junior members.

New Outlet for Negro Film Company After Aug. 1

NEW YORK—Distribution deal between Million Dollar Productions, producers of Negro features, and Sack Enterprises, Inc., expires by mutual agreement August 1. The pact has been in effect about a year. Al Weston, Million Dollar's eastern representative, is now on the coast conferring with Harry M. Popkin, president, on plans for new distributing setup.

Ben Golden Will Mediate AGVA-Circuit Dispute

NEW YORK—Ben Golden, former member of the NLRB, has been appointed mediator in negotiations between the American Guild of Variety Artists and the film circuits. The dispute is over length of booking time and the five per cent fee paid by the circuits to agents.

Group Selling Plan Flopped Years Ago

New York—Paramount's attempt to sell in blocks of five many years ago was short lived, according to Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew-M-G-M president.

"It was for a short time and it didn't work out," he stated. "I think they took a terrific loss doing it the year they tried it."

M-G-M has always sold in large blocks, the witness declared.

Contracts Are Held A Detail by Schenck

New York—Lawyers are not only employed by distributors for defending suits, but also to take care of contracts.

When Nicholas M. Schenck was asked by the government examiner in his pretrial examination if he ever saw an M-G-M sales contract, the president of Loew's answered he did not.

"I consider that a detail. That is what we have lawyers for."

Feel Powerless as Europe Crumbles

NEW YORK—The rapid demoralization of the continental market has cast a pall of gloom over the various foreign departments, mainly, because of a sense of futility in coping with the situation.

In rapid succession, the Scandinavian countries, Holland and Belgium have been wiped off the revenue-bearing side of the ledger. France has "frozen" all remittances since the beginning of the year. Some revenue is trickling in from the Balkan countries, but, as one executive describes it, "Even when the Balkans were at their peak, the revenue was insignificant."

Task of reorganizing the continental departments in line with present earning capacity, faces the major distributors who have high salaried European managers.

The financial loss, although considerable, is far from fatal. Continental revenue varies from 10 to 15 per cent of the total foreign income.

What the foreign managers fear is an attack on England. The cessation of all revenue from the United Kingdom would be a serious blow which undoubtedly would have wide repercussions throughout the industry.

Greenfields to Continue To Operate Boro Hall

NEW YORK—The family of Dr. Irving Greenfield, who is confined to a sanitarium, will continue to operate the Boro Hall, Brooklyn, through an arrangement made between Leon Rosenblatt and Morris Sanders and Rachmil & Katz. The latter, who operate in Brooklyn, acquired the lease on the house to follow the expiring pact held by the Greenfields. According to Rosenblatt, R&K have "promised" to relinquish the lease.

Columbia to Distribute New Government Film

WASHINGTON—Distribution of Pare Lorentz's "Fight for Life," the third of the epic films produced by the U. S. film service, will be handled on a national scale by Columbia, it is announced by the federal security agency.

The film was turned over to Columbia on a bid submitted in competition with six other companies seeking to handle the distribution.

Dave Gould, With Metro 14 Years, Quits Post

NEW YORK—Dave Gould, who has been with M-G-M for 14 years, has resigned from his post as manager of Puerto Rico. It is understood Gould quit in a dispute over handling the sales and managing the Loew Theatre there. Until recently, there had been a manager for the theatre. O. R. Schoham, formerly manager in Finland, is handling both jobs now.

Edward Peskay Represents Hal Roach in the East

NEW YORK—Edward Peskay, theatre owner, former Philadelphia district manager for the Warner circuit and most recently sales manager of defunct GN, has replaced Tom Walker, resigned, as eastern sales representative for Hal Roach. Walker is expected to announce a new affiliation shortly.

EDWARD PESKAY

Peskay is a veteran of some 30 years in the industry. He first entered exhibition in St. Louis for the Skouras Brothers. He operates theatres in New England and upper New York, which he has maintained since he was general manager for the Skouras circuit in New York from 1931 to 1936. Edward L. Alperson was president of GN when Peskay joined the company in 1937 as vice-president and sales manager.

Distributor Ministrations To Fair Patrons End

NEW YORK—If you're planning to attend the World's Fair sometime before it closes don't count too heavily on RKO, Paramount or Warner to plot your itineraries, secure gratis broadcast tickets, use their diplomatic influences to get reservations at the foreign restaurants or whittle down the price for four in a room at New York hotels. Not that any of these companies, which established elaborate services last year to make the visiting firemen feel at home, won't give you helpful hint or two in getting around Flushing Meadows if you ask them, but their attitude seems to be that "the Fair isn't new any more."

RKO set up a large reception room on the seventh floor of the RKO Building under the supervision of H. M. Richey last year for Fair visitors and this is being maintained, but there are no plans to send out special announcement to the trade inviting out-of-towners to take advantage of the lounge. Paramount and Warner, which also had special reception rooms and personnel for the same purpose, have discontinued them.

Canada Undecided On Remittances

Washington—Only reason the Canadian government has not slapped a ban on remittances to distributors fashioned after England's "embassy contract," according to official circles here, is Canadian officials are waiting to see whether dollars spent by American tourists in Canada this summer will balance the flow of exchange. It is estimated the Canadian revenue of the major companies averages about $250,000 a week or a yearly total of approximately $12,500,000.

Majors Invited to Allied Convention

CHICAGO—Special delegations are expected from several strongholds to the forthcoming national Allied convention June 19 to 21 at the Morrison Hotel here. Indications are a carload will come on from Pittsburgh, with large groups from Indianapolis, Minneapolis and other points. Many are also expected from Michigan, according to Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied and general chairman of the convention.

Kirsch said this week he had invited all major company executives and numerous circuit operators to the convention.

Coin-machine films, the "divorcement" and Neely block booking bills, film buying, double and triple features and premiums, are among the many points to be taken up, Kirsch told BOXOFFICE.

Warner Product Keyed For Domestic Market

CHICAGO—Warner's 1940-41 production plans will not only entail a greater expenditure than the current lineup but will be aimed almost entirely at the American market, S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, states. "We are not worrying about the foreign market now at all but will confine ourselves to ways and means of making better product for a larger gross return in the American market," is the way he put it.

In line with concentrating on American history and patriotic material for the new season, the company plans to drop such films as "William Tell" and "Beethoven," he adds. Mentioned as contemplated are "The Lost Battalion," "The Life of John Doe," "John Paul Jones," "The Amazing Story of Sergeant York" and others of this nature.

Faralla Will Produce Six Actioners for Columbia

NEW YORK—Contracts are expected to be signed next week whereby Dario Faralla, former Paramount and RKO producer and at one time First Division treasurer, will turn out six action features for distribution by Columbia for 1940-41. The group would be based on the Jack London stories that have Smoke Bellew as the central character, with George O'Brien to star. Faralla is said to be financing the project and has set $75,000 budgets on each of the films.

Loew and Paramount Sign License Pacts With Erpi

NEW YORK—Both Loew's and Paramount have signed license agreements with Erpi originally set up four years ago. Details of the contracts were agreed upon in 1936, but lawyers for the film companies have held up the signing because of various conditions which have made changes necessary. The other six majors are expected to sign shortly.

Consolidated Darkens Six Bronx Houses

NEW YORK — Claiming high rentals coupled with poor business leaves no other alternative, Consolidated will close six of its 13 Bronx houses for the summer this week. The houses are the Avalon, Fleetwood, Oxford, Ascot, Kingsbridge and Jerome.

According to a spokesman, the circuit usually shutters one or two for the summer. Some distributors, he charges, refuse to consider the situation and the circuit feels it is cheaper to lose money just on the rent.

Other closings reported are Randforce's Wilson and Empress in Brooklyn; Classic, Brooklyn; Rialto, Ridgewood Park, N. J.; Skouras darkens the Nemo, Manhattan, June 2, and the Empire, Rahway, N. J., closes June 9.

Marking its third acquisition in the Broadway sector for showing Italian pictures, Cine Roma now operates the Continental on Broadway and 52nd Street. It also has the Cinecitta and Cine Roma.

Herb Glebspan has acquired the 300-seat Playhouse, former summer stock house in Lake Mahopac, N. Y., for a regular film policy.

Walter Reade's Paramount, Asbury Park, N. J., reopened Saturday for the summer.

Few March Transactions Are Reported by SEC

WASHINGTON—Transactions of film company officers and directors in the securities of their corporations in March were few, the first semi-monthly report of the securities and exchange commission showing trades in only two companies, as follows:

Universal Corp.: Acquisition of 3,500 common voting trust certificates by J. Cheever Cowdin, director, New York; 1,700 by Preston Davie, director, New York, and 2,000 by Daniel M. Sheaffer, director, Philadelphia.

Universal Pictures: Disposition of 70 shares of cumulative first preferred stock and acquisition of 100 shares of common stock by Preston Davie, director, New York.

Work Toward Compromise In Sam Phillips Case

NEW YORK—A compromise proposal reached in arbitration proceedings over the dismissal of Sam Phillips, former head booker of the Big U Exchange, will be discussed early in the week between William A. Scully, general sales manager, and Phillips.

Arbitration resulted when Phillips' union, the American Federation of Office Employes, Local 20940, intervened for Phillips who had been with Universal over 20 years. E. C. Grainger and Ed Raftery served as arbitrators.

Postponement Unexplained

NEW YORK—No explanation was given for postponement of a scheduled UA board meeting Tuesday.

Two Distributors Cup Ear To Italian Market Bid

NEW YORK—The majors' "united front" stand against shipping films to Italy may be broken if weekend conferences among executives of two distributors crystallize.

Although these sources admit any such action, if it eventuates, would be contrary to an agreement by the majors to stay out of Italy until more equitable trading terms are offered they aver "we cannot afford not to take advantage of cash propositions made in face of the general foreign situation."

If deals are consummated by these companies and they are attacked for ignoring their moral obligation to other majors, their executives offer a more practical justification for the contemplated move. This stems from the declared understanding the original reason for not accepting the Italian agency's offer was it would set a precedent for other foreign countries to follow.

"Well," says one spokesman, "we can forget about precedents now. With one country after another becoming embroiled in the war each week their governments' attitude toward how much money they see fit to release for film rentals is not going to depend on what happens in Italy; not by a long shot. We might just as well take advantage of the only country that is non-belligerent, ready, willing and able to lay some cash on the line, because even this may be entirely lost to us soon."

Subpoenas Rounding Up Production Leaders

NEW YORK—During the week Samuel Goldwyn, Jack and Harry Cohn, and Abe Montague were summoned as witnesses in the government anti-trust suit. Also subpoenaed to appear during the second week of trial have been Joseph Bernhard, Y. Frank Freeman, Sam Katz, Al Lichtman, Charles C. Moskowitz, E. M. Saunders, Nicholas M. Schenck, Albert, Jack and Harry Warner, Cliff Work and Sol Lesser.

Impending summonses are reported facing Charles Chaplin, Joseph Schenck, Darryl F. Zanuck and Louis B. Mayer, whom to subpoena, court permission had to be obtained, since they are among the group outside the 100-mile radius of the hearings.

Also named as witnesses by the government have been H. P. Van Pelt, special agent of the FBI in Chicago; George K. Spoor, also of Chicago; J. M. McGrath and H. B. Robinson, FBI men.

Seymour Simon, special attorney for the government, now is working in Washington with Robert L. Wright, on the special master's report in the Balaban & Katz case in Chicago.

Delivery of Chaplin Film Coming Season Is Assured

NEW YORK—Assurance that the untitled Charles Chaplin picture will be delivered by UA for the coming season is given by Murray Silverstone. Reports to the contrary, he vehemently denies.

Technicolor Earnings Jump in Quarter

NEW YORK—First quarter earnings of $562,094 for Technicolor, Inc., show an increase over $310,468 for the same period last year. Shipments for the first quarter approximated 30,900,000 feet as compared with 21,000,000 feet for the corresponding period in 1939.

Despite the war major studios are planning 15 features in Technicolor during the forthcoming season, Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president, revealed at the annual stockholders' meeting. He said never had there been more than 12 produced in one year.

Dr. Kalmus said Technicolor Corp. is making progress in the development of special effects for producers and that all photographic characteristics of the film have been improved.

Members of the board, Albert Fritschi, James H. Hayes, A. W. Hawks and H. R. Cann, were re-elected for three years.

All officers were re-elected: Kalmus, president; George F. Lewis, vice-president and secretary, and L. G. Clark, treasurer.

RKO Foreign Contingent To Annual Convention

NEW YORK—From the foreign field to the RKO convention here opening Monday will come Reginald Armour, continental European manager; Gus Schaefer, Latin America supervisor; Pedro Saenz, manager of Cuba and Ned Seckler, home office representative stationed there; Fred Gulbransen, manager of Panama; and Max Gomez, manager of Mexico. Ben Y. Cammack, assistant to Phil Reisman and who recently returned from a survey of Latin America, will complete group of overseas representatives. Schaefer, Saenz and Seckler arrived on Sunday.

Day on Peru-Brazil Survey for 20th-Fox

NEW YORK—Stanley J. Day, formerly 20th Century-Fox manager of Colombia, sails Friday on a home office assignment to survey Peru and Brazil.

W. Van Beveren, now in Paris as assistant to Continental Manager Ben Miggins, leaves shortly for South Africa where he will take over for Otto Bolles, managing director, who is due here for home office conferences.

Canadian Border Houses Face a Money Problem

ALBANY—The continuing rise in the discount rate on Canadian money is creating a problem for theatres on the American side of the border. Latest rate quoted is about 21 per cent, double that at the outbreak of the war.

Two Ind'p't Circuits Reported for Sale

NEW YORK—Reports were current during the week that two independent circuits were for sale in the Greater New York area. One involved the Dave Snaper chain of four New Jersey theatres, the other mentioned Consolidated being taken over by Fabian.

Snaper could not be reached for comment, while Sam Rosen of the Fabian circuit stated about seven years ago a deal had been seriously discussed with Laurence Bolognino of Consolidated but since then nothing has been done to revive the negotiations.

Consolidated has been mentioned many times in the past few years as being offered to RKO and other circuits because of a desire by Bolognino and his partners to retire. The Snaper report, heard widely in the last week, is the first time it has cropped up.

Cocalis Wage Scale Row Delays Deal With RKO

NEW YORK—Unsuccessful negotiations with Local 306 on a wage scale are holding up completion by RKO of a deal to acquire six Cocalis houses in the Bronx. It is charged the scale now prevailing in the Cocalis units involved is much lower than that which Local 306 is demanding.

George Wheeler Is Chief Booker for Chain of 22

WASHINGTON—George Wheeler, brother of Sam, branch manager of 20th-Fox here, has been appointed chief booker for an independent circuit of 22 houses here. He has been a salesman for Columbia and office manager and booker for GB.

Fills Harris' Post

NEW YORK—Charles Deardourff, M-G-M exploiteer, has been temporarily assigned to fill Milton Harris' job as publicity head for Loew's Cleveland theatres, according to Joseph R. Vogel. A permanent appointee will be made shortly.

Kallet in Booking Deal With Cohen, Kutcher

ALBANY—Unable to get together with Jimmy Sporado and Ed Scholemson for their theatres in Ellenville, Mike Kallet's plans to acquire a group of Sullivan county independent houses has fallen through with the result he has made a three-year booking and buying deal with Max Cohen and J. Kutcher for the Broadway and Rialto, Monticello, and the Liberty, Liberty. The two exhibitors also are building the Academy, Liberty, which will fall under the arrangement.

Sporado operates the Ellenville, Ellenville, and Scholemson has the Woodbourne, Woodbourne, and recently opened the Nordbury at Ellenville, with Leo Justin and Morris Jacks of New York interested.

Members of N. J. Allied Study Product Results

NEW YORK—Allied of New Jersey is setting up a schedule of comparative business done by its members on all companies' product as a gauge toward establishing values when new deals are negotiated, according to Lee Newbury, following a combination board and general membership meeting at the Hotel Astor. The information will be contained in a form sheet to be circulated among members, he said.

Although Maury Miller, chairman of the membership committee, was absent and no report on the organization's drive was available, it was decided to expand these efforts, Newbury added. He declared the annual convention has been tentatively set for the third week in September in Atlantic City. Election of officers is on the agenda.

Shake Up "U" Sales Force; Shift Al Herman to Hub

NEW YORK—In a shakeup in Universal's eastern sales force, Al J. Herman, formerly eastern district manager, has been transferred to Boston as branch manager. William P. Kelly, former branch manager, becomes Herman's assistant. William A. Scully, general sales manager, will name the new district manager following his return from New Orleans.

Projectionists Rate 'Wind' a Roadshow

NEW YORK—Exhibitors in New Jersey playing "Gone With the Wind" are experiencing a new problem with the various operator unions in their towns. According to word received by the loc M-G-M exchange, exhibitors have been forced, in many instances, to pay projectionists on a basis of a roadshow engage ment rather than the regular wage provision. Some theatre owners, it is stated, have paid 30 to 50 per cent increases to booth help during the run of the picture.

In a number of cases, the demand for increased pay had not been made until the opening of the picture, it is asserte And this has somewhat complicated matters at the exchange in figuring operat ing expenses. Exhibitors usually make up their cost sheets in advance and have submitted them at the time of making a deal with the exchange. In many cases, the expense sheet has had to be increased because of the operator situation.

No such cases have been reported in the Greater New York area, it is stated, where Local 306 dominates. The question of whether "Gone With the Wind" played on a roadshow basis arose only in the instance of the Astor where it is being played on a two-a-day basis and has just completed its 22nd week.

Exports to Belligerents Build "Takes" in S. A.

NEW YORK—Increase of business in the South American countries as a result of the export trade to belligerent nations is being reflected at the boxoffice, according to Ben Y. Cammack, assistant to Phil Reisman, RKO's vice-president in charge of foreign sales.

Cammack, who has just completed a six-month tour, reports Latin American taxes and exchange restrictions are hurting the revenue of the American companies.

Schenectady Palace Closed

SCHENECTADY — The Palace, recently operated by Sam Rosenblatt, is closed.

Attending Leo's Third Regional Meet—

More than 50 home office executives, district and branch managers and salesmen gathered at the Astor, the third M-G-M district conference. The men from the field came from Buffalo, Albany, New Jersey, New York, New Haven, Boston, Charlotte, Washington and Philadelphia exchanges, as pictured here in one of those quiet moments.

You Live and Learn, Jack Cohn Muses

New York—The claim that the Motion Picture Associates or its predecessors has dispensed charitable aid to the less fortunate in the industry locally for the past 20 years surprised Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president, to the point that he was moved to observe: "It's hard to believe this bunch has stuck together for 20 years; most men can't live that long with their wives."

Jack Cohn Lends His Support—

At a special meeting of the M. P. Associates, Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia (center figure), promised his support as intermediary in seeking financial aid from major companies for the local relief fund. At the dais when the meeting was held at the Astor are David A. Levy, Moe Streimer, Cohn, Emil K. Ellis and his brother, Jack, president of the organization.

Says Profit Is Sole Product Gauge

NEW YORK—If the Loew circuit could make more money by using Paramount, that company would take preference over M-G-M.

That's the way C. C. Moskowitz, head of metropolitan New York operations, put it in his examination before trial in the all-industry suit.

"We give preference to M-G-M because it is the better product," he explained.

Yet the affiliated company gets the same booking and buying treatment as anyone else. If M-G-M has a poor picture it gets no better playing time than the same quality product from other companies, he said and added he would use more Paramounts if that company's product were superior to M-G-M because it is his job to see Loew theatres under his supervision make money, and "that's all I'm concerned about."

When the examiner asked if M-G-M got more preferred playing time than any one else, Moskowitz stated Loew's gives the best pictures weekend time. "This week we are playing a Bing Crosby picture he made for Paramount. Next week it may be a Universal picture on the weekend."

Declaring he had given M-G-M no favors in extending preferred time, the witness said distributors were always after him on that, including Paramount which "wouldn't stand for" Loew's giving choice dates to M-G-M if both companies had pictures of equal merit.

In 1927, Loew's made ten-year franchises with Paramount and UA for the local territory. In the last 15 years there have been few two-year deals with various companies. Both long-term franchises included a provision for time in theatres to be acquired. On the short-term arrangements there was no reason for such a clause, Moskowitz said, because the theatres could be specified, such as a house in construction which would be in operation the second year of the deal. Under the Paramount franchise, the distributor could either designate all or half of the product to Loew's, but had to give a year's notice if a change in designation was to be made, Moskowitz explained. He said he never consults William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of M-G-M, on deals Loew's makes with other distributors or which Rodgers makes with other circuits.

"I don't believe he could get this information if he asked for it, but he never has. I don't think my information should be made available to him and vice versa. Each has our own province and I believe we should stick to it," he declared.

Further, Moskowitz added, "I don't think it good business to give information to the sales department. Why should they know what I pay somebody else? My problem is running theatres. I don't know, on the other hand, if it would be a help to give them figures. It might not."

Moskowitz said there was no policy in this regard and that Nicholas M. Schenck, president, has never set down a rule or discussed it with him.

Effort to Draw Data On Theatre Deals Fails

NEW YORK—The department of justice, through John F. Clagett, examiner, made an effort to elicit from Charles C. Moskowitz information regarding the closing of the Terminal, Newark, N. J., by George Skouras; whether Loew's and Warner each contributed one-third of the rent to keep the Orpheum, Memphis closed; whether M-G-M had been dissatisfied with its first run customer in Denver, which led subsequently to the circuit buying an interest in the house, and details which resulted in the leasing of the Warfield, San Francisco, some years ago by Loew's to Fox West Coast.

In all instances, Loew's metropolitan New York operating head said he was not familiar with the situations for one reason or another, principally because the houses involved were not under his jurisdiction.

Take 'Em Where It Looks Good

New York—Loew's has no definite policy on acquisition of theatres, stated C. C. Moskowitz in his deposition at pre-trial examinations.

"If there is a neighborhood which is being developed and we thought a Loew house would be profitable, we would try and get a theatre there."

While not mentioning the specific case, Loew's some time ago closed a deal with Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. for the 2,000-seat house being constructed in the Parkchester development in the Bronx. The house is not expected to be ready until after Labor Day and appears to be in line with the testimony cited. The circuit has a 21-year lease and the theatre will be named either the Park or Parkchester.

Mohawk Has 19 Ready

NEW YORK—B. H. Mills and Jack S. Berkson will head Mohawk Film Corp., which recently acquired the Grand National assets for liquidation. The company is placing a group of 19 features on sale to independent exchanges throughout the country. Berkson leaves shortly to arrange for franchise deals.

See a Clear Track For the Big Suit

NEW YORK—With major attorneys focusing all efforts on preparation of the all-industry suit, the consensus among counsel is that none of the smaller government suits such as the Crescent, Schine and Griffiths actions, will come up for trial until the big case is disposed of in the local federal court.

Federal Judge Elmer Davis in Nashville recently handed down an order advising the department of justice to be prepared for trial of the Crescent action by May 25. Home office counsel are of the opinion this was in reference to a bill of particulars granted defendants, but not delivered by the government.

Although local counsel has been retained in each of the cities where the smaller suits have been instituted by Thurman Arnold's staff, important home office counsel will be on hand in each instance during trial, if and when the pending cases reach that stage.

In view of this, distributors will seek adjournments, should trial dates be set, on the ground attorneys cannot be in New York on the all-industry suit and in the field at the same time. The department of justice, it is hinted, intends to press the smaller suits. Whether Arnold will acquiesce to continuances without appearing before local judges is not known. The impression, however, prevails that, as the big case progresses, stipulations on the three other pending suits will be entered so as not to embarrass legal staffs concentrating on preparation and defense in the New York action.

First Drive-In Near Albany Opens Outside Rensselaer

ALBANY—The first drive-in theatre in the Albany territory made its bow with the opening of the one constructed by Owen M. Gatelee and John F. Holmes of Springfield, Mass., on Albany-New York Road outside of Rensselaer.

Warner Theatres' Artist Dies

ALBANY—Walter J. Stur, head of the art department in Warner Theatres zone office, died May 19. Funeral services were held here. A brother, living in New York City, and a sister, residing in Buffalo, survive.

Loew's Has Losers, Too

New York—Concluding the pre-trial examination of C. C. Moskowitz, the government examiner finally got around to the gathering of daily reports on Loew circuit operations.

Moskowitz said he gets daily reports from which he makes up his own monthly, quarterly and semi-annual calculations.

"Have you had a theatre that didn't make a profit?"

"Lots of them."

And while he has discussed these situations with N. M. Schenck for advice and suggestions, at no time has the matter of relinquishing them come up, he averred.

To continue with Moskowitz, "I'm not bragging, but we have plenty of theatres in this territory which have and still are losing money. Despite this, we cannot get adjustments on film rentals," he said.

Court Hears Educ'l May Be Reorganized

NEW YORK—Court news of the week was highlighted by the possibility Educational Films may be reorganized. During the past week a hearing was held before Referee John E. Joyce in federal court at which time Edmond V. Halley, Earle W. Hammons' nephew, said he was considering reorganization. The hearing was called as a result of Halley's desire to foreclose on 20,000 shares of stock of the company originally given to Hammons' mother for a $6,000 loan and turned over to Halley. James A. Davidson, trustee of Educational, claims irregularity in the transfer and seeks to restrain the foreclosure. The referee's decision was to hold up any action on Halley's part until 30 days after Judge Edward A. Conger decides whether or not to retain Davidson as trustee.

A suit by Max G. Felder and Ben Braudie, two members of the Motion Picture Division of the Theatrical Agents and Treasurers Union, against Joseph Silverman, secretary of the union, and Charles P. Carroll, was disclosed in supreme court. Suit claims numerous acts of alleged misconduct by the officers and asks appointment of a receiver and an accounting.

Federal Judge William Bondy, in deciding on an application by RKO to hire counsel to protect its position in defending the $2,025,214 claims for allowances filed against it, declared the application was unnecessary as the company is now on its own and can hire anyone it sees fit.

May 27 was set for trial of Gloria Carruthers' suit against Loew's for $250,000 damages in supreme court. The stage actress, better known as Princess Zulieka, claims libel in "Idiot's Delight."

The appellate division of the supreme court has confirmed a decision ordering Peyton Gibson, secretary of the board of Universal, to appear for examination before trial in connection with Wilhelm Karol's $60,000 suit against the company. Karol, a former employe, claims to have secured the company $400,000 from Guiseppe Musso of Rome for distribution of 1938 product.

The Moredall Realty Corp., operators of the Capitol, have paid Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes $4,723, representing one-fifth of the net profits of "Letty Lynton" during the film's exhibition at the theatre. Loew's plagiarized the plaintiffs' play, "Dishonored Lady," in the film.

Carrington North, Ralph S. Willard and Bruce Vernee have been ordered by Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy to appear for examination before trial in California in connection with Ferdinand Voteur's $250,000 suit against Columbia. Voteur claims plagiarism of his story, "Resurrection Morning," in "The Man Who Lived Twice."

Mecca Film Labs filed a $4,000 supreme court action against Carmel Productions, Alfred Traum, Peter K. Kassler and Samuel Carmel, claiming failure to pay a promissory note signed in December and due in January.

It's former Mayor James J. Walker, guest of honor, talking to Ampa members at a luncheon meeting. He said a lot more, but mostly "in retrospect" of the 25 years' association he apparently has enjoyed with the film arm of the entertainment world. Co-guest of honor was Blanche Ring, who led a community sing of some of Walker's song-writing efforts. "Uncle Don," of radio fame, was among the guests. He had with him Marcelle Wissman and Buddy Swan, contest winners who leave next week to take leading roles in Monogram's "Kid Reporters." President Leon Bamberger announced the season will end after two more meetings.

52 for RKO; 26 Top Budgeters

New York—In a last minute change, George J. Schaefer, RKO president, announces the company's 1940-41 lineup will include 52 features, 26 of which will be in the top-budget category.

Art Menken, Paramount ace cameraman and formerly of Bob Denton's staff in the Washington office, is the lad who scooped the actual bombing of the British troop transports by Nazi bombers while en route to England, the scenes being timely flashed on the screens of the downtown Earle, Metropolitan and Trans-Lux theatres. Working on a hunch an air attack on the transports was imminent, Art begged passage from the English officials. His feat of grinding the most vivid and hair-raising shots under fire which smack of camera history, is most noteworthy and more than substantiates his title of "Ace."

Federal Ticket Tax Climb Continues Through April

WASHINGTON—Federal admission tax collections in April topped the $2,000,000 mark for the second successive month, totaling $2,000,902.18, according to the monthly report of the bureau of internal revenue.

The month's collections, however, failed to come up to the March figure of $2,390,-931.82, although they were $616,180.46 above the April, 1939, revenue of $1,384,-721.72.

At the present rate, collections for the fiscal year which ends June 30 will be some $3,000,000 above a year ago, the total for the first ten months—$18,451,-216.93—showing a gain of $2,077,663.15 over the $16,373,553.78 collected to the end of April, 1939.

The greater part of this increase, it was shown, was accumulated since January 1. Collections for the first four months of this year were $7,731,132.46, compared with $6,058,979.44 for the same period a year ago, an increase of $1,672,153.02.

Seek Protection of Prints In Invaded Countries

NEW YORK—The MPPDA has been asked by member companies to invoke the aid of the state department in Washington to secure protection "by whatever means are available" for its films in Holland, Norway and Denmark. The move is based on the assumption that as long as these three countries are supposed to be under the "protective custody" of Germany, the U. S. government should make proper representations to see that Germany does not confiscate the distributors' prints and use them to advantage.

Bioff, Pegler and Nick Haunt IA's Browne

NEW YORK—Although local observers believe IATSE President George I. Browne will poll a unanimous vote to give him his fourth successive term on the basis of his accomplishments over the past year, the organization's four-day convention in Louisville, starting June 3, is expected to provide fireworks when Browne attempts to "talk his way out of the Willie Bioff case, the Westbrook Pegler situation and the John P. Nick scandal" in St. Louis.

Browne may use a "smoke screen" in the form of pointing up progress in the strengthening of the IATSE in major exchanges and the 30 locals recently chartered in the boxoffice treasurers' field, it is said, but "he has an account to settle in respect to the prestige of the organization in explaining the three other matters," as one source puts it. However, Browne's personal popularity is seen as overcoming any resentment "as it might be translated into action."

A topic that may flare into a major issue revolves about Altec, whose purported "inclusive service" is said to be aimed at "servicing everything in the house," and which is claimed to be "stepping on the toes of projectionists." Action also is expected to be taken toward consolidating IATSE's lines in the 16mm field, which is said to be decidedly on the upbeat. It is the organization's feeling, union observers say, that its members should be employed where 16mm showings are performed for large public groups, whether they be commercial or educational.

In fact, as one spokesman puts it, "wherever there is projection, the IATSE says 'me, too'." This attitude may resolve itself into action in respect to jurisdiction in the television field and the recent influx of nickel-in-the-slot machines that employ amplifiers, which must be serviced.

Harland Holmden of Cleveland, presently a third vice-president, is seen as a logical election successor to Nick, who held the post of first international vice-president. If Browne is re-elected president it will be his first under the new four-year term amendment. His three previous administrations were two-year terms. About 1,000 delegates, including representatives from the Bahama Islands and Hawaii, are expected. There will be about 15 commercial equipment displays.

Summer Situations Reopen Around Albany Territory

ALBANY—Summer situations where theatres are reopening and dates, include: Lake, Lake George, owned by Mrs. M. A. Carpenter and managed by Bob Yates, old time vaudevillian, on May 25; Adirondack, Speculator, owned by Mrs. Rose Gallup, and operated with her husband, on about Decoration Day; Capitol, Elizabethtown, operated by Dave Rosenbaum and his wife, June 2.

Two hotels in the Adirondacks, Saranac Inn, Saranac Lake, and Loon Lake, Loon Lake, will start to screen pictures in their Casinos about July 1. Both will run shows three nights weekly.

Delay Unionization Talks Until June 1

NEW YORK—Negotiations for a contract covering Albany exchanges which voted to unionize, have been postponed until June 1, according to word here. It is reported the distributing companies asked for a delay until the conventions were out of the way. Several union meetings have been held in an Albany hotel, Edward Flaherty of Local 2940, American Federation of Bookkeepers and Accountants, being the principal speaker.

Several new members have been taken in recently. The union claims more than 60 per cent of all front office employes are in its ranks. Only Metro and Paramount exchanges are not organized.

A bone of contention is whether chief bookers should be considered regular employes or office managers. The companies are said to hold they are in the latter category and therefore ineligible for union membership. The union insists that a large part of their work is booking; that only one Albany exchange employs a man solely as office manager and he is not in a branch that has been organized. Branch managers and salesmen are not unionized.

Union Dickers With Warner For Albany Exchange Pact

NEW YORK—American Federation of Office Employes, Local 20940, is negotiating here with Al Schwalberg, head of exchange operations for Warner, for a contract covering the Albany exchange. The union has been carrying on an organizing drive among the Albany exchanges and claims more than 60 per cent of the front office employes.

Drive to Unionize All Lab Men in Metropolitan Area

NEW YORK—A drive to unionize all laboratory workers in the metropolitan area is under way by Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratories Technicians Union. The union, it is said, is concentrating on smaller and independent labs which have banded together in an employers' group in an effort to forestall union contracts.

The union claims over 90 per cent of the workers in the metropolitan area are members and has enlisted the aid of affiliated IATSE unions for the drive.

Local 306 Extends Picket Line to Pair in Bronx

NEW YORK—Local 306 has extended its picketing of independent houses to the Mosholu and President, both in the Bronx. Other theatres facing a picket line are the Greely Square and New 14th Street, Manhattan, and the Livonia and Monroe, Brooklyn.

NEW YORK—Illustrated guides on three features and Warner Bros.' series of patriotic shorts have been prepared by the motion picture committee of the Department of Secondary Teachers of the National Education Ass'n. The features include "Our Town," "Edison, the Man" and "Tom Brown's School Days."

PHILADELPHIA

FOUR HUNDRED filmites dined, danced and popped champagne bottles (presented by Bob Lynch, Metro) at the third anniversary dinner-dance of Local B-7, film exchange employes union in the Broadwood Hotel . . . Louis Krouse, general secretary of IATSE, was presented with a pen and pencil set; Bill Porter, the local's president, with a radio . . . Guest speakers were Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chief of the censor board; Jay Emanuel, Variety Club chief; Harry Weiner, Columbia, and Sam Gross, Fox . . . Charles Smith, Clark, got a special award for his work in stimulating a big turnout . . . The affair was followed a few days later by a cake cutting at the menage de Porter, attended by the local's officers.

William Herchenrider, Warner theatres booker, is ill in Graduate Hospital . . . Ray Schwartz, Affiliated, is mourning the death of his mother . . . Si Myers, former proprietor of the Criterion, Moorestown, and former Metro employe, has taken over the Garden, Trenton . . . Morris Fishman, recently with the Capitol, Reading, has joined the Masterpiece staff.

William U. Bethel, veteran of many years with Metro and lately Harrisburg salesman for Columbia, has resigned. Friends say he may pick up a little theatre just to keep a hand in the business . . . Joseph Schaeffer, former Columbia city salesman, will take his place, and Joe's will be taken by Joseph Engel, formerly with Universal in this city and later in Albany. He is a brother of Jack Engel, present Universal salesman . . . Bud Hissner, Academy, Lebanon, is giving his lungs a workout rooting for the Phillies.

Fellows you bumped into last week: Roscoe Faunce, Village, Ocean City; Harry Stiefel, Ephrata; Harry Chertcoff, Strand, Lancaster; George Riester, Shamokin; Walter Yost, Grand, Harrisburg . . . Earle Sweigert, Paramount branch head; Ulrik Smith, sales manager, and George Beatty, Scranton salesman, rolled off to the Los Angeles convention . . . Beatty got the ride as a reward for winning the "100 per cent club" citation . . . Charles Malley, booker, is planning another trip to Scranton in connection with the Earle Sweigert Drive, which winds up July 13 . . . Clara Kraftsow, Paramount cashier, is nursing an infected foot.

William C. Karrer, Republic, president of Motion Picture Associates, reports the organization has been granted a state charter, which will be officially presented by Attorney Al Cohen at a luncheon in the Broadwood, June 29. That will be the beginning of the group's formal activities . . . First thing on the program for the fall will be a testimonial dinner for all branch managers.

Bill Morgan, Grand, Vineland, achieved the unusual by getting a tieup with a hospital—of all things—for "GWTW." He had the winner of the local Scarlett contest appear there, and the hospital announced the picture on bulletin boards and in its mail . . . Harry Orlow, Levoy, Millville, ran a cooking school session on his stage. Local merchants cooperated with displays and prizes.

RKO Promotes Four Men In Canadian District

NEW YORK—The promotion of four men by RKO in the staff of Leo Devaney's Canadian district, all of which came about through the resignation of J. F. Meyers as Toronto manager, was announced by Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager.

The changes are: Mark Plottel, formerly Montreal manager, moves up to head of the Toronto branch; Hatton F. Taylor advances from top post at the Calgary office to manager of Montreal; Joseph McPherson goes from Calgary salesman to manager of that office; Paul Cardell, formerly Calgary booker, moves up to salesman in the same office, and Robert Radis has been engaged as booker at Winnipeg to fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Hugh Conway from booker to Toronto salesman.

Ticket Taker Dies in Fire At Harmanus Bleecker Hall

ALBANY—Harmanus Bleecker Hall, 2,300-seat house originally built for stage shows but in recent years used mainly for motion pictures, was wrecked in a spectacular fire that started a half hour after the final Sunday night show and took the life of Albert Crier, a landmark at the theatre as ticket taker and poster man.

The Fabian chain had been operating the Hall as a second run for four or five years on lease from the former director, Christopher H. Buckley. Buckley, who now conducts the General Stark in Bennington, Vt., rushed here to view the wreckage. He said it appeared to be an almost total property loss.

The building was carried on the assessment rolls at $255,000.

Ascap Hearing on Federal Subpoena Now on May 29

NEW YORK—Due to the necessity of appearing in Albany on another matter, Ascap attorneys, Louis D. Frohlich and Herman Finkelstein, won an adjournment until May 29 on the hearing to quash a federal grand jury subpoena calling for submission of Ascap's records for examination by the department of justice.

Collect Half of Quota in United Jewish Appeal

NEW YORK—Over $150,000 of the $300,000 quota set for the amusement division of the United Jewish Appeal was collected at the luncheon honoring Rabbi Hillel Silver at the Hotel Astor. The luncheon signalized the start of the drive under the leadership of Co-chairmen David Bernstein and Major Albert Warner.

No Releasing Arrangement Set Yet for "Fantasia"

NEW YORK—Although Walt Disney will again produce 13 one-reelers in Technicolor for RKO distribution next season, no releasing arrangement has been made for "Fantasia."

ALBANY

VISITORS: Sam Davis, Phoenicia, Phoenicia; Mrs. Antoinette McNamara, Bay, Alexandria Bay; Phil Strauss, Pine Plains; Jerry La Rocque, Fairyland, Warrensburg; George Thornton, Orpheum, Saugerties, and Orpheum, Tannersville; Frank Williams, Benton booker; J. W. Bird, Arlington, East Arlington, Vt.; Morris Slotnik, Waterville and Oriskany Falls; John Augello, Utica.

Vivian Sliter, daughter of Fred Sliter, 20th Century-Fox salesman and sister of Harold Sliter, Schine executive, was married at Lynchburg, Va., to Reginald Phillips, employe of a New York City utilities corporation. The couple visited the Harold Sliters in Gloversville and the Fred Sliters in Albany, being entertained at various parties. They are living in New York. Fred Sliter also was honored at a birthday celebration.

Tamarack Enterprises, Inc., has been formed to conduct a theatrical business at Lake Pleasant. Capital is $50,000. Incorporators are: Malcolm Atterbury and Ellen Hardies Atterbury, Lake Pleasant, and James H. Reardon jr., Stuart, Fla. . . . Raymond Seaman, principal of Gilbertsville Central School, which plays pictures one night a week the year around, is vegetable gardening as a hobby. Seaman books out of Albany . . . Morris Silverman, former operator of Mount Pleasant, now the Metro, Schenectady, and Al Feltman, ex-operator of Lincoln, Schenectady, were on Filmrow.

Filmrowers attending a bachelor party for Benjamin Silberg, Albany pharmacist, who will marry Irma Armm, daughter of Jack Armm, Columbia salesman, May 26, included: Doug Klein, Columbia accessories and committee chairman; Joe Miller, Columbia manager; Armm and fellow salesmen, Morris Cohn and Eddie Hochstim, and Booker Stanley Goldberg.

Celia Persk, assistant cashier at Warner-Vitagraph, weekended in New York . . . Carl Nilman plans improvements to the Playhouse, Manchester Center, Vt., a summer situation . . . Reported that Lawrence Carkey, New Family, Utica, may take over the house at Tupper Lake Junction. Charles Girard has been the operator . . . Ollie Mallory, Starr, Corinth, has installed a new blower fan.

Amenia, Amenia, near Poughkeepsie, which Herman Sussman took over and converted from an upstairs to a downstairs theatre, re-opened May 24. Salesmen report it is a little dandy. Sussman, uncle of Bill Sussman, 20th Century-Fox executive, operates three houses in Westchester county . . . Harry Lamont is the latest exhibitor to take pictures with a miniature camera for screening.

"Emergency Seals" Out

PHILADELPHIA—The 16-year-old practice of granting "emergency seals" for prints at a nominal fee of 25 cents is officially at an end, Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, state censor board chairman, announces. The move, which has the blessing of the auditor general's department, is expected to increase the annual expense of exchanges from $100,000 to $200,000.

"Edison, the Man" is a truly inspired film. The appraisal is in full consideration of the varying degrees of success, boxoffice-wise, accorded biographical efforts. But the life of Thomas A. Edison on the screen, as John Considine jr. produced and Clarence Brown directed it and as Spencer Tracy and Rita Johnson and a heart-expanding cast enacts it is something to infect theatregoers of all ages with a thrilling, emotional experience. Picking up where "Young Tom Edison" left off, although this is not a requisite to full enjoyment of the second installment, the film opens at the Golden Jubilee of Light in 1929 where Edison is being honored. Via flashback, the story actually begins in 1879 in the gas light era of New York and totals Edison's achievements as the world knows them. Elevated skill in all departments has gone into the production.

Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Lynne Overman, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Henry Travers.

The wonder infant makes her third picture appearance and reveals that she has added inches to her stature—both physical and thespic. What's more, she talks. True, her lines are limited to "hallo," "goo-bye," etc., but they are lines nevertheless and manage to make Sandy even more captivating. The vehicle is comedy—very broad and festooned with slapstick—and to insure its place in that chosen category a veritable horde of guffaw-garnerers is employed. They fence for their laughs with bludgeons rather than foils but they record them notwithstanding—and in large doses. Winsome Nan Grey, as Sandy's mother, contributes the eye appeal—and along with Tom Brown as the father—the meager plot outline on which the funfest is constructed. In toto it is an unpretentious but highly acceptable photoplay. Charles Lamont directed.

Baby Sandy, Butch and Buddy, Eugene Pallette, Nan Grey, Mischa Auer, Billy Gilbert, Edgar Kennedy.

To those multitudinous fans who relish wholesome, red-blooded action entertainment, there just cannot be such a thing as a bad "Hopalong Cassidy" picture and so this qualifies as first-class action film fare, although it falls somewhat below the high standards established by most predecessors in the popular series produced by Harry Sherman. The shortcoming is attributable to the screen play, which lacks the direct motivation and impact usually characteristic of "Hoppy's" adventures in the cause of right and order. Acting, production and direction remain at par. "Hoppy" this time is delegated by an express company to track down a gang which has been systematically stealing gold from a big mine. Although suspicion falls on one of the mine owners because of his outlaw past, the real crooks step into "Hoppy's" trap. Lesley Selander directed.

William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Minor Watson, Ruth Rogers, Britt Wood, Ethel Wales, Lee Phelps.

On the campuses, in the cities and at the crossroads, the youngsters, those who think they are young and those who wish they were—which includes practically everybody—will welcome the breezy, winsomely-spontaneous diversion to be found herein. Based on the famous Siwash College stories by George Fitch, an adroitly wrought screen play captivatingly unfolds a collegiate romantic comedy, vintage 1900; with meticulous care having been shown in creating the details and atmosphere of American academic life during that horse-and-buggy era. Given this vehicle and the services of a youthful but extremely enthusiastic cast, J. Theodore Reed, functioning as both producer and director, has fashioned a photoplay which should conduct itself creditably in all situations and should show a profit for its makers and exhibitors.

William Holden, Bonita Granville, Ezra Stone, Judith Barrett, Vaughan Glaser, Lucien Littlefield, Richard Denning.

RKO Radio (032) 65 Minutes Rel. May 24, '40

Domestic comedy whose modest budget proves no handicap to a sparkling screenplay boasting enough laugh lines to keep any audience in high good humor throughout. Capable playing and spirited direction also contribute to its status as worthwhile program material, in which category satisfactory results should be obtainable wherever it is shown. The story is a familiar one—that of husband and wife in a marital rut after five years of matrimony. The wife—Lucille Ball—neglects her appearance; the husband—James Ellison—has become a white-collar drudge with not an atom of romance in his makeup. When he is delegated to entertain the firm's London partner, Ellison becomes entangled in a web of wine, women and song from which his wife extricates him through a trick. Ray McCarey directed.

Lucille Ball, James Ellison, Robert Coote, Virginia Vale, Emma Dunn, Elaine Shepard, William Halligan.

Republic (924) 66 Minutes Rel. May 19, '40

Despite the trite title, Republic has turned out a program picture with considerable merit. The story is on the weak side, but some good direction by Arthur Lubin gives the film pace and suspense where it needs it most. Casting, with the exception of Lola Lane, is exemplified by fine choice. Lloyd Nolan, Ray Middleton, Barton MacLane and Astrid Allwyn fill the featured roles in a workmanlike manner. John Harmon and Dwight Frye are standouts in gangster roles. The film is one of those melodramatic concoctions in which two friends, who are law students, travel divergent paths after graduation. One becomes a brilliant racketeer, while the other becomes a country lawyer. Their paths cross when the G-men enlist the aid of the country lawyer to trap his friend. At the end the racketeer makes the sacrifice to save his friend. Robert North produced.

As long as "The Westerner" cannot escape being a western—although it relies heavily on Walter Brennan's able characterization, Gary Cooper's droll persuasiveness and ample directorial devices to lift it outside the formula column—it is wanting in a fundamental respect; action. It has its moments. These come rather plentifully after almost an hour has been consumed in knitting a lightweight story of "legend founded on fact" regarding cattlemen versus homesteaders in Texas shortly after the Civil War. Large scale proportions are evident in a spectacular fire scene, distinguished photography and detail. Yet the more essential elements of boots-and-saddle motivation as it bears on action are lacking. Cooper, itinerant cowboy, backs the losing homesteaders in their fight against the self-rule set up by Brennan. William Wyler directed.

Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Doris Davenport, Fred Stone, Forrest Tucker, Paul Hurst.

Columbia (1029) 66 Minutes Rel. May 16, '40

With a story taken from recurrent headlines, "Babies for Sale" is a familiarly compact tale of the methods of so-called "charity" adoption organizations and how, in the pursuit of their purpose, they ultimately come to grief with the law. Glenn Ford, a reporter, prints a piece that arouses child welfare interests. He quits when asked to retract. On his own, he gets a line on the "Mercy Shelter," which takes in expectant mothers who cannot afford children and which peddles babies to adoptees who can aid the institution financially. They try their stuff on Rochelle Hudson, but she proves to be too smart for them for, with the aid of Ford, she lands the frauds in the clink. Under close scrutiny the story goes to pieces. But as drama along exposed lines, it about measures up to snuff. Directed by Charles Barton.

Rochelle Hudson, Glenn Ford, Miles Mander, Joseph Stefani, Georgia Crane.

"Island of Doomed Men" is G-man drama with a new angle. Generally, it is drama of the mugging type that moves slowly toward its few sequences in which the action element occurs. But, for the audience that revels in the rough-and-tumble on the screen, it is recommended. The setting is interesting—a vague mid-Pacific isle. Performances are undistinguished. Leering Lorre dominates this island and his victims, living in slavery, are culled from parole lists. Comes Robert Wilcox, G-man who has been paroled for just that purpose, and he sets out to bring about the downfall of Lorre and his ilk. To this end he inveigles Rochelle Hudson, wife to Lorre. With the usual fol-de-rol, sweat, bloodshed and hoopla, he achieves his purpose. At best, it's fair. Charles Barton directed.

Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Wilcox, Charles Middleton, George E. Stone.

SELLING ANGLES: "Hidden Gold"

The name "Hopalong Cassidy" on the marquee should prove a valuable adjunct to your advertising-exploitation campaign in drawing in fans of this veteran series. Use the title in a cooperative stunt with local merchants, offering a "Hidden Gold" special at every store during the picture's run. The title can also be used in tieups with banks on savings accounts, with real estate brokers and in dozens of other ways. Tie up with libraries on displays of the Clarence E. Mulford books on which these pictures are based.

CATCHLINES:

Hopalong Cassidy Hits the Trail Again . . . In the Kind of Action-Packed, Two-Fisted Adventure You Love.

Hopalong Cassidy Matches Wits . . . and Fists . . . With a Dangerous Gang of Gold Thieves.

SELLING ANGLES: "Gangs of Chicago"

A collection of clippings on the recent stories about Murder, Inc., would make a timely collection for lobby display. The clippings should be embellished with "Reward" and "Wanted" posters used by the police. An envelope with a pair of blank bullets would make a novelty giveaway. The local police department should be contacted to supply weapons and tools used by criminals for a display. For the lobby, a life-size cutout of Lloyd Nolan holding a gun might be used in advance.

CATCHLINES:

Murder for Profit . . . A Thrilling Expose of a Criminal Syndicate.

King of Crime in a Reign of Terror.

SELLING ANGLES: "Island of Doomed Men"

Horror picture and Peter Lorre have boxoffice potentialities that are latent in this film and, with a little imaginative exploitation on the part of the exhibitor, they should contribute effectively to boxoffice results. In the press book there are any number of suitable ideas which should arouse interest. There is a whipping post gag that will chill 'em. A one-shot newspaper contest features a world map with various unnamed islands indicated, in which participants are asked to list various films connected with the locality.

CATCHLINES:

Screams of Tortured Men Were Music to His Ears.

He Made Men Curse the Day They Were Born . . . And a Woman Pray That She Might Soon Die.

SELLING ANGLES: "Sandy Is a Lady"

Baby Sandy's name should dominate the marquee, with Mischa Auer and Nan Grey given prominent support billing. Spell out the picture's title in black letters attached to diapers. Conduct a diaper-pinning contest on the stage for fathers and give free admission to the babies' mothers. Contact your Universal exchange for information on the many commercial tieups that have been made for Baby Sandy. Place a giant photographic enlargement of her above the marquee.

CATCHLINES:

She's Only Two Years Old . . . But Smart Enough to Keep the Police, Big Business, Her Family and Friends in a Frenzy.

Papa Needed a Raise . . . Mama Needed a New Hat . . . So Two-Year-Old Sandy Fixed It . . . and How.

SELLING ANGLES: "You Can't Fool Your Wife"

Hold a special "Husbands and Wives Midnight Matinee" at two-for-one admission rates. Conduct a contest in which both husbands and wives submit "ten reasons why we are still happy though married." Prepare newspaper advertising copy in the manner of "Advice to the Lovelorn" columns. The title can be used in merchandise tieups on the angle that "'You Can't Fool Your Wife'—So Don't Buy Inferior Product." Give marquee mention to James Ellison and Lucille Ball.

CATCHLINES:

He Thought He Was a Gay Deceiver . . . Until He Discovered the Woman He Was Making Love to Was His Wife.

There's a Laugh a Minute . . . In This Tale of a Man and a Maid Who Was a Double for His Wife.

SELLING ANGLES: "Babies for Sale"

A little research by the exhibitor or his publicity staff into the files of the local newspaper for stories on "Baby Farms" and the criminal prosecution of the adoption racket should result in a few clippings which might be blown up for suitable display. The pressbook has a number of stories which should be presented to the local editor. The important thing is to plug mother love for all its worth. Baby footprints taken soon after birth have excellent exploitation possibilities. They form a vital part of the story.

CATCHLINES:

An Infant on the Auction Block.

A Human Vulture Preying on Mothers Who Couldn't Keep Their Babies . . . And on Kindly Souls Who Want to Adopt a Child.

SELLING ANGLES: "Edison, the Man"

It would seem that, on the basis of the distributor's elaborate pre-selling campaign in a score of periodicals, showmen would be obligated to increase normal promotion budgets for maximum results. The human interest values almost compel the placing of serial stories on Edison's life in local newspapers. By all means, capitalize on Tracy's popularity in previous roles, with Edison as tops. A wholly independent campaign would be one aimed at mutually-beneficial cooperation from public utilities, electrical contacts and educational bodies. To highlight feminine appeal, pay special attention to the "loyal, devoted and understanding wife" elements of the film.

CATCHLINES:

The Story of a Great American . . . That Will Thrill the Hearts of All Humanity.

SELLING ANGLES: "Those Were the Days"

Hold a "Those Were the Days" theatre party at which guests are required to wear vintage 1900 costumes. Give prizes for the most original and humorous attire. If your locality boasts any college graduates, class of 1904, invite them as special guests. Conduct a search for graduates of Knox College in particular. Dress your ushers in peg-topped pants and skirt-tailed coats and your usherettes in "Gibson Girl" garb. Have two youths in similar old-fashioned attire ride a tandem bicycle about the streets.

CATCHLINES:

It's College Life . . . In the Days When College Life Was Really Something . . . Back in the Gay Times of 1904.

Remember Those Stories About Good Old Siwash? . . . Here They Are—in All Their Rambunctious Jollity.

SELLING ANGLES: "The Westerner"

The public has more than a passing recognition of such names as Samuel Goldwyn, Gary Cooper and William Wyler. This would appear to be the basis for any well-rounded campaign. Goldwyn, of course, for his New York Critic's Award prize for the best picture of 1939; Cooper for his role in "The Real Glory," and Wyler's directorial efforts in the same picture and this one. There should be ample distribution of enlarged scene stills, if possible treated in sepia, as is the film. The production values justify elaborate atmospheric fronts, handbills, tieups, etc. For a street bally you might attempt to drive an old hearse, well marked with "real estate," "marriage licenses" and sundry other services by the driver, through the streets.

Gary Cooper . . . Two-Fisted Terror of Vinegarroon . . . In a New and Exciting Role.

Short Subject Reviews

Mr. Duck Steps Out

RKO (Disney Cartoon) 8 Mins.

In keeping with the times and tunes, Donald Duck turns jitterbug. It is the most hilarious cartoon of the recent batch. Donald calls on his girl friend, Daisy Duck, but does not reckon with his three nephews, who put a crimp in his rug cutting. A brisk and lively musical scores matches the animation.

Billposters

RKO (Disney Cartoon) 8 Mins.

Donald Duck and the Goof are a pair of billposters. The main interference comes from a goat and a windmill. The Disney virtuosity is at its best here. Donald and the Goof end up by getting it in the end from the goat while hanging on the windmill blades.

Letters, Trunks, Dummies Pep Kansas Campaign

PARSONS, KAS.—David Dallas, manager of the Uptown, had the cashier address envelopes marked "opened by mistake" with a mimeographed note inside saying, "confidentially, if you want to see the most sensational murder mystery of the year, come to the Uptown," etc. Plugging "Opened By Mistake," the letters were given patrons two days in advance.

In addition, Dallas dug up an old fashioned theatrical trunk, placed in it a wax figure wrapped in a stained sheet, and at each end, outside, had a sign, "Please do not look in this trunk, which was opened by mistake." Inside was a card, "If you wish to see who committed this crime, see 'Opened By Mistake,' etc." The trunk was placed in the lobby.

Interest in Camels Garners Publicity

COLUMBUS, OHIO—Russ Bovim, manager of Loew's Broad here, came in for a nice bit of publicity when his photo standing beside two camels at the municipal zoo appeared in the Sunday issue of the Columbus Dispatch. Bovim for the past several years has been one of the zoo's most ardent boosters and has lent not only his cooperation but that of the theatre in exploiting the animal gardens, which are now among the largest and finest in the middle west.

Vatican Reel Angle

NEW YORK—One of the most effective ways used by exhibitors in selling the March of Time reel, "Vatican of Pius XII," according to Al E. Sindlinger, is the simple expedient of advising principals of parochial schools when the reel will be played and offering them special student tickets.

Tugboat Mickey

RKO (Disney Cartoon) 8 Mins.

Mickey Mouse puts in a long-delayed appearance, but has little to do in the way of supplying the laughs. Mickey, as captain of a tugboat, orders full steam ahead when he hears an "SOS" signal. With Donald and the Goof manning the boiler room the results are what one would expect. The boiler and boat explode.

Donald's Dog Laundry

RKO (Disney Cartoon) 8 Mins.

A rollicking and gay cartoon in which Donald Duck tries to induce Pluto to get into the mechanical dog-washing tub. Donald uses a rubber bone and a kitten decoy in an effort to get Pluto near the tub. Pluto wisely stays away and the cartoon ends with Donald going through the dog mangle.

ATTENDANCE UP 35%

summer cost—less than 2/5 c per seat per show; winter cost, negligible

THEATRE owners by the score will tell you the same thing—that the cost of cool, clean Carrier comfort the year 'round is offset a hundredfold by the benefits it provides. But let's see what makes Carrier Air Conditioning so economical.

There's a difference in air conditioning — a profit difference. Air conditioning that pays its way 12 months a year is more than merely cooling or warming the air, removing or adding humidity, providing air circulation and filtering. It's combining and controlling these four essentials so skillfully that the resulting "indoor weather" makes your customer involuntarily feel "Ah! This is perfect!" That's the kind of air conditioning that attracts new customers, holds old customers, fills the theatre for every show, keeps it cleaner and makes its own cost negligible. That's the kind of air conditioning Carrier assures. Carrier "invented" air conditioning—has devoted 38 years exclusively to its development—has made more than 100,000 installations throughout 99 countries of the world.

Your theatre can provide this same comfort—so famous in theatres large and small from coast to coast. Get started today—by calling your local Carrier dealer. Remember, when you call Carrier, you call air conditioning by its first name.

New Auditorium Stays Clean

"As clean as on the day we opened a year ago," says Murray Miller, manager of the Lincoln Theatre, Passaic, N. J. "That's another important saving from our Carrier Air Conditioning. And our year-'round business is up 35%—because we're giving true comfort 12 months a year."

THIS SUMMER, plan to visit the Carrier Igloo of Tomorrow at the New York World's Fair. 1940 is the 50th Anniversary of what is now Carrier Refrigeration, and the 25th Anniversary of the incorporation of Carrier.

What Has Happened to the White-Collared Trade?

There's surely something amiss when a business begins to lose caste with the upper classes of its potential patronage.

Theatre business in certain spots shows serious symptoms of the dread disease that attacks the innards of industry when it casts its lot entirely with the riff-raff and literally thumbs its nose at the more refined trade.

In department store parlance, the "shawl trade" does not mix well with the socially elite. In show business, trade class similarly seeks its own level.

Have moving pictures been too successfully promoted and "marked down" as a poor man's pleasure? Have we too carelessly tossed our merchandise—entertainment—on the bargain counter and thereby cheapened it in the eyes of a substantial part of the public?

These questions arose recently in our conversation with an exhibitor who was bewailing the noticeable decline of well-groomed, prosperous looking patronage in picture theatres—his house in particular. To amplify the complaint, said he: "My business now comes mostly from WPA reliefers and teen-age kids."

Apparently it hadn't occurred to him, so we made bold to suggest that the "restraint of trade" was suspiciously of his own creation. As a matter of record, he had drawn and quartered the patience of his former patrons with double-features and prize drawings, the while spending not a thin dime for property improvements.

That, we believe, is what has happened to the white-collared theatre trade, whose absence from poorly maintained movie houses may be accounted for in no other logical manner.

Maryville's NEW TIVOLI THEATRE makes HOUSE APPEAL ITS MAINSTAY

TALK about "streamlined showmanship"—here is a theatre that has it and something more. Not only is it modern in design and functionally outfitted; it also fits into the life of the modern community on which it depends for existence. In other words, it is "plumb" with its own particular public.

The new Tivoli Theatre at Maryville, Missouri, is operated by C. E. "Doc" Cook, veteran exhibitor. He is a modern showman and he has built a good businessman's idea of a modern theatre.

Maryville (population 5,217) is a college town—Northeast Missouri Teachers' College—and that means it is pretty much a young people's town. So downstairs the Tivoli is provided with something unique—a dance lounge. It has a lot of other things, too, but this terpsichorean provision represents a tantalizing bit of practical showmanship which as far as we can learn has not heretofore found expression in a moving picture theatre.

Club activities are important doings in any town. They're especially so in one the size and character of Maryville, Mo. So the theatre has two "party loges," each seating 33, and each with its own color scheme. One is finished in robin's egg blue, the other in coral. Each has draperies and seats to match. Here is a novel and potent appeal to the small "line party."

Wide Circle of Influence

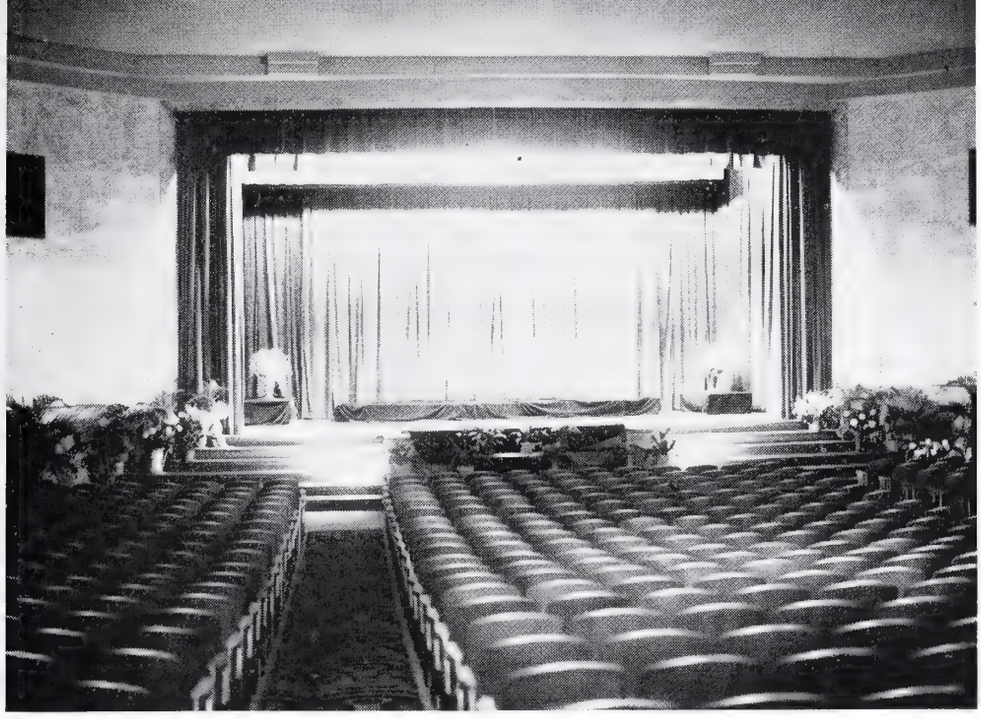
Maryville isn't cut off from the outside world by any means, but it is situated pretty much by itself in Northeastern Missouri, a long way from large cities where stage shows are common entertainment fare. It is quite a long hop from Maryville to Omaha, to Des Moines or even to Kansas City. In other words, a stage here must be something more than just a place to set a screen, especially when there's a showman in charge.

"Doc" Cook has made the Tivoli's stage a prime factor in the drawing power of the theatre week in and week out. In that location a stage show has a constant appeal. It taps a large area that otherwise would not have a stage show more than a few times a year, if indeed that often.

The stage is a large and functional part of the Tivoli. Here are held fashion shows, cooking schools and so forth, which are popular in Maryville. Here also are staged the Sunday appearances of the Tivoli Ambassadors, a 12-piece band made up of college students under the baton of the college musical director and featuring guest artists. Earlier this year the band broadcast over NBC via KMA, Shenandoah, Iowa, which is testimony to the reputation this musical group has made for itself already.

The stage is 39 feet across and 14 feet deep at the center, large and accessible enough to accommodate an automobile—which it may do some day. The center forward stage is 22x12 ft. with widely curved steps on either side leading down into the auditorium. Between the stairways is the orchestra pit with a convertible stage floor built over it to permit closer contact with the audience by those on the stage, if desired.

The main curtain and grand drapery are of old gold velour. The cyclorama, borders and close-in curtain are of light blue jacquard velveteen. Acoustics and lighting make the stage definitely "big time." Stage steps are flooded with lights concealed in the sidewalls, plus a double set of footlights in pilasters separating the steps from the orchestra pit. Portholes in the acoustic-tiled ceiling of the forward auditorium are for color wheels, floods and pin spots. The stage lighting is complete, including dimmers, and the stair-step effect in the auditorium ceiling just above the stage contains public address speakers.



The Tivoli makes the most of its 66-foot frontage with an attractive facade and setting for highly effective advertising display. Its cream stucco front is strikingly set off with blue venetian blinds for the windows, and a colorful combination of structural glass forms the lower section including shops at each side.

This system is built in and there are mike plugs literally all over the stage.

A Dream Come True

The old Tivoli, which recently gave way to the march of modernization, seated slightly more than 300 persons; the new house has over 800 seats. This growth in size represents the realization of "Doc" Cook's dream of a large and metropolitan type theatre in a small city and it also reflects the effectiveness of the Cook brand of showmanship through the years he has operated at Maryville—with a growing clientele of loyal patrons.

It is interesting to note, yet obvious, that the theatre atracts a constant flow of sightseers also, who want to look it over after having heard of its reputation for fine entertainment. The theatre is 132 feet long, 66 feet wide and with a full basement. Directly beneath the stage is that part of the basement devoted to steam heating apparatus and above the stage the air conditioning equipment is located with units on either side of the proscenium.

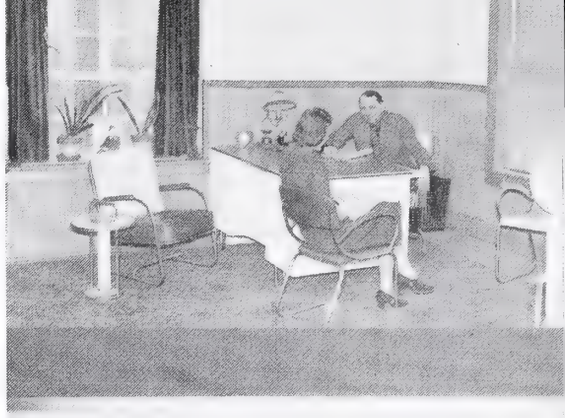
The ceiling of the auditorium is of acoustic tile and it contains no lighting fixtures. Walls are of colored texture plaster in gold tan. From troughs in the four offsets on each side of the auditorium, which are in the shape of an elongated S curve, vari-colored lights in red, green, purple, blue and amber blend into a solid evanescent color. The lights in these offsets are so arranged that a shaft of light falls on the wall in ribbon effect.

Seats in the auditorium are of red and old rose mohair with the standards at row-ends in old gold and blond maple. They are made with a thick, soft back and 12-unit, full floating spring-edge construction. Backs of the seats are finished with cold-rolled steel edges which frame the entire back and prevent tearing of clothing while passing behind seats as well as permitting more easy location of empty seats by patrons. The seats are placed 34 inches apart instead of the usual 28 to 30 inches.

Aisle carpets are modern in design and in beautifully harmonizing colors. Hangings in the auditorium are of old gold velour, including exit, standee rail and aisle-entryway draperies. Across the back of the wide balcony rail are two stars, in the center of which are house flood lights, which effect a novel touch. (Note in picture of view from stage to lobby.)

Stairways off the foyer leading up to the loges and down to the lounges also show ingenious design. The floor of the foyer is done in asphalt tile in harmonizing colors and the room is lighted from a center ceiling inset with gold neon and from insets on either end at the ceiling by more gold neon. The foyer also contains a small modern popcorn and concession stand, as a convenience to the customers.



Gold-finished doors done in massive style separate the lobby from the foyer. The lobby is finished in gold with cove lighting from the ceiling in shades of canary yellow, orange, two tones of green and gold neon tubes. Display panels are mounted on east and west walls and on the back of the lobby to be viewed as one enters the theatre. These are lighted with fluorescent tubes.

The projection room is completely modern in construction and equipment, which

The ALL-IMPORTANT MEANING of MAGNETISM OUT IN FRONT

By Helen Kent

IF THEATRES were designed and constructed in the shape of a horseshoe, strongly magnetized at each end to draw on the metal zippers which now serve modern wearing apparel so deftly, they could hardly draw patronage to the boxoffices more unfailingly than do the beauties of eye-effect which are serving the same purpose in modern theatre front design today. The magnetism is there in equally great proportion; but it's reaction is on the eye rather than the zippers—fortunately.

Passersby are impelled by what they see out front to march up to the boxoffice, place their nickels and dimes on the ledge, receive in return a passport to entertainment and then to see what's beyond the inviting exterior. They do all this voluntarily when reacting to eye-appeal, and it might not be so voluntary and certainly not repeated were patrons yanked headlong into a theatre by some strong force or by anything other than their own desire to be there.

The Principle Involved

That's the principle behind the advertising value of modern theatre facades which gleam and glitter and beckon invitingly to all who pass within their magnetic range. They are designed quite evidently with this sole purpose in mind. Where in the past the interior of a theatre property was all-important, today and for the past decade the exterior of a movie house has been considered in the light of a first impression-maker and as such of first importance in the scheme of design and construction for appeal to the senses of those who view it.

Modern lighting effects and building materials which heighten the brilliance and beauty of a structure exterior have had more to do with this mass psychology precept than anything else. When architects and designers were given materials and equipment with which to bedeck their creations on the outside as well as inside, they were quick to apply them, realizing of course the greater appeal of light and colors as applied to the entertainment field over anything that had gone before.

Light, undoubtedly, is the most magnetic factor known to mankind. Human beings just can't be happy or unafraid or natural in a blackout, as has been so well proved overseas in recent weeks. The seeking after light is one of the most human of all characteristics—and the more light, the better we like it. For this reason, light is one of the prime requisites and most easily adapted wiles in the showman's bag of tricks. When he promotes gaiety and good-feeling with light, he is serving the first demand of entertainment-seekers.

But for its best magnetic effect as applied to theatre exteriors, light must be abetted by the effectiveness of its application, its background and the manner and amount in which it is used. For this reason, theatre lighting must be studied carefully to make the most of its many magnetic properties. Just plain clinical or industrial lighting would be not only ineffective but wasteful as well when applied to the exterior of a theatre.

Exhibit "B"

Field for Lighting Effect

There must be finesse at this point—in the intensity of light itself and in that which it illuminates. If there is a lot of light, but that which is illuminated is not of an appealing nature, the entire effect is largely ruined. Likewise, a beautiful background can be lost at night without proper lighting to play up its good points. Thus it may be seen that the two work inseparably when considering the effectiveness and display value of a theatre's own exterior appearance.

Exhibit "A"

IDENTIFICATION

All photographic examples shown and referred to herein were supplied through the courtesy of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, Vitrolite Division, whose products were employed in the construction of each project illustrated.

For this reason, architects, lighting engineers and structural material manufacturers have worked together most cooperatively to create the magic and magnetism of modern theatre fronts. Within the past decade we have seen great development and an almost complete reversal in form of this portion of the theatre. Designs which were put on paper idealistically by architects and designers have become realities through the efforts of lighting experts and the laboratories of construction material manufacturers.

Principles of exploitation and advertising value have not been overlooked by these parties in the development of modern theatre front design either. Realizing the peculiarities of motion picture exploitation, they have worked toward a presentation of the best selling points of the theatre's program at the point-of-sale; but in a refined and inviting manner. Bulletining the program in the most attractive and legible manner is accomplished on ample marquees fitted with changeable letter announcements. Ballyhoo has been taken over by beautifully subdued poster displays in integrated cases which add further interest to the facade rather than detract from its effectiveness. That's the way it's done today.

Of the many background or front facing materials used so effectively in the modern theatre scene, those which gleam and reflect the lighting used about them are undoubtedly one of the greatest contributions to lighting effect witnessed recently. Structural glasses and other vitreous materials, porcelain enamels, plastics, polished metals and similar surfaces have enjoyed widespread use and popularity for the purpose because of their adaptability and peculiar fitness for the role of magnet at this point.

REFERENCE BY EXAMPLE

To illustrate the coordination of design, lighting and construction materials with which the effects were obtained, several modern theatre fronts are presented here as examples of varied treatments. Each shows careful study by all concerned with the projects and each is indicative of the trend in its particular situation.

EXHIBIT A. Broad Expanse of Frontage on Main Thoroughfare. The Capitol Theatre in St. Catherines, Ontario, Canada, owned by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., illustrates the impressive effect to be gained by using the entire frontage of the theatre building as a display medium. The background is made effective by the use of horizontal bands at the top in natural concrete and the lower portion below and on a line with the marquee is formed of structural glass in colors of black, jade and ivory used in combination with gold and silver mirrors and metal lighting fixtures. The wedge-shaped changeable attraction board with surmounting name-sign is located above the marquee for unusual effect, and illuminated poster display cases are used in profusion across the lower facade of the house. Kaplan & Sprachman, well-known Canadian theatre architects, were responsible for the design.

EXHIBIT B. Pigeon-hole Entrance Which Stands Out. Typical of small theatres in valuable locations in either large or small towns is the Parker Theatre in Parkersville, West Virginia. With a minimum of space with which to impress itself upon passersby, magnetism must be of the "punch" type. Here, structural glass in ivory for lightness of tone and greater glitter quality is used almost entirely and pointed up by red and black for design interest. The polished metal marquee with more than usual number of soffit lamps and effective use of display elements are noteworthy. An off-center boxoffice also shows forethought in such a small entranceway. The designer, H. Rus Warne, architect.

EXHIBIT C. Where Space Is More Plentiful. A theatre building which is "all theatre" is a splendid sight to see and modern simplicity of design can be demonstrated in its most inviting form. Excellent proportions are evident in the Florida Theatre at Fort Lauderdale, Florida, designed by Roy A. Benjamin, architect. The lower portion of the facade is of marble with curved illuminated glass block sections flanking the entrance. A brilliant name-sign marquee and vertical are backgrounded by structural glass in tropic green with etched medallions to accomplish a most magnificent effect.

Effective lighting display for greatest eye attraction at the point where interest is first aroused and action preempted is something that must be planned ingeniously in the preliminary stages if a theatre project, an architectural background for better lighting is a basic requirement of the modern theatre plan . . . The Vogue Theatre in Southgate, California, is a fine example of theatre front patterning in which the maximum effect of luminous display was quite apparently the principal objective of the design by Architect S. Charles Lee of Los Angeles.

EXHIBIT "F"

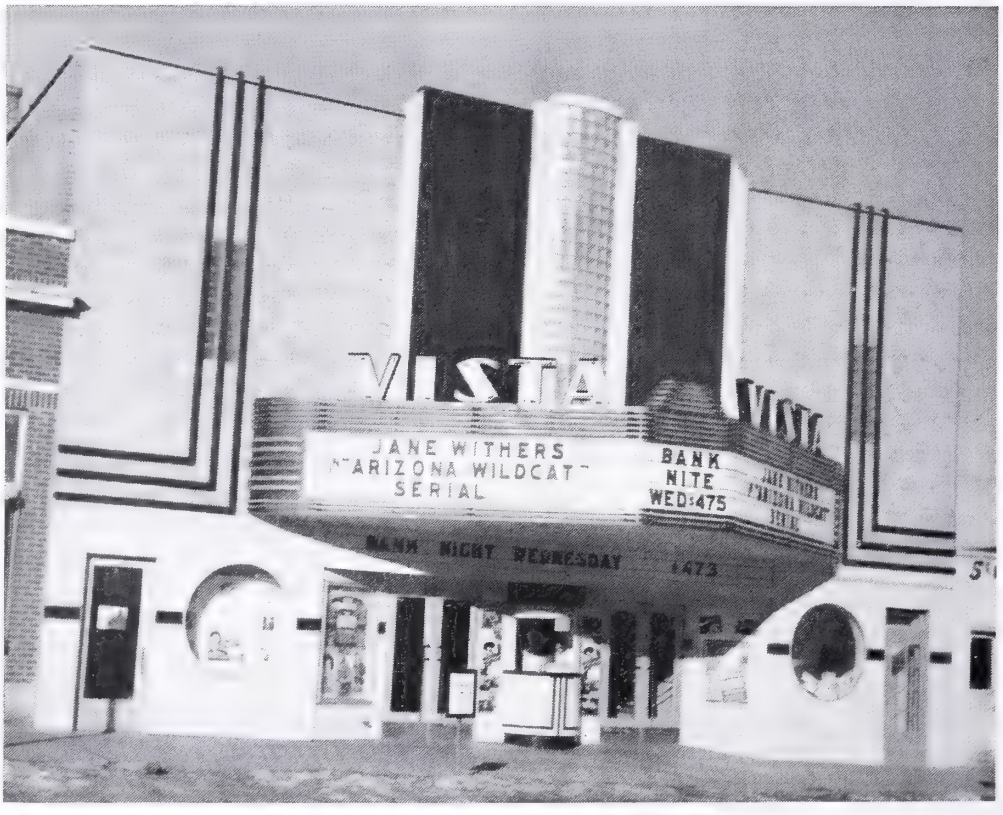
EXHIBIT D. Arcade in Midst of Strong Competition. So common on the main-streets of large cities, the arcade-type of theatre entrance must make the most of plentiful light, color and motion in display. The Arcade Theatre in Los Angeles is a striking example of what may be done in this sort of situation. Its marquee dominates its surroundings as a result of brilliant neonized effects and day-bright soffit lamping. Ample program display is also heightened by clear-cut silhouette letters and interior-illuminated display cases. For facing, gleaming structural glass in colors of suntan, tropic green and jade effectively surrounds the entire arcade-type lobby. S. Charles Lee, architect, designed the project.

EXHIBIT E. Corner Location With Double-Vision Advantage. Because it may be seen from two directions and may thus generate dual magnetism, a corner location is most prized for theatre properties. The American Theatre in Mount Carmel, Illinois, is indicative of what may be done to make such a situation even more valuable. Formed principally of brick and terra cotta, with illuminated panels of glass brick, the beauty of this building is outstanding. The lower portion of the facade beneath a semi-circular marquee is of highly reflective structural glass in cadet blue and suntan. Dignity and simplicity were ideally incorporated in this dominant corner application by the architect, O. W. Stiegemeyer of St. Louis.

EXHIBIT F. Theatre Building With Shops Sharing Frontage. The Kallet Theatre in Pulaski, New York, takes full advantage of a wide expanse of facade, the while sharing its drawing power with shops at either side of its entrance. Rather than detracting from the effect of magnetism, these rental possibilities actually exert a "draw" of their own and the integrated quality of design in this instance is a perfect example of the community-center idea. Structural glass forms the entire facade of this building, effectively designed to appear more spacious by means of horizontal lines. The color effect is composed of a black base, walnut agate bulkhead, red band at top of show windows and successive courses of grey, princess blue, jade, ivory and grey above the marquee. Brilliant lighting effects on the marquee and a glass block portion further magnetize the property. Architect George H. Ketcham was responsible for its design.

Variations on the magnetic theme are endless. Modern materials are plentiful. And lighting is without limit as to novel effects and modern innovations. With the thought in mind that exterior effect must be the ambassador of good will for any theatre, it may be realized that either in new construction or remodeling, this frontage factor should take early precedence in consideration by owners and designers alike.



CONSOLIDATES

The consolidation of all heating and air conditioning equipment into the Air Conditioning Division with E. R. Walker as manager is announced by the Fedders Manufacturing Company of Buffalo, New York.

Featured among the products of the air conditioning division is a complete line of heating coils recently announced. This Type K line, in addition to cooling coils, unit air conditioners and unit heaters and other appliances, provides a broad line for the trade.

Air conditioning comes into its own this month. For a time now, it will be the biggest draw to any theatre, regardless of pictures. But be certain that it is as good in every respect as you are certain the show you offer is "The Best Show in Town."

THE VISTA THEATRE VISUALIZES ITS PRODUCT

Warning! THE NIGHT RAIDERS are GATHERING STRENGTH DAILY

By Ansel M. Moore

ON OUR last appearance herein, we sounded off a warning to picture showmen and paid our respects quite liberally to Radio Broadcasting as a worthy competitor to the boxoffice. We say "worthy" most emphatically because we firmly believe underestimation of the effect of entertainment via the air has created entirely too much false alarm and unnecessary grief among the exhibitors of moving pictures.

In our diagnoses of the dilemma and the prescription for relief, we did not advise supine resignation to radio as an unbeatable rival for public favor. Rather we tried to point out to our readers its vulnerability as a competitor for public favor, recognizing it not as a vicious rival but as a friendly contemporary of the movies; provided the latter would get its mind off giveaways and other forms of gimcrack sales promotion long enough to put its house in order, reorganize its defensive position and get itself on the right track to better resist and repel all competition.

Before passing to the other forms of encroaching competition complained of so bitterly by movie men, let us remind ourselves again that if radio has hurt our business it is largely because it has given musical appreciation—a discriminating and highly selective appreciation of the art of transmitted entertainment—to American audiences. Plus that important point, it has satisfactorily provided a limited form of entertainment with plenty of relaxation in the comfortable appointments and quieting atmosphere of the home.

The question naturally arises: What are we doing individually to match these two chief selling points of the sponsored radio program? Certainly we can't argue that it's not within our province, with modern sound equipment at hand, to match the performance quality of radio reproduction in our theatres. As far as comfort and relaxation are concerned, we should be able to take care of that item too, through the medium of good business management in the outfitting and maintenance of our plants.

Baseball and Bridge

Coming now to other candidates for condemnation—outside or off-side attractions running counter to the best interests of movie exhibition—let us first take up a relatively new one, Night Baseball.

The Great American Sport Pastime, baseball has recently moved in on the movies as a nocturnal competitor and already it is giving the picture gentry no little concern in several of our metropolitan major and minor league cities. Nor is this new night raider of theatre revenues confining its depredations to the big and middle-sized towns. Reports have it that the sand-lot and semi-pro clubs are flooding their fields with artificial daylight and setting up some real night-time competition for the local cinemas.

The emotions of the dyed-in-the-wool movie-baseball devotees, who formerly stole away to the diamonds in the early afternoon and topped off their diversion with a movie in the evening are thus torn between two strong loves. Picture fans who formerly denied themselves the thrill of base hits and stolen bases except on Saturday and Sunday afternoons are now said to be slipping away from the movies in the evenings. And movie men tell us it's no midsummer night's dream; but actually a growing menace.

Another night raider of our revenues, which probably rates comparison to radio as a home tie and a hazard to moving picture profits is a seemingly innocent little card game called "Bridge." Inflicted upon us several years ago by Ely Culbertson, et al., the game of "Contract" has crept up on us quite stealthily to become a sizeable eventide competitor of the neighborhood movie house.

Many a movie-going resolve is frustrated at the dinner table when Ma or Pa pipes up with "I'd rather play bridge." Or perhaps a bridge party or a tournament is trotted out two or three times a week to take its toll of trade from the theatre. Such competition may be confined to the homes of our potential patrons or too frequently it finds expression in the form of church bazaars and other semi-socialized functions.

Comfort Conquers All

As with radio, the home fireside influence stands out prominently as the chief characteristic of card party competition to the movies, which, it must be admitted, cuts a rather wide swath in the boxoffice "takes" of our neighborhood theatres, especially during the cool weather months. The comforts of the modern home and the hospitality of gracious hosts have made "contract" along with many other games and gadgets for home and party amusement a really stiff competitor to our movies. Out-of-doors diversions take up promptly where indoor pastimes leave off and the night raiders of our boxoffice tills are never idle.

These boxoffice blighters — baseball, bridge, ballrooms, cocktail bars, charity bazaars, bowling tournies, billiard parlors and radio broadcasting—all add up to a problem that challenges the vigilance of smart theatre ownership and management everywhere. How to compete with all these counter-attractions that beset us? That is the question.

Moving pictures, properly presented, are still so far ahead of any other popular forms of entertainment affordable to people in all walks of life that there can hardly be a logical comparison. Manner of presentation, therefore, seems to be about the only serious point of contention between the moving picture theatre and its many upstart competitors.

Numerous appeasement measures have already been tried to tantalize the public and thus stem the tides of invasion. But all of them, except one, have generally been no more effective than what happened at Munich. Most of the efforts to arouse the universal spirit of movie-mindedness and restore the prestige of the moving picture and return it to the arms of its once all adoring public have only served to make matters worse. We have mentioned these unavailing mediatory measures in our two previous articles so we won't repeat them here.

But we do want to cite and comment briefly on the one exception referred to in the previous paragraph. It is the one bright and shining thing theatre business has done and is now doing more extensively than ever to get itself out of the doghouse with the public. Boxoffice reactions throughout the country have already stamped it as successful showmanship—the sterner stuff that doesn't temporize with nor take a back-seat for competition of any sort.

A Practical Program

Property improvement has been the "last resort" measure in too many instances, but it has proved that it packs a mighty wallop for public favor. The describable effects of this practical propaganda on theatre business are such that it may now be

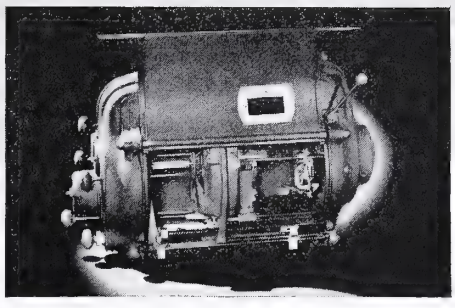
How About Television?

Is it another threatened invasion from the air? Will it be a "blitzkrieg" to our boxoffices or a blessing to theatre business? Between now and next issue, Ansel M. Moore is going to try to find out how television, when it comes, may affect show business. His findings are to appear in the June 22nd issue. WHAT DO YOU THINK OF TELEVISION? Ansel invites you to write and tell him.

Let Strong Light Your Way to Low Cost High Intensity Projection



MODERATE sized theatres have long realized the hopelessness of getting a good picture on the screen with prevailing dense black and white films when using the dim low intensity lamp. Furthermore, satisfactory projection of colored films with the muddy yellow light of the low intensity was just as impossible. And the required brilliancy and sparkling snow-white light of the high intensity arc were denied them by prohibitive operating costs.

It remained for Strong, through the development of the new Utility, a perfectly balanced and coordinated lamp and rectifier unit of intermediate capacity, to solve their problem, to produce a high intensity lamp which exactly filled the needs of the medium sized theatres with screens up to 18 feet in width.

This new Strong lamp projects twice as much light as is possible with any low intensity lamp and at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2c an hour.

Your leading Independent Theatre Supply Dealer will gladly demonstrate this new marvel of efficiency in your theatre without obligation . . . Call him today.

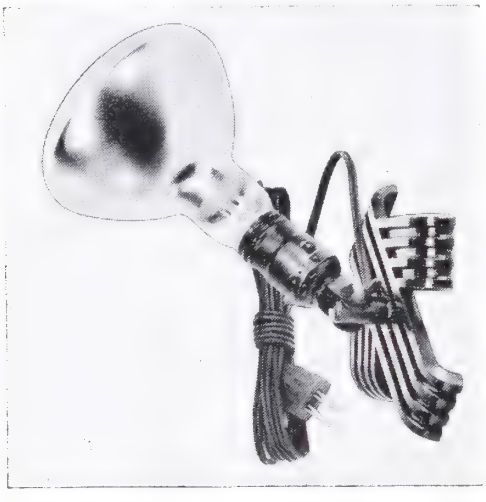
taken as the right answer to the oft-repeated question: "What's wrong with theatre business?"

The entertainment value of motion pictures has been improved tremendously over those old thrillers of the heyday. The art of cinema photography and production technique is at a peak of perfection. Certainly it can't be argued that all our competitive difficulties are due entirely to poor product, the worst possible of which would probably have filled most any old house to capacity a few years ago. People today are simply more difficult to please.



Theatres themselves must attract patronage with something more sincere and satisfying to human nature than merely what appears on the screen. Theatre men seem to have made the important discovery that providing comfort and all conditions contemplated in the use of the consoling word is their one best weapon with which to ward off competition.

Picture showing has plenty of rivalry today—more than ever before in its history. Yet it's too big a business, too necessary as a public utility and still far too firmly entrenched in public favor to give any quarter to any kind of competition without a good, stiff fight.

These modern theatres, ever increasing in numbers, are equipped to put up a good fight for business and they're giving the night raiders plenty of resistance. Show business has only begun to fight back.

Best Introduces New Display Lamp Unit

The "Lowboy" lamp holder, a new adjustable lamp unit of modern design, balanced to retain the G-E-R-40 bulb without tipping, has been produced by the Best

Devices Company of Cleveland, manufacturers of special theatre lighting equipment and stereopticons.

It is especially designed for attaining more effective, distinctive appeal for advertising displays. The holder is equipped with eight feet of approved cord and plug.

The No. 17 Lowboy is in crackle black finish with cast metal base, while the No. 17-C Lowboy has a highly polished chrome finish. Additional details may be secured by addressing The Modern Theatre Information Bureau.

Advertise the comfort to be found in your air conditioned theatre during the summer months. Blazon it on the boards! Let the public know that the theatre is the most comfortable and most healthful place in which to spend their time.

Have plenty of brilliant light outside the theatre to serve as a beacon from afar and when potential patrons are brought closer to inform them about the program by means of legible display.

Advance Announces New Model Popcorn Machine

A new line of popcorn machines, one model of which is illustrated here, has been announced by the Advance Manufacturing Company, of St. Louis, Missouri. Information issued by the manufacturers states the new machines are modernly styled and have incorporated new features such as color, illuminated signs and attractive chrome and porcelain cabinets to help increase the sale of popcorn by added "flash" for eye-appeal.

One of the new and improved features mentioned is the all-electric streamlined popping unit, said to be a departure from conventional design, but one which has been found to have added popping capacity and greater popcorn volume.

The machines have the same basic design and popping mechanism, but vary in size and capacity. There is one counter model. The other cabinet models increase in size to one model 76 inches high and having a popping capacity of $20.00 worth of popcorn per hour.

Figures given in literature issued by the manufacturer show that popcorn pays a profit of 70 cents on every dollar in sales, further that popcorn is not seasonable contrary to public notion, but does in fact sell steadily throughout the four seasons.

The machine illustrated here is all-electric and comes completely assembled, ready to plug in and operate.

LITERATURE

The following concerns have recently filed copies of interesting descriptive literature with The Modern Theatre Information Bureau. Readers who may wish copies of such literature may obtain them promptly by addressing The Modern Theatre, 332 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

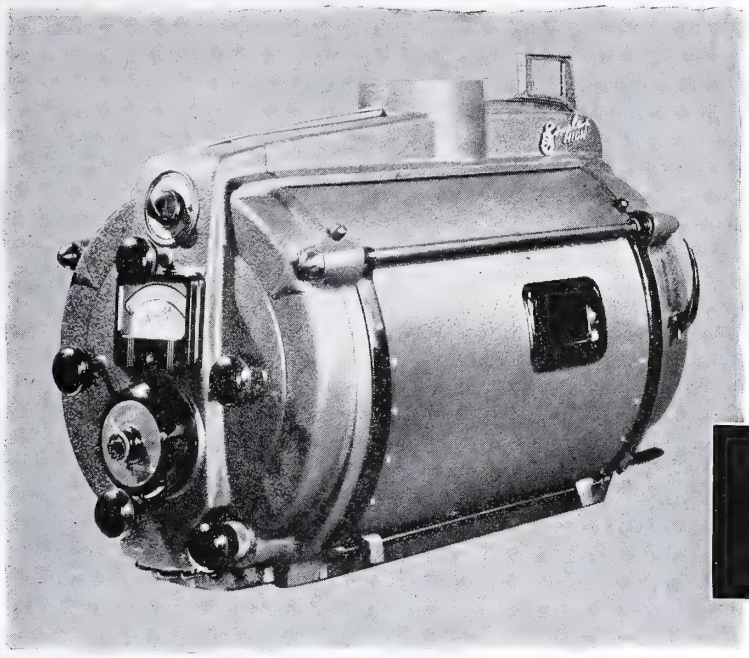
Advance Manufacturing Company, of St. Louis, Mo., presents a colorful broadside on four new Streamlined "Moneymakers," their latest developments in popcorn machines. Features of the new machines are outlined, prices given and other concession equipment is also described and pictured.

Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co., of New York City, announces a new comprehensive brochure entitled "Woven Light," which gives complete details on the amazing new principle of carpet beauty achieved by the use of fluorescent properties in the weaving of carpet.

Clinton Carpet Company, of Chicago, offers an informative booklet entitled "Proper Care of Carpets," including spot and stain removal methods. Information on Ozite carpet linings is also provided as the best means of insuring long life for theatre carpets.

Charles P. Cochrane Company, of Bridgeport, Pa., announces the recently formed Cochrane's Theatre Carpet Advisory Bureau which will give advice on theatre carpeting decorative effects without charge or obligation. Individual problems are treated most intelligently.

Dayton Safety Ladder Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, presents a catalogue on 4-Star Safety Ladders with the new non-skid safety shoes. The book shows various types of ladders and outlines uses for which they are particularly adapted.



Forest Manufacturing Corp., of Newark, N. J., files two new pieces of literature on the Forest Universal Trim Lamps and Forest Rectifiers for Power Conversion. The folders picture and describe the new products most understandably and advantages are outlined also.

General Electric Company, of Bloomfield, N. J., offers a brochure entitled "Air Conditioning for Business." The booklet outlines air conditioning practice in all its phases and contains much valuable information for theatre men.

Gibbs Boardtile Corp., of Chicago, files a folder on Gibbs Boardtile giving a color chart and containing pictures of the wall covering material in various uses. Specifications of designs, finishes and sizes are also given.

Recordall Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Los Angeles, Calif., submits a profusely illustrated loose-leaf booklet on Recordall sound recording instruments with Constant Groove Speed. Specifications are given on various models and accessories.

NOTICE: Manufacturers of all products adapted to theatre modernization or maintenance are invited to file latest copies of their catalogues or descriptive literature with The Modern Theatre Information Bureau.—THE EDITOR.

Simplex HIGH

ARC LAMP

SUFFICIENT LIGHT VOLUME

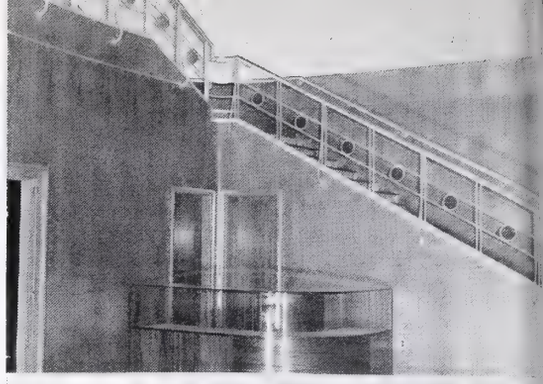
The SIMPLEX HIGH intermediate capacity arc projects twice as much light as the low intensity. It has been designed especially for theatres of up to 800 seats and using screens as large as 18 feet in width.

LIGHT OF PROPER CHARACTERISTICS

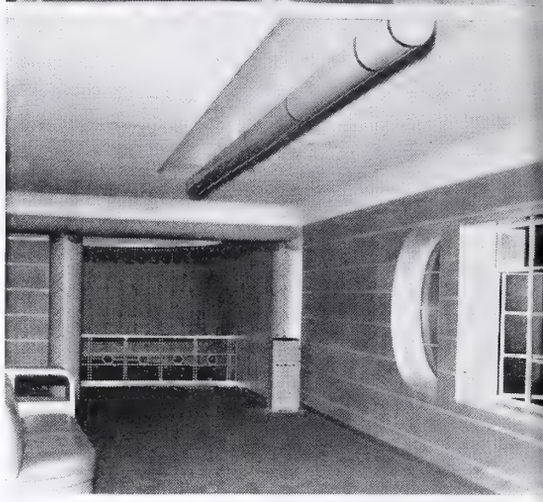
The SIMPLEX HIGH is a high intensity, direct current arc which projects the snow white light which is so necessary to the projection of colored pictures.

LOW COST

The SIMPLEX HIGH has been designed and priced for theatres heretofore restricted to the use of low intensity lamps because the operating, if not the original cost of the earlier high intensities has been prohibitive. The over-all operating costs are only slightly higher than with the low intensity, because this arc operates at only 27 volts as compared to 55 volts in the low intensity, and each 14-inch 7 m.m. suprex positive carbon burns for at least two hours.



DEPENDABILITY OF MANUFACTURE



The SIMPLEX HIGH is another example of SIMPLEX engineering excellence. The name SIMPLEX, on any product, for years has been your guarantee of quality.

Brilliant Lighting Vitalizes New Venture in Suburban Theatre Planning

Description of a delightful new cinema in a traditional setting Down South wherein the gala events and hospitality of bygone days have been closely approximated. The architects, Marr & Holman of Nashville, Tennessee.

THE warm hospitality and true graciousness of the Old South has been most cleverly retained in the erection of many new and modern theatres down below the Mason and Dixon Line during the past few years. Southern theatre builders seldom stray too far afield from this traditional trend to hospitality and House Appeal, which to a theatre patron, whether in the South, North, East or West, is becoming more and more a prime requirement for continuous patronage.

And of the several major elements of elegance that enter into the design and composition of the truly attractive theatre, whether ultra modern or functionally modern with a traditional motive, lighting effect unquestionably is one of the outstanding provisions.

The subject of this presentation is a case in point—a case of clever theatre planning for a suburban situation where events of the past are closely approximated in the provisions of the present and effective lighting plays a most important role.

Historical Background

"Six miles west of Nashville on the Harding Road lies Belle Meade!" Thus might begin a historical sketch of Nashville, Tennessee's most pretentious residential section. John Harding, in 1806, obtained a federal land grant and secured additional acreage from the Indians in exchange for a Shetland pony and "a shotgun per acre."

Here he built the "Queen of the Southern Estates" and established the first thoroughbred horse breeding stables in America. Belle Meade horses won purses and honors on every track in America. Annual yearling colt sales drew buyers from as far away as England.

Belle Meade Manor was internationally known for its hospitality. It was traditional that the table was never set without arranging extra plates for unexpected guests. In time, six presidents of the United States—Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk, Benjamin Harrison, Theodore Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland and William Howard Taft—were honored Belle Meade guests and President Cleveland brought his young bride with him for a weekend visit.

BY DAY and BY NIGHT

The Belle Meade Theatre front stands out as a beacon of brilliant, vari-colored display lighting effects spreading its invitation to patronage for miles in all directions. Its towering name sign and changeable lettered attraction board activated by adequate well-placed illumination make this modern suburban theatre a magnetic center of attraction.

In the very heart of this proud, more than a century-old suburban community, against this rich and historically significant background, Belle Meade Center has been constructed, consisting of the Belle Meade Theatre and ten modern shopping spaces in the same building to the right and rear of the theatre.

The theatre seats 1,200 and the total cost of the "Center" is said to be in excess of $250,000. The exterior of the building is of Georgia marble, combined with porcelain and stainless steel. Extension of the curved marquee permits driving a car underneath in inclement weather for patrons to alight in comfort.

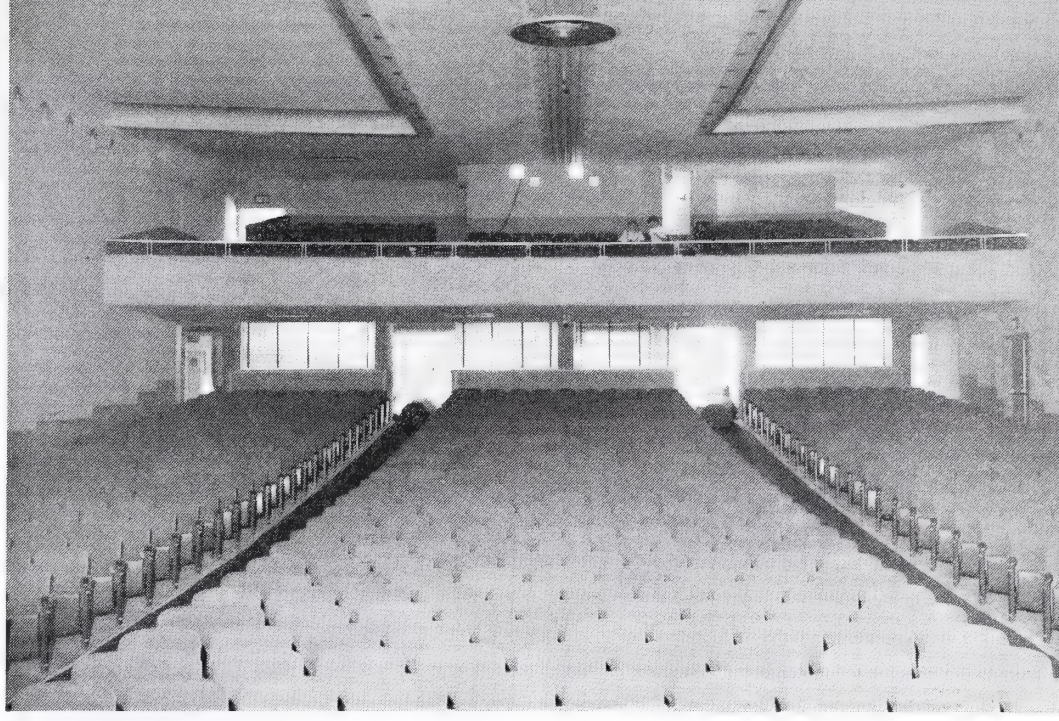
Designer's Description

The tower and lighting effects of the building, considered the outstanding features, are best pictured from a description by Victor H. Stromquist of the staff of Architects Marr & Holman, members of The Modern Theatre Planning Institute Advisory Board, which appeared in "Good News Weekly," Crescent Amusement Company's theatre-distributed publication. Quoting:

"The tower, marquee and exterior display lighting for the new Belle Meade Theatre is something entirely new in motion picture theatre attraction, the effect of which is obtained by the use of fluorescent lighting to create an unusual display of variegated color. The underside of the marquee is lighted by approximately 1,000 mazda lamps producing brilliant light at the entrance. Augmenting this light under the marquee adjacent to the entrance is a wall of glass brick illuminated from behind by a rainbow color lighting effect.

"The ticket booth is under the tower on the marquee and is faced with corrugated stainless steel which picks up the reflections of the lighting described above. Surrounding the outer edge of the huge circular porcelain marquee are eighty vertical tubes of fluorescent lighting in varied colors, flanking the attraction board on which letters are mounted on opal glass. The wall of the building above the marquee is flooded at night with colored lights to produce a blue glow on the marble.

"The colored porcelain tower above the marquee rises from the ground to a height of 75 feet. It consists of a shaft brightly illuminated with colored fluorescent light. The name of the theatre is produced by the use of about 500 small, twinkling electric lamps mounted in front of a background of green fluorescent light. The base of the tower consists of 28 vertical tubes of green and gold streaks of light. Outlining the tower are rows of red intersected in several places by horizontal gold bands of light. Surmounting the letters and terminating the tower is a shaft of gold light supporting a three-foot-diameter ball formation of 350 twinkling lamps.



"At night the electrical display rivals anything shown at the New York World's Fair and will probably be considered the most unusual thing ever presented to the public in connection with a theatre."

Additional Details

Back of the theatre is a paved space sufficient for the easy parking of 300 cars and the theatre has attendants in charge during all theatre hours.

The foyer of the Belle Meade is spacious and affords easy access into the auditorium. An unusually attractive effect in foyer and auditorium is obtained by the use of ceiling mirrors behind fluorescent lighting. The curved stairways to the balcony and other interior woodwork are in natural finish which is given a soft and appealing touch by indirect lighting.

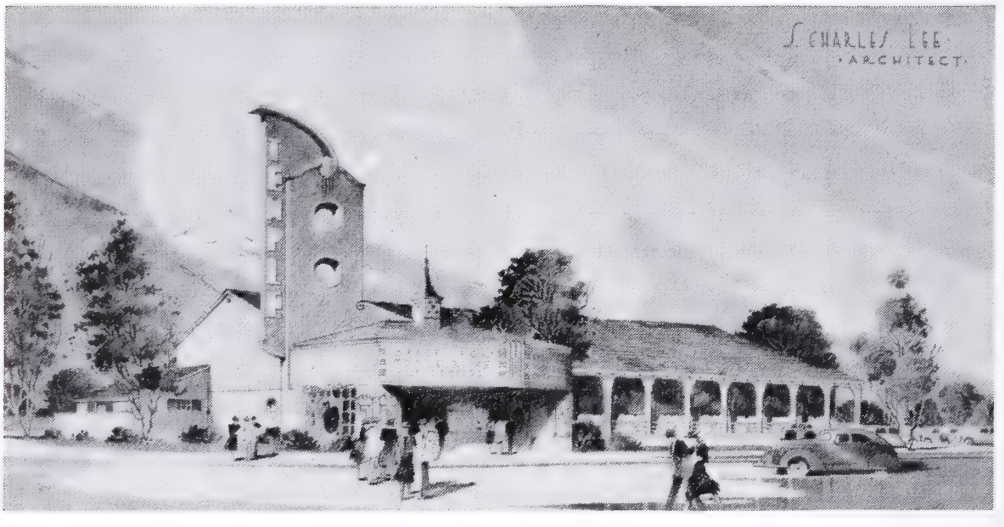
The cooling and ventilating system has a capacity of 80 tons and is guaranteed to change the air in the building completely every six minutes. Seating is staggered to give the best "between-person" view of the stage. At either end of alternate rows of seats in the center section are extra width chairs to accommodate two persons in the same seat.

The Belle Meade is in a class by itself as a modern suburban theatre in Nashville and probably ranks as one of the most outstanding in the entire South. Situated on the city's main incoming highway and on a carline, the theatre can draw over a wide residential area to fill its 1,200 seats.

E. J. Jordon, formerly with the National Beauty Pageant Association, coming to Nashville from Kansas City, Missouri, is the manager. Following the premiere opening on Wednesday night, May 1st, Manager Jordon announced "matinee showings each Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday at 3 p. m." and "night showings each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday," which means no night shows on matinee days and vice versa. The prices are the same as at other suburban theatres of the city.



The opening offering was "Charlie McCarthy, Detective." The theatre has a Novachord, a most unusual musical instrument, which is played on special occasions. Opening festivities were broadcast over a local radio station.

CAPE COD INFLUENCE IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE community of Temple, a small town on the outskirts of Los Angeles, California, will soon be able to boast of one of the most unique theatres in the United States. Choosing a modified Cape Cod architecture and fitting it to the attractive surroundings of this rural community, S. Charles Lee, West Coast theatre architect, has devised a most novel structure for James Edwards jr., a progressive showman.

The building, visualized above, will occupy an area of 150-foot frontage by about 100 feet in depth. The theatre portion will seat 750 persons all in loge chairs. With perfect sight-lines, the latest in acoustical and other technical developments, the functional ideas embraced in this theatre project promise a new conception of how a modern place of entertainment can be developed to fit in with the surroundings of the community in which it is erected and from which it derives its sustenance.

"DON'TS" TO DEALERS FROM DR. CARRIER

TEN commandments for air conditioning practice were laid down recently by Dr. Willis H. Carrier, chairman of the board of Carrier Corporation, in explaining that progress in the industry can be traced directly to the public's insistence on equipment which performs the true functions of air conditioning.

Speaking before a two-day sales meeting of his company's distributors from Maine to Washington and as far west as Pittsburgh, Dr. Carrier said the industry is going through a process similar to that of the earliest days of the auto industry.

"People first began to think of an automobile as a luxury, then as a 'gadget'," he said. "It wasn't until after the war that an automobile was considered a necessity. However, one of our biggest problems after 38 years of air conditioning, one that still is not quite licked, is the tendency toward 'gadgets'."

Today, Dr. Carrier said, the public no longer will accept inadequate air conditioning devices. This attitude has been brought about only by a long, slow process of consumer education, he continued.

Dr. Carrier, who recently was honored by the National Association of Manufacturers as one of America's "Modern Pioneers of Industry," told the gathering of more than 500 distributors that air conditioning would advance more rapidly as an "engineering science" if just a bit less than miracles is expected of it.

"I think it might not be amiss to lay down 'Ten Commandments' for the air conditioning industry," said Dr. Carrier. "Careful adherence to these precepts would do much to further its future. I would list them as follows:

1. "Don't make rash promises about miraculous 'cures' for various ailments through air conditioning. Air conditioning may help to alleviate suffering of hay fever victims, for instance, but it will not cure them.

2. "Don't sell inadequate equipment just to make the sale. A room cooler will not condition a large store or auditorium.

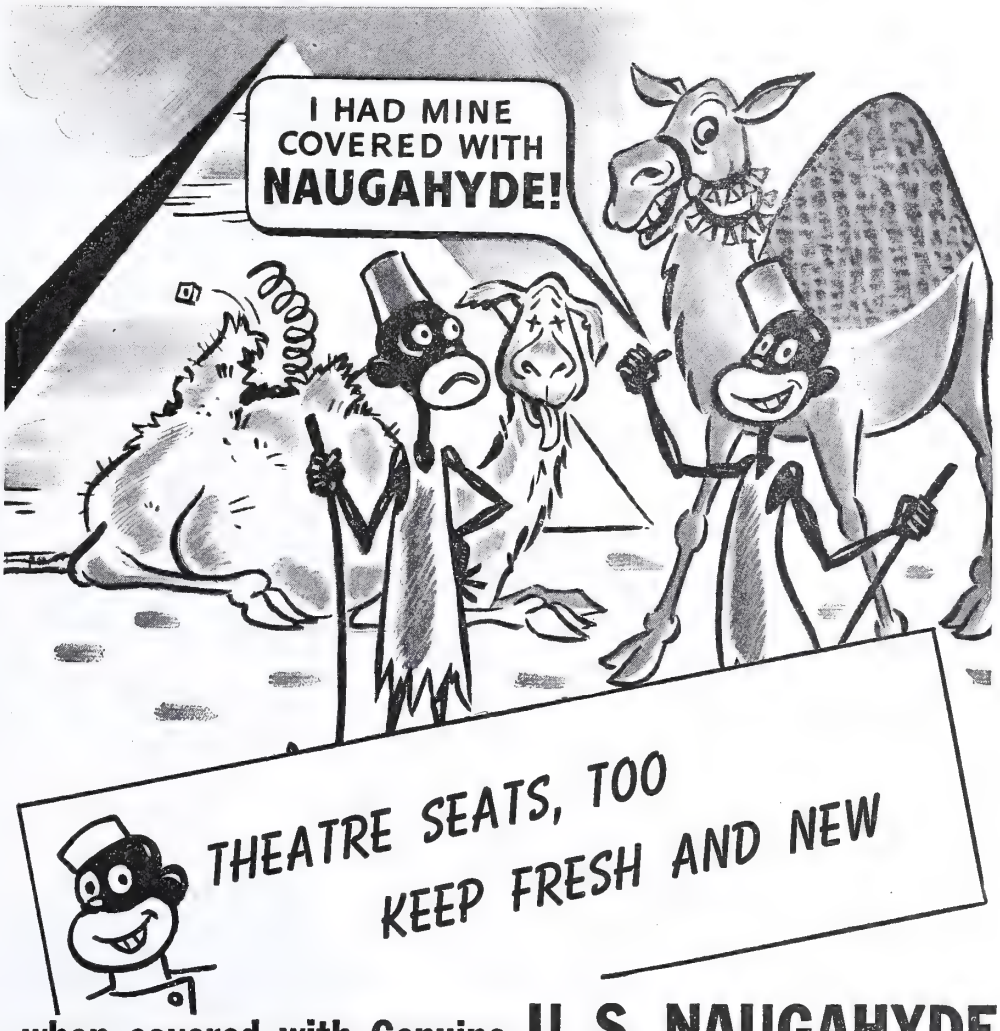
3. "Don't allow people to 'show off' their air conditioning systems by running them '40 degrees cooler than outside.'

4. "Don't take anything for granted in figuring or installing a system. Air conditioning is an exact, mathematical science and should be treated as such.

5. "Don't stop trying to cut costs where it can be done legitimately and without affecting the efficiency of the system. Hundreds of subsequent installations may depend upon it.

6. "Don't cease looking for new outlets and markets for air conditioning. Twenty years ago, we would never have dreamed of installing equipment in the deepest gold mine in South Africa.

7. "Don't place outlets so breezes keep one person cool and give his neighbor a 'pain in the neck.' One person, conducting a 'one-man campaign against air conditioning,' can do more harm than ten satisfied customers can do it good.



8. "Don't fail to sell air conditioning for winter use as well as summer. More and more people are recognizing its year-round value.

9. "Don't 'pinch pennies' when installing equipment and duct work. You'll save your client money in the long run through lower operating cost and satisfaction.

10. "Don't take anything for granted about the public's knowledge of air conditioning. Progress in development of the industry can be traced to the public's insistence on equipment which performs the full functions of air conditioning."

The theatre industry might take heed to the foregoing precautionary commandments laid down by Dr. Carrier with great profit to itself and with pleasure to its patrons.

As an aid to decoration, properly applied lighting cannot be stressed too strongly. It works hand-in-hand with the color scheme to provide a striking effect.

consists of all new sound and projection apparatus of the very latest types. The entire layout, it is said, can be converted to television reception within 24 hours.

Blue venetian blinds are at the windows of the two offices on the second floor. The one at right is Mr. Cook's own private office. Unlike most theatre management offices, it is commodious and attractive.

The boxoffice, flanked by modern doors to the lobby, is at the sidewalk line. It is constructed of structural glass furnished without supports and octagonally shaped. It is also equipped with a ticket storage cabinet.

Lighting Effect Predominant

At night the Tivoli front, which is 36 feet high, can be seen eight miles away. The lower section of the front and the boxoffice as well as shops on either side of the theatre proper is of structural glass in dark blue, pale blue and sun-tan. The top center of the front is of ivory glass with pale blue trim, including the top deck between fins where blue and red neon is located. The balance of the front surface is of cream stucco.

The sign, marquee and attraction board carry out the dominant color scheme of blue and red. Sign letters are 30 inches high and the upright has neon on all sides and over the top. The marquee ceiling is fluorescent lighted.

All electrical circuits in the theatre are heavily conduited and the house is as fireproof as it can be made with fire-doors in the projection room and at other vital points. All electrical devices are equipped with dual controls so that they can be adjusted from the booth or from other points in the theatre. There is also an intercommunicating telephone system throughout the house.

Hot and cold water are furnished to all points in the house and there is a 4-inch water main running into the building. Ice water circulates to drinking fountains in the foyer, lounges and other parts of the theatre.

The theatre is built on radii; there are no right-angled corners. And most unique are the lounges downstairs. On one side under the foyer is the ladies' lounge and powder room. On the opposite side is the men's room. Between and down three steps is the smoking lounge which is 22 by 22 feet in size. Off the smoking lounge and down two steps is the unique dance lounge which is 48 by 22 feet in size.

Plenty of Diversion

Bridge symbols in the form of card spots cut in the wooden partitions flanking the gate from the smoking room down to the dance floor suggest a rubber of bridge to waiting patrons who may feel so disposed. These symbols are repeated in the asphalt tile of the dance floor. The wrought iron balustrade separating the smoking lounge from the dance floor carries out in figure work an old-fashioned harp design.

Ceilings of the lounges are triple-ply and with the walls are sound-proofed. The dance lounge can be, and frequently is, curtained off from the general lounge for private parties, card playing and so forth. At one end of the dance floor is the music box. Light fixtures are modern and produce vari-colored lights. In the lounges and elsewhere throughout the theatre are assemblies of modern lounge furniture. Here as elsewhere in the house the flooring is of asphalt tile and throughout the downstairs area and as well in the loges upstairs the specially prepared wall plaster is finished in a modern "waffle" style.

The men's smoking lounge is decorated in blues, deep pinks and ivory. The ladies' lounge has two touch-up mirrors near the entrance and a beautifully decorated lounge room and powder room complete with mirrors and tiny but intriguing make-up tables built into the wall.

Plans and specifications for the new Tivoli were by Robert Boller, theatre architect, and Trevor C. Jones, his assistant, both of Kansas City. Construction was under the supervision of Walter Flett, of the Flett Theatre Building & Repair Company.

THE STORY of Worthington-Carbondale air conditioning can not be told in a single page. Merely to list the equipment items available would require a sizable book.

OUR MESSAGE to the equipment purchaser, however, is brief. It is, first, that this organization, as a pioneer in the field, is thoroughly experienced in all classes of installations. Second, that we build, in our own plants, equipment of all types and sizes . . . to fit the exact needs of any establishment, without bias or compromise. And, third, that the Worthington-Carbondale engineers are ready to apply to your requirements the knowledge gained in solving many difficult air conditioning problems.

DEVOTED TO A CLEARER UNDERSTANDING OF TEMPERATURE CONTROL IN THEATRES

Air Distribution! Ah, the Crimes Committed in Thy Name!

By Gordon H. Simmons

I GUESS my present hat size will always fit me, because I'll never get a swelled head from the way you all take my measure. Listen to this: One of my correspondents winds up his letter by saying: "It is pretty hard not to like you from your letters and your pieces in the magazine, but I really think you get a bit gruff in both just to hide your real self."

Now there is a bit of friendly criticism that not only was appreciated but caused some thought on my part anent the point he raised, the while causing me to wonder if he hadn't "smoked me out" and actually showed me to myself.

In the same mail I got a letter from a Louisiana exhibitor. He opened up saying: "I am the 'Out House Guy.' Remember me? Time does not permit me to relate more about the big Cajun who rushed out of my theatre shouting: 'Give me AIR! By God, it's Hot! Autre Votre Capeau." (I think that's French for some swear words he gave vent to while tearing off his coat.)

Laugh, Clown, Laugh

My friend further advises that his brother, "who is sick in bed with the Lazy Louisiana Spring Fever," wants to know something about cooling his theatre. So he promises to write me a "rib buster" such as he claims I wrote him on March 9, 1939. Little does he realize that his letter was the real "rib buster," because I've been all over his part of the country and know the natives, many of whom are "warm friends" of mine.

I am fairly helpless with laughter when I attempt to visualize his big Cajun customer busting out of the theatre shouting for air. That poor fellow wanted fresh air more than anything else in this world. Serious about it, too. That's what makes it so funny to me—but not to him.

Another letter from Vancouver in the same mail says: "Should you ever come to Vancouver, I would deem it a pleasure to have you call on me." Now, I may never get to Vancouver but just the same it's so nice to receive such fine expressions of hospitality and friendliness. There is something sincere and wholesome in all of your letters. I have never yet received one to which this does not apply. If it were otherwise, I'd say so. I'm just built that way.

But I get a comment now and then that steadies me, makes me stop and think. After I get through scratching my head and pondering, I usually admit you are right; which is probably what keeps these articles down to earth. Every time I attempt to fly a kite, some son-of-a-gun theatre owner clips the string.

I am glad you like our new department "What's New." At least, its conduct is modern even if my articles are still old fashioned. After one theatre owner told me that he read a two years' accumulation of my articles looking for something specific to help him, but couldn't find it, I had another one write in about my last diagram saying, "You sure made a Grand Slam in Spades." Well, maybe so, but since I didn't bid it, I don't get credit for it on the score pad.

Another theatre man in Michigan writes: "Your work must be very interesting and I wish I had the requirements and the opportunity to work up to be one of your lieutenants." I have written him that while the work is very interesting, it is equally quite unprofitable. I really wish I had the opportunity to swap my business for his, as well as the requirements to run it as well as I think he does.

About Redistribution

What makes this work commercially unprofitable is the fact that I haven't the conscience to capitalize on your confidence. Nor the commercial acumen to sell you the advice you so badly need. I depend too much on good will offerings for my compensation and while I have the good will, I'm still short on the offerings. But I'm expecting to be remembered when we have the long expected redistribution of wealth. And so I have come by a circuitous route finally to the introduction of my subject for the nonce. It is the redistribution of air in your theatres.

Last month I told you about blowers. If in the meantime anybody has rushed out of your theatre shouting, "Give me air!" he means, "Put in a blower and a good one." Nobody had better shout at me to give him air because I've got plenty —of the potent variety. With it I'm trying to ventilate this subject of air conditioning the best I know how. At least we've become more familiar with it as your letters amply attest. Some day we'll have more preachers on the subject and I hope they too will stick to plain facts.

What I preach is provable, demonstrable, and the only kind of exhortation that will do you any good. Somebody has already done a darn good job of preaching fancies and fantasies about air distribution in theatres. Of course, what was said may have sounded plausible, otherwise there would have been no sales. But I have yet to re-do a job where I did not have to rip out the air distribution grilles and insert proper ones. Nor would I have done the job at all unless permitted to do this, because as I've said before, "An air conditioning job is no better than its air distribution."

Of course, other people can compile facts just as I have. There can be no monopoly on facts, thank Providence! I think if other engineers joined me in making a solid stand against a deliberate tendency to reduce air conditioning to a gadget business, air conditioning might be saved from falling completely into disrepute.

Cause of a Crime

I don't mind a manufacturer's making a complete line of gadgets such as air distribution grilles. But I do mind the attempted selection of proper grilles for a particular job by someone who doesn't know how. The manufacturer cannot follow up every grille order he receives to insure its proper use on the job. If he

Enroute

Dear Readers:

By the time this issue reaches you, Simmons will be somewhere in Missouri. He's now on a good-will, service and get-acquainted trip that will take him north from Central Missouri, through Iowa and Nebraska to Minneapolis and back through Wisconsin to his headquarters in Milwaukee.

If you are located somewhere along the route of his calls and want Simmons to come and look over your air conditioning problems, if any, it can probably be arranged at no greater cost to you than a tankful of gas for his Zephyr, a chicken dinner for himself and/or a place to rest his weary head in case it's an overnight stop.

Wire this office (The Modern Theatre, 332 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago) if you want to see Simmons, either professionally or socially, and we'll relay your invitation to him en route.—The Editor.

did, he would not have time to manufacture.

You may be offered an air distribution grille that is a Lulu, but you can't just say, "I'll buy it," any more than you can buy a suit of clothes out of a store window and expect it to fit you. You have to be measured.

Now if your house isn't properly sized up for its air distribution grilles, proper distribution is the one thing you won't get. That is the lesson for today, dear students. And if you study this lesson until you know it and apply it in your purchases of equipment, one or two of you may write in and opine that I held five aces in my hand. Oh yes, I play poker, too.

But how can your job be measured? That's an easy one. Send the following information to the manufacturer of your selection or to a good engineer. Tell him how many seats in your house. That your house is so long and so wide and the ceiling heights are so and so. Tell him you want to deliver so many CFM's of air and give him your preferential location for the grilles.

If he can use your preferred locations, he will tell you so; otherwise he will suggest some of his own liking. If you are going to use ceiling outlets for supply air, divide your house into squares and locate one ceiling outlet in the center of each square.

Now all of the good grilles are scientifically designed and wonderfully made. The angles of their vanes are not only calculated mathematically but subjected to rigid tests to make sure that a certain grille will throw or distribute its air in a certain way or to a certain "pattern."

Better Than a Blunderbuss

A grille is installed and a smoke bomb set off. Then we watch the smoke. I guess it takes as much technical ingenuity to make a grille throw its air according to a fixed pattern as it does to make a shotgun distribute the shot according to a decent pattern. How do you test a shotgun? You fire it against a board fence and then look at the pattern made by the pellets. Well, I do the same thing with a grille when I have any doubts, except that I use smoke.

The grilles most of you use are about as efficient as a shotgun made out of a piece of gas pipe. What so many of you have is definitely not modern air distribution. I can't help being gruff about it. A fact is a fact and a figure's a figure.

Since we are still on the subject of air distribution, I'll have to repeat here, so you won't have to look up back issues for two years. Use a velocity of 1,000 feet per minute in your ducts. Which means that if you want to deliver 10,000 c.f.m., the duct area should be 10 square feet.

But, Brothers, when you come to grilles, Ah, that's different! A usual velocity at the grille is 500 feet per minute, but it varies with the size and shape of the room. I can only give you an average. To reduce your air velocity in your ducts 1,000 feet per minute to 500 feet per minute, you merely have to double the size of your duct immediately behind your grille.

Don't locate any grilles too close to the floor line so that they can blow in your patrons' faces. And don't snug them up too close against the ceiling unless you are using a ceiling outlet. And please don't install them in such a way that they fight one another like two bantie roosters. Furthermore, don't try to distribute all of your air exclusively from the stage-end unless your theatre is less than 75 feet long. Even then, you have to have a decent ceiling height in order to do it.

Nature's Laws Demand Respect

A duct distribution system is a good thing, otherwise such systems would not be used so extensively. Get some good consultive advice before you attempt something that might be quite impossible. Na-

SIMMONS' Q-AND-A CORNER

Problems presented herein are bona fide and are not imaginary concoctions for the purpose of misrepresenting reader interest. Original signed letters are on file for examination, subject to the approval of correspondents.

Sorry I can't print all the epistles I receive from perplexed theatre owners. Space permits only a reproduction of those most typical. Here's one from a theatre man in Minnesota:

The Letter: "I have been reading your articles on air conditioning in Boxoffice and enjoyed them very much. Like many other exhibitors, I am interested in a cooling system that will not cost a fortune to install and another fortune to operate it. The enclosed sketch will give you an idea of present installation of blower and ducts.

"The information I am interested in is this. Would you recommend washed air or cooled air with coils, and would I need to install return duct from rear of theatre, and what size? What size coils would it take?

"I am interested in drilling a 2-inch well, to get cool water. Would a 2-inch well be large enough and what type equipment would you recommend?

"I don't know what other foolish questions I could ask so will leave it up to your best judgment.—J. M."

Reply: "I received your letter of March 18th and am glad you like the articles. But you asked some questions I cannot answer until I get more information.

"However, a 2-inch well will be too small. In regard to using return air, you don't have to if your water is cold enough. But it is always a good idea to provide for it.

"Give me the size of your blower house, showing how much 'free room' you have in it, and tell me the temperature of your water. If you want to send me a check for $25, I will make you a plan showing everything you need to know. Then whenever you get ready to air condition, you won't have to ask any salesman any questions but can tell him what you want.

"I could buy the apparatus you'd need for slightly less than $700 (no pump) but I'd charge 10 per cent for doing so. The installation cost is negligible and you could do it yourself.

"You might buy equipment for less, as there is a lot of junk being offered theatre owners, but if I engineered your installation on the basis above outlined, you'd get sure results and satisfactory ones from every standpoint.

"You could arrange financing through your local bank or through the C. I. T. as you prefer on a time payment plan up to three years. And if an air conditioning system won't pay for itself in this length of time, it should not be installed.

"Glad to answer any further questions if you send me the information requested. —G. H. S."

And here's another from a theatre man in Missouri, who wants to be shown:

The Letter: "I should like to do something about a cooling system for our theatre. This is a 500-seat house of brick construction and a composition roof.

"Am not in a position to spend a large sum of money but would like your recommendations as to the best and most economic system that will do a proper job.

"The temperature here is very high, reaching 100 degrees or over at times. The city water reaches 80 degrees and the humidity is very high. Would it be practicable to use an air washer without ice under those conditions?

"The basement is under the front of the house. Have about 10 feet back of the theatre that can be used provided the building is not over one story or sixteen feet long as the building code prohibits a larger addition.

"At the present time we have an old blower driven by a 5 h. p., 3 phase 60 cycle 220 volt motor. Speed of fan is controlled by a clutch. I do not know the capacity of fan.

"Am enclosing floor and elevation plan of building with all the information that I think you will need.—C. E. L."

My Answer: "I received your letter of the 20th enclosing plans and I will be glad to design you a proper cooling system if we can find something to cool with. Washed air in your locality will not do.

"Now I did engineer a theatre job in East Central Missouri and we got 57 degree water from a deep well. Can you not consult a couple of well drillers and ascertain the possibility as well as the cost of sinking a well to get 100 gallons per minute?

"Let me know if you are north or south of an east and west line drawn through DeSoto. This will enable me to tell about the temperature of your water. Several other Missouri theatre owners have written me recently and if I could call on several of you at one time, I might be willing to drive down there when the weather improves.

"I could design a very inexpensive job for you but we must explore the possibility of getting cold water as well as the cost of doing it before we go into the matter of design.

"If you are in that limestone formation, you can get cold water for a song and sing it yourself. But you would have to advise me about this. So let me hear from you and if we can get cold water I'll send you my recommendations.—G. H. S."

Air Distribution! Ah, the Crimes Committed in Thy Name!

ture's laws won't compromise with you, or have I said that before? And sooner or later we are going to have to compromise with nature and more intelligently do her bidding, or else.

A fan from out in Nebraska writes: "Yours of the 3rd received and I am dizzy. I am glad I did not decide to be an air conditioning engineer. Diffusion and confusion go hand in hand for me. I sure would end up in the ward for dangerous ones. And to top it all off, you talk about money like a New Dealer and I don't like any part of the New Deal."

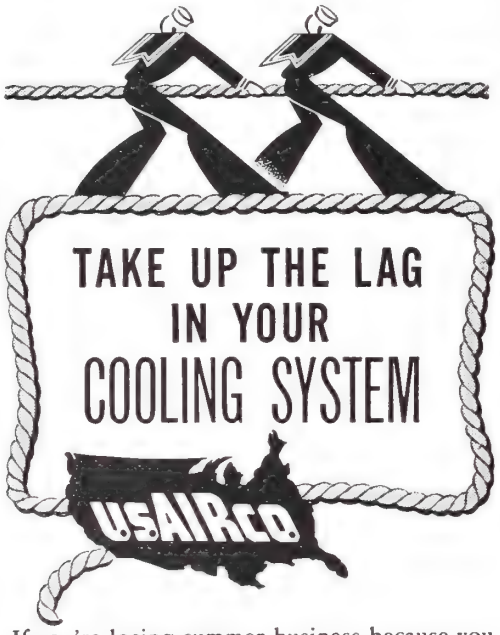
So he returns the drawing I made for him and asks me to "cut her down." He wants to use a $150 blower in place of the $270 one I specified. The $270 job has filters, also a motor. And—it rates at 12,000 c.f.m. "Cutting her down" is something I like to do just about as much as cutting off my foot.

It's all a matter of air distribution. And to properly distribute it is no cinch. If I could be equipped with as good an air distribution grille as I can specify for your theatres, none of you would ever have to complain that I made you "dizzy."

But the correspondent who says I make him dizzy sends me with practically every letter an unsolicited check, out of any one of which I could buy a carton of cigarettes and sometimes a couple of bottles of Scotch. He evidently likes the kind of dizziness he gets from me. May his family increase!

Every time he changes his job on me, I change his grilles. These things are like the sugar in your coffee, and no matter how good the coffee may be, it has to be "sweetened up"—unless you are a Swede and drink your coffee barefooted.

Good Measure—or a Misfit



There are so many bare-footed air conditioning theatre jobs that need to be shod with proper grilles. Get the wrong ones, and it's so easy to do, and you're in the same spot as if you bought shoes that don't fit you.

A manufacturer writes me as follows: "The writer reads your articles on air conditioning and finds them highly interesting because they are written in a more or less conversational tone and do not attempt to get highly technical." Apparently this party feels that I am able to explain the manufacturer to the theatre owner. But howinell can I explain the theatre owner to the manufacturer? I haven't yet been able to figure out that one.

I can't go technical on you to explain the necessity of proper grilles, as well as the necessity of properly sized equipment for any of your needs. But why do so many of you pick on air conditioning to try out just any old device? Do you in-

Are You Confused?

The subject of Air Conditioning explained in common, non-technical every-day terms becomes less baffling to the man who wants to buy equipment. If you are confused regarding the application of air conditioning to your theatre, write a letter to Gordon H. Simmons, 926 N. Cass Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, outlining your conditions, seating capacity, room dimension, present equipment, etc. Give him the facts, ENCLOSE POSTAGE for reply and he'll be glad to analyze your layout and give you unbiased recommendations on your requirements.

If you're losing summer business because you aren't delivering the type of cooling that keeps people coming, write USAIRCO. For 16 years USAIRCO engineers have been designing and building cooling systems for the theatre industry. USAIRCO Systems are successful because they're engineered to fit each house. They're delivering big cooling results at lower dollar costs.

The new USAIRCO Gyra Spray Washed Air cooling chamber is a new unit which brings to the small theatre, at amazingly low costs, the greater earning power of washed, cleaned, cooled, and filtered air. This superbly engineered unit can be hooked-up to your present blowers. Write for details.

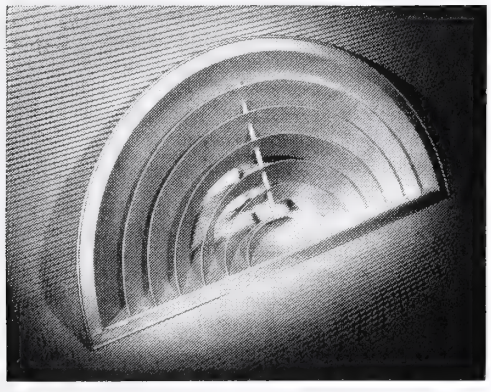
stall a 35mm projector and then buy 16mm films for it? Do you buy a pair of shoes from a picture without regard to the fit? Do you fit yourself? You do not.

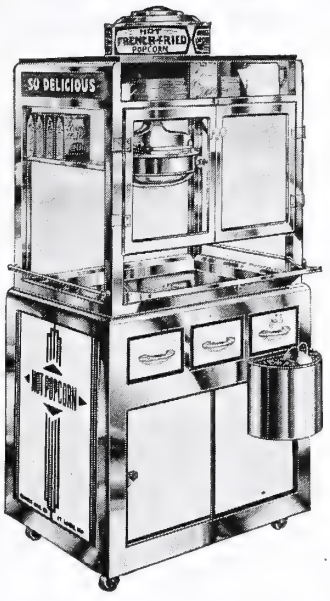


But you do try to fit your own house with air conditioning and we all get fits. Small wonder I sometimes display some fitful temper and have one of you opine that I'm getting "a bit gruff." I get in the same state of mind as a mother hen who has hatched out a flock of ducklings and then gets all in a dither when she sees them slither into high water. I don't like dead ducks. Yet some of you ducks are already so financially decomposed that I can't get a dime out of you. True, I haven't asked for it, but I wouldn't need to if you had it.

Great Guns! Good grilles are the cheapest thing you can buy. And you need them or you haven't got air conditioning. They can be selected for future air conditioning use as well as present ventilation and air distribution.

It might take you five years to get a good air conditioning job, a piece at a time. But start with the right pieces and add to them as you can. If I were stark naked and didn't have the price of a complete suit of clothes, I'd at least start out with a good foundation garment—a pair of shoes that fit—making sure that they did fit me. I don't mind your knowing I've got big feet.

WHAT'S NEW IN AIR CONDITIONING



Not exactly "hot off the griddle" but still new enough and badly needed to correct a lot of air distributing troubles in many of your theatres is the device pictured here. The Anemostat for side-wall installation is the joint answer to the engineers' and exhibitors' prayer in just a lot of cases where ceiling type grilles are not exactly what the doctor can conscientiously order.

I've looked into the whys and wherefores of this new side-wall air diffuser and glancing back over my checkered career as an Air Conditioneer, I can recall many cases where it would have saved my face in getting better air distribution for my clients. Now don't go trying to build one of these and get yourself into trouble. Besides being heavily patented, the whole formula has been figured out to a gnat's heel. But if you want to know whether it's what you need, tell your troubles to Uncle Dudley, giving dimensional details, and I'll get the dope for you.—G. H. S.

DISCUSSION OF ACOUSTI-DECORATIVE EFFECTS FOR MODERN THEATRE INTERIORS

How Did Your Last Paint Job Stand the Tests of Time?

By Hanns R. Teichert

MORE and more we are being confronted with questions about how to keep up a modern paint job. Why did the old-fashioned job stand up for a so much longer period of time? Is it because there were better craftsmen, using better materials and so on?

The first thing to remember is that our industry is not one that has stood still in the advancement of modern ideas and chemistry. Materials today are as different as a horse and buggy is from an automobile. Not saying that the automobile is so much better than the buggy was in its time, but who would ride in a buggy in preference to an automobile today? Even if the buggy were finished with fourteen coats of finest coach varnish, hand rubbed and polished, and the automobile were sprayed with only a couple of coats of lacquer.

The mechanic of today is just as skilled as he ever was, even if everything now comes ready mixed in a can and does not require a definite knowledge of how materials are put together. This leaves him to do only the mechanical end of application and increases his efficiency; necessarily so, considering today's wage scales.

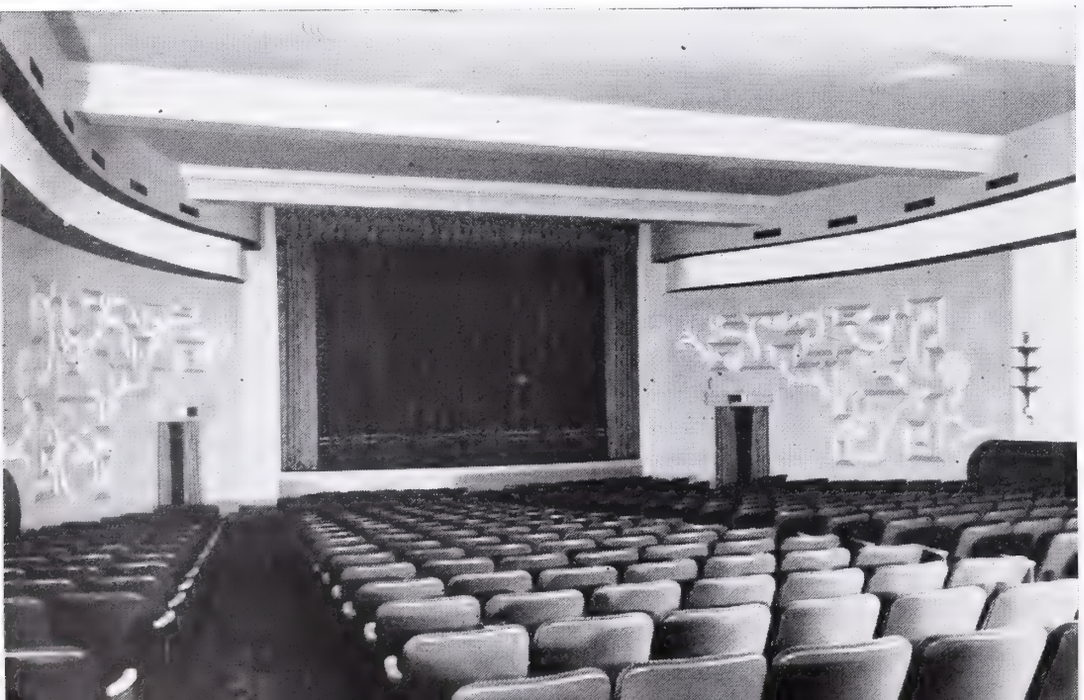
Paint Materials Improved

Materials today are better than they ever were, thanks to the development of hard and quick-drying synthetic rosins and vehicles. They are so much richer and more plentiful in color pigments that have recently been perfected.

Twenty years ago we used white lead and oil paints on interiors. The main mixing colors were siennas, ochre, umber, maybe some chrome yellows, greens and reds. These few colors made up the whole palette a decorator required and the vogue being antique monotone effects rendered them efficient. The lead and oil paint required at least a drying time of twenty-four hours which was taken for granted then, and a paint job could easily require a month to do and if the surface was not quite dry, customers and patrons did not object because they did not know any better.

Today, materials that take more time to dry than one hour are frowned on and a theatre redecorating job has to be completed in a week without closing the house for a day. Paint has to be dry for the day's business.

The world nowadays cries out for color, because we have been educated to what effect color has on our well being and the stimulating energy bright surroundings radiate. In order to give the public color in its true form, it is impossible to use the old-fashioned formulae of manufacture. A clean color pigment cannot be mixed in oils that have a film of tarnish, which means a brownish color that increases in opacity by the year and in little time covers the color pigment to such an extent it is hard to recognize the original color.



The brownish film will make yellows appear greenish brown, orange a greyish brown, blues a greenish grey, reds a brown and so on. Years ago, when we glazed these finishes to make them appear more antique, this tarnishing was not too much of a nuisance, but today, when we use bright pigments, it is inexcusable.

Those Dirty Colors

We must bear in mind also that the before-mentioned pigments such as ochre, sienna and umber are really earth colors, manufactured out of dirt, so to speak, and naturally they had an appearance that blended in with the dust and soot and fingermarks much more than a bright pigment has.

We all remember the color schemes of

Now a few words to explain the accompanying interior views of the Ark Theatre, located at 858 E. 63rd Street, Chicago, Illinois, and owned by Gollos Brothers, Inc., a recent modernizing project in which we played a part in collaboration with Theatre Architect Erwin G. Fredrick of Chicago.

PICTURE NO. 1 portrays the general view of the auditorium. The ceiling was painted in an aqua blue complementary to the dark ultramarine blue backs of the seats. This color gives the scheme the lift it required because the ceiling is rather low. The slopped down soffits of the plaster housing covering the air conditioning duct and running parallel with the sidewalls are especially accentuated with dark ultramarine blue in order to emphasize the important architectural feature they represent in the scheme.

The sidewalls covered with off-white interior finish in its natural tone add the plain surface needed to dramatize the highly decorative covered front walls flanking the proscenium and which are only punctuated with spots of colored light used in the lighting fixtures. The decorative scheme of these front curved walls is painted in a strong coral-orange background and decorated with a free-hand applied band design of a Grecian key filled in with designs of the period.

PICTURE NO. 2 is a view of the small ladies' lounge. Here we have a white ceiling and the walls in alternating tones of turquoise blue and coral. The coral color used around the mirror renders lipstick smears that our lady patrons like to leave behind unnoticeable—even more so because this wall is covered with an all-over floral pattern.

our period houses loaded down with ornamental plaster, painted in an ivory tone and then antiqued with a darker sienna tone glaze to bring out the highlights in the ornament. The only color that was used appeared as a polychrome in the ornamental plaster. If an ivory tone was predominant in the color scheme, they used ochres and siennas and to give a greyer tone they used raw umber. In order to secure a more reddish tinge, they used burnt sienna or umber and could change it with the use of chrome green in addition to the aforementioned color to arrive at an antique green or verde green scheme.

In other words, it was impossible to make a mistake because of the antique sauce that was applied, even if harsh colors were used in the polychroming. This tied up any scheme into a pleasing, even if uninteresting, color effect. The use of colored starch over twice spoiled schemes —meaning in the base color as well as the final glaze tone—has saved many a dollar for contractors of years ago and was practiced by most of them because of the unreliability of certain mechanics in our field. If the contractor neglected to supervise his job until a day before the opening and the color scheme did not suit, the good old savior of colored starch could still produce a satisfactory job in the nick of time and at the expense of the theatre owner.

How Different Today

The practice is different today. A modern color scheme with direct colors is so positive that only one color applied in an off shade can produce such a jarring note in the whole scheme as to render a job a complete failure. Today we have no more blending of dirty colors, antique glazes and colored starches to rely on. The use of direct colors demands utmost knowledge and good taste of a decorator, because only by dramatizing strong colors can he achieve the ultimate result that a modern scheme requires. Color harmony today is based on scientific measurements that are right or wrong and cannot be rectified by resorting to old tricks of the trade and the use of hazy overlays to hide imperfections.

Color schemes for theatres are not monotones any more, but decidedly complementary schemes using definite laws of dramatizing direct colors in the right ratio. This means not a helter skelter use of any combination of colors, but a carefully selected suitable color scheme fitting the proportion of the project.

Coming back to the question of upkeep, which is of primary importance to the theatre owner, let's consider facts. We admit that decorative schemes of yesteryear seemed to stand up longer; but why? Not on their own merit of better material, but merely by the style of the time that regarded it necessary to open theatres that were artificially made to look old by antiquing. This idea, which we admit today was always rather inexplainable, had its merit only in the fact that already dirty looking walls naturally will not show wear and additional dirt as much as new bright surfaces.

The other factor which made the illusion of better upkeep still more important was the mottled effect. Two or three color shadings created by the use of color glazes which were stippled with brushes, rags, paper, sponges and so forth. It is only natural that a mottled surface which creates a covering of lighter and darker areas over a wall will not show dirt marks as plainly as an opaque bright colored paint finish. Anybody can also readily understand that a lead and oil painted, glossy appearing surface, which is due to the oil's coming always to the top and covering the pigment, is more washable than a porous flat painted surface that has no protective film of oil on the surface but leaves the pigment exposed.

Less Washing Required

In order to secure a modern high colored effect, it is necessary that we make some allowances to the washability of flat painted surfaces because we gain so many other points. The focal point of the argument is that we avoid the tarnishing, which most of us used to call fading, and this means our new surface stays clean longer because the color penetrates the dirt and is not incased under the film that causes the discolorations. This means we do not have to wash these surfaces as much.

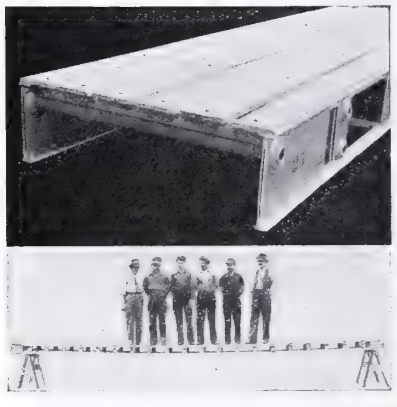
In order to get our soft and velvety yet highly colored effects, we have to be handicapped a bit. Here is where the experienced decorator's value comes in again. It is up to him to use hard drying, semi-flat finishes on wall portions that get most of the wear and consequently have to stand most of the washing. Our new synthetic flat enamels will outwear any previous known finish because they dry as hard as glass.

Another way of safeguarding the washability of wall surfaces in public rooms and still retain the commendable advantages of flat paint is the application of a coat of flat varnish on those surfaces as an added protective coating. Be sure to use a highly bleached damar varnish, otherwise this film will tarnish as badly as the old oil paint films, and you could just as well have used old fashioned lead and oil paint in the beginning.

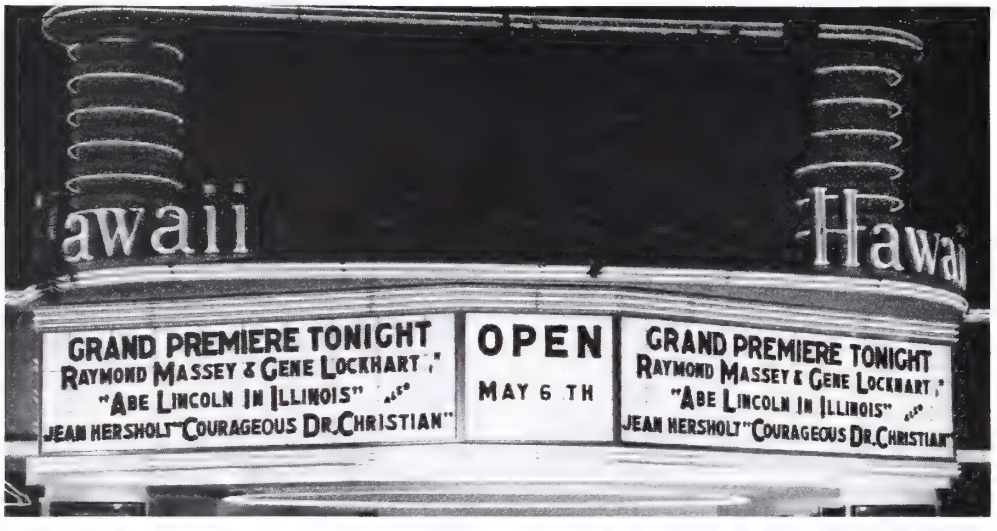
Please remember that any good titanium flat paints are washable in themselves, but they require a little more careful handling than lead and oil painted surfaces; meaning that you cannot allow your janitor to wash these surfaces weekly with strong alkali soaps and forget good rinsing with clean water. By the time he washes the surface again the lye and alkali that was left on will have attacked and softened the top layer of the paint to such an extent that he removes a certain part of it and comes crying to you showing you some paint particles in the sponge or rag, claiming that the paint that was used comes off with very little rubbing. Then you are convinced that your contractor has cheated you by substituting cheap paint.

Opaque surfaces show dirt spots more plainly than glazed and mottled areas and consequently your janitor starts rubbing hard and even uses abrasives to remove the dirt because he wants to prove to you how interested he is in really doing a good washing job—and this all at the expense of the defenseless paint.



Please remember that everything has to wear out sooner or later and when you replace your carpeting or have to repair your seats it probably is time also for a new paint job.

Aluminum Stages Are Recent Development



A new aluminum stage, made in various lengths from 8 feet to 25 feet and widths from 12 inches to 24 inches, has been placed on the market by the Aluminum Ladder Company of Tarentum, Pa.

Aluminum stages are ideal for use in the production of motion pictures. They are much stronger than wood stages of the same specifications. The 25-foot stage illustrated at the bottom of the cut weighs only 118 pounds. It is supporting a load of 1,055 pounds, yet the deflection is scarcely noticeable. Aluminum stages remain as strong after years of service as on the day they are bought, since they do not rust, rot or deteriorate in any way.

The stages are made in various weights for various capacities and are amazingly light for the load they will support. Because of their light weight, they are easily moved from place to place and the danger of strain or rupture is greatly lessened.

All parts of the new stage are completely bolted and riveted together, including the wood covering, as can be seen from the end view of the stage shown at the top of the picture. Because there are no nails to work out, there is no danger of men tripping and falling while using the stage. The wood covering is of the best quality obtainable and is free of knots. These features, together with their remarkable strength and durability, make aluminum stages the safest on the market today. Foam Rubber Cushions Create New Comforts

More than seventy-five per cent of all new buses have foam rubber seat cushions. Practically every streamline train built within the last five years is equipped with foam rubber seat cushions and mattresses. Foam rubber cushions over springs are either standard or optional equipment on Cadillac, LaSalle, Packard, Buick, Nash, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Hupmobile, Chrysler and Hudson. Transport planes are equipped with foam rubber seat cushions and mattresses. Within recent months tremendous strides have been made in adapting foam rubber to household furniture and the volume of sales is mounting rapidly.

Only in the theatre seating industry, the first industry to investigate the possibilities of foam rubber, has the acceptance been slow. However, the most enthusiastic boosters of foam rubber in theatre seating are those who have bought foam rubber. The rubber companies are carrying on a tremendous publicity program in newspapers, general magazines and trade papers and by direct mail. The public is rapidly being made foam rubber conscious.

LIGHTING

THEATRE ILLUMINATION FOR ADVERTISING DISPLAY, ATMOSPHERE AND BETTER VISION

Comparative Lighting Formulae for Correct Interior Effects

INTERIOR lighting for the theatre has become the subject of much study and research lately, since it is now generally realized that the decorative effects of various departments of the modern theatre are largely dependent on correct lighting for most pleasing and permanent results. Conversely, lighting must rely on the decorative scheme for its greatest efficiency.

Lighting and decorative effect are so inter-dependent that they may no longer be considered individually nor applied without regard to their most intimate relationship.

While these remarks are directed principally to painted surfaces, nevertheless they have important application to the auxiliary decorative effects of the theatre, such as the selection of colors in chair upholstery, carpeting, draperies, paintings and all other details that may contribute to the general color scheme of the interior. Science has recently taken a hand to solve the lighting-decorating problem with a series of comparative tests to determine the light reflection factors of various colors.

Correct Interior Colors

Using both mercury and incandescent lighting, comprehensive scientific tests of reflection values from surfaces painted with 21 interior color variations have been made which should be of great value in choosing tints for best results with various types of lighting equipment.

Satisfactory painted surfaces free from objectionable specular reflection and in the range of lighter tints can be had with reflection coefficients easily in excess of six per cent, according to S. G. Hibben, director of applied lighting of the lamp division, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. Of these tints, some of the greens, blues and grays will show a slightly higher reflection value under mercury illumination but the reverse is true for those tints containing pinks, buffs, tans, or reddish colors.

For best lighting efficiency it is important when using mercury vapor lighting to have paints with good reflecting values at the particular wave lengths of light which are normally predominant in the output of the mercury lamp.

In the average interior when using an indirect or semi-indirect fixture, the character of the ceiling is vitally important. If this is a good white, the table top illumination is not greatly influenced by the colors or quality characteristics of the light source.

Paints that under daylight appear to be pink, orange, red, or mixtures of these longer wave colors should be avoided as the incident light is deficient in long wave colors, and in a mercury lighted interior, the greatest efficiency is experienced if the longer wave paint colors are avoided.

Coefficient of Reflection

A series of measurements were made on 21 typical tints of painted surfaces, corresponding to commercial conditions. The basic standard of comparison was a surface of magnesium carbonate having the reflection coefficient of 98 per cent. The illumination from the filament lamp corresponds to the medium wattage Mazda lamps found in average stores or offices. The mercury illumination was from a standard 250-watt high intensity mercury vapor lamp at about one-half atmospheric pressure, operated at a stable temperature and a normal rating. Illumination in all cases was diffuse.

S. G. Hibben with reflectometer used in testing reflective qualities of painted surfaces. On 21 specimens of fiber board and hard plaster, one foot square, typical tints of interior paints were applied. Reflection values were measured in the special reflectometer.

The tests proved that of the total average of 21 specimens, the coefficient of reflection under Mazda illumination is about two per cent less than under mercury illumination. (See Tables I and II).

To determine comparative reflective values, the 21 tints were divided into three groups, a reflective coefficient group above 75 per cent, from 60 to 74 per cent, and from 45 to 59 per cent. Under incandescent examination, the three groups were of seven each, the first containing whites, ivory and light buff, with a group average of .793. The second group contained light pinks, tans, blues and greens, with an average of .644, and the third group contained darker grays, greens and blues, for an average of .534.

Under mercury lighting, the groups shifted, with only whites and ivory remaining in the first division, for an average of .828. Ten tints were incorporated in the second group for an average of .659, and the third group, with seven tints, had an average of .550.

Regardless of this shifting, however, the averages for each of the three mercury groups were in each case slightly higher than the corresponding Mazda section.

Inasmuch as all the specimens were of light tints, their ability to reflect light would not be radically different when illuminated by light of different quality.

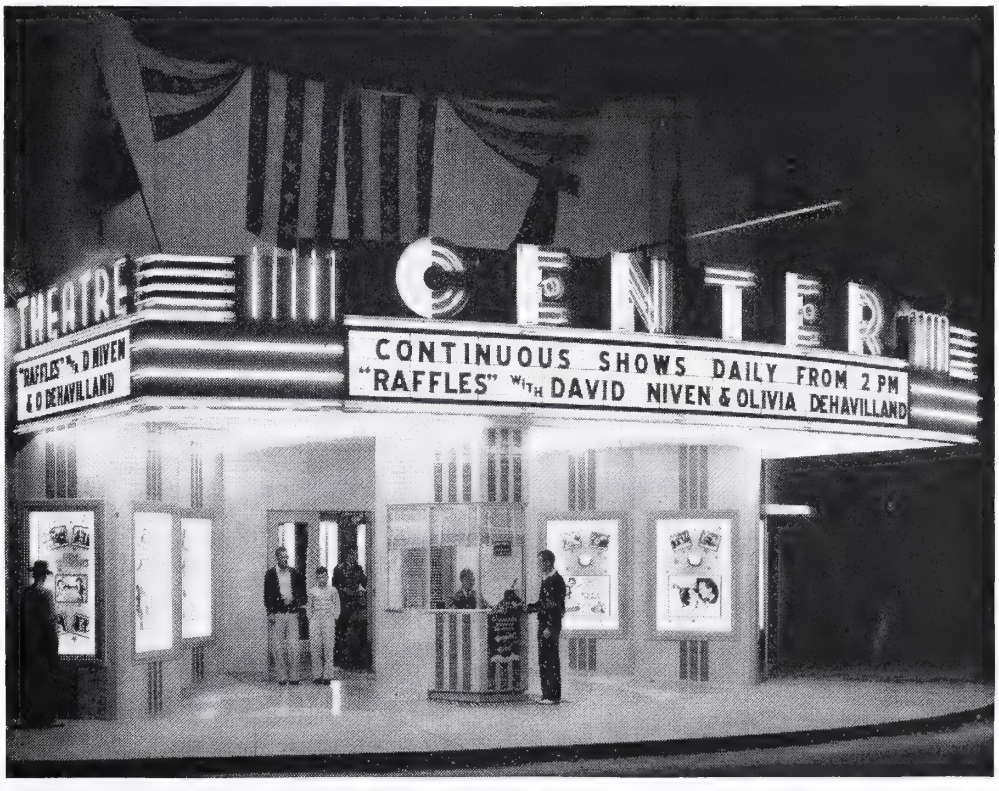
On the whole, specimens of white and near white colors may reflect light from the mercury lamp to a slightly greater degree than from the tungsten lamp, but the reverse would be found with more nearly saturated colors such as red and orange.

The continuous spectrum of the filament lamp is relatively deficient in the short wave colors or the blue-violet and of the spectrum, and the light from the mercury lamp is changeable but chiefly concentrated at blue, yellow green and bright yellow.

Eye Observation Deceptive

In choosing colors for large painted surfaces likely to affect illumination, the eye is often unreliable, and selection should not depend on eye observation alone. Often it is possible to select equally pleasing colors and yet have a gain of 10 to 15 per cent in reflecting value.

With modern lighting equipment that in most commercial structures directs much of the light to the ceiling, areas above the general level of the picture molding should have reflection values of 80 per cent or higher.



A general guide for interior colors may be found in nature's outdoor scheme, with the brightness of the horizon roughly half that of the sky, and the lower foreground half the brightness of the horizon. Presumably one would be on the right track to choose a ceiling paint of flat white or near white of about 85 per cent. The upper wall surfaces would have a reflection coefficient of about 45 per cent, and the lower walls and floors would be about 20 per cent.

SMART SUGGESTION TO SMALL-TOWN SHOWMEN

Exhibitors in small towns who still may think they can't afford it might take this timely tip on property modernization from Gidney Talley of the Plestex Theatre in Pleasanton (pop. 1,154), Texas. The result of a recent renovation of this 340-seat theatre speaks for itself. Despite droughts and "prairie" patronage, the Plestex seats are kept well filled at every performance.

MIAMI HOUSE HEADLINES ITS ATTRACTIONS

An especially interesting example of efficient advertising display is to be observed in the all-tile front of the Center Theatre, Miami, Florida, a unit of Wometco Theatres, Inc. Means for good merchandising are provided in plenty of light and changeable copy displayed by cast aluminum silhouette letters in glass-in-frame units across the front and at ends of the slightly curved canopy. ". . . the right kind of care from early infancy."

Sound Equipments Form Bad Habits Early in Their Lives

By W. W. Simons

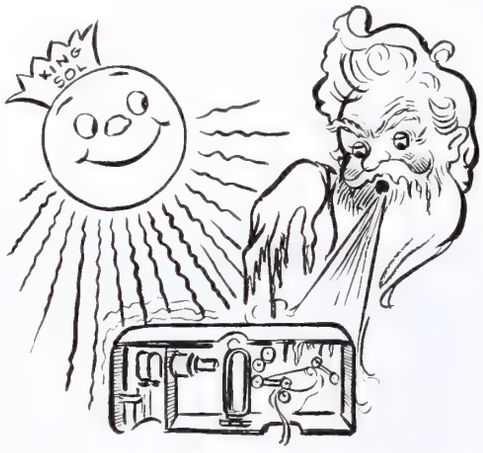
WHILE exhibitors are very few and far between who fail to recognize the importance of competent sound service in theatres using old style reproduction equipments, many of them do not seem to realize that there is a very critical period in the life of a brand new equipment that deserves serious consideration from a servicing point of view.

This vital period—referred to by engineers as the "shake-down" period—usually occurs during the first few months in the life of a new mechanism, or shortly after it has been installed.

Every type of mechanism after it leaves the factory goes through this "shake-down" period. Your own automobile is an obvious example. The way you drive it during the first 500 miles and the care you give it for the first 1,000 miles are vitally important and will affect the performance of your car during the remainder of its entire life. This period—the first several months of the life of a mechanism—calls for the greatest vigilance and care in the matter of maintenance.



". . . goes through a shake-down period."

No matter how searching and rigid the factory tests may have been, a sound reproducing mechanism may develop defects which only actual theatre operation, during several months, can reveal. A wonderfully delicate mechanism both mechanically and electrically, a sound reproducing equipment deserves the most intelligent and able servicing during the crucial "shake-down" period.

A few examples of the behavior of sound equipment during this period should serve to explain why this is so:

After several days or weeks of regular operation of the sound system, the repeated heating and cooling of the lens assembly may develop a condensation of moisture which becomes deposited on the inner lens surface. A poor frequency response usually results. The service engineer, with the aid of his electrical measurement devices, and by reference to previously established performance figures, can track down the cause of the trouble and remedy it promptly.

". . . repeated heating and cooling of the lens assembly . . ."

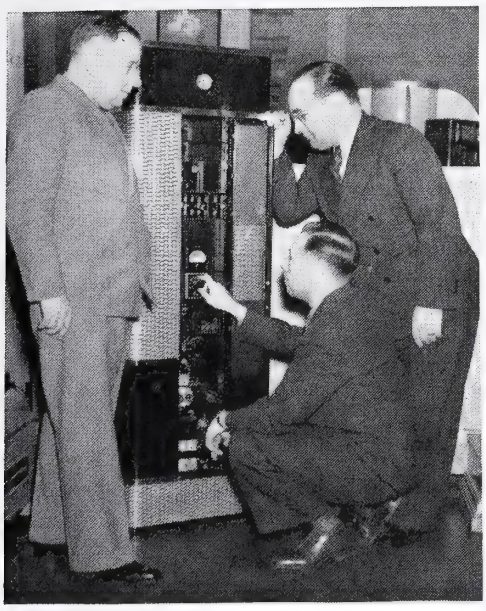
Another example: Certain impairments in the quality of sound may develop in an equipment as a result of what seem to be, on the surface, easily recognized symptoms. Yet when an adjustment is made, the impairment in quality shortly reoccurs. The actual symptom was obscure and unsuspected. To locate the actual, rather than the apparent, cause of the trouble is vitally necessary, not only for the re-establishment of high quality sound reproduction, but also to prevent other adverse complications from developing in the mechanism.

Typical of such obscure impairment problems is a drop in the frequency response on the high end of the frequency spectrum. A readjustment of the warping mechanism might raise the frequency response and thus lead to the conclusion that the impairment had been cured. Actually, the true cause of the deficiency might lie in a partial deterioration of a condenser in the circuit and the deficient element would continue to deteriorate.

Through the use of his test films, his meters and his test amplifier, and through comparison of his test results with a previously established performance standard for that particular equipment, the experienced sound service engineer would approach the problem by inspecting all the points from which the frequency response abnormality might arise. For example, if he discovered that the loss was being sustained somewhere between two sections of the main amplifier, he would then locate the defective element on the circuit between those two points.

All mechanisms, unless they are constantly maintained at peak performance level, deteriorate. To refer again to the analogy of your automobile: A Detroit motor magnate once said, "Every car is a 'used' car after it's been driven a mile from the showroom where you bought it."

The deterioration of quality of sound in a given theatre may occur by such imperceptibly small and gradual stages that the exhibitor himself, who hears the sound in his theatre all the time, is entirely unaware of the degeneration that has taken place. If this happens during the first few months of the operation of a new sound system, he is genuinely shocked when a patron complains about the poor quality of the sound in his theatre.



Naturally, the exhibitor blames the machine, yet the fault may lie not in the machine but in the absence of a safeguard against deterioration—the regular, periodic visits of a competent service engineer.

To get the fullest measure of dividends out of his investment in new sound equipment, the exhibitor owes it to himself to take this vital precautionary measure to keep his new equipment running at top performance levels from the moment the motors are first turned on.

It's just as the child psychologists say: "If you don't want your children to have complexes, inhibitions and phobias (ten-gallon words for 'bad habits') when they grow up, see that they have the right kind of care from earliest infancy."

CHECKING

In the picture: J. L. (Jack) Sawyer, left, supervisor of projection and sound for the Buffalo Theatres, Inc., inspects some of the latest equipment during a visit to the Camden RCA plant. W. L. Jones, manager of RCA's national service division, center, and W. W. Jones, New York district service manager, acted as guides.

Since the first of the year, a "sound check-up program" has been in progress in RCA-serviced theatres, according to W. L. Jones. Theatre sound systems are inspected and adjusted to perform in accordance with present-day standards. Thus exhibitors playing such pictures as "Gone With the Wind" and "Pinocchio" are assured of peak performance in their sound equipment.

PROMOTIONS ANNOUNCED

Appointment of Adolph Goodman as assistant manager of the RCA National Service Division, and a number of other promotions within the division have been announced by W. L. Jones. All the appointments, it is reported, reflect the company's policy of promotion from the ranks.

Mr. Goodman's new duties place him in charge of all service activities. In addition, he will continue an active interest in service technical development which he has supervised for several years.

Carl Johnson, Kansas City District Service manager, has been transferred to the Camden office to promote the sale of sound amplification and reproducing equipments. His old position has been filled by the appointment of Bill Hardman, formerly of the National Service office staff at Camden.

N. A. Willis, field engineer of the Baltimore Service District, and Adolf Lof, of the New York Service District office staff, have won promotions similar to Mr. Johnson's. F. M. Armstrong has joined the staff at Baltimore to replace Mr. Willis, while A. P. Wark, night emergency man at New York, has been elevated to fill Mr. Lof's vacancy. M. Gibbons has been named to Mr. Wark's old position.

B&L Super Cinephor f:2 WITH 25% MORE LIGHT TRANSMISSION

Bausch & Lomb now offers the f:2 Super Cinephor which actually delivers 25% more light on the screen. Light lost in previous lenses by surface reflection (4-6% at each air to glass surface) is made to do useful work. A new process of treating lens surfaces minimizes reflections and makes this f:2 lens have a light efficiency that hitherto would have been possible only at f:1.79.

Not only is there 25% more light on the screen, but also a gain in contrast and crispness. Shadow detail is not diluted by distributed light. Color films, too, have greater purity and brilliance.

EMPHASIZING THE ESSENTIAL PHASES OF HOUSE HYGIENE IN THEATRE MAINTENANCE

Cleanliness Counts in the Correct Lighting of Theatre Restrooms

By Helen B. Ames

IFIGURING largely in the successful conduct of the modern theatre is an inviting atmosphere in rest rooms and other service departments. Here patrons expect to find a pleasant environment as well as up-to-date equipment for personal needs. Unattractive surroundings in this part of the house may destroy the memory of a fine entertainment and prevent fastidious customers from making a return visit.

While such essentials as a harmonious color scheme and comfortable chairs and couches cannot be overlooked in creating a feeling of relaxation, it is the lighting that really controls the general effect and makes the room truly livable. Insufficient lights or ill-placed fixtures spread an air of gloom that mars the appeal of an otherwise attractive room. On the other hand the effect of spaciousness and charm is correspondingly enhanced by the right lighting.

Suitable illumination, however, is more than a matter of electricity and the right installation. To get the most value from the lighting system, the bulbs and fixtures must be kept clean and shining. A layer of dust will dim the brightest light and lessen the beauty of artistic fixtures. For thorough efficiency, lighting equipment should receive soap-and-water attention as a systematic part of the cleaning program. Regular cleaning not only means better illumination but cuts down overhead costs by reducing the amount of electric current needed for operation.

Refreshment for the Eyes

In the lounging rooms, the sparkle of well-cared-for fixtures is a decidedly noticeable contribution to the theatre-goer's pleasure, as people are more observant of their surroundings when they are idling away time—waiting for friends or until a half completed picture makes a new start. Coffee service in the lounge—a practice in some neighborhood theatres—should mean refreshment for the eye as for the palate. Pleasing lights and untarnished fixtures add to the enjoyment of the fragrant aroma and the pleasant taste of the stimulating brew.

The present trend toward simpler design in lighting fixtures is reducing the amount of labor required for maintaining cleanliness. But ornate ceiling and wall lights, however difficult to get at, will prove no bar to a clean condition if the management is properly conscious of the trade value of good appearance.

Chromium and similar metals need only a daily wiping with a sudsy cloth, to keep them shining. Metals that tarnish, such as brass, should be rubbed up regularly with a good polisher. Glass fixtures, and those made of the modern plastic materials, respond beautifully to soap and water cleansing. Glass and metal on the furniture—a use that is growing more frequent in modern theatres—play their own small but important parts in enhancing the light, if they are kept bright.

As a vital contribution to the control of light through cleanliness, the appearance of the walls and ceilings must also be considered. Light-colored surfaces absorb less of the light rays that fall upon them, than dark ones do, and hence are definite aids to illumination. Since the modern washable paints retain their good looks after a soap and water bath, the selection of delicate colors need not mean more frequent redecorating. A number of theatres have adopted washable wall coverings, which are easily restored to brightness when soiled.

Simple Cleaning Suggestions

Some suggestions that simplify the job of wall washing seem in order here. Experts say that a sponge does the work better than a scrubbing brush, as the brush is likely to be too harsh and may mar the finish. These authorities have found, too, that it is more satisfactory to start operations at the bottom of the wall than at the top. When cleaning progresses downward, moisture is likely to trickle from the sponge as it is held overhead, a streaming onto the soiled parts below and making them harder to clean when reached.

Where mirror-glass wall panels are employed in the lounge, their main purpose is usually to give a sense of greater space. But these decorations also aid in reflecting the light. If washed frequently with plenty of soap suds, rinsed thoroughly and then polished dry, mirror insets will intensify illumination to a decided degree.

In the ladies' powder room, cleanliness goes far in maintaining the desired brightness of lights and the sparkle of crystal clear mirrors. Plain surfaced, cleanable walls and ceilings and furniture that responds favorably to cleaning are other requirements.

In ladies' powder rooms, it goes without saying that the lights must be adequate for renewing makeup and smoothing straggling locks before leaving the theatre. Cleanliness will go far in maintaining the desired brightness of the lights and assuring a spotless mirror that will prevent feminine patrons from applying too much rouge or powder. Vanity tables should be equipped with lights that permit a close-up view in the mirror. Full-length mirrors, kept clear and shining, should be provided for that final once-over which every woman likes to give her costume when she is going out into the street. Painted furniture, light-colored walls, washable hangings, and other fittings that can be cleaned with soap and water, are all assets in achieving a bright atmosphere in rooms devoted to feminine needs.

Kept spic and span and properly lighted, the theatre wash room does much to perpetuate the memory of pleasant entertainment and thus helps to promote return patronage.

CONSIDER CLEANABILITY

Where washrooms are concerned, the selection of materials for equipment and background is usually based nowadays on their cleanability. Making the most of these easily cleaned surfaces unquestionably means better lighting as well as better sanitation. Floors and the lower sections of the walls are generally tiled, offering a bright framework for the room and taking little time for the daily cleaning. Porcelain washstands and metal faucets, too, are quick shedders of disfiguring splashes left by careless handwashers if given constant attention by the cleaning force, these fittings will contribute their quota to the shining appearance of the room.

Washroom light fixtures, both at the ceiling and at the mirrors over the washstands, should be in keeping with the practicality of the place—simple in design and easily dismantled for cleaning.

Turning again to wall finishes, a light cream paint is advisable for the upper part of the walls and for the ceiling, as this color is a close second to white in light reflection yet is more decorative than a stark white finish. A high gloss paint is advisable here, so the walls will stand frequent washing.

This approach to illumination is well worth studying from every possible angle of its application to those departments of the theatre designed for personal service. Ordinary though it seems, soap suds, freely used, have a truly artistic value in sustaining the appearance and efficiency of lighting arrangements, so important for the comfort of the theatre-going public.

New Floor Sealer for Unfinished Surfaces

A new and special formulation for treating unfinished wood floors called "Valdura" is announced by the American Asphalt Paint Company of Chicago. It is said to be an attractive and durable finish that furnishes protection against dirt, water, grease and constant wear such as encountered in theatres.

Through its active penetration in the wood, the new product, according to the announcement, seals the grain and provides a waxed and polished surface with no surface coating to wear off. Floors retain their original color and a beautiful, natural wood finish is the result.

The sealer is applied with a mop or brush. One coat only is needed and will cover about 800 square feet of floor surface to the gallon. A minimum of three or four hours drying time is all that is necessary before the floors may be subjected to foot traffic.

The new product can also be used successfully as a transparent coating for logs, knotty pine, furniture, panels or other unfinished wood surfaces. Further information may be secured from The Modern Theatre Information Bureau.

Drinking Facilities a Point for Precaution

The American Standard Association stresses that an adequate supply of cool, safe drinking water should be readily accessible in every place of public occupancy. The common drinking cup is outlawed generally. Individual cups should be dispensed from sanitary containers with proper receptacles provided for used ones. Where drinking fountains are installed, management of course should conform to the types approved by local health authorities. The Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor and the American Standards Association issue helpful data on this. Drinking facilities always must be outside of rooms in which toilet and washing units are found.

Light, color and motion are the ingredients of successful theatre exterior display. Make the most of them in the final concoction. Let's have no blackouts in America!

"New Luster"

the whole house, and just look at the brighter pictures, takes on new luster when a specialized Super Theatre Cleaner is doing its job. Read what one theatre owner writes about his: "I can truthfully say that it leaves nothing to be desired. HUGE BROADLOOM CARPET FOR GEORGIA HOUSE

An unusually smart effect in theatre floor covering is apparent in this view of the lobby of the Miller Theatre in Augusta, Georgia. (Photo courtesy Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc.)

THE recently completed new Miller Theatre in Augusta, Georgia, one of the South's most modern and luxurious theatres, is completely carpeted with a distinctive Lokweave Broadloom, a creation of the Bigelow Weavers.

An intricate pattern was designed for the floor covering to carry out the decorative scheme of the entire theatre. The predominating color is wine, with blended tones of beige, rust and blue. The unique designs are not woven but are inlaid. This is possible through the special construction of the carpeting which makes such designs, however intricate, easy to achieve. A further advantage is that there are no observable seams to mar its beauty, since its construction permits the pieces to be sealed into place. Therefore, any number of different size pieces and colors may be combined to create an individual pattern.

This huge rug as illustrated exactly fits into the space for which it was designed and the border is so woven and inlaid that it follows the contours of the walls. At the entrance of the theatre, the carpet is in a narrow strip, following the graceful lines of the staircase, while at the same time always harmonizing with the interior of the building.

Interboro Circuit Renews Service Pact

New sound servicing agreements have been signed for nine theatres of the Interboro Circuit, New York, according to W. L. Jones, RCA national service manager. Negotiations for the renewal deal were handled by Stanley Kolbert for the circuit and W. W. Jones and Bernard Sholtz, New York service and sales executives for RCA.

Theatres covered by the contract include the following: Dover, New York City; Fortway, Vanity and Harbor, Brooklyn; Island, Hollis; Linden, St. Albans; Merrick Gables, Merrick; New, Rockaway Beach, and Trent in New Rochelle.

Linoleum a Factor in Theatre Floor Covering

Linoleum, so readily adaptable as a floor covering for theatre lobbies and rest rooms, can be installed over any smooth underfloor—wood, concrete, metal or stone —that is not in direct contact with the ground or exposed to excessive dampness. The laying method which has proved itself most dependable over many years, is simple, quick and inexpensive.

The keynote of this method is to lay the linoleum over a sound-absorbing cushion of lining felt when the underfloors are wood. Lining felt can also be used with concrete, metal or stone subfloors to provide additional warmth, quiet and comfort. But its use is essential over wood because it takes up the seasonal expansion and contraction of the floor boards and prevents their movement from splitting the linoleum. It also makes the linoleum easier to remove for installation elsewhere.

The lining felt is pasted to the subfloor and the linoleum is pasted to the lining felt with linoleum paste. At the seams, rustproof cement is used. Where neat, easy-to-clean joints of wall and floor are desired, it will be best to install a flash type cove and base. This accessory forms a curved joining that simplifies sweeping, prevents dirt from collecting and protects the base of the walls from being kicked or scuffed. It is available in colors to harmonize with the many beautiful linoleum floor and wall coverings.

EXTERMINATION

Occasionally theatre properties become infested with rats or mice, usually due to proximity to places where the rodents may feed. Naturally for the peace of mind of patrons this condition must be eliminated as quickly and as safely as possible. Prepared bait is the most effective and simple means of eradicating the pests and its use should be intensive until all traces of the rodents disappear.

The baits should be distributed where rats or mice have been seen. Since the objective is to kill all the active rats at one application, the baits should be put out plentifully in all likely places. The general baiting should then be repeated after two weeks, since if there were baby rats or mice in the nest when the first clean-up was made they would not have been destroyed but will now be up and about.

As soon as the plague of rats or mice has been controlled, the premises should be put in such condition that others cannot get in, holes should be stopped up, doorways made tight fitting and kept closed. The action of modern prepared rat baits is to cause a suffocating distress in the rodent, this tending to cause him to seek the open air and die outside. If rats or mice are seen at any point on the premises, it is most probable that they have infested the entire property. Therefore, it is needful to plan complete extermination, everywhere at once.

A change of lighting effect either on the exterior or interior of a theatre will work wonders in its appeal to patronage.

"WE'RE STEADY PATRONS Now.

Your pictures are much better than they were, Mr. Williams. What have you been doing?"

"We've put in new projection lamps — 'One Kilowatt' High Intensity Arcs, the last word in projection light for small theatres like ours. They increase the light on the screen more than fifty per cent."

"That must run up your power bill."

"No, it doesn't, Mr. Harrison. These new lamps actually cost less to operate than the old, low intensity lamps we threw out."

"I notice the color features are better, too. They're perfectly natural now. Why is that?"

"That is because the light from these high intensity arcs is snow white. It's like daylight, so the colors all look natural. Many of our patrons have complimented us, as you have, on our improved projection and our increased business will soon pay for the new lamps."

Producers Delay Meeting At Request of Freeman

Acceding to the request of Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Producers' Association, members of that body's labor negotiation committee have postponed the meeting originally planned for May 24 to an indefinite date within the next week. Freeman explained his time would be so fully occupied by the Paramount sales convention here that he would be unable to give the required attention to the association meeting. Committee members are expected to set a date for the resumption of negotiations with the Conference of Studio Unions and review the status of parleys with the Screen Writers Guild and the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors.

Meantime Howard R. Philbrick, new general manager of Central Casting, continued his reorganizational campaign by announcing that, effective immediately, Central will be closed on Sundays and that the switchboard will close daily at 8 p. m. instead of 9 p. m. as in the past. The move was made, Philbrick said, because very few studios place orders after 7 p. m. daily or at any time on Sunday, and that the major complaints of extras have been that they have had to hang by the telephone 16 hours daily. Philbrick suggested that Sunday casting calls hereafter be made on Saturday and declared that when casting emergencies arise they will receive all "customary and necessary attention."

Peace Council Formed By Hollywood League

Asserting that now, more than ever, the necessity for America's non-intervention in the present European War must be brought home to the public, the Hollywood League of Democratic Action, through its youth commission, has organized the Hollywood Peace Council. This new group is undertaking a determined drive for support in the film colony, with Maxine Metzner, executive secretary, directing the campaign.

A turnout of 1,500 is expected at the mass meeting to be staged May 28 by the HLDA for the 44th District Democratic Club at the Mason Opera House.

Pettey to East

Effective June 1, Tom Pettey ends four years as public relations director for the producers association here to accept the post of Hollywood film and radio representative for PM, new York daily newspaper. Geraldine Espy, his assistant, fills in.

Rigid Economy Programs Grip Studios; WB, 20th-Fox Lead

Sweeping retrenchment programs resulting from apprehension over the European situation among the studios this week followed the initial move taken earlier at a Warner economy meeting.

Twentieth Century-Fox executives were the second to act through the launching of a rigid economy regime throughout the studio with the immediate dismissal of more than 100 persons. Other plants are expected to follow with similar moves. Early effects of the retrenchment are registering in the publicity departments.

Jack L. Warner earlier called an "emergency meeting" of producers and department heads to launch a drive for stringent economies and the elimination of all waste motion in the studio's picture-making operations. Indicating there would be no slashing of personnel, Warner urged closer cooperation among all departments.

Warner was the first among the studios to declare itself when war broke out, the high command at Burbank announcing then that because of impending foreign losses stringent retrenchment would be necessary; at the same time declaring every effort would be made to prevent a wholesale payroll pruning. During the next few weeks, however, and despite efforts of studio attaches to minimize the reports, several hundred workers were lopped from the list.

The new Warner-Hal Wallis, executive producer, proclamation came shortly after Warner had announced that, because of the retrenchment policy, vacations for all employes have been canceled save in those instances where guild or union contracts specifically call for annual holidays.

The first immediate effect of the economy communique as regards Warner production schedules found "Santa Fe Trail," slated as Errol Flynn's next starring vehicle, shifted from a projected June start to next August. The film is charted as one of the company's biggest-budgeted efforts for 1940-41. However, three productions are set to go into work next week as per schedule—"The Letter," "City for Conquest" and "The Embezzler"—while "The House on the Hill" rolls June 6 and "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" embarks June 17.

So far other studios have not followed the Warner lead in striving for further production economies. Paramount, for several weeks past, has been consolidating various departments and, according to Y. Frank Freeman, "streamlining" its personnel and production setup for the 1940-41 season. Most plants went on a wartime basis last fall and have not deviated from it—chief among them RKO Radio, where salary slashes ranging from 10 to 30 per cent were placed in effect by President George Schaefer shortly after the war broke out.

No Production Slump

The picture-making outlook remains far from cheerless, however, and at present there is no indication of a slump. On Metro's June schedule are "Flight Command," "Golden Fleecing," "The Yearling," "Wyoming" and "Philadelphia Story"—all in the big-budget category. Irving Asher, returning from New York, where he had been planning to sail for London, has resumed preparations on "Witch of the Wilderness," which rolls in July. Paramount guns "The New Yorkers" and "Moon Over Burma," June 3, with "Virginia" and "Arise, My Love," rolling June 17. At RKO Radio "Photo Finish" goes into work June 1, followed June 3 by "The Other Man," June 15 by "Little Men" and "Too Many Girls." On June 4 the studio will launch "Wildcat Bus," "Triple Justice" and "The Stranger on the Third Floor." Gene Towne and Graham Baker have announced their next RKO Radio release following "Little Men" will be "African Intrigue."

Twentieth Century-Fox has completed its 1939-40 schedule with final editing of "Four Sons" and "Maryland," and has a healthy start on the new season's quota. "The Great Profile" rolls May 27, followed June 10 by "Down Argentine Way." Producer Kenneth Macgowan has eight in preparation, first of which will be "The Great Commandment," with "Belle Starr," "Brooklyn Bridge," "Fifth Avenue," "Down on the Wabash," "The Great American Broadcast," "Hudson's Bay Co." and "In Old Wyoming." Universal rolls "Arizona Cyclone" May 31 and "Argentine Nights" June 10. With a Tex Ritter western now in work, Monogram's schedule for June includes "Kid Reporters," "The Tower of Terror" and the first in a new series of "Range Busters" westerns.

Accept "Biscuit Eater" Award—

Add Releasing Deals With Independents

Two more independent production units have set releasing deals with President George J. Schaefer of RKO Radio. A one-picture commitment whereby RKO Radio will distribute "The Devil and Miss Jones," to be produced by the newly-formed Frank Ross-Norman Krasna unit. The picture will star Jean Arthur, with camera work to begin in September. Schaefer also signed a four-picture releasing contract with Lou Ostrow's new Vogue Pictures, Ltd., the first production to be "Li'l Abner," based on the nationally-syndicated hillbilly comic strip by Al Capp.

Other Independent Activity

Having secured a Paramount release for its first two films, Boris Morros' National Pictures Corp. has taken office and production space on the RKO Pathe lot, where "Second Chorus," starring Artie Shaw, and "The Life of O. Henry," with Douglas Fairbanks jr., will be turned out.

Fairbanks has also joined forces with Ben Hecht to co-produce and star in "Until I Die," a story by Hecht, to be made for Columbia release. Hecht will direct and the Columbia lot will be used as their headquarters.

Dixie National Pictures has announced "Harlem Super Snoopers" as the second in a series of seven features with all-Negro casts to be distributed by Dixie National Film Exchanges. Plans for the production were discussed in conferences between Ted Toddy, president of the company; Jed Buell, executive producer, and Jack Coyle, vice-president. Scripting the vehicle are Lex Neal and Walter Weems, with Miller and Mantan to co-star. Dixie's first film, "Mr. Washington Goes to Town," has opened in Miami and Atlanta with first-runs scheduled later in New York and Chicago.

Sigmund Neufeld Productions has turned its cameras on "Skip Tracer," featuring Jimmy Dunn and Frances Gifford, with Sherman Scott directing. It will be distributed by Producers Releasing Corp.

Frank Lloyd has indicated his first production for Universal release will be the tentatively-titled "Captain Bligh," continuing that character's adventures after "Mutiny on the Bounty," which Lloyd produced for M-G-M several years ago. Lloyd will complete "The Howards of Virginia" for Columbia in August and plans to roll "Bligh" in October.

To produce and direct coin-in-the-slot musicals for the Techniporocess and Special Effects Co., Wallace Milan, New York producer, has been placed under contract.

O'Brien, RKO Part; Tim Holt for Six

After an association of four years, George O'Brien, cowboy star, leaves the RKO Radio contract list when his next picture, "Triple Justice," is completed. It goes into work in June. O'Brien will be replaced on the studio's sagebrush schedule by Tim Holt, who has been set to star in six westerns a year. O'Brien will have made 18 pictures under the RKO Radio banner when his contract expires. He has announced no plans for the future.

Other Changes

At the same studio Clem Beauchamp, an assistant director, has been named associate producer and aide to Lou Brock in the short subjects division. Jane Loring resigned her post at the RKO Radio plant to join Pandro Berman's production staff at M-G-M. She was Berman's aide while he was on the RKO lot.

Arthur Eddy, tradepaper contact in the Warner publicity department, is no longer at the studio. He had been in the post for more than two years and has announced no other affiliation. His work has been taken over by Blake McVeagh. Meantime the studio has added Marc Lachman, former Universal studio publicity director, to its staff to handle special exploitation on "All This and Heaven, Too."

Producer Lou Edelman has also checked off the Warner lot upon the expiration of his contract. He will take a short vacation before reporting to 20th Century-Fox to become an associate producer there.

Stanwyck and McCrea for William Wellman Vehicle

Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea are to be co-starred in Paramount's "The City That Never Sleeps," which William A. Wellman will produce and direct. The story is based on Wessel Smitter's novel, "F. O. B. Detroit." Stanwyck and McCrea last teamed in Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific."

HOLLYWOOD SHORT SHORT STORY:

When war was declared in Europe last September, Jack Warner, with characteristic opportunism and aided by an efficient publicity department, immediately called a press conference to assure all and sundry that, while his company's emergency policy would provide for the initiation of some few necessary economies, there would be little, if any, curtailment of personnel.

A few days later, reports of wholesale pruning of payrolls began to filter through from the Burbank front. These reports the Warner publicists did their best to deny and nullify—with Arthur Eddy, trade press contact, in the front line of the nullifiers.

Comes May and Mr. Eddy is no longer listed as a member of the Warner staff. The reason:

Economy!

There's apparently no limit to the number of wives who are finding their way into the titles of recent and current releases; witness: "My Favorite Wife," "The Doctor Takes a Wife," "Daytime Wife," "He Married His Wife," "You Can't Fool Your Wife," and the coming "Hired Wife." Despite which, Universal's proposed "Invisible Woman" should prove the most popular with married men.

Blitzkrieg Hits Hollywood:

Anna Marie Schunzel, daughter of Reinhold Schunzel, Metro director, decides to take the screen name of Ann Loring when cast for a role in "Escape."

The fellow who has the job of cutting "All This and Heaven, Too" from 21,000 to 14,000 feet is very probably of the opinion that Rachel Field's original title has the hereafter badly scrambled geographically . . . Warner is making "The Letter" and "The Sentence." Next should be "The Paragraph" . . . At the same studio—splendid casting judgment in the selection of Marjorie Rambeau to play the title role in "Tugboat Annie Sails Again," the part of Norman Reilly Raine's magazine character originated by the late Marie Dressler.

Fox is building a walled city in the heart of the Mojave Desert as a location site for re-filming "The Great Commandment." It might prove a good investment. Unless something happens to stop Herr Hitler, there will be plenty of Hollywood biggies willing to buy it as a permanent abode.

These new-fangled producer-director-writer-actor contracts which have become so fashionable are having their influence in the cartoon field. Leon Schlesinger appears in person, along with Porky Pig and Daffy Duck, in his current Looney Tune, "You Ought to Be in Pictures," an exceptionally clever combination of straight photography and pen-and-ink animating. And, what's more, the genial producer does right well as an actor.

BALLYHOODLUMS: Some one in the Republic publicity setup merits bows for the impressive mailing pieces forthcoming on the recent more important pictures produced at the Studio City emporium. It is difficult to believe the same organization that conceives and executes these broadsides was also responsible for the bilious-green, 24-sheets which did such injustice to "The Dark Command." And Walter Compton qualifies as the ultimate optimist when, in a letter accompanying the latest folder, he declares, "This is the second and final broadside on 'Women in War.' By this time you will have fully digested the contents of the first" . . . The master minds of Marathon street caption a release with "Paramount Makes Microscopic Title Change," which adjective also applies to the judgment of those who waste paper and ink in an effort to magnify the importance of eliminating the hyphen from "Mystery Sea-Raider."

Biographies, Babies and Blitzkrieg

Two extraordinarily opulent offerings made for an important preview week despite the fact quantity paralleled the stock market in taking a nose dive. A mere four features were introduced to the reviewers.

The ranking duo included Metro's "Edison, the Man," and Darryl F. Zanuck's long-awaited production, "Lillian Russell." A comparison of their respective values is more or less a matter of individual entertainment tastes.

Truly an inspired undertaking, and one of the most compellingly human and sympathetic biographical studies yet to reach the screen, "Edison, the Man" presents that great American genius not as a superhuman machine, but as an everyday individual with the character traits, weaknesses and intimacies that everyone can recognize. It is a superb piece of screen craftsmanship, tellingly directed by Clarence Brown from a script that successfully spans the years of Edison's adult life, tracing the accomplishments that have made him a scientific immortal. For their exhaustive research and the skillfully-wrought scenario which resulted, Scripters Talbot Jennings and Bradbury Foote share honors with Dore Schary and Hugo Butler, who devised the original story framework. Theatregoers of all ages should find it a thrilling, emotional experience for which John W. Considine jr., who produced, and the other craftsmen who aided in its making are entitled to the highest praise.

As glittering and glamorous as the period in which she reigned is the celluloid story of the colorful woman who dominated the American theatre during the closing decades of the last century. Reflecting in every detail the meticulous care and unstinting budget which were invested in its making, "Lillian Russell" is a stimulating, impressive, dramatic and tuneful feature, whose myriad entertainment assets completely overshadow the liberties taken with biographical accuracies. Producer Gene Markey hand-picked his cast with an eye to talent and boxoffice magnitude, with particularly outstanding performances registered by Alice Faye, in the title role, Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold and Helen Westley. Irving Cummings' direction is a flawless example of this reliable pilot's steady-handed work, bringing forth the utmost in dramatic power from every situation. William Anthony McGuire turned in a vividly realistic screenplay.

The remainder of the quartette might have shone more brightly had they been listed in less aristocratic cinema company. But even in the fast field in which they were entered they accounted for themselves with distinction.

In Universal's "Sandy Is a Lady" that phenomenal infant star, Baby Sandy, makes her third and, to date, most triumphant screen appearance. For this time she talks—only a few one-syllable words, but dialogue nevertheless—and thereby enhances her attraction for picture-goers everywhere. Charles Grayson's original screenplay was built exclusively for laughter and, it must be said, seldom employs the subtle approach in achieving its goal. The guffaws are sledge-hammered home, but they get there, which was evidently the intention. Sandy is supported by a competent crew of tried and true comedians. All in all, Producer Burt Kelly and Director Charles Lamont have a vehicle that, despite its unpretentious mounting, is sure to be a worthwhile addition to any program.

Even under normal conditions, Republic's "Women in War" would be a strong contender for heavy boxoffice takes and audience satisfaction. With the added exploitation factor of current world affairs, it is almost a certainty that this entry from the North Hollywood plant will boom into the hit class—especially if given the benefit of the intensive selling its entertainment qualities merit. F. Hugh Herbert and Doris Anderson wrote an amazingly prophetic screenplay that in sheer timeliness has seldom been equalled, its characters sincerely portrayed by Elsie Janis, Wendy Barrie and Patric Knowles at the head of an excellent cast. Both Producer Sol C. Siegel and Director John H. Auer can take bows for an undertaking that measures up to big-league calibre in every respect.

ROBERT S. FARRELL, who formerly operated the Rivoli here, made a successful political debut, being nominated to the state legislature and named Republican delegate at large.

Excavation is underway next to the Universal office on Filmrow for the new branch headquarters of M-G-M . . . Al Anderson, Paramount branch manager, left Tuesday night with Morrie Segel and Glen Haviland of Seattle for the Paramount convention in Los Angeles . . . Mark Corey, Gene Engleman and Mac McFadden flew east for the RKO meeting.

Frank J. Kennebeck, general manager for Paramount Pictures in India, with headquarters in Calcutta, visited here en route to the company convention after a 34-day voyage on a Dutch steamer. Kennebeck is the only white man in his Calcutta office, and reports native tastes in films very similar to those in this country, with action pictures leading in popularity. House managers in India solve the caste problem by segregating the seat sections and limiting the ticket sale for each section.

It's reported on the Row that Lloyd Moore has added houses in Waitsburg and Dayton, Wash., to his string which previously included Hermiston and Goldendale . . . Bill Burke, RKO auditor, is sojourning at the Portland branch . . . Dude Smith has installed the latest RCA sound equipment in the Coliseum at Tillamook.

Bob White, representing Oregon independent operators, and trustee for the Pacific Coast conference, is in Washington for scheduled hearings on the Neely bill . . . Hamrick-Evergreen has moved the Monday "Joe Dodge Quiz" radio show from the Paramount to the Liberty . . . Harold Hunt and Herb Larson, theatre editors of the Journal and Oregonian, respectively, flew to Los Angeles for the world premiere of "Lillian Russell."

Local operators again are face to face with their annual bug-a-boo, the dog races . . . Margaret North has taken over the secretary's desk in the office of Al Finke, Hamrick-Evergreen manager, with the resignation of Mary Wilkinson Greeley. 60-Picture Program On Republic Slate

HOLLYWOOD—A 60-picture program for 1940-41, calling for a substantial budget increase, will be announced by Republic at a regional sales meeting to be held in San Francisco, May 28, according to Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board, who checked in from New York last week for conferences with M. J. Siegel, studio production head. Yates, Siegel, James R. Grainger, distribution chief, and Pacific Coast exchange personnel will attend the meeting. Grainger having arrived at the studio after a stopoff in Denver.

Neither a specific budgetary allotment nor the detailed product announcement will be disclosed until the San Francisco parley. However, the monetary increase will be large enough to raise the quality of the company's product sufficiently to offset the foreign decline, Yates declared. Republic's sales efforts, he said, will be aimed principally at nations in the western hemisphere because of turbulent conditions abroad. The budget increase will also necessitate expansion of the studio personnel, the company's head man announced. The San Francisco gathering will be the first of four regional meetings to be held during the next two weeks.

Set to roll during the first quarter are "Lady From New Orleans," "Hit Parade of 1940," "False Witness," "Friendly Neighbors," "Storm Over India," "Sing, Dance, Plenty Hot," "Carolina Moon" and "Everybody's Happy."

Imperial Valley Quake Costs FWC $20,000

BRAWLEY, CAL.—While a report from only one independent exhibitor has been forthcoming so far, the series of sharp earthquakes which rocked the Imperial Valley area May 18 and 19 caused property damage amounting to an estimated $20,000 to Fox West Coast theatres in this area, according to R. H. McCullough, FWC construction head, who spent several days here surveying the scene following the temblors.

Hardest hit were the Brawley and Circle, FWC houses here. The Brawley, an 809-seat house, suffered damages estimated at more than $5,000, while $3,000 worth of repairs will be necessary to place the Circle in operation again. Manager Hollis Wood has shuttered both theatres. Damages of around $5,000 were incurred at the circuit's Valley Theatre in El Centro, McCullough estimated, while the United Artists Theatre there, as well as FWC houses in Yuma, Arizona, and Calexico were damaged slightly.

Ben Aranda, operator of the Eureka here, estimated repairs to his house will cost around $1,000. The theatre is still in operation, however, Aranda having checked out for Los Angeles on one of his regular booking trips.

Fire-Damaged Roxy Will Be Restored, Say Owners

SALT LAKE CITY—Immediate reconstruction of the Roxy, which suffered a fire loss early last Friday estimated at $20,000, has been announced by the owners of the building.

W. McEwan, manager of the investment company leasing the theatre to Andy Floor, operator, said the building was completely covered by insurance.

Origin of the blaze, which destroyed the floor of the stage, several rows of seats, and severely damaged the auditorium floor, has not as yet been determined.

ITO Awaits Poole's Report On Neely Bill Hearings

LOS ANGELES—With Bob Poole, executive director, now in Washington attending the Neely bill hearings, silence comparable to that in the proverbial tomb is the chief characteristic of the ITO of So. Calif. and Ariz. headquarters—in startling contrast to the excitement prevailing there during the recent Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners convention.

According to Mrs. Ida Schreiber, Poole's assistant, the ITO director is not expected to return from the nation's capital for at least another week. He was accompanied by Hugh Bruen, member of the ITO and PCCITO trustee.

SEATTLE

EARLY summer and extremely warm weather are playing havoc with theatre attendance. Picnic spots, golfing, fishing and boating are doing a thriving business, likewise the night baseball games. Despite the heat, various showmen are hammering away with exploitation ideas to drag in what business might be had. The Liberty is offering a $250 grand prize, along with $25 and $10 cash prizes for the best name for the dress worn in the picture, "One Million B. C." The Orpheum is also running a contest for "Typhoon," in which girls are requested to make up their own ideas of a sarong. Winner is to receive an autographed sarong from Dorothy Lamour along with cash prizes.

Conventions are still in the air. Leaving this week are the gang from RKO which includes Eddie Lamb, Jack Burk and Louie Goldsmith. Republic will meet in San Francisco, with J. T. Sheffield calling in his gang from Portland, Salt Lake, Butte and Denver to join the Seattle contingent. Paramount is also preparing . . . Death claimed Tom Berry, exhibitor of Edmonds. Tom built the first theatre in that town but retired from it several years ago, with Mrs. Berry and her daughter, Mrs. Brown, taking over. The funeral was attended by nearly all of Seattle Filmrow.

Rex Hevel reports that after considerable delay caused by water seepage, work has been resumed on his new theatre in Tekoa, Wash. . . . M. G. Whitman returned from his Hollywood vacation in time to take the train for Chicago to attend the Universal convention . . . George Blair and his Rendezvous rated a first class article in one of the local dailies. Caption read: "Insults Cheap at Rendezvous." Story was true to life . . . The Roosevelt will remain closed for a few weeks during which time some remodeling will be done . . . Jim Hone back from the ITO convention making a special trip to Olympia to visit with the governor.

Benny Goodman will be in Seattle for a one-day engagement at the Trianon, according to Teddy Harris, the ballroom manager . . . Wayne Christie and his wife making plans to travel to Long Beach, Calif., and also Hollywood for their vacation . . . Florence Mills of the Metro off to Vancouver, B. C., and Portland, Ore., for her breathing spell . . . Mrs. Dutch Trammell and son, Terry, to Kansas City by plane to visit with her folks for a couple of months and to recuperate from her recent illness.

Charles Barnes has been added to the Palomar as manager and will also take over as master of ceremonies when needed. . . . Mike Newman back to Hollywood after a swell campaign on his picture . . . Al Bloom left for the United Artists convention without his trunk keys. They were shipped on receipt of a wire . . . Bob Estill to Portland and Spokane on business driving the new car his wife brought from Michigan . . . Frankie Peacock to Vancouver for two or three weeks to visit with her folks . . . Glen Haviland has won the coveted Paramount 100 Per Cent Club honor for 1940 and will attend the sales convention in Los Angeles with Morrie Segel, branch manager. Dwight Spracher of the Seattle branch won the honor twice and so did Segel before he became branch manager. The convention this year will be attended only by division managers, branch managers, and 100 Per Cent Club winners.

Diane Walton celebrated her third birthday with a preview party at the Little Victor. Refreshments were served later at her home . . . Word from San Francisco Butch Wingham has recovered from his illness and is spending a week in Hollywood.

Rival Union Picketing Burdens A. E. Rice

LOS ANGELES—Contending his house was constructed by 100 per cent union labor and that he is perfectly within his legal rights in employing CIO projectionists, A. E. Rice, owner of the new Admiral on Hollywood Blvd., has filed a petition in superior court seeking an injunction to restrain Projectionists Local 150, IATSE, from picketing his showcase. Rice charges in his complaint that the IATSE local, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, is picketing "with unlawful purpose," that the action has seriously interfered with his boxoffice receipts and that the dispute does not involve him nor his theatre in any way, but is merely a fight between the rival unions.

Rice points out he has no quarrel with the IATSE projectionists. His theatre was opened May 16 and is being operated on a foreign picture policy.

Los Angeles Delegates To IATSE Meeting

LOS ANGELES—Delegates to the IATSE's international conclave, to be held in Louisville, Ky., June 3-4-5, from the IA Projectionists Local 150 here will include:

M. J. Sands, secretary; L. W. Armentrout, assistant business manager, and E. L. Robbins, M. Nielsen and George Schaefer, of the board of directors. They will check out May 29 and expect to return about ten days later.

Seven From L. A. Head For Columbia Meeting

LOS ANGELES — Attending Columbia's combined central and western regional sales parley in Chicago, June 4-5-6 from the local exchange will be:

THE opening of the 1940 Gold Gate Exposition found the Row pretty gloomy. The 1939 Fair put a huge dent in theatre attendance, and with every indication pointing to a successful Treasure Island this year, the attendance at the film houses on the mainland is expected to take another nosedive. The great amount of free entertainment offered at the Fair, coupled with reduced ferryfares, bridge tolls and parking charges is considered enough to draw the crowds.

"Papa" Bill Coovert bids farewell to his friends in San Bruno and to the El Camino Theatre which he has managed for the past 14 months. Coovert goes into partnership with Mike Syufy, who recently purchased the T&D in Oakland from the Morgan Walsh estate. Bill will act as manager of the house. Charles Coovert, cousin of Bill, gets the managership of the El Camino. Bill Coovert has been with the Golden Gate circuit since 1937.

Working with neighborhood merchants, Reek Feliziani helped start the Fiesta Week with a bang. Reek had a whisker and costume contest on the stage of his Midtown . . . Edna Schefer, Warner bookkeeper, is on her vacation . . . The Warner Club held a big Bingo party in their clubroom . . . Lloyd Cohen, United Artists manager, is off to New York for a combined vacation and business trip . . . Bob Ginnif, formerly with Coast Pictures, is now in the shipping department at RKO.

Max Ratner, RKO booker who has been on the sick list, is back greeting exhibitors . . . L. C. Wingham, M-G-M head, has gone south to convalesce from his recent illness . . . Milt Nelson of the Harvey Amusement office is confined to the home of his parents in Watsonville after suffering minor injuries in an auto accident en route back to the city after visiting his parents.

G. E. Harvey has sold his Arbuckle, Arbuckle, to Philip Linde . . . Joan Crawford spent a few days in town, and on a windy day took the attention of the crowd away from the steam shovel they were watching . . . Rudy Vallee was also a visitor, bringing his show up from Hollywood for a big shindig at the Municipal Auditorium . . . Val Harris, headliner in the old Orpheum days, has opened "Old San Francisco," an attractive bar near the theatre district.

The Columbia exchange renovation is almost complete and it is quite the place. Jack Tillman's office is now mahogany paneled and most attractive. The rest of the building has been painted and reorganized. The teletypes, both Postal and Western Union, have been dispensed with as unnecessary and now messenger boys are breaking in the new linoleum.

"Gone With the Wind" comes back to Market Street for an unlimited stay, opening at the St. Francis on May 30 on a roadshow basis . . . Incidently a frog named GWTW won the jumping contest at Angel's Camp this past weekend. The champion is owned by Jim Rau, Hollywood oil man . . . Mildred Dingle, 20th-Fox inspectress, is in Yosemite for her vacation . . . Frank Noege, formerly with Paramount in the ad sales, is working for Republic in the same capacity . . . Doc Henning is off to Portland on Pacific Premium business . . . Charlie Holtz is opening his new Colonial in Sacramento, June 7.

Republic will hold its regional convention here beginning May 27. James Grainger is already in town making preparations for Republic executives from all the west coast offices. Charlie Yates is expected in some time this week . . . Spring seems to be the time for the acquiring of new cars. Paul Bush, United Artists salesman, is making his calls in a new Buick, and Sid Martenstein of Republic is showing off his new Chevrolet . . . The Circle Newsreel is having a new marquee attached to the front of the house and the face-lifting job looks like a real eye-catcher.

The Columbia troupe leaves June 1 for the convention in Chicago. Headed by Jack Tillman, the party includes Mel Klein, assistant manager, and Salesmen Carl Scott, Phil Weinstein and Tory Roberts . . . Mike Newman, Columbia exploiteer, has been in town pushing "21 Days Together" . . . Ed Bauer, National Theatre Supply salesman, is in the hospital and at this writing the doctors are still trying to find out what is wrong with him . . . Thirty-five hundred people journeyed to the top of Mount Tamalpais to witness the annual Mountain Play. This year the production was "The World We Live In."

REVIEW FLASHES

LUCKY CISCO KID (20th-Fox) — Another chapter in the adventures of the mythical border Robin Hood, this fails to take advantage of the possibilities afforded by its budget and cast, summing up as a very ordinary western which can hope for enthusiasm from only the more rabid action fans. The story is definitely on the stereotyped side and attempts to incorporate so many sagebrush cliches, that at times it approaches burlesquing the time-honored hoss opera. H. Bruce Humberstone's direction lacks smoothness and timing. John Stone produced.

COMPLETE REVIEW on the above picture will appear in an early issue of BOXOFFICE.

Red Cross Asks Trade To Raise $10,000

Chicago — The amusement industry's quota in the drive for $1,000,000 in Red Cross funds in the Chicago area for war sufferers is $10,000. John Balaban is chairman and Bill Hollander is vice-chairman of the drive. All employes in the industry are requested to give all they can to assist the Red Cross in carrying out its mercy missions in Europe.

Oral Argument May Precede a Report

CHICAGO—Oral arguments are expected to be held here in the criminal contempt case pending in federal court, before the final supplementary report of Judge Edgar Eldredge, special master in chancery, is submitted to Federal Judge Charles Woodward.

The special master's first report, filed some weeks ago, recommended that Barney Balaban, B&K, and Paramount be found guilty of violating section X of the original 1932 consent decree, and that all other defendants be absolved.

Exceptions to Master Eldredge's findings of guilt on the one section were filed this week by defense attorneys with the master. They were complete exceptions to all of his findings. Robert N. Golding of the firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin and Ellis, attorneys for the defendants found guilty, said he expected oral arguments to be heard by the special master before he submitted his final findings.

Among exceptions submitted, the attorneys contend Paramount and Balaban should not be considered as being direct defendants because of their interest in B&K. Objections are found to many statements in the master's report on grounds of error and mistaken understanding of finding of fact and law due to the voluminous testimony.

They also contend the government in its pleadings did not charge Balaban with violation of section X of the decree, and that the conclusions of law are wholly unsupported by evidence. They deny that B&K controlled the loop output of product and that other pictures, according to the testimony, were available first-run to independent exhibitors.

A. J. Balaban Will Run Glenwin With Meyers

CHICAGO—A. J. Balaban, one of the film pioneers here, but no longer with B&K, is to be associated with Sam Meyers, his brother-in-law, in the operation of the Glenwin, which Meyers is constructing in Glencoe, north Chicago swank suburb. The house is scheduled to open Thanksgiving day.

Meanwhile, work also has started and is progressing rapidly on the Glencoe, to be operated by George T. Valos. It is scheduled to open about August 15.

Move to Enlist Legislation in Combating "Jackrabbits"

Milwaukee Mayor Asks Censorship Commission

MILWAUKEE — Because the city motion picture commission took no action against the showing of "Primrose Path" here, against which Mayor Carl F. Zeidler declared he had received numerous complaints, the mayor has indicated he will ask the common council to pass an ordinance providing for the establishment of a new commission with power of censoring "objectionable" films.

Assistant city attorney Werner A. Wilking informed the mayor the present commission is merely advisory. The mayor said his idea of a commission was a "council of defense for the public, not a mere rubber stamp for the motion picture interests."

Two Gunmen Rob Talbott Cashier in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS—The Talbott, operated by Harry Markun, was robbed last Friday night of an undetermined amount of money, forced by one of two gunmen from Mrs. Mary Studebaker, cashier.

Carroll Sanders, ticket taker, and Jesse Morgan, manager, were held at bay by the other gunman in the lobby as they saw the holdup under way and started to call police. The bandits escaped on foot.

Crack Ritz Safe to Take Weekend Receipts

INDIANAPOLIS—Yeggs opened a safe at the Ritz last Sunday night or early Monday morning and escaped with the Saturday and Sunday boxoffice receipts. The odor of tear gas was still present when theatre employes entered the room Monday. The safe has been equipped with tear gas and exploded when the yeggs blew open the safe. The theatre is operated by Olson Theatre Enterprises and the exact amount of the loss was not made known.

Manufacturers Contribute Prizes for ATOI Parley

INDIANAPOLIS—Many manufacturers and companies have sent in prizes to be awarded at the ATOI mid-summer convention June 25, 26 and 27.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Marc J. Wolf, chairman; Ernest L. Miller, H. H. Johnson, H. P. Vonderschmitt and L. T. Moore.

Milliken a Speaker

INDIANAPOLIS—Carl E. Milliken, MPPDA secretary, was here May 23 to speak at the annual dinner of the local Business and Professional Women's Club.

CHICAGO—A move by outstate independents to organize for the purpose of securing legislation that will aid in the combating of "jackrabbit" competition is reported launched.

Considerable anxiety over the competition of nightly free shows in small towns is expressed by numerous exhibitors coming into Chicago.

Several of the free-show operators have organized regular circuits, presenting pictures every night in the week over a specific radius. These are usually presented in towns of 300 to 800 population, neighboring a center town where an exhibitor conducts a theatre all year round.

A typical situation is that confronting Everett Clapp, operator of the American in Sidell, a town of 600. Surrounding him within 8 to 12 miles of Sidell are the towns of Indianola, Fairmount, Allerton, Metcalf and Hume. These are in one "jackrabbit" circuit, that is routed to permit each town to have a show on a different night. Farmers in the area may "tour" the circuit and see a free film nightly, still traveling only a few miles from their homes.

One Theatre at a Time May Show "Nation"

CHICAGO—In a unique decision, municipal judge Donald S. McKinlay upheld a 23-year-old permanent injunction in behalf of "The Birth of a Nation," but decreed that henceforth it can be shown locally in only one theatre at a time.

Judge McKinlay gave his decision in the case of the American Society for the Advancement of the Negro seeking to have dissolved the original permanent injunction obtained by the producers of the picture restraining the city or others from interfering with the showing of the picture.

The case was revived after Police Censor Harry Costello recently refused the sound-on-film version of the picture a permit. The decision of the judge acknowledged that addition of a synchronized musical and sound accompaniment to an old picture does not change or alter its content, and Judge McKinlay, in his decision, said that sound-on-film versions of the picture could be used here.

In placing the one-theatre showing-at-time restriction on the picture, Judge McKinlay explained he did this to avoid any group showing in various sections of the city, to double-check any possibility of any disorders arising, as the Negro group contended would happen.

Drive-In to Open

DES PERES, MO.—The first drive-in in the St. Louis area will be opened here within a few days. Tentative date for the opening was May 24. The $75,000 project occupies a 15-acre tract and will accommodate 500 automobiles.

53 at Metro's Meeting—

Wolfberg, district manager, Kansas City.

Para't Conventioneers Peep at a Premiere

GALESBURG, ILL. — Paramount's eastern sales force had an opportunity to look in on the company's world premiere here of "Those Were the Days" (At Good Old Siwash) when the special Santa Fe train carrying delegates to the convention in Los Angeles was halted for 15 minutes Tuesday during the five-mile parade that highlighted events leading up to the three-theatre showing of the film that night.

What all the sales force east of Chicago saw was a town of 28,800, with the calendar turned back forty years, reliving those good old days at Knox College (Good Old Siwash) here, about which George Fitch wrote, and from whose stories the film was produced.

Numerous exhibitors here for the premiere, had a chance to chat for a while with the Paramount executives and salesmen, as they all were serenaded with bands, with college students and stars helping. John Balaban, Bill Hollander, M. M. Rubens, Tom Ronan, Henry Stickelmaier and Dave Wallerstein, all of B&K, and Joe Kinskey, Tri-States, Davenport, Ia., and Gene Russell, Champaign, and Les Hanlin, Macomb, Ill., independent exhibitors, were among the reception committee.

Also here were Merle Potter, Minneapolis Tribune; William Hanlon, United Press; William Collins, International News Service; Frank Deneen, South Bend Tribune; Tep Wright and Don Knapp, Danville (Ill.) Commercial News; Scotty Martin, B&K publicity, South Bend; Bill Burns, Aurora News-Herald; A. W. Shipman, Springfield Register, and Nate Gross, Chicago Herald-American; James S. Kearns, Chicago Daily News, and Gene Rich, BOXOFFICE.

One of the big events of the premiere was the selection of the All-American Co-ed, from fifteen semi-finalists, chosen from 467 colleges and universities by Movie and Radio Guide. The winner will receive a trip to Hollywood, and was chosen by a committee composed of Jay Theodore Reed, producer-director of "Those Were the Days"; John Balaban, of B&K; Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson, and Lynne Overman.

Assisting in this were Martin Lewis and Gordon Swarthout of Movie and Radio Guide, who conducted the contest in the weekly fan paper.

Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson, two of the judges, put on their weekly NBC radio show, "Battle of the Sexes," from Galesburg over 90 stations, and over which the premiere was given several plugs.

. The premiere eventually developed into a three-day affair, starting with athletic events and a singing festival at Knox College. Monday a street fair, covering five blocks on Main Street, was held. Tuesday ushered in the premiere itself at the Orpheum, where all 1,100 reserved seats were sold out days in advance; and at the West and Colonial, where a continuous-run policy was in effect.

Handling the campaign were Ralph Ravenscroft and Ed Churchill of the Paramount studio publicity department, aided by Ed Seguin, B&K publicist, Chicago.

Stars present were J. Carrol Naish, Muriel Angelus, Lynne Overman and Vaughan Glaser.

"U" Regional Ends on A Note of Optimism

CHICAGO—Universal's western regional closed here with a note of optimism evident in all addresses by company executives on the outlook for 1940-41.

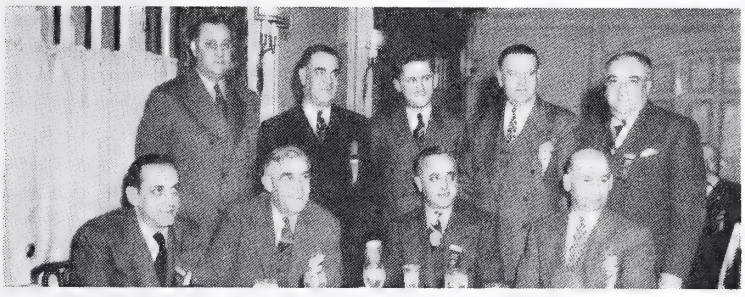
"There will be a much closer alliance between the studio and sales personnels on all production matters," Nate Blumberg, president, told the conventioneers. William A. Scully, general sales manager, related that the 19th week of the drive in his honor ended with figures revealing a 46 per cent increase in sales.

Among other speakers were Cliff Work, studio head; J. Cheever Cowdin; John Joseph, advertising and publicity director; William Heineman, western division sales manager; and F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern division sales manager.

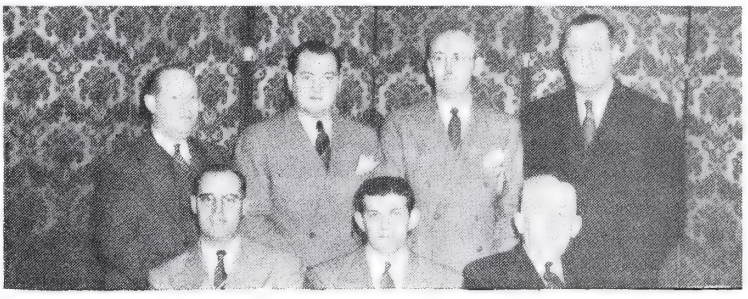
Universal Notes

CHICAGO—Numerous new shorts and a trailer of forthcoming product were screened at the H. & E. Balaban Esquire for Universal's western division salesmen during the sales conclave here at the Drake. Also shown were newest rushes from Jules Levey's production, "The Boys From Syracuse," which Universal will distribute. Levey attended all of the convention sessions.

King Trimble, San Francisco salesman, was everywhere during the opening day's luncheon when Lou Pollock was taking pictures of various exchange members. He soon earned the nick-name of "scene-stealer."



A. J. Sharick, who handled the convention room decorations, had an attractive meeting place arranged, with large blow-ups of Universal stars and posters of some of the 1940-41 product. Records of music from "The Boys From Syracuse" and from Deanna Durbin's newest, "Spring Parade," were played during intermissions between business sessions.



The convention closed with a bang-up party at the Drake Sunday night. A play-let burlesquing studio operations was presented with many of the sales organization taking part. It was entirely off-the-record.

Pay Suits Against Judell Will Be Heard May 28

ST. LOUIS—Justice of the Peace Frank S. Bledsoe has set for hearing on May 28 the suits filed by back office employes against B. N. Judell, Inc., for back pay allegedly due them.

In one action Harry O'Brien is asking for $125, while in another Mamie Mitchell seeks $130.

"Knute Rockne" Film Is Amply Heralded

SOUTH BEND, IND.—South Bend may not get the world premiere of Warner's "The Life of Knute Rockne," according to present plans, but that little matter certainly didn't deter Warner publicists from getting plenty of newspaper space on the location junket to the Notre Dame campus for final sequences for the picture.

George Shaffer, studio publicist, aided by Fred Bartow, Chicago exploiteer, chaperoned Chicago newspaper and trade-paper writers to the Notre Dame campus to watch shooting of interior scenes of the university cathedral and burial scene of Rockne.

Pat O'Brien, who stars as Rockne, and Donald Crisp, were the two Warner players here to make scenes. The picture will be world-premiered between September 15 and October 15 at Radio City, though efforts are being made by Notre Dame officials to hold an opening in South Bend the same day.

Shaffer concentrated his efforts locally on the sports writers, with the result that all of the dailies here carried photographs and stories of O'Brien's efforts to impersonate the famous coach. More than 5,000 jammed into Union Station to greet the studio group when they arrived, despite a cold rain. There were Mayor Jesse I. Pavey, the South Bend High School band, a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, representatives of Notre Dame headed by the Vice-President Father John Cavanaugh, and many others.

And best of all to some 500 students of Notre Dame was the $5 a day they received as extras to sit in the university cathedral during the filming of scenes.

O'Brien and Crisp spoke to the student body several times while here, made many luncheon visits, and went in to Chicago to attend several affairs arranged by the publicity crew.

Twelve Fox Houses Launch Juvenile Film Clubs

MILWAUKEE—FOX inaugurated its Young Americans Movie Clubs at 12 of its local neighborhood houses last weekend. Special features shown are advertised as being endorsed by all PTA groups and admission is a dime up to 16 years of age. Adults also are invited to attend, with 15-cent admission prevailing for them.

Members are eligible to prizes by saving labels or cartons from the products of five manufacturers. Participating theatres include the Paradise, Layton Park, Venetian, Shorewood, Zenith, Sherman, Downer, Plaza, Ritz, Majestic, Astor and Varsity.

Baldwin Polishing Script

JIMMY SAVAGE and Dorothy Deere are now handling publicity for the B&K loop houses, with the exception of Archie Herzoff, who is in charge of the Chicago.

Edwin Levin, who has become a member of the promotion staff of the new afternoon New York tabloid, PM, was given a farewell luncheon by his B&K publicity associates before leaving. Among those attending were Bill Hollander, Jimmy Savage, Dave Wallerstein, Eddie Seguin, Dorothy Deere of B&K, Clyde Eckhardt of 20th Century-Fox, Lloyd Lewis of the Daily News and Karin Walsh of the Times. Eddie was presented with a desk set.

Jack Kirsch is back from that Washington Allied directors meeting and is hard at work getting things ready for the national convention . . . Ben Feldman, United Artists Theatre manager, is back after ten-day illness.

Henri Elman was in New York this week . . . Walter Hyland, Universal's veteran head booker here, received a wrist watch for his 25 years of service with the company at the convention here at the Drake. Max Levey, who took 16mm pictures of the recent Tippy Harrison testimonial, showed them in Al Simon's restaurant this week.

A. Irving Tombach, who has been engaged in publicizing French and other foreign product in Chicago and the mid-west for the past few years, has been retained as press representative by the World-Playhouse.

Al Jolson opens a summer engagement July 7 in the Grand Opera House in "Keep Punchin'." With him will be Martha Raye, Lionel Stander, Vera Gordon and his ex-wife, Ruby Keeler.

Cuff notes from the Metro Chez Paree party:

George Turner, Minneapolis salesman, had everyone in stitches over his impersonation of Hitler.

Joel Bezahler, assistant to Eddie Saunders, was around making everyone at home . . . Ditto, W. E. (Doc) Banford, Chicago branch manager, and John Kemptgen, Chicago office manager, who were official hosts.

Jerry Adams, Indianapolis salesman, one of the young and handsome bachelors, was using his "sex appeal" to good advantage.

Chico Marx, one of the Marx Brothers, here for the final seven-day tryout at the Chicago of "Go West," which M-G-M will produce, dropped in to help entertain the boys, and for typical Marxian atmosphere brought along plenty of girls from the show.

Sophie Tucker, star of the Chez Paree show, thrilled the salesmen with a special rendition of "Your Broadway and Mine," from M-G-M's "Broadway Melody of 1938," in which she co-starred.

Newsreelers in Europe Operate as "Portables"

CHICAGO—The lightning European war has put the newsreel coverage of the conflagration practically on a portable basis, in the opinion of Tom Mead, co-editor of Universal News, who was here with Joseph O'Brien, also co-editor of the newsreel, for the western division sales convention of Universal. Mead handles assignments, while O'Brien is in charge of makeup.

"Plans are made to use one section of Europe or a country as a basis of operations and then that country is knocked off, causing us to shift immediately," Mead said.

Expressing the hope that the capitals of France and England would not be bombed, Mead said that nevertheless, Universal News had made plans to cope with the situation if it did happen. "We have tentative deals with the Allied governments," he said, "to furnish our cameramen with planes to send film either to the Clipper planes or direct to America if Paris and London are bombed. Such films would naturally create sympathy here for the Allied cause and those countries will do all they can to help us get them to New York."

"Children's Pictures" Are Called for by Educator

SHEBOYGAN, WIS.—Adelbert Peck, principal of the Sheboygan County Better Films council here, stressed the importance of selecting pictures carefully for children.

"I think the time has come when the film industry ought to do what publishers have done," Principal Peck said. "They publish children's books. Why can't our producers give us a distinct field of children's pictures?"

Speakers at the meeting included Mrs. William Festerling, president of the council; Mayor Herman C. Runge; Mrs. Henry E. Smith, first president of the council and an honorary life member, and Mrs. Runkel, president of the Fond du Lac Better Films' council.

Following the program, guests at the meeting were invited to attend a preview at the Rex as guests of Jack Ebersberger, manager.

Chicago Family, Mature Listings About Equal

CHICAGO—Family listing of pictures by the Chicago Better Films Council currently includes "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Broadway Melody of 1940," "Buck Benny Rides Again," "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me," and "Star Dust."

The mature listing includes: "Dr. Cyclops," "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," "The House Across the Bay," "Johnny Apollo," "Primrose Path," and "Harvest."

UA Convention Sidelights

CHICAGO—UA "sneak screened" Sam Goldwyn's "The Westerner" at the B&K Pantheon the night before its western division convention opened here. Advertised as a mere preview, the house was packed and the film received a big ovation, according to Monroe Greenthal. There were no newspaper or tradepaper writers present—officially or otherwise—since the film has not been previewed yet . . . The men also saw Sol Lesser's production of "Our Town," while they were here.

Incidentally, Jimmy Roosevelt, who will produce "Pot O' Gold" for UA, was in and out of town before he could make a speech at the convention . . . Sam (Eliminate Duals) Goldwyn and Mary Pickford, both scheduled to come here for the meeting, couldn't make it.

Jack Schlaifer developed a tangy French accent for the convention. No one could figure out why.

Al Margolies, advertising manager, took his first tries at rhumba dancing at the Colony Club, and Monroe Greenthal has already been petitioned to let him join his exclusive rhumba club.

All of the intermission periods during the convention found the men crowded around a special United Press ticker news machine installed outside the convention room. They got the war news as it came off the machine, in a tieup with UA's forthcoming "Foreign Correspondent." An exact model of the S. S. Glencaim used in "The Long Voyage Home," was displayed, as well as a model Pennsylvania Railroad engine for "Broadway Limited."

The convention room proper had a large map showing the exchange centers where UA's permanent exploitation staff will be located.

Distributed to the men was a four-page paper, tabloid size, with all campaign having a political touch to it, since the major party political conventions are coming up soon.

Hal Roach's "Turnabout" was "sneak-screened" at the B&K Apollo with the salesmen in attendance . . . Incidentally, Roach presented each salesman at the convention with a Stetson hat order, good in his home town.

Sol Lesser arrived at the convention from New York after having been to Washington where he held a private screening of his "Our Town" for President Roosevelt and his family.

The convention social highlight was a dinner party given for all of the men at the Chez Paree.

Peggy Sheldon, secretary to Irving Schlank, Chicago branch manager, made an efficient convention secretary.

Nat Nathanson, Chicago salesman, still carried his hand in a cast, recovering from a severe boil, which necessitated his remaining in the hospital for two weeks prior to the convention.

Art Catlin, Chicago exploiteer, did an excellent job of planting convention stories in the daily newspapers, and even broke a top-headline yarn on the financial page of the Chicago Tribune.

Need National Guard At Iowa Premiere

CLINTON, IOWA—They called out the National Guard in this corn-state town of 25,000 when the population doubled itself on the day Don Ameche and his fellow 20th Century-Fox stars came to Clinton for the world premiere of "Lillian Russell," at the Central States' Capitol and Rialto. So unaccustomed were those 50,000 to such premieres—it was by far the largest ever staged in Iowa—that by the time the movie ball honoring the visiting stars was held at night the jitter-bugs were so tired from the day's festivities that they were no longer in the groove, and the dance turned out to be a staid affair compared to the bustle of the afternoon.

This town never before had seen such a crowd. All sleeping quarters—private homes as well as the hotels—were gone long before the day of the premiere. The Chamber of Commerce here made it a three-day affair and before the windup of the final day, most of the restaurants ran out of food.

The town was dressed in "Gay Nineties" garb, the stores and the citizens, with all business houses and schools closed. Despite a drizzling rain which greeted the stars when they arrived here on the preview run of the Northwestern Railroad's Treasure Island Special from Chicago, thousands lined the streets to witness the parade from the station to the Clinton Country Club where luncheon was served. Governor George A. Wilson of Iowa and Mayor Harry F. Pape of Clinton were guests of honor with the stars, who included Ameche, Cesar Romero, Mary Healy and Arleen Whelan.

Besides the National Guard, Mayor Pape had to call on state troopers, Davenport, Cedar Rapids and Cedar Falls policemen to augment this town's police force to cope with the crowds. In addition, scores of special deputies were sworn in to help.

In the afternoon a special plaque was dedicated by Ameche commemorating the birthplace here of Lillian Russell.

Clinton Premiere Tid-Bits

By GENE RICH

CLINTON, IOWA—Among the trade figures here at the "Lillian Russell" premiere were Archie Herzoff, B&K publicity department, and Irving Mack, of Filmack Trailers, Chicago; Ted Emerson, Omaha Tri-States publicity head; Joe Kinsky, Tri-States district manager, Davenport; Charlie Winchell, Minnesota Amusement publicity head, Minneapolis; William Gehring, central division, Moe Levy, prairie district, and Stanley Mayer, Des Moines branch managers, 20th Century-Fox; Lou Elman, RKO manager, Mel Evidon, Columbia manager, and Art Anderson, Warner manager, all of Des Moines; and the following from the various A. H. Blank affiliates: A. H. Blank and his sons, Myron and Ray; Harry Warren, general manager, and Lionel Wasson, publicity manager, Central States; A. B. Seymour, Central states screen advertising manager; L. J. Wagner, manager, Palace, Burlington; Jess Day, Rialto, Fort Dodge; Tom Arthur, Cecil, Mason City; Joe Gerbach, Collegian, Ames; and the two local manager, Harold Barnes, Capitol, and Jerry Greenbaum, Rialto.

Newspaper men declared the premiere to be one of the best presented thus far. Arrangements were capably handled by Earl Wingart and Eddie Solomon, 20th Century-Fox; and Harry Warren and Lionel Wasson of Central States.

Emile Montemurro, Movietone News head, Chicago, and Phil Gleason, sound man, and Bill Birch, his two aides, were here to take shots for the newsreel. We understand Mary Healy and Arleen Whelan were disappointed when Monty and Phil declined to lead the movie ball grand march with them. The boys said they were sorry but that they just had to work.

Burton Jerrel, whose Iowa News Flashes is used throughout the state, also filmed the premiere activities.

Harry Martin, Memphis critic, found the rainy, chilly Iowa weather not very suitable to his summer wardrobe including a straw hat. Remarked Martin: "You damn Yankees with your Yankee weather have no regard for seasons at all."

Don Ameche couldn't get the bottle of champagne he used to christen the Northwestern Railroad's "Treasure Island Special" on its arrival in Clinton to break. After the second attempt, he gave up in disgust.

Milt Howe and Lou Hechlinger of Harry Brand's studio publicity staff, accompanied the stars here . . . Ameche had to go back by auto to Chicago the night of the premiere in order to make a midnight plane to Los Angeles, where he had a scheduled radio rehearsal. Cesar Romero flew back the next day to be ready for work on his next "Cisco Kid" film.

A. H. Blank got a laugh from the luncheon crowd when he began by saying the rainy, cold weather was "unusual for Iowa" . . . Mayor Pape showed his sense of humor when welcoming Ameche and the others to Clinton he said "I present to you a key to the city which I haven't got."

In Chicago, the night before the stars went out to Clinton, they were all seated in a night-spot when a sorority pledge came up to Romero and told him that her pledge task was to ask him to dance but that he didn't have to if he didn't want to. The girl was overwhelmed when Romero in turn accepted the invitation.

MILWAUKEE

THE Empress is now featuring sex films . . . Grace Bannow, local toll telephone operator here, has been named social and business secretary to the Andrews sisters . . . Spencer Tracy is expected to spend at least a day in Milwaukee in June before going to Ripon to receive an honorary degree from Ripon College.

"Fifth Column" Scare Fades in Clinton

Clinton, Iowa — Traces of a "Fifth Column" were evident here when Monroe Rubinger, Kansas City exploiteer for Warner, was discovered at the premiere of 20th Century-Fox's "Lillian Russell."

Suspected of sabotage by the Fox contingent, Rubinger's only "defense" was that he had been "kidnaped" by a newspaper man and brought to the premiere "against his will." Assured that he would be properly punished unless he promised not to make any statements about his company's pictures, the Warner exploiteer obliged with:

"Boyer, oh Boyer! I promise All This and Heaven, Too." Charles Boyer is co-starred with Bette Davis in Warner's "All This and Heaven, Too."

INDIANAPOLIS

Jerome Vogel, son of Joseph Vogel, operator of the River Park, South Bend, now is located in Indianapolis doing research work and will travel over the state . . . A motion picture film, "Free Men Build a Nation," sponsored by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, will be shown members of the local Universal Club, under direction of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce at the Columbia Club.

Its 30th Year—

The Hi-Way Theatre on Florissant Blvd. in St. Louis, which this month celebrated under the management of J. F. Brinkmeyer its 30th anniversary. Once known as the Montgomery, it was built by the late O. T. Crawford. The name was changed three years ago to the Hi-Way.

Comedians Hope and Berle Stand Them Up in Loop

CHICAGO — Comedians descended with "blitzkrieg" might in Chicago's loop vaude-film houses this week with SRO a welcome sign in both the Chicago and Oriental.

Bob Hope appeared headed for a record-breaking week at the B&K Chicago, with the "Doctor Takes a Wife." Over the weekend the house played to about 60,000 persons, with the sale of tickets being stopped at 8:45 p. m. Sunday night.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer returned to their vaude-film policy at the Oriental after 16 weeks of "Gone With the Wind," and blasted the old idea that the week a house changes it policy the boxoffice suffers. Milton Berle, on the stage, and Universal's "If I Had My Way" had the house headed for a record vaude-film week.

War News Over Teletype In Lobby of Telenews

CHICAGO—With the European war now going full blast, Sylvan Goldfinger, manager of the Telenews, has installed a trans-radio teletype machine in the theatre's lobby. The machine operates all the time the house is in operation and a cluster of patrons is constantly huddled around it.

Goldfinger uses some of the bulletins as a ballyhoo in front of the house, placing them on a large bulletin board to attract passers-by.

Al Hedding Will Succeed Kennedy at Ritz Helm

INDIANAPOLIS—James Kennedy, manager of the Olson Ritz, has resigned and Al Hedding of the Uptown will succeed him. Hedding has been replaced at the Uptown by John Peterson, who prior to joining the Olson chain had been business manager for Hal Kemp, the band leader.

ST. LOUIS

WITH Bonnie Baker featured, Orrin Tucker and his band moved into Fanchon & Marco's 5,000-seat Fox . . . The first showings in St. Louis of polaroid three-dimensional colored pictures were held at the Stix, Baer & Fuller auditorium for one week . . . "Harvest," a French film, played a four-day engagement at the S'Renco Art Theatre.

The 1940-41 officers of the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis were installed last week. They are: President, Mrs. Guy Randall; first vice-president, Mrs. Jacob M. Lashly; second vice-president, Mrs. Edgar Lippman; third vice-president, Mrs. Carl Krutsch; fourth vice-president, Mrs. Frederick C. Lake; fifth vice-president, Mrs. P. M. Hucke; sixth vice-president and counsel, Milton F. Napier; recording secretary, Mrs. E. E. Tremain; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. Dohrmann; treasurer, Mrs. William R. Nye, and auditor, Mrs. Etta L. Evans. Mrs. John Franklin Noble is the retiring president.

The St. Louis chapter of the Eastern Star sponsored a benefit motion picture show at the Tivoli, May 20. Proceeds went to the chapter's scholarship fund for girls . . . "Her Master's Voice," final production of the season, will be given May 27 by the Kirkwood Little Theatre company in the American Legion building on Argonne Drive.

The Town Square Theatre will open for the season, June 7. It is an outdoor roof theatre at Euclid and Delmar Blvd. Opening vehicle will be "The Bride the Sun Shines On."

Dorothy Lamour stopped off at Lambert-St. Louis Airport en route to the tulip festival in Holland, Mich., long enough to deny there is any chance of a reconciliation with her former husband, Herbie Kay. Kay and his musicians are also in Holland. Dorothy said she might meet him "professionally," adding "And that's all."

When the second district appellate court judges at Ottawa, Ill., saw motion pictures of Peter McGoorty engaged in various sports, they decided against him in a $50,000 personal injury damage suit. He claimed to have been injured in an automobile accident, June 25, 1938, so seriously he could not bend over thereafter. But the films showed otherwise.

Court Considers Demand Trampe Answer Queries

MILWAUKEE — Circuit Judge Roland J. Steinle has under advisement a petition to determine whether Charles W. Trampe, who seeks to enjoin the playing of Bingo at the American Lutheran Association hall, must answer certain questions put to him at a recent adverse examination before court commissioner Charles Orth.

Trampe, president of Film Service, Inc., recently declined to answer questions as to whether he is a member of any club or association which permitted games of chance or whether any theatrical group is financing his suit.

Fifth House in Richmond Is Planned by Hudson

RICHMOND, IND.—Plans are in progress for a new $50,000 theatre to be built by Robert Hudson, who operates the Tivoli, Hudson, Ritz and Indiana here.

The new house will have approximately 900 seats and is to be located on the 600 block on Main Street. The architect is Edwin G. Frederick of Chicago; the general contractor is the local firm of Vincent H. Juerling & Son. The start is set for June 1.

Arthur Phillips Will Helm Indianapolis Drive-In

INDIANAPOLIS—Arthur (Shorty) Phillips, former representative for National Screen Service in this territory, will take the helm for the new Drive-In on State Road 67 which is scheduled to open next month. The new theatre, nearing completion, is operated by the firm headed by Phillip Smith of New York.

Phillips went to Detroit for conferences with officials of the corporation.

Anna Neagle Will Be in Chicago for a Day

CHICAGO—Anna Neagle will make a one-day appearance at the Oriental as part of her nationwide tour on behalf of RKO's "Irene." She will be here May 31, and that same night will appear on a nationwide Mutual network show originating from WGN, plugging hits from the picture. Accompanying her on the tour are Terry Turner, RKO exploitation manager, and Herbert Wilcox, who produced the film on the RKO lot.

Something Funny in Their Bookings

Chicago—Three of the country's top comedians were going around with long faces this week. They were Bob Hope, Milton Berle and Joe E. Lewis. Here's why:

All were booked into Chicago loop houses the same week, and all were booked by the William Morris agency. Hope played the Chicago, Berle the Oriental, and Lewis the State-Lake.

And to make matters worse, their individual praise agents were finding things tough because one headliner was getting most of the newspaper lineage: One A. Hitler & Company.

Cummings and Buzzell See Marx Show in Chicago

CHICAGO—Jack Cummings, producer, and Eddie Buzzell, director, both of whom will work on M-G-M's production of the Marx Brothers' "Go West," were here to see final presentations of the stage tryout of the show at the B&K Chicago.

Both flew in from New York and were here for conferences, before returning to the coast to make plans for getting production under way about June 10. Cummings said that Virginia Weidler has been set for a featured supporting role.

Wind Ends Outdoor Show

AMO, IND.—An abrupt end to the season's first outdoor motion picture offered the local citizenry came when a strong gust of wind blew down the screen and dust-sprayed the spectators.

Dorothy Deere Joins B&K Advertising Department

CHICAGO—Dorothy Deere, motion picture critic of the Chicago Herald-American, has resigned to take a post in the advertising department of Balaban & Katz. The first woman publicist with B&K succeeds Edwin Levin, who has joined the promotional department of PM, new afternoon paper in New York.

Miss Deere will continue to occupy her five-day-a-week spot as cinema chatterer on WJJD locally.

Three-a-Day for "Wind" Ups Grosses at Woods

CHICAGO—The shifting of the three-a-day policy to the Woods, Essaness loop house, on "Gone With the Wind," after it closed with the sixteenth week at the Oriental, resulted in boxoffice returns upping considerably at the former house. The Woods had been on a two-a-day basis. The seventeenth Saturday found the house taking in more than on any other single day since the film opened.

Approves Payment

ST. LOUIS—Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley has granted receivers for IATSE Local No. 143 the right to pay a committee of the union $9,257 as reimbursement for expenses incurred in connection with picketing of various Fanchon & Marco theatres in St. Louis and St. Louis county in a dispute involving the employment of projectionists who only had cards issued by the international union of the IATSE instead of Local No. 143.

Portable Circuits Are Steadily Increasing

KANSAS CITY—An increase in the number of portable circuits serving small towns in western Missouri and Kansas has already occurred this spring. Between 10 and 20 per cent more such circuits now are being operated than there were a year ago, it is estimated. This runs the number from approximately 60, each serving six towns apiece, to 70; which means that the number of towns reached has grown from around 350 to over 400.

The problem presented by the existence of these circuits has been increasingly felt by exhibitors in this area the past season or two. However, observers believe that the situation cannot be met by a simple "anti" attitude on the part of exhibitors. The field has grown to such stature that another sort of solution is indicated.

Over 75 per cent of the portable circuits in this area have gone to 16mm film and equipment. More film companies are making product available in 16mm form. With their foreign markets practically destroyed, it is more than probable that companies will release more film for 16mm use as time goes on.

As a matter of fact, the 16mm field has grown to such a point that it could enter the production field itself.

Suggest Compromise

It has been suggested that exhibitors, distributor-producers, and those in the portable circuit field get together and formulate a general policy. Some of the points suggested are these:

1. Major companies to release product for 16mm use after pictures are 18 to 24 months old. It is interesting to note that at least one company is releasing such features nine months after original release.

2. Portable circuits agree to (and be held to such a schedule by contract) show pictures only within a certain distance of towns served by regular film houses.

Other problems might be worked out satisfactorily to all three interests.

Another suggestion is that distributor-producers release only "B" product, but all of that, for 16mm use, leaving "A" product for the exclusive exhibition of regular houses. Experience in this territory indicates that this may be a sound idea.

There is an exhibitor or two in the Kansas City area protecting his theatrical exhibition by roadshowing in the surrounding towns that are theatreless. These exhibitors show "B" pictures (all of them old, of course) on the portable circuit; and on those portable circuit programs they plug the "A" pictures currently showing in their regular houses.

One by-product of portable circuits is that their presence near a theatre town tends to discourage the entrance of a cheap and/or shotgun house. Certainly it would have something of that effect where the exhibitor himself is operating a portable circuit.

Portable circuit operators contend that their activities do not hurt the regular exhibitor's business. They point out that they reach only communities and people who would otherwise see picture shows only a few times a year.

MINNEAPOLIS

JOE L. STERN, "Bank Night" distributor, formerly an inveterate smoker, but sworn off the weed entirely since recovery from his recent illness . . . Abe Kaplan, Twin City independent exhibitor, picked and bet on the winners in both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness and modestly says it was just "luck" . . . Congratulations to Bob Abelson, Paramount northern Minnesota and western Wisconsin salesman, for winning a $100 cash prize for selling the most "Beachcomber" contracts in the territory.

Bill Elson, independent exhibitor, doing himself proud on the golf course this spring . . . R. C. LiBeau, Paramount district manager, a visitor . . . $85,000 for Improvements By Ottumwa Theatre Co.

OTTUMWA, IA. — The Ottumwa Theatre Co. plans to spend $85,000 improving five Main St. buildings here within the next few months, Jake Cohen, secretary of the company, announces.

All four Main St. theatres—the Capitol, Ottumwa, Strand and Rialto—will be improved extensively at a cost of about $50,000. The Capitol and Ottumwa houses will receive major attention, with complete redecorating and lighting being planned.

The old Grand will be dismantled and a one-story building will be constructed to be used by five business houses. This project is to cost $30,000 to $35,000.

Rosenman Brothers of Ottumwa have the contract for tearing down the upper stories of the Grand Theatre while the General Construction Co., also of Ottumwa, has the contract for rebuilding the one-story portion. Three firms now in the building will remain through remodeling.

Clifford B. Braun of Ottumwa is president of the Ottumwa Theatre Co., Cohen is secretary and the Tri-States Theatre Corp. is treasurer.

Grain Price Collapse Dampens Northwest

MINNEAPOLIS—The collapse in grain prices has affected sentiment hereabouts adversely and undoubtedly has done its part in the forcing down of grosses. While the outlook is not as bright as it was a few weeks ago, however, the fact that early Northwest reports on crops are extremely favorable still is buoying up hopes for a prosperous 1940-41 theatre season.

The Minneapolis Tribune this week announced crop-growing conditions in the northwest territory served by the Great Northern railway are encouraging generally, and in some sections the brightest for many years. The two most encouraging aspects of the weekly survey, it was said, are moisture conditions in the territory covered and observations by sectional reporters that although the grasshopper hatch has begun in some areas, the insects are far less numerous than a year ago.

A Six-Month Leave Voted Steffes to Recuperate

MINNEAPOLIS—Northwest Allied's board of directors, meeting here this week, voted a six-month leave of absence to President W. A. Steffes who is recuperating from an illness.

In the absence of President Steffes, E. L. Peaslee of Stillwater, vice-president, presided. He will continue at the helm until President Steffes again is able to take up the reins.

It was decided the local convention should be held directly after the national Allied States convention in Chicago, June 19-21.

Various trade problems, including clearance and film rentals, will be discussed at a dinner meeting of Twin City members of Northwest Allied at the Hotel Nicollet, May 27.

It Was All in How You Looked at It

MINNEAPOLIS—When Northwest Allied directors met here this week dodgers gotten up as facsimilies of the front page of one of the better known film dailies were distributed. The dodgers carried two stories side by side with editorial comment above them.

The one article quoted David Selznick as opposing block booking "unalterably," declaring he prefers to have his pictures sold individually on their own merits and suggesting that admission prices "perhaps" will have to be raised to meet costs of pictures of higher quality.

Above the other article it was declared "the 'Big Eight' desire compulsory block booking perpetuated so that these enormous salaries can be continued." The article in question stated that 20th-Fox paid Zanuck $255,000, Sonja Henie $249,166 and John Ford, "Grapes of Wrath" director, $235,000 in 1939.

HOLLYWOOD—Ken Gamet has completed scripting the Rex Beach novel, "Flowing Gold," for Warner.

All Omaha Theatres Join in Prosperity Club Giveaway

OMAHA—All Omaha theatres, including downtown and suburban houses, started May 22 a weekly Wednesday co-operative giveaway called Prosperity Club. The basic prize is $500 for each weekly winner.

The plan goes into effect almost exactly three years after Bank Night was declared illegal by Nebraska courts. Another giveaway plan, known as Screeno-Quiz, was declared a lottery by the state's attorney general's office only a week previously to Prosperity Club's inaugural.

What It Is

The general scheme of Prosperity Club is as follows:

Everyone desiring to participate signs a permanent registry card. From this file the name of the winner is drawn each week.

To participate, a club "member" must register each Wednesday in the lobby of one of the theatres. He need not buy a ticket to sign a permanent card or to sign any of the Wednesday cards.

"Members" must be over 16 years old.

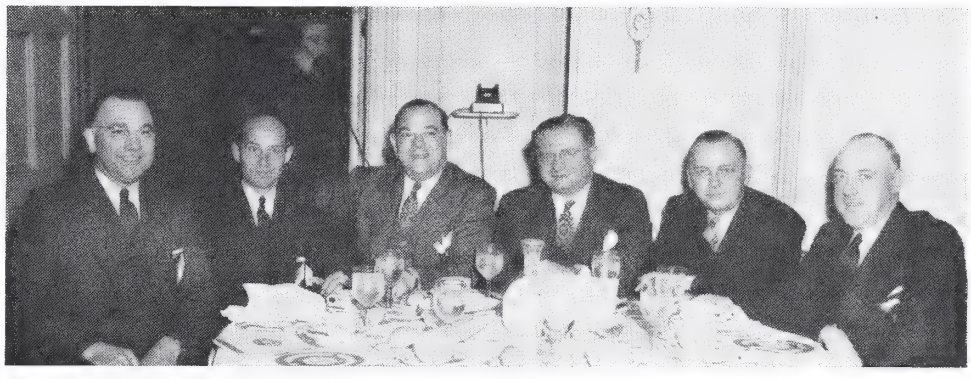
Every Wednesday night a card is drawn from the permanent registry file. If that person has signed a regular Wednesday card on that particular day, he is the winner and is notified.

If the person whose card is drawn has not registered that Wednesday, there is no award, and the next week's award is upped $250.

While Omaha theatres are financing the project by 100 per cent participation, considerable opposition to the plan was voiced by Manager Will Singer of the Brandeis and Ralph Goldberg, owner of two downtown and five suburban houses. Singer has previously indicated he is opposed to all giveaways.

Tri-States Theatres are putting in $280 per week for their two downtown houses, the Orpheum and Omaha. The Brandeis, other first-run house, pays $80 per week. Goldberg's two downtown subsequent run theatres pay a total of $40 and his five nabes contribute a total of $185. The Sam Epstein circuit and the independent suburbans contribute the rest.

The participant does not need to pay any admission price to register, either the first time or following Wednesdays. He need not be in any theatre to win the award.



To Open Hour Earlier

While it was generally agreed that theatres would continue to maintain regular schedules, the three downtown first-runs plan to open an hour earlier on Wednesdays and some suburbans talked of opening for matinees.

Screeno-Quiz was declared a lottery by state officials because they said such a plan contains the three elements of a lottery—chance, prize and consideration. The plan was proposed by Omaha theatres.

Under Screeno-Quiz the participant must buy a ticket to the theatre and must be present to win. When he enters the theatre he gets a card with five rows of numbers and as the numbers are called, he punches those numbers from the card. When he has five numbers in a row he calls Screeno.

On the stage the participant then takes one of 24 discs from a board, which disc has a corresponding question. If the participant can answer the question, he gets the award, if not, the award is passed to the next week.

ON FILMROW: George Hayob, Mary Lou, Marshall, Mo.; Charles Swiercinsky, Major, Washington, Kas.; Mrs. Marion Miller, Casino, Boonville, Mo.; H. Danberry and son, Will, Lucille, King City, Mo.; H. Dula, Holyrood, Holyrood, Kas.; Shirley Booth, Booth, Rich Hill, Mo.; Lee Sproule, Ritz, Newton, Kas. (plus Maryville, McPherson, etc.); Homer Strowig, Plaza, Abilene, Kas.; Walt Talbott, Victory, Rogers, Ark.; Mrs. Andrews, Andrews, Olathe, Kas.; Jerry Cushman, Rivoli, St. Joseph, Mo.

Helen Pyle, secretary to Leon Abraham, office manager at RKO, was married last Saturday . . . Ralph Morrow, Universal salesman, was at home ill a few days this week . . . Mrs. Summerour of the Mission, Shawnee, has been ill for several weeks.

Buddy Brown, Fox Midwest booker, is recovering from an attack of appendicitis which he went through without an operation . . . R. W. McEwan is back on Filmrow after a bout with congested lungs . . . A. W. Heyl has installed some new lobby furniture in the Kaw at Junction City, Kas.

A lot of IATSE boys (operators and stagehands) were through here this weekend en route to Louisville as delegates to the national convention. They were joined by local delegates . . . Harry Stone continues to manage the Belmont, although it was reported this week that the house, formerly under lease to Reube Finkelstein, has gone back to the landlord.

Golfers along Filmrow are warming up for the mighty clash between the Variety and Cinema clubs at Hillcrest on June 9. The Cinema team has been selected. It consists of Joe Lysowski, Altec; John Long, 20th-Fox; Walt Kirkham, Commonwealth; Martin Stone, Screenland; Bill Kubitzki and Bob Conn, 20th-Fox. Leon Abraham of RKO, handling arrangements for Variety (and himself pretty fancy with a "stick") is getting his team together. The match will score a point for low ball and a point for low total.

M. B. Smith, western Kansas district manager for Commonwealth, is practically skipping rope these days. Mrs. Smith presented him with a boy May 20, the couple's No. 1 . . . Stebbins Theatre Supply Co. is celebrating its 43rd year of operation by remodeling and redecorating its establishment at 1804 Wyandotte St. C. H. Badger has been with the company 33 years, Bill Porter about 25, Maude Mabry, 25.

Leon Abraham, office manager at RKO, was receiving congratulations this week on being advanced from shipper to booker at Metro. Leon is still at his post at RKO. Leonard Abrams moved up from assistant shipper to booker at Metro. Our apologies to both gentlemen, and we'll let the "gentlemen" stand.

The one-cent sale, a Rexall drug store promotion for years and years, has made its appearance on the local suburban theatre scene. Theatres charge the regular price for the first ticket, but provide two for one cent additional. The Mary Lue used it the other day; the Paseo has been using it.

Mrs. C. H. Burkey, operator of the Summit here, is recuperating from a long illness . . . John Wolfberg of the Giles is in New York. J. Rush is handling the house while he's gone.

There must be something in the Ozark air. Tom Eldon of the Ozark at Eldon, Mo., breaks forth (and right out in public, too) with a poem:

"Hi, Joe, what da ya know?
Just got back from the pitcher sho,
Saw Eddie Cantor in 40 Mothers,
Think she's better than all the others.
She's a comin' ta Eldon June 19 and 20
And belly laughs she's got a plenty.
You'll sure be crazy about that kid,
So if you got 2 bits that ain't busy,
Come down and laugh till we all get dizzy."

Tom P. S.'s his customers: "If this isn't a poem, sue me, but—Don't Miss the Picture."

The Ritz at McPherson, Kas., a George and A. F. Baker theatre, is now being managed by Paul Amick. Amick previously was with Fox Midwest at Brookfield, Mo.

Deal in Offing for Minneapolis Palace

MINNEAPOLIS—It is expected a deal will be closed within a fortnight for acquisition of the Palace, 1,800-seat lower loop theatre, by the Minnesota Amusement Co. from the Benz brothers.

If the deal goes through as is now indicated, the Benzes will abandon plans to reopen the 4,000-seat Minnesota and forego court action against the Minnesota Amusement Co. and major distributors here, alleging a conspiracy in restraint of trade to deprive the Minnesota and Palace theatres of major screen product.

As part of the deal it is reported unofficially Minnesota Amusement also will recompense the Benzes for all or some of the losses sustained by them during their recent unsuccessful operation of the Minnesota with stage shows and independent films. Some of these obligations still remain unpaid.

The Benzes would step out of the theatre field here entirely under present proposals. The Minnesota would be back in the hands of its stockholders with scant chances of finding a purchaser or lessee at the present time. The Benzes' recent operation of the house was for these stockholders. Belief in film circles here is that the theatre's eventual fate will be demolition for a parking lot.

George Benz, head of the Benz Company, admits negotiations now are in progress regarding the Palace. John J. Friedl, Minnesota Amusement Co. general manager, says there have been "discussions," but no agreement has been reached yet.

New Stimulant

SIOUX CITY, IA.—A new business stimulant, known as "Bags of Silver," has been developed by L. E. Davidson and Everett R. Cummings of the Tri-States Theatre Corp. It is currently in use at the local units of the circuit.

OMAHA

R J. DALTON, exhibitor at Osmond, Neb., was in town to celebrate Golden Spike Days and had a full beard. His town is celebrating soon, hence Exhibitor Dalton got double use out of his hirsute chin decoration . . . John Noffsinger and wife, Capitol, Madison, Neb., on Filmrow . . . Also Ray Brown, exhibitor at Harlan, Ia.

Sorry to hear of the death of C. J. Roslund of Osceola, Neb., father of Elvera Roslund, RKO cashier . . . Larry Hensler, Iz Weiner and Bill Barker in Chicago to a convention . . . Joe Jenny of Malmo, Neb., says he has 30 towns on his portable circuit setup now. Note to circulation dept.: Joe wants a Picture Guide, he says we forgot to send him one.

Welcome to Joy Jensen, new exhibitor at the Sioux, Anthon, Ia., formerly operated by John Sorenson. Jensen was on Filmrow for the first time this week and he had a copy of BOXOFFICE under his arm. He said he had heard reading the publication was one of the important things to know about running a theatre. Right you are, Exhibitor Jensen.

Exhibitors along Filmrow are making bets on whether it will be a boy or girl for Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Lieb. The Metro film peddler is just waiting for June to get here . . . There's quite a bit of talk about a horse riding club along Davenport street. Among horse lovers are Mr. and Mrs. Mike Roth, he of National Screen, and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Dunas, he of Columbia.

Tom Kenyon, Paramount cashier, and the BOXOFFICE correspondent are going fishing in Canada as soon as they get a sponsor . . . George Clark, New, Macedonia, Ia., and Francis Pace, Empress, Malvern, Ia., visitors this week to Filmrow . . . Joe Rosenberg, former Omaha film peddler, was in town with Harry Taylor. They are handling a cosmetic giveaway deal.

Mike Roth is known as Chief Rain Bringer (among other things) among western Nebraska exhibitors. Mike always has a bunch of contracts in one brief case and a good rain storm in the other . . . Glen Van Wey, exhibitor at Gothenberg, Neb., is building a new home. The garage will be extra large to make room for a work shop for son, Ernie Van Wey, who is quite a mechanic.

Omaha exchange for Columbia will have the following representatives at the Chicago meeting: Joe Jacobs, manager; Fred Horn, Bob Adler, Elmer Dunas, Jack Zide . . . Jacobs says Columbia's business in the Omaha area this year is "much above" last year. He also thanks exhibitors for their support during the recent drive, in which Jacobs' boys finished about third or fourth nationally.

Walt and Mrs. Bradley, Moon, Neligh, Neb., in town. Also Harold and Hazel Dunn, Jewel, Valentine, Neb. Harold's father was with him . . . Carl White says business is great. He has sold 15 pairs of Strong lamps in the past month after just taking over the agency . . . Norman Oleson, Wisner, Neb., on Davenport Street.

Many exhibitors and filmites asked about BOXOFFICE's new daughter, for which kind words many thanks . . . The United Artists boys going to Chicago were: Donald Vernon McLucas, manager; Jay Schlank, Ed Rostermundt, Harry Barker and Ernie Pickler . . . Betty Segal and Rita Molseed, both of whom worked for Bank Night, are doing the office work on Prosperity Club, city's new giveaway plan.

The RKO lads get a trip clear to New York. The lucky fellows are C. W. Allen, manager; Ed Stengel, better known as Golfing Ed, and Joe "Handsome" Smith . . . Martinas Biemond, Ord, Neb., and his manager at Loup City, Sol Slomenski, on Filmrow together . . . Father and son, Faye and Lloyd Honey, looking snappy in green suits.

Welcome to C. W. Allen, new manager at the RKO exchange. Allen replaced Russell Eggner, who returned to Minneapolis in the city sales department. Allen is married and has three children. He'll move the family to Omaha from Dallas after school is out. He's a golfer and the boys on Filmrow say he's a regular guy. Welcome to Omaha, Manager Allen.

Premiums and "Gifts" Under Fire in K. C.

KANSAS CITY—Filmrow was agog this week over reports the police were stopping not only giveaways but premiums (including dishes) as well. However, while they have stopped all giveaways depending on chance, the department has not yet determined whether the ordinance covers dishes and similar premiums.

Police are acting under an ordinance long on the books referring to "gift enterprises." The ordinance reads:

"Whoever shall sell or offer for sale any real estate or article of merchandise of any description whatever, or any ticket, with a promise, expressed or implied, to give or bestow, or in any manner hold out the promise of gift or bestowal of any article or thing in consideration of the purchase of any person of any article or thing, is hereby declared to be engaged in a gift enterprise and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars."

Police several weeks ago began stopping the giving away of merchandise or items of one sort and another in which the winner was decided by drawing.

: Inducement by Bakers :

KANSAS CITY—This is one of the finest inducements to spend your vacation in West Yellowstone, Mont., we have ever heard.

The Bakers (George and A. F.) are opening the Rustic Theatre there on June 14.

"Any of the brethern going to Yellowstone can make the theatre their headquarters," George Baker says. "They'll be able at the theatre to tell where the best fishing is, quote hotel rates and point out accommodations. For friends and guests, we have an apartment at the theatre that will accommodate four, and if those in the trade will set up the proper bookings, we'll be happy to allocate (gratis) a period for them. The only requirements are that they usher one hour in the evening!"

Charles Baumgarner, projectionist at the Rustic for several years, will manage the house this summer. George Baker is going out about June 1 for a three-week stay.

Columbians Entertain At Variety Luncheon

KANSAS CITY—It was Columbia day at Variety Club Monday, and for the first time in the series of luncheons for Film-row firms, the guests provided the entertainment. Twelve lasses and nine lads (including Ben Marcus, who was host) attended as guests of the club.

Margie Zimmerman, biller, and Carl Bain, poster clerk, made up a duet that sang two numbers in excellent harmony. Then Charles Purduski, assistant shipper, played several accordion solos and very good.

Variety Club's party May 18 at clubrooms was the largest ever held there. Almost 200 attended, and the judgment was pretty unanimous: it was an A-1 affair. By remote control (and via Bev Miller) film people as far away as Chicago and San Francisco "enjoyed" the party.

Oakland Near Topeka Is Taken by Fox Midwest

TOPEKA, KAS.—The Oakland, suburban theatre on the north side of the river here, has been taken over by Fox Midwest Theatres. The house was only partially completed. Fox will finish and equip it. Seating about 500, the house will be opened in about a month. E. L. Bowers originally started the construction of the theatre.

Hollingsworth Responds to Defense Demands in Suit

LINCOLN—Every defendant in the Frank Hollingsworth suit for $234,000 against the majors and Fox-Midwest has answered, and the Hollingsworth side has made the more specific charges requested by the defense in the federal court case here.

Although no new demands have been made, it is expected that the anti-trust and collusion charges won't see airing in court until next fall or winter.

LINCOLN

REASONS why a motion picture critic should get married: 20th Century-Fox throws a premiere of "Lillian Russell" in Clinton, Ia., on May 15, and Paramount, less than 90 miles away, tosses one in Galesburg, Ill., May 21 for "Those Were the Days." Assumption being that a movie ed's paper expects him in the office some of the time, he has to send his frau to represent him some of the time. Exhibits A: Ken Clayton, Des Moines, sends Rene to Hollywood with his Des Moines Seventeener, and Barney Oldfield made a chaperone of Mrs. O for Bettie Cox, the Nebraska beauty queen winner, who went to Galesburg. Neither of those guys would be very safe in the chaperoning business anyway.

Clinton flash-backs: Earl Wingart, the 20th-Foxer who handled the Iowa arrangements, went to Wichita to visit his parents before returning to New York . . . A. H. Blank had a hotel room numbered 324, and had about that many people in it . . . M. E. McClain, the Central States district manager of Fremont, Neb., stayed close to Mrs. McClain all the time, and with a cutie like that, BOXOFFICE can't blame him . . . Gene Rich, Chi's BOXOFFICE typewritist, had a shirt which would do credit to Lincoln . . . Keith Wilson, Omaha World-Herald's critic, said he could hear Golden Spike flopping clear over in Clinton . . . Cesar Romero got bigger hands than the combined for Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan and Mary Healy, and also more gushing remarks from old ladies . . . Harry Martin, in white shoes and a straw hat with the temperature outside at 40 degrees below Memphis, was the most liberally goose-pimpled of those present . . . Harry Warren tried to hire Arleen Whelan for a cashier, because, he said, nobody would mind if she short-changed them . . . Earl Pomeroy, minus T. E. Mortensen, his old Minneapolis bunkie of "Virginia City" days, was up to his eyes in keeping Tom Sheaffer, of Acme Newspictures, in line. And Sheaffer was telling the same stories . . . Monroe Rubinger, a Warner spy, was indicted for "fifth column" activity, indictment being making him pay his own checks.

What's this dept.: R. W. Huffman, bundling family and Harvey Traylor in the old jallopy and doing an overnight to Pueblo for a visit, then an overnight back to work. Only trouble was he and the gang were so tired upon landing, they slept more than they visited . . . Howard Federer and Don Monroe, in Canada, presumably to fish, wrote home complaining about the poor bookie joint service . . . Carl Rose, stockholder in the York ball team, is said to be offering young Michael as a mascot for the club. Carl is getting tired of lugging bats and wants to slicker him in under false pretenses . . . Fay Honey giving a mushroom feed to a Jesse James outfit such as is headed by Sid Rose, a man who will even cheat at flinch . . . Gracie Allen, asking Ted Mendenhall, in Omaha, which one of those rockpiles between here and Hollywood was the one they called Para mount . . . Joe Jacobs got word he was going to have to sell a picture called "21 Days Together," just that many days after he and his new Mrs. were hitched . . . Russ Morgan, orchestra leader, says his wife's forthcoming offspring as of August will be a Conga dancer, already indulging in "one, two, three, kick" routines.

Ed Vaughan's girl friend is coming on for a visit . . . Barbara Livingston, taking asthma shots, has been having a bad time . . . Is Bill Youngclaus about to start something in Grand Island, or why all the real estate activity? . . . Present day repetition of Biblical events: Orson Welles, who shaved off his beard, lost his Delilah (Virginia Nicolson Welles) to another guy, Charles Lederer.

: North Up in Films :

LINCOLN—It's an old adage, not strange to the show business, that if one is unable to beat'em, one should join 'em.

Newest example is the case of Ted North jr., whose family for three generations was known in stock and tent repertoire in Nebraska and Kansas territory, holding out against the inroads of pictures through last season. Once the canvas was rammed in the barn in Wichita last fall, the Norths, Teds, senior and junior, and Mrs. Ted sr. decided to winter in Hollywood.

There they looked up Warner Baxter, onetime leading man with the stock company Norths. He cinched a screen test for Ted jr., and the kid was immediately placed on contract. Lew Schreiber, 20th-Fox caster, placed him in two bits, the last being with Shirley Temple in her finale, "Young People."

This week, young North got his break, the lead in "Bride Wore Crutches," when only two pictures and eight weeks on the lot. Thus, the Norths, referred to in the show business as the Barrymores of Topeka, have migrated from footlights to films, as have many of their contemporaries. A tent show is up for sale in Wichita.

Iowa-Nebraska ATO Has Word for Exhib Woes

ELDORA, IA.—A resolution expressing opposition to the production of narrow gauge film reduced from 35mm; to participation by producers in the "nickel-in-the-slot movies;" and to the further expansion by Advertising Accessories, Inc., as tending toward monopoly, was adopted by the board of directors of Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska, Inc., at its session on May 15.

Asks Exhibitors to Help Enforce Curfew Law

MINNEAPOLIS—Police Chief Frank P. Forestal has called upon local exhibitors to assist him in the enforcement of the curfew law prohibiting the presence of minors under 16 years of age in any showhouse after 9 p. m. unless accompanied by an adult.

DES MOINES

CURB service on BOXOFFICE items may be had under the Orpheum marquee, we discovered Sunday . . . Harry Gottlieb and Emil Franke were rocking on their heels and gossiping like a couple of old ladies . . . Harry's lost 25 pounds and will have to take a back seat for Stan Mayer now . . . Emil was bragging about "My Favorite Wife" grosses, but could dig up only 21 cents to cash a check . . . DD came running across the street from the R&T where she had been getting the sarong contest winner's pitcher took . . . The Burton Jerrells put the Iowa Flashes' stamp of approval on Emil's show by strolling in just then.

G. Ralph Branton has been making some quick trips back and forth between Omaha and DM, maybe for Golden Spike Days, maybe on business . . . Tri-States district managers convened here Wednesday to yah-yah on what to do about the summer slump and the war influence . . . BOXOFFICE & Co. finally visited the Gilly Wells' in their home setting and find the joint even more interesting than anyone said . . . Gilly wouldn't play the piano for us, but we did look over some of his own compositions which were mostly of the mother-lore variety.

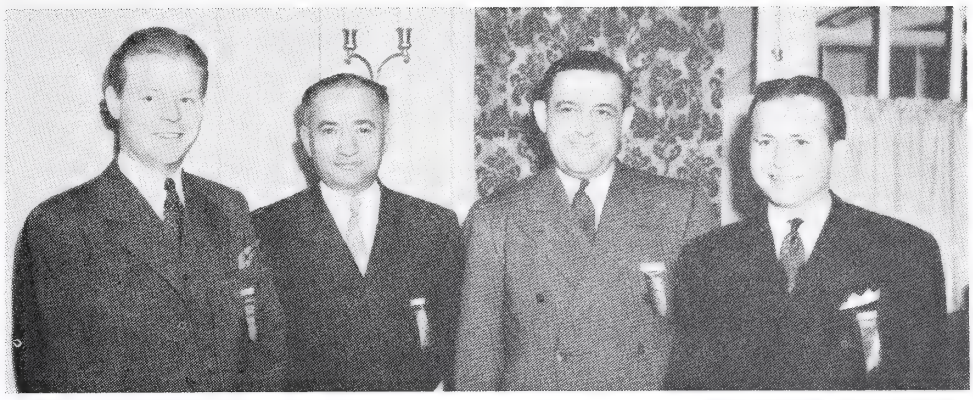
Now we know why there is so little clock-watching among Chick Friedman's kids at National Screen . . . They'd have to strain their eyes too much to see that little bitty green kitchen clock which is supposed to serve the purpose up there . . . We forgot to tell you about the smart chartreuse sailor (hat) and blouse to match worn by Don West's Faye at Clinton . . . Art Anderson should be glad to know that his name was taken by a bunch of Filmrowers the other evening, but not in vain.

If Gabby Hartnett's Chicago Cubs aren't leading the league by June 15, Gabby's gonna hear about it from Art Anderson and Don West. Art and Don are scheduled to visit the Windy City June 14, 15 and 16 for the Warner sales convention and they're expecting to see a winning ball club in action while they're there . . . Wonder where Eddie Dunn located the applause meter for the sarong contest at his Paramount. When last reported he had advertised the applause meter as the judge and then couldn't find one.

Cuthbert Smith, who last month counted himself out of the pix biz, will be counting himself back in next month . . . He says it's a French film with Charles Boyer this time, but not obtained through anybody on the Row . . . Harry Hiersteiner's getting his feet wet in the foreign picture setup, too . . . He's tossing off a double thrill program at his Family Theatre—"Return of the Frog" and "The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," both from the sector where "boom" biz is bad biz, these days.

When we asked those Clinton bellhops who was rating the red plush davenport and they said it was for Donald, we didn't know we'd be sitting on it discussing mutual acquaintances with Don Ameche while & Co. mixed us all a very foul drink. Milt Howe came in at 7 o'clock all set for the 6:15 dinner we were to attend . . . Don discovered a thread on Milt's trouser leg and carefully removed it . . . At dinner, Mrs. Stan Mayer got Ameche to autograph the lining of that famous red purse of hers, but Stan made her let him ask Mary Healy.

If Lionel Wasson starts spouting Dickens and quoting Dostoevsky, fellas, don't be alarmed . . . he's just trying to show off his latest hobby, the Harvard Classics . . . Lionel is reading all five feet of the book shelf and outlining it as he goes along . . . to date, he's finished two and one-half inches . . . he plans to complete the chore in about three years, and should be back to normal by that time, so just don't let on, folks (have you come to "Vanity, vanity, thy name is woman" yet, Lionel?).



*Columbia's Jack Thoma was due in from Chicago last week to set up a little artillery for that Olivier-Leigh "*21 Days" number, but with the advance barrage Emil Franke's laying down in favor of the old British flickie, Thoma was likely too pressed to find spots that haven't heard plenty about it already . . . We won't compete with Wendell Willkie, who was talking at the Shrine, but we'll bet we had more listeners than that "Saint" pic had lookers at the Little Fox Theatre Friday . . . Saturday the house was turned over to the 20*th Century-Fox outfit to see their own opus, "Lillian Russell," all two hours and* 20 minutes of it.

In view of the closing lines of "Edison, the Man," Tri-States was making a bid for attendance by R&T editorial writers at a Monday screening . . . The M-G-M sequel to Mickey Rooney closes with some choice comments anent the destructive as well as constructive power of science, they tell us . . . We were horrified when Mitzi requested $1.25 for a Pinocchio costume so she could be a fairy in her dancing recital . . . hump! We should PAY for publicity stuff like that . . . we thought it was always handed out free by p.a.s!

We ran into Les Knapp pacing down Fifth Ave. (in DM), far from his Iowa Film stamping ground . . . Raven-haired Jeri Renaud, 23, crossed up Tri-States' unofficial judges at the Paramount's midnight sarong contest and won on the strength of audience cheers. Helen Boyd, 16, was second, and Peggy Owen, 16, the managerial choice, wound up in third.

Romance is budding all over National Screen, from the front office back . . . Chick Friedman is still fighting off those elopement rumors, but have you seen that pretty, dark-haired protege of Uncle Sam in Omaha? . . . Those don't come with your income tax blanks, Chick . . . Patricia Goodenough is in the market for a clergyman who will be free to have the words repeated after him June 1 and Clara Crawford has been making rash pacts with her boy friend . . . which doesn't necessarily refer to the one scheduled to be carried out next September.

Joe Fieldman has joined the National Screen sales force since Benny Lass got the St. Louis Blues . . . Joe's an old hand at theatre business in Iowa, though his most recent connection has been with the Minneapolis branch of the same firm . . . With Friedman, Greenland and Fieldman getting calls, the telephone operator is having trouble enough without trying to decipher those postcards in code that Grace Simons has been getting . . . Confidentially, Grace has to guess at the translations of half of them herself.

: Finds Cousin in Film :

DES MOINES—Howard Dunn, local Metro office manager, has found his long lost cousin in an M-G-M picture.

Several weeks ago, Dunn saw "Congo Maisie" at a screening and noted that there was a Tom Fadden listed in the cast. Dunn remembered that during his childhood at Jamaica, Ia., he had played with a cousin from Bayard, Ia., eight miles away, named Tom Fadden.

After seeing the name in the film credit, Dunn contacted the M-G-M offices in Hollywood to learn Fadden's address. Correspondence revealed that the Hollywood Tom Fadden is the same one who used to live in Bayard. He has been doing stage work and became a motion picture performer last July.

"Tom always was saying that he intended to be an actor," Dunn recalls. "Almost everyone believed he was talking like a lot of kids that age do."

....AW, SHUCKS!.....

From the Tall Corn—By KEN and RENE CLAYTON

ANYONE can go to a premiere and lose a shirt . . . It takes concentration to forget a set of brogans. That's just what BOXOFFICE did (she packed just after she'd dined with Don Ameche) at the "Lillian Russell" celebration in Clinton, Ia. If Harold Barnes of the Capitol and Jerry Greenabaum at the Rialto want to stay in our good graces, they'll call the Lafayette Hotel pronto and have those brown six-and-a-half-quads (that's worse than making a woman tell her age) from Room 202 shipped back to somebody who can wear 'em.

BOXOFFICE not only lost her shoes (2), but she didn't find Joe Gerbrach, the film, fishing and flying gent from Ames. They tell us Joe was at Clinton, though, and we're apologizing for not spotting him in the 45,000.

We haven't discovered whether it is the Strand or the Iowa Theatre at Creston that helps rid the city of tin cans with an annual tin can matinee. Free ducats are dished out to the kids who collect cans by sack, box or bundle, we hear.

Without having met her, BOXOFFICE & Co. are enlisting in the rapidly increasing ranks of the Gladys Pierce fans on Filmrow. Notes like the one she sent from her Story Theatre in Story City, do much toward making the task of nosing around in other people's business a pleasure instead of a chore.

'S happened to us again . . . being amazed by the way everybuddy in the flicker biz knows everybuddy else in the flicker biz, we mean. Latest to emphasize that hi palishness was L. J. Wegner, kingpin of the Palace in Burlington, Ia. It was all right for him to be shaking hands with all of Clinton—he used to be at the Capitol there. But it turns out DM is his beat, too. He got his start under Art Stolte at the Paramount in the Capital City.

Betcha Toby Stewart over at Shenandoah's Mayfair planked out a dime for a Sunday Register last Sunday. That was his gal Kay modeling a blue-and-white bathing suit on the color cover of the magazine section.

Don't expect to see W. R. Franke of Humboldt along the Row. Spring means Boy Scouts and hikes for the Humota's "Father Flanagan."

"Doc" Twedt has come out from behind the brush, we hear . . . he's whacked off those "Virginia City" whiskers and says he feels almost nude . . . Mrs. Twedt was with "Doc" and is being reported on very favorably all along the Row . . . "There is a Charmin' gal," everybody declares . . . The Twedts operate the Lido in Manly.

The Rio—no it's the Wall Lake—we're sorry, it's the Rio again. We'll start over . . . L. G. Ballard sold the Rio at Wall Lake to Charlie Jacobson who made it the Wall Lake at Wall Lake who sold it back to Ballard who changed it back to the Rio again . . . got it all straight now? And all this happened just since February.

Jack Bauma of the Rialto of Pocahontas was on the Row in a very smart hat band—our informant didn't say so, but we assume Jack was also wearing the hat and other articles of dress.

Verne Hagemann of the Bremer and Waverly theatres in Waverly cannot double for the thin man.

If you've ever wondered what's become of Merrill Hoops who used to run the State at State Center (now gee-hawed by Roy Hill), you'll find him running a cafe in the same town.

Hal Schroeder of Lake View at Lake View dashed in and out . . . Howard Pollard (called Dempsey) of the Reinbeck at Reinbeck and the Dows at Dows was in and is gonna sell one or the other but we don't know which.

That handsome young Mr. Hunerberg of the Clark at Clarksville, also the Princess at Parkersburg, was spotted by every girl on the Row and duly reported FIRST by everyone we talked to! SOME impression!

Warm Weather a Spur to Cooling Installations

KANSAS CITY—Volume of modernization work continues to grow with the approach of summer. Right now air conditioning installations are increasing.

The Cozy, Chetopa, Kas., operated by Robert Martin, is installing a new 20,000 cubic foot washed air plant, while Mrs. R. S. Booth is installing a similar plant in her Booth at Rich Hill, Mo.

: Says It in Poetry :

KANSAS CITY—While most exhibitors make their troubles articulate, there comes via K. K. King, Commonwealth Theatres manager at Searcy, Ark., this plaintive poem by a projectionist.

Each day and night up the stairs I go
To my booth to project a show;
The films I unreel, one by one,
Trying to give the customers fun.

The first reel is good, the music is grand;
The audience laughs to beat the band.
But then the second—it's poor indeed,
They yell, "A new operator's what we need."

Though the story is bad, projection is fine,
But the operator is to blame every time.
If the picture stops, they say it's his fault—
They'd like to see him in a film vault.

The film of course he didn't make,
Whatever is given him he must take,
And though the film itself is to blame,
He catches h—— just the same.

Pretty sad.

Twin Cities to Get "Pinocchio" Flat

MINNEAPOLIS—RKO here has relented from its decision not to sell "Pinocchio" flat to Twin City independent exhibitors who are dead set against percentage.

It now is offering the Disney feature to these exhibitors either flat or on percentage.

Outside of the Twin Cities all "Pinocchio" deals were made on percentage, the split being 40 per cent.

UA and Metro Exchanges Shuffle Sales Staff

MINNEAPOLIS—Two local exchanges announced changes in their sales' staffs this week.

United Artists appointed Bill Crystal, former Grand National sales' manager, to its sales' staff to succeed Ernie Lund, who resigned. He will cover North Dakota.

Jack Kelly has been transferred from Chicago by M-G-M to succeed the veteran Allan Clatworthy. The latter is going into another line of business.

C. W. Allen to Omaha as RKO Exchange Manager

OMAHA—C. W. Allen is the new manager of the RKO exchange here, having been transferred from Dallas. He replaces Russell Eggner, who returned to Minneapolis in the sales department.

Allen announced Normal Nielsen, RKO booker, would be moved to the sales force, taking the south Platte territory. Dave Kimmel of the Chicago office takes Norm's place at the booker's desk.

Sherrill to Des Moines As Metro Head Booker

KANSAS CITY—W. W. Sherrill, booker for Metro here two years, has been transferred to the Des Moines exchange as head booker. Sheldon "Bud" Shumow, formerly in Des Moines as booker, comes here. Shumow was here with Warner Bros. about two years ago as availability clerk.

The booking staff at Metro now consists of Walt Lambader, W. W. Walker, Leonard Abrams and Shumow.

Defense Has Until June 11 To Answer Cassil Charge

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Defendants in the suit of Frank Cassil of the Rialto here against major distributors and the Dubinsky Bros. circuit, have been given until June 11 to file an answer to charges of anti-trust violations.

Herman Buys in New Hampton

NEW HAMPTON, IA.—Harry Herman, who has taken over the Firemens Theatre here, is installing RCA sound. House seats 600.

Neely Bill Discussion Occupies AMPTO

PITTSBURGH—Report of the Neely bill hearings highlighted a membership meeting of the AMPTO of W. Pa. at exhibitor headquarters Monday afternoon. M. A. Rosenberg and Fred J. Herrington, who attended a national Allied directors' meeting at Washington, D. C., discussed those sessions and the anti-compulsory block booking hearings.

Rosenberg stated exhibitors throughout the country are fighting the "nickel-in-the-slot machine-movies," which will make an appearance at an early date. He told of the volume of this circulation and the approximate allocation of machines for various large cities, and discussed the "defense" as proposed and already enacted in some communities.

Theatre grosses generally are off from 25 per cent to 33 1/3 per cent, as compared with last year's grosses at this time, it was determined from reports of members of the national Allied directors, Rosenberg stated.

Other subjects were discussed at the Washington meeting but most of the time was devoted to the Neely bill, both Rosenberg and Herrington reported.

Witnesses at the Neely bill hearings were identified by Herrington and he amplified numerous statements that went into the record, especially praising the ability of Abram F. Myers, Allied chief.

Evening Horse Racing Is Dealing Blow to Trade

DETROIT—Exhibitors felt the first effects of a new form of competition this week, when Twilight Horse Racing started at the Michigan State Fair Grounds. Opening May 18, the season will run daily until July 6. Races start at 4:30 p. m., just in time to catch the early evening business, and kill the early evening theatre trade.

Race patrons rarely go on to see a show in the evening, according to informal surveys made of public patronage habits, and several exhibitors have already reported their steady patrons going to the races instead.

Two free nights for ladies, on Tuesday and Friday, are drawing the feminine patrons.

Repair Canton Grand

CANTON—The Grand, oldest of Canton's ten theatres, is undergoing much needed repairs. The only legit theatre here, it will reopen mid-September with stock burlesque.

Watch Prints of Itinerants

COLUMBUS—Members of the ITO of Ohio will keep a close watch on films used by itinerant operators this summer to prevent the use of prints not passed by Ohio censors.

Signs Frances Langford

HOLLYWOOD—Voco Productions has signed Frances Langford to a one-year acting ticket.

Dual Policy Wave Over Flint As Agreement Is Broken

DETROIT—Collapse of a gentlemen's agreement against dual bills, except for one change a week, at Flint, has resulted in a wave of duals and cut prices in Michigan's second largest motor city. Admissions have gone down generally, and, BOXOFFICE is informed, all but one or two houses now operate on a dual bill policy, as a result of the breakdown of the single bill agreement several weeks ago.

Typical case is that of a first-run house showing Sunday matinees for a quarter, considered far below normal for this size of town. Three features for 15 cents have also been reported.

The one outstanding exception, among downtown houses, appears to be Associated Theatres' Rialto, managed by Maxie Gealer, which has gone to vaudeville plus a single bill, without dropping prices. The house plays last run on "Main Street," with no clear product available, according to Harold H. Smilay of Associated, but is able to maintain its following by offering outstanding vaudeville attractions, on a policy generally similar to that of the Colonial in Detroit.

In a statement to BOXOFFICE criticizing the dual bill idea, Smilay said, "Exhibitors have only themselves to blame. The Flint situation ought to be changed. The exhibitors are only cutting their own throats.

"They are not giving the public what it wants by either cutting prices or giving more pictures. People, aside from a few, are not really interested in a four or five-hour show. It cheapens the shows, and people just don't patronize theatres."

Awarded $15,000 in Action Involving Canceled Lease

PITTSBURGH—Izzy Hirst, New York and Philadelphia theatre operator, won a $15,000 judgment in common pleas court here for damages allegedly resulting from a canceled lease on the old Variety which was torn down in 1936. The judgment was entered against E. D. Stair, who owned the theatre and who leased it to Hirst from January, 1936, to May, 1937.

The St. Patrick's Day flood of 1936 damaged the auditorium and interrupted the shows and in September of that year Stair began razing the building. Stair argued that Hirst abandoned the lease after the flood, while Hirst claimed he had planned to reopen the theatre in the fall.

Hepinger Is Improving Orpheum in Clarion

CLARION, PA.—An extensive program of improvements is in progress at the Orpheum for Lewis V. Hepinger. The entire auditorium and foyer will be redecorated and repainted; the seating arrangement will be changed to provide two side aisles, and seats will be placed on a newly-sloped floor. A ladies' powder room has been completed in the foyer and additional alterations will be made in the near future.

July 4 Opening

EBENSBURG, PA.—The new Rivoli, under construction here for Cambria Theatres, Inc., will be opened July 4, R. Allison, general manager, announces. Members of the trade will be invited to attend the holiday event.

Metro's traveling auditor, Jay Zimmerman, is staying a few weeks at the local office . . . Milt Jacobs, who has been on the sick list for some time, is reported coming along nicely.

Substitute Edward Killy

HOLLYWOOD—Edward Killy has replaced David Howard as director on "Stage to Chino," a George O'Brien western for RKO. Howard bowed out because of illness.

Milt Harris Joining Production Company

CLEVELAND—Milton Harris has severed a six-year connection as local publicity director for Loew's Theatres to become associated with a new producing company on the west coast.

The new company includes a group of radio and screen stars who will make their own pictures to be distributed through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and United Artists. It consists of Jack Benny, Fredric March, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels, Jack Pearl, Dorothy Lamour and Fred Allen.

Production, according to Harris, is to start in June. Until that time, Harris will remain in Cleveland to handle publicity for the Hanna Theatre, now playing foreign pictures as a summer policy.

Charles Raymond, Loew district manager, has not yet appointed a successor to Harris. In the meantime, Charles C. Deardourff, M-G-M exploiteer, is handling Loew publicity.

The Boys Come and Go as Conventions Get Going

CLEVELAND—The convention trail is on in earnest.

The boys from Universal are back from Atlantic City. United Artists personnel have returned from New York. M-G-M's branch manager, Frank Drew, and his salesmen, Jack Sogg, Eddie Brauer and "Buck" Stoner, left last Sunday to be present when the roll was called on Monday in Washington, D. C. And on Saturday, George Lefko, RKO branch manager, accompanied by Arthur Goldsmith and Joe Lefko, departed for New York to get first hand information on their company's new product plans.

Harry Goldstein, Paramount district manager, and Duke Clark, branch manager, are in California for their convention. Twentieth Century-Fox already has held its gathering in Chicago, so we have to hear from only Columbia and Warner Bros.

After School Matinee Tried by UDT House

DETROIT—Continuing a recent experimental policy of special matinees directed toward specific groups, such as religious groups, housewives, and children, United Detroit circuit staged a special Friday matinee with "Alice In Wonderland." Program was timed to open after schools in the neighborhood closed.

Gets Three Donats

CLEVELAND—Harry Lande, head of Independent Film Service, has acquired three features starring Robert Donat for distribution in Ohio and Kentucky. They are "Men of Tomorrow," "Cash," with Wendy Barrie, and "Over Night," directed by Rowland V. Lee. All three are Hoffberg productions.

Va., exhibitor, who will soon open a new outdoor swimming pool there, says he will have his auto trailer handy to be used as a locker room for his friends in the trade when they wish to cool off in the pool.*

The great industries of the local area are geared to help the nation arm itself under President Roosevelt's proposed "billions" defense program. "Educational orders" already have been received by the strategic war industries. Upwards of 40 per cent of the defense expenditure is expected to come to this district. Meanwhile, it seems that most everybody is suffering "the war jitters." Depressed theatre grosses are general in the area, with both exhibitors and distributors worried over prospects for the summer season. New film contracts are few and far between, but those already filed call for "practically the same deal as last year's" or increases.

George Elmo, Paramount sales representative, who is in attendance at the company's annual convention in Los Angeles, has been a member of the 100 *per cent club three times in five years. Dave Kimelman, branch manager, and Elmo departed for California early this week . . . Leonard Haughton has signed for the England encyclopedia and book deal for the Orpheum, Franklin . . . Leo G. GEORGE BECKER, who has been associated with Jack O'Connell in Toledo since he severed his connections with the local Columbia exchange, is back in town. This time he is hanging his hat in the RKO office where he has been appointed to the sales force succeeding Otto Braeunig, who has resumed his old post as office manager . . . Dan Stearns of the Willoby Theatre, Willoughby, has contracted for the franchise to build and operate drive-in theatres in the Toledo territory. He has two locations now under advisements and plans to get going as soon as these deals are concluded. Stearns has also taken an option on the Youngstown-Mansfield-Canton territory for drive-ins.

Stuart Cagney, manager of the Imperial, and Douglas George, manager of the Windamere, took Louis Swee, Knickerbocker manager, out to the University Heights Golf Club one day last week to give him a few lessons in the art of striking the white ball, but before the afternoon was over, it was Swee who was given the lessons and Cagney and George who had turned pupils . . . Joe Lissauer, associated with W. N. Skirball, is another golf enthusiast, but he likes the hard courses.

E. A. Ballou, once affiliated with the Oak, Marion, will operate a new drive-in theatre now under construction on Route 8 near Uniontown. Co-operative Theatres of Ohio has contracted to handle the booking of this house as well as that of another drive-in to be built between Toledo and Fremont by Bernard A. Cousino, who used to present 16mm shows in parks throughout the territory.

Jack Shea held a regional meeting of managers of Shea theatres here last Wednesday . . . The Roxy here held "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" second week . . . RKO's "My Favorite Wife" was the big popular favorite of all first run showings last week with the result the picture was held for a second week at Warner's Hippodrome.

Spotted along Filmrow during the week were: Ed Hiehle, general manager of the Shea circuit in Zanesville; Charles Anderson, owner of the Alpine circuit, and his booker, Frank Wetzel; Frank Roberts, manager of the Rex, Steubenville, and George Plank of Marion . . . Stanley Kositsky, Vitagraph office manager, is in New York on a vacation, and Booker Tommy Felice has reported back for duty after his vacation.

Charles C. Deardourff, M-G-M exploiteer, was called to New York to do his bit in the advertising campaign on "Edison, the Man" which opened simultaneously in six houses in the Oranges . . . Irving Fields has closed his Opera House, Burton, for the summer, to devote his time to a circuit of outdoor shows . . . Bill McManus, M-G-M biller, postcards members of the office force from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he is paying his mother a visit.

Long-Run Trend Is A Reassuring One

DETROIT—Despite the summer slump, exhibitors have plenty of ground for renewed confidence for the immediate future in figures of Detroit's long-run trend toward increased growth, compiled by the Detroit board of commerce. Figures currently available show that as of 1937 (the last year available on employment figures), 406,882 people earned wages in Detroit, compared with 293,135 in 1929. Total wages were $648,515,254 in 1937, and $511,-474,257 in 1929.

General business conditions since 1933, the depression year, show plenty of optimistic signs, indicating a sound basis for the new theatres being erected here in such profusion. Typical examples are:

	1933	1939
Savings Deposits	$112,437,402	$273,969,192
Automobiles (in county)	394,089	593,317
Residential building	1,262,130	44,780,982
Population	1,495,000	1,675,000

"Command" Doing Well in First Ohio Engagements

CLEVELAND—"Dark Command" played to excellent business in its first Ohio runs, according to Nat Lefton, Republic franchise owner. In Cincinnati, business was considerably above average at the Shubert, and at the State, Springfield, the boxoffice registered "excellent." It also opened big at the Colonial Dayton, where it is now playing, according to official reports.

Both Springfield and Dayton put on extensive campaigns, both cities claiming to be the home town of the film's author, W. R. Burnett. Springfield newspapers played up the angle Burnett was born in their town and was the grandson of a former mayor of Springfield. Dayton also claimed him as her son, basing the claim on the fact that Burnett lived in Dayton at one time.

Al Gregg, publicity director for Republic, was on hand to help with the campaigns.

"Dark Command" opens its local engagement at the RKO Palace May 31.

London Circuit Program Bringing Improvements

DETROIT—Double expansion program was disclosed by the Burton London circuit, for the Courtesy and the Beacon. At the Courtesy, some $10,000 is to be spent on new marquee, seating, carpeting, and cooling system. Most contracts have not yet been awarded.

The Beacon, headquarters house of the circuit, is to have a 300-car parking lot at the angle turn of the Grand Blvd.

Installs New Lamps

CLEVELAND—Hyman Kaplan, owner of the Southern, has installed new high intensity projection lamps and an electrifier. Installation was made by Leroy Langford of Oliver Theatre Supply Co.

Chester Brown, who recently closed the Latin Theatre, doesn't think he'll return to show business . . . David W. Leach is forming the Abbey Amusement Company with offices in the Union Guardian Bldg.

Hoyt E. Morris had to pitch the first ball for the Softball League sponsored by Detroit Optimists . . . Roy Brosius, manager of Bill Schulte's Bagley, lost his mother last Friday.

Harry H. Platt, Oriel Freer's boss, is the new director of the Detroit Bar Ass'n . . . Bill Flemion, Variety welfare chairman, is booking free shows at Sigma Gamma Hospital, Children's Hospital, Ford Hospital's Tubercular Ward, German Protestant Orphanage, and Children's Protestant Home.

Mac Krim's idea of a light lunch is an apple . . . Eddie Heiber, flanked by Jack Stewart, Jack Susami, Bert Tighe, and Gene Alexander, is off to the Chicago convention . . . Pete Simon has decided he's not a circuit operator . . . Charlie Collins says Eddie Cantor is still one ahead—his latest is Caroline Margaret, his fourth girl—eight and a quarter pounds.

Roger Kennedy, IA business agent, is having a time getting used to the new bifocals . . . Roy Miller reports several new members in the theatre managers' union . . . Bill Carlson was off to Ohio on a Masonic pilgrimage.

Frank J. Downey, M-G-M branch manager, arranged a special screening Tuesday evening at the film exchange projection room for civic and patriotic leaders, on "The Flag Speaks," new Metro patriotic short. As an added attraction, a private showing of "Edison, the Man" also was arranged.

That "important announcement" of Harold (Sandy) Sandelman's at M-G-M coming in September is to be a blessed event, we understand.

Phil Monsky, new UA salesman here transferred from Omaha, didn't lose much time in renewing his BOXOFFICE subscription for this area while at the UA convention in Chicago.

WOLVERINE DOINGS:

Albert Worthing of the Boyne, Boyne City, went fishing, came back with a fistful of mushrooms.

Kalkaska, now theatreless, is to have a new house. Parties undisclosed have taken an option on a site for a theatre building . . . F. A. Graham is planning to sell the Lyric, Evart.

Jack Thompson, Paramount salesman, wants to sell his dog to some salesman. Guarantees it'll guard any salesman's wife while he's out of town . . . Albert W. Heuser, manager of Fred DeLodder's Aloma in Grosse Pointe, proudly showed us a picture of himself in front of the Empire on lower Woodward Avenue, which he managed in 1916.

Jim Olson of Grayling flew down to Washington in his own plane . . . A. F. Affelt of the Iosco at Oscoda expects to close on account of losing his lease.

Mrs. Linton, prominent Lansing clubwoman, and her daughter were guests of Floyd Chrysler, M-G-M salesman, at the Saturday Frolic . . . Walter Kelly of the Rogers and Strand at Rogers City is back from California.

D. H. DeRosia, partner with E. W. Kenrick in the State at Onaway who's been away on a three-month vacation for his health, will take three more to recuperate . . . Charles Galster, Petoskey exhibitor, has two pointers that he's setting up to challenge Jack Thompson's two setters in a field test.

John Vallier is remodeling the theatre at St. Ignace.

Mike J. Chargot has started a dish giveaway at his newly-acquired Esquire in Grosse Pointe.

J. Ollie Brooks, Butterfield, was upstate, maybe to get away from the noise during the rebuilding of the circuit offices.

Harry Hobolth is conducting a contest to name his new 600 seater at Davison.

Roy Campbell, manager of Walter Shafer's Shafer at Garden City, received a birthday cake and a new desk set from the house staff . . . Edna Stevens, secretary to Wesson Dickinson, is another gal with a swell memory.

Ruth Chatterton was leading lady in Shaw's "Pygmalion," produced at the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre, Ann Arbor, all last week . . . Louis Calhern, lately the villain for Charlie McCarthy, also was in the play.

A. Milo (Bring 'Em Back) DeHaven, manager of the Grand in Highland Park, who has been in poor health, left for a checkup at the Mayo Clinic . . . Pearl Sprott, Allied office manager, is holding a regional meeting at Muskegon to enlist new members.

E. K. Lane is closing the Our at Sparta on August 1. He's building a new house . . . Associated Theatres' new Farmington at Farmington will be ready about July 1.

Joseph Stoia, of the Midway and Circle in Dearborn, has an eight-pound son, born last Monday.

Detroiters in Hollywood—

"Adult Only" Films Are Tied With Merchants

DETROIT—Trend toward booking of sophisticated films, "for adults only," received marked impetus when two leading neighborhood houses, the Harper and the Westown, both operated by Wisper and Wetsman circuit, booked "Blame It on Love," to play next Tuesday and Thursday respectively.

Film is slated for two special matinees only, with free admission for "every homemaker." Tickets are being distributed by some 20 neighborhood merchants.

PDC Officials Report That Circuits Book "Outsider"

CLEVELAND—Producers Distributing Corp., formerly known as Big Feature Rights Exchanges, announces "The Outsider" has been booked by all major theatre circuits in the territory including Loew's, Warner's, Schine and Shea. It opens here at the Circle, May 30.

Bernard Rubin of PDC announces "I Take This Oath," with Gordon Jones and Joyce Compton, is completed, and that "Hold That Woman," with James Dunn and Frances Gifford, is now in production.

Anna Neagle to Cleveland With "Irene" Three Days

CLEVELAND—Cleveland has been selected as the only northern Ohio city on the personal appearance tour of Anna Neagle. She will appear on the stage of Warner's Hippodrome for three days during the showing of "Irene," starting June 15.

Herbert Wilcox, director, will accompany the star who is scheduled to make the Statler Hotel her local headquarters. Harry Reiner of the RKO publicity department has been assigned the task of making up Miss Neagle's social program.

Booth Fire Destroys Two Reels of "Swanee River"

YOUNGSTOWN—Two reels of "Swanee River" were destroyed, with a $300 loss, when fire broke out in the projection room of the Roxy at nearby Canfield. Volunteer firemen quickly put out the blaze, which was confined to the concrete walled booth.

William Hasbrouck, the projectionist, said the picture was about half run when it caught fire. Aided by technicians, Hasbrouck repaired the machines and the program resumed after a four-hour delay.

Gilhula Is City Manager For Shea in Ashtabula

CAMBRIDGE, OHIO—Dan J. Gilhula, manager of the State and Ohio theatres here, has been named manager of four Shea houses at Ashtabula. He assumes his new post June 2.

Gilhula came here as manager of the Court and Ohio theatres and during his regime the State was built. He managed the local Shea houses for seven years and his assignment to Ashtabula is a promotion.

30-Car Drive-In Near Youngstown Opened

YOUNGSTOWN—Youngstown district's first drive-in theatre, the Gordon, is now operating. It is located just north of the city limits and can accommodate approximately 300 cars.

The operator is Gordon W. Vail. New programs on Wednesday and Sunday start at 9 p. m.

"Primrose Path" did very well in its local engagements, with the expanded announcement that the picture has been a boxoffice hit all through the territory . . . Nat Holt, RKO Great Lakes division manager, has booked Orrin Tucker into the Palace for the week of June 8. While the Palace policy over the summer will be straight pictures, Holt plans to spot in stage shows occasionally.

Hank Harold, onetime ad artist in Cleveland for Warner Bros., is now advertising artist for the Chakeres circuit with headquarters in Springfield . . . Nat L. Lefton, Variety Club chief barker, announced May 27 as the date for the final Monday Night stag of the season . . . Rudy Norton, Republic salesman, is back in circulation after a six-week battle with an ulcer of the eye. He is wearing a "Floyd Gibbons" for the time being, but says that even with one eye he isn't missing anything . . . Anne Vickers, secretary to M-G-M's branch manager, Frank Drew, entertained the girls of the exchange with a dinner at her home last week.

Hope Kramer, daughter of Abe Kramer of Associated circuit, who recently announced her engagement to Jack Guren of Cleveland and Akron, will be married on May 26. They will honeymoon in Hawaii . . . "The Outsider," PDC production booked to play the Warner, Loew, Schine and Shea circuits in this territory, makes its Cleveland debut at the Circle, May 30. It is also bought for the Highland, Akron; Falls, Cuyahoga Falls, and in Cleveland for John Urbansky's Lorain-Fulton, Jennings and Rialto theatres.

Associated circuit has made a shift of managers. Bert Diener, recently returned from a year's vacation in California, succeeds Ben Stahl as manager of the Liberty. M. M. Blaettner goes from the Jewel to the Heights and Jimmy Schrake takes over at the Jewel . . . Over at the Paul Gusdanovic circuit, Al Ochs has resigned as manager of the LaSalle to manage the Olympia. Victor Sheldon becomes manager of the LaSalle . . . Fred Schram has closed his Milan Theatre for the summer and is now associated with Victor Schram in a theatre promotion plan.

Variety Club's first Father-Son evening was a big success. Over 100 attended the dinner and Eddie Johnson and Louis Gross, in charge of the evening, presented each son with a Bob Feller autographed baseball. Rollie Hemsley, as guest of honor, added his John Hancock to the balls much to the delight of the sons. Bruce Gregg, son of Republic's publicity director, Al Gregg, and not quite three years old, was the youngest guest present, with Leo Jones' Dickey a close runner-up.

The Variety Club's grand opening did not come off as per schedule. Reason was that the job of redecorating its enlarged quarters was not completed. So the big day has been postponed until June 1, according to Chief Barker Nat Lefton and the house committee chairman, Frank Drew.

George Young, manager of the Roxy, which went to a straight film policy for the summer last week with "Goose Step," Ohio's name for "Hitler—Beast of Berlin," as the opening attraction, held the picture over a second week. This will be followed by "Club de Femmes." Whether foreign pictures will become the order of the day during the summer depends upon Mr. and Mrs. Paying Public.

George W. Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Ass'n, says that the proposed city curfew law, designating the ages at which children will not be permitted in places of amusement, is not by any means a dead issue. The bill is sleeping but it might wake up any time and Erdmann urges exhibitors to keep on the lookout for any activity in its behalf.

Gertrude Welsh and Mae Gibbon, both of the Universal secretarial staff, were called home on account of the death of their fathers . . . Dorothy Goodman, whose husband, Mort Goodman, is with Warner's on the coast, is here with their two-year-old son visiting her parents.

Harry Barlow and H. C. Waggoner finally got their St. Clairsville Theatre at St. Clairsville open. Delayed deliveries postponed their originally announced opening date.

Nate Schultz will not build that 700-seat de luxe theatre in Barberton after all. Instead of extending his Barberton interests, Schultz is bowing out of the Barberton picture, having sold his Pastime there to M. Makinson who now owns and operates all of the Barberton houses. The property Schultz bought for theatre purposes will be used for a business block.

Bert Diener, formerly with the Associated circuit, has returned from an 11-month vacation on the west coast . . . George Hanpert, Columbia auditor, was an exchange visitor . . . J. A. Beidler of Toledo, who has been ill for several weeks, is much improved, according to his son, J. A. jr., who was in town last week . . . Sorry to report Bert Botzum, veteran Akron-Canton theatre owner, is still confined to his bed with a heart attack.

Little Jack Little was well liked by the younger set . . . Ray Gorrell was backstage directing operations . . . Sol Berns busy booking special acts and greeting the artists.

Freddie Bernard and Eve Gladstone of the Harper put on a nice show . . . Joe LaRose off in the background when all those plugs for the Harper went over. Owner Frank Wetsman took the evening quietly.

John Barton (he's Jeeter Lester of "Tobacco Road" at the Cass) made a speech and did a bit from the play . . . Johnny Pival, manager of Ben Cohn's Senate, saw that his house got proper credit for his protege, Albert . . . Jack King of WJR helped with emceeing and entertaining.

Among many seen on the sidelines: Dave Flayer's brother from the court house, plenty of judges, Mike Chargot, Max Blumenthal, Irving Belinsky, Phil Kaplan, and their respective ladies.

Harris Companies Effect Shifts and Promotions

PITTSBURGH—Harris Amusement companies announce the following shifts and promotions in personnel:

Morty Henderson, manager of the William Penn, north side, is now manager of the Perry; Harry Segal, of the Family, east end, replaces Henderson at the William Penn; Henry Miller of the Beechview has been advanced to the Family; John P. Harris, son of Frank J. Harris, has been shifted from the Newsreel Palace, downtown, to the Beechview; Robert Keller, formerly of the Alvin staff who has been circuit relief manager, has been Special Session Completes Appropriations in Pa.

HARRISBURG — Extraordinary session of the general assembly has adjourned after appropriating $71,850,000 for relief and adopting every other recommendation of Gov. Arthur H. James.

House bill No. 25, introduced by F. Falkenstein of Philadelphia, which provided for the conducting of and legalizing lotteries by the state, died in the committee on ways and means.

Committee on rules took no action on house resolution No. 2, introduced by Representative Christler, which would have authorized the department of military affairs to install heating and air-conditioning systems at the Hunt Armory, Pittsburgh, so that the building, which seats 15,000, could be used as a convention hall when not needed for military purposes.

The legislature has had to meet many times in recent years to make emergency appropriations. Most of the 17 bills passed provided for relief financing by transfers from special state funds and no new taxes were imposed.

Regular session of the general assembly will be convened in January, 1941.

Hollywood, Wilkinsburg Rites for Emma Rowland

PITTSBURGH—Services were conducted last Friday in Hollywood for Mrs. Emma Rowland, 86, mother of Richard A. Rowland, UA producer, who started his theatrical career here. Mrs. Rowland, who resided for many years in Wilkinsburg, and who died suddenly at her Beverly Hills home May 15, also is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Oliver McCracken and Mrs. H. B. Miller. Remains arrived here Tuesday night and services were held Wednesday afternoon at the T. D. Turner Funeral Home, Wilkinsburg.

Mrs. Rowland was born in England and came to this district when 14 years of age. Until three years ago she had resided here. She was a member of St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg.

Bert Stearn Chairman of Variety Club Opening

CLEVELAND—Bert Stearn, United Artists district manager, is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the formal opening of the new quarters of the Variety Club, June 1. Assisting him are Charles Albert, in charge of tickets; Eddie Miller and Al Gregg, in charge of entertainment, and Nat Wolf and Nat Lefton, chief barker.

Plug Nabe Houses During Downtown Parking Strike

PITTSBURGH—Harris circuit exploited its neighborhood theatres during the 12-day downtown parking garages and lots strike, settled last Saturday, by advertising "No Parking Problems" when attending the neighborhood houses.

COLUMBUS

BOXOFFICE receipts continue off, each week's grosses dropping behind the previous ones. A few weeks ago—when business was just bad, not terrible—the topnotch attractions were drawing satisfactorily, but not now. Situation is fast becoming acute, business being definitely n. g.

The social season at the Variety Club comes to a close June 15, ending the most successful year yet . . . C. Harry Schreiber pulled a sneak preview on "My Favorite Wife" Monday at the Grand, surprising the unsuspecting audience. Show is currently at the Palace, to be followed by "Lillian Russell" single-billed. And this reminds us that it will be the second Fox picture to break the dual monopoly in recent months, "Grapes" being the first at Loew's Ohio.

Understand John Rappold is planning to retire from the theatre field due to ill health, both the Innis and new Ideal consequently being offered for sale . . . Deal for the Oak is off inasmuch as lease difficulties couldn't be ironed out . . . Bob Seniff, formerly with Loew's and Warner as a manager, is again managing the Lake Breeze Pier at Buckeye Lake . . . Lou Holleb's friends are talking about him building a new theatre to replace the New.

Within two weeks announcement will be made locally of a de luxe nabe . . . RKO has a tie-in with WBNS' "round-the-town" program each night . . . There is a face-lifting job under way at Loew's Broad . . . Leo Yassenoff now has a candid camera. Ditto Dos Bowers . . . Rudy Knoepfle, Republic salesman in Cincy, has been a local visitor.

The Chamber of Commerce will soon announce "This Week in Columbus," a new publication to be circulated by hotels to their patrons. Weekly magazine will include a comprehensive amusement section.

Perer Completes Plans For Pittsburgh Unit

PITTSBURGH—Plans are completed for a new theatre to be erected on Greenfield Ave. for H. L. Perer. Site is 48x100 feet and the one-story building will be constructed of concrete blocks. Architect is Harry Ginsburg. The as yet unnamed house will seat around 500.

RCA Returns

PITTSBURGH—RCA Manufacturing Company's Phototone office returned to Filmrow this week after a long absence. Sales and service quarters were being established over the weekend at 86 Van Braam street, over the Monogram exchange office. William C. Jervis is in charge of sales and C. R. Underhill is service supervisor. Helen Costello is the company stenographer.

Assigns Myles Connolly

HOLLYWOOD—Myles Connolly is scripting "Keeping Company," a Sam Marx production for Metro.

Shea Chain Shuffles Four Manchester Managers

MANCHESTER, N. H.—Four local motion picture theatres, all controlled by the M. E. Shea Theatrical Enterprises, are involved in a realignment of managers, it has been announced here.

Fenton Scribner, formerly manager of the Strand and Crown, has been appointed manager of the State, as well as director of the Manchester film houses owned by the State Operating Co., subsidiary of the Shea chain.

From assistant manager of the State, Frank Lamarre has been promoted to managership of the Palace, and Albert W. Foley, formerly of Nashua, has been named manager of the Strand. Foley also has held positions with the Shea Enterprises in Jamestown, N. Y., Bradford, Pa., and Ashtabula, Ohio.

Under the fourth change, Edward J. Fahey, who is manager in Nashua and district director of the chain's operations in Amherst, Mass., Westfield, Mass., Newport, R. I., and Nashua, also becomes supervisor of the four Manchester theatres, which have been shifted into his district.

McGunnigle Weds June 29

BOSTON—George McGunnigle, assistant to Manager Fred Greenway at Loew's State, becomes a bridegroom on June 29. Marie Nessikian of the theatre staff will make it a second Loew's State romance with a June 5 wedding.

Ryan Contends Compromise With M&R Was Avoided

By BRAD ANGIER

BOSTON—George S. Ryan continued this week to sum evidence in the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust suits which have passed the 211th day of hearings in the Federal Bldg. Boston. Indications at the first part of the week were the litigation which commenced in 1938, might go to the Master, Philip Hendrick, within the next few days.

Speaking of the Newburgh, N. Y., situation, where Morse and Rothenberg operated the Strand, Ryan said:

"The branch manager of Paramount certainly had a great deal of information in regard to the theatres operating in his territory. Undoubtedly this man would know a great deal of the Cameo, the Ritz, the Broadway and the Strand theatres. He had taken the stand, apparently from knowledge or from reasoning, that the patrons of the Strand Theatre would not walk four or five blocks if there were an opportunity to see some attractive show. That seems to be more or less against common knowledge.

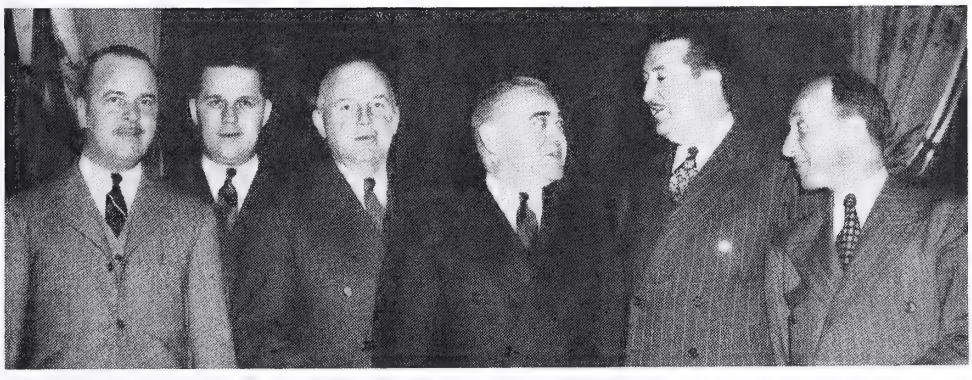
"If those patrons are four or five blocks away from Broadway and there is a show at the Cameo or any other theatre that they desire to see at admission prices that they can afford to pay or are willing to pay, obviously they would go up to Broadway to see that show. The only reason they would not walk to the Broadway or the Ritz to attend their performance would be because of the admission prices.

"If you have a downtown business section of a city where the stores are closed at night, or a great many of them are closed, and comparatively few people live right close to the theatres, where do the patrons come from? For example, where does the patronage of the first-run theatres in Boston come from? Obviously it must come from the residential districts or neighborhood sections; from places that are within a close distance of many neighborhood theatres. In Newburgh there is not the slightest doubt that a great deal of the patronage of the Broadway and the Ritz theatres came from all over the community.

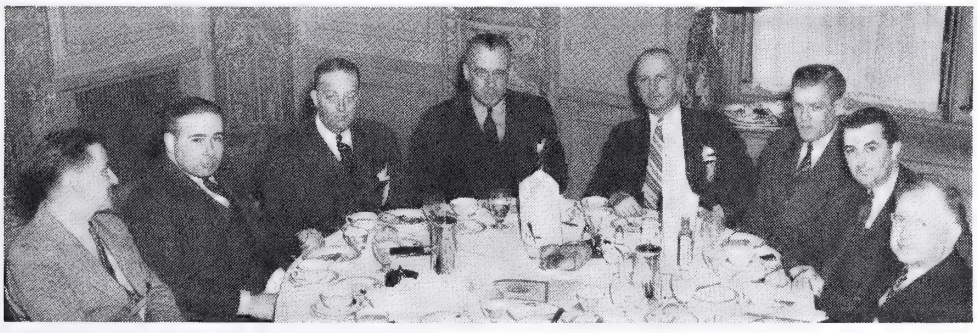
"In Boston, for example, we find first-run houses wanting protection over Dorchester, Allston, Cambridge, Chelsea and even Lynn. Protection presumably is based upon competition. It is based upon the theory that the people in those communities would not go in to Boston to the first-run houses unless those houses showed the picture earlier than the theatres in the neighborhood localities. It is for that reason that these neighborhood theatres or community theatres are, to some extent at least in competition with the first-run downtown houses.

"In a place like Newburgh, with a population of 30,000 people, it is absurd to say that a theatre like the Strand, only four or five blocks away from the theatres on Broadway, is not in competition with them. The only reason that that suggestion has been made is that the defendants know that the selling of the Strand and the refusal to sell the Cameo were entirely inconsistent.

"The Strand was in competition with the Paramount Theatres exactly the same as the Cameo was in competition with them. Otherwise there would have been no semblance of justification for protection against the Strand. Neither the Strand nor the Cameo, however, was in competition as to admission prices and run of product. To a considerable extent they catered to patrons who were in different economic classes.



Quotes Unger



"Unger was asked about this. When it was suggested by a question whether it had been brought to his attention that Paramount had sold its product to the Strand Theatre at 15 cents, Unger said that he did not recall and had not checked up. He then went on to say that if he sold one theatre charging 15 cents admission, he might object to selling another at the same price, and he might deem it advisable to limit the runs. It may or it may not be entirely on the ground of admission prices.

"He stated: 'It may be because I did not want any more runs in the town and maybe because I didn't like the operation, and maybe because I didn't like the type of theatre.'

"There was not a word on the memor-

Lottery Laws Pass 'Good Will Award'

BOSTON—Good Will Award, a cash giveaway modeled after Bank Night and copyrighted as of 1937 and 1939 by Roy E. Heffner, seems to be proving itself the most logical successor to the original Bank Night plan. Heffner, who turned New England into the most lucrative Bank Night section in the country, already has the new system operating in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Louisiana, in addition to New England.

One of the main points of interest in Good Will Award, so far as the exhibitor is concerned, is that the new advertising plan has successfully hurdled anti-lottery objections in vicinities where the original Bank Night has been declared illegal. A major cog in this particular legal machinery is that winners have 12 hours or more, depending upon the particular operation, in which to claim their prizes.

In Nebraska, Judge T. S. Morton recently dismissed a Nebraska lottery action against the Griffith circuit, opining that Good Will Award is not a violation of state lottery laws.

Judge Morton followed an opinion recently handed down in Massachusetts, that a lottery has three essentials: prize, chance, and consideration. His Honor declared that no consideration was present inasmuch as the Good Will plan paid off whether or not the winner was present or absent and whether or not he had or had not purchased an admission ticket.

Weekly Qualifying Cards

Good Will Award operates on weekly qualification cards. Each of these cards must be signed by the respective holder in the presence of a theatre employe. Any attempt to change the signature on the card will make it void.

By use of the cards, the effectiveness of the promotion may be extended throughout the week. At Heffner's Tower in Lowell, Mass., for instance, one, to qualify, must present his card to the doorman at the theatre any time during show hours on Monday and up to the time of drawing on Tuesday.

At the Booth in Nebraska City, Neb., participants must present their cards to the doorman any time during the show hours on Wednesday and up to 8:00 p. m. Thursday. Cards must be personally presented to be qualified. The doorman punches the numbered boxes on the face of the card to make the individual eligible to receive the current week's award.

Registration rules are simple. The participant must sign his own name and address. One registration is good for all Good Will cash awards. Children under 16 and the respective theatre's employes may not participate.

At the Tower in Lowell, Manager Irving Dunn announces the winner's name between 8:30 and 9:30 p. m. inside and outside the theatre. The name is also posted in the boxoffice. The potential winner, to be eligible to receive the award, must present his card properly qualified to Dunn any time before 11:30 p. m. Thursday.

Managers' Vacation Dates Are Announced by Shaw

NEW HAVEN—Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, reports as ready the vacation schedule of managers for this summer.

In New Haven, Robert Russell of the Poli leaves July 15; Sam Badamo of the College, August 5, and Bill Reisinger of the Bijou, July 1.

Manchester Houses Aid Red Cross Campaign

MANCHESTER, N. H.—Local theatres won the gratitude of officials of Manchester Chapter, American Red Cross, by assisting in the organization's $12,000 war relief fund campaign.

Two official films, depicting the work of the Red Cross, were shown on the screen at the State and Lyric.

Roy Webb Scoring

HOLLYWOOD—Roy Webb is scoring "Anne of Windy Poplars" for RKO Radio.

PORTLAND

THE Employes' Social Club of the State Theatre threw a party in honor of Bill Romanoff when the head of the house staff stepped into a Heinz Company job the other day. Bill, like Robert Norris, Malcolm Lester, Richard Ranaghan, Francis Mitchell and several others, used the State as a training ground for a business position.

When Ernie Warren, genial Universal salesman, knew he'd be in Atlantic City Mother's Day, he prepared a special record for the good wife and little Barbara to play—a typical Warren showmanship stunt.

Fred Eugley, manager of the Star in Westbrook, is recovering after an operation. Arthur Allaire is substituting . . . Recent visitors to Portland: Fred Stoloff, National Screen representative; Johnny Feloney of 20th Century-Fox; Carl DeVizia of RKO.

The State now opens Thursdays instead of Fridays . . . Manager Harry Botwick's Saturday morning Recess Time broadcast is over for the season and won't be resumed until the fall . . . The Lakewood summer theatre at Skowhegan has opened.

Sees Color Effecting 'Screen Blitzkrieg'

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—"Color seems to be effecting a screen blitzkrieg," is the opinion expressed by Miss Louise Mace, motion picture editor of the Daily Republican, in an article dealing with the receding of black and white films.

Miss Mace declares, "By Christmas, certainly by the end of the year, it is said, black and white pictures will be vanquished, will become as old-fashioned as the silents seem to us now. This imminent change is made possible by the lowered cost of color film. Heretofore its use was prohibitive save in those instances where studios were convinced beforehand that the pictures would make a great deal of money.

"Now that the Technicolor laboratories have announced a 20 per cent reduction in price, it means color is only 15 per cent more expensive than the straight black and white process.

"Of course, 'Gone With the Wind' is the one film that made the world sharply color conscious. After that, the conventional shade seemed wan and spiritless. More and more studios are inclining toward the tinted celluloid especially when an 'epic' is guided toward the cameras. Cecil B. DeMille had never been cordially disposed toward Technicolor, but finally accepted it for his forthcoming 'North West Mounted Police.' After seeing 'Union Pacific' he admitted that outdoor sequences seemed far more impelling than under the staid gray mantle.

"It is obvious that outdoor action, especially when it roves the western range, gains in excitement under the color lens. Even now audiences are sufficiently accustomed to it to resent static scenes. There must be color of movement as well as background. The time will come when the prismatic scale will be accepted as a matter of course. But not by all Hollywood actors. How many, one wonders, will be driven off the screen because they are not 'colorgenic?' The casualty list should not be so long as that resulting from the invasion of sound."

Junior M. P. Council in Fifth Symposium May 28

NEW HAVEN—The fifth annual symposium of the Junior Motion Picture Councils of New Haven schools will be presented to parents and friends of the 500 member students at Troup Junior High, May 28.

The program will show methods of teaching motion picture appreciation of current theatrical films, as well as give a classroom demonstration of instructional scientific films. Approximately 50 students of junior high and high school age will participate.

The Junior Motion Picture Councils were established five years ago and have since grown in size and scope. Their work is supervised by the department of audio-visual education, headed by Donald A. Eldridge.

andum prepared by Kusell, from which Unger testified, that mentioned the operation or the policy of the theatre, other than its admission prices, but when Unger said he did not want any more runs in the town, he came very close to the truth. What he really meant was that he and his company did not want any more theatres in the town.

"Mr. Schaefer was unable to explain why the Strand Theatre, operating at the same admission prices as the Cameo, should be served with Paramount product while the Cameo was refused. He emphasized the proximity of one theatre to a prior run in connection with the question, 'whether it interfered with our first-run revenue.'

"In the first conversation of Sattler and Simon, the proximity of the Cameo to the Ritz and Broadway was discussed. He pointed out its very close relation in distance to those theatres.

"Where a man like Sattler, refusing to sell product to the Cameo, tells the operator of the theatre how close it is to the Paramount theatres, is there any question but that they were discussing the effect of the competition of the Cameo upon the Paramount theatres on Broadway?

"Obviously, when this witness makes such an admission, it is equivalent to saying the location of this theatre, its close proximity to the Paramount Theatres and its competition with them, were of importance. If a distributor were desirous of selling an exhibitor (and we have seen from much of the testimony and from some of these publications how desirous the distributors were of increasing their revenue by increasing their sales) and if this exhibitor had something connected with its policy to which the distributor objected, wouldn't it seem that the distributor would point out to the exhibitor the objectionable feature and suggest that if the exhibitor wanted to use its product he should remedy the objection?

"Sattler testified that he did not suggest to Simon that if he would increase his admission prices Paramount would sell. He did not have any kind of a minimum admission price at which he would sell.

Sees "Protection" Move

"Kusell testified that he had in mind that the refusal to sell the Cameo might tend to maintain the grosses of the Paramount Theatres on all the pictures which they played, whether from Paramount or from any other company. If the admission prices were right, the Cameo would not affect the Paramount theatres so much. It was his desire to help maintain the grosses received by the Paramount Theatres not only from Paramount pictures but also from the pictures of other companies, and that desire influenced him in telling Sattler he was right in deciding not to sell.

"This is the equivalent of an admission that the refusal to sell was actuated by a desire of Paramount, as a distributor, to help protect the revenue of the other distributors. If he had the desire to help maintain the grosses of the Paramount theatres on pictures of other companies, knowing that some of those pictures were played on percentage or perhaps that the flat rental price might in some respects be determined by the grosses, then he had the desire to help maintain the revenue of the other distributors from the Paramount theatres.

"These grosses could not be maintained merely by the refusal of Paramount, acting alone, to sell. The grosses could be injured only if the Cameo attracted a large number of patrons. If the admissions at the Cameo were increased, the Paramount gross would decline. In view of Kusell's desire to help maintain the grosses at the Paramount theatres on all pictures, it is evident that the refusal to sell was due to the effect of the general competition of the Cameo on the other theatres.

"Kusell went further and said that a sale to the Cameo was not advisable on account of its location, irrespective of its admission prices.

"Isn't that saying in substance that the proximity of this theatre made it competition to the Paramount theatres and, therefore, Paramount as a distributor would not sell it? In that case, all the talk about admission prices becomes unimportant.

"Mr. Kusell also testified that the addition of another theatre in a situation of this kind would have some effect upon existing theatres irrespective of admission prices. This is shown very strongly by other evidence, including the testimony of Mr. Romano in regard to his feelings when the Metropolitan Theatre in Providence started to operate.

Middletown Construction

"Finally Mr. Sattler testified that for several years Paramount had not sold any other theatre in Newburgh but the Paramount first-run and the Paramount-Levy organization.

"Evidence of this kind indicates the intention and purpose of this company. Levy had a pooling arrangement. In effect, Levy was a partner of Paramount. Every step indicates an intention on the part of Paramount to monopolize the theatrical business in Newburgh, including the right to purchase films moving in interstate commerce.

"It is worthwhile noting in connection with the wrecking of Quittner, in Middletown, only a few miles away, that Paramount considered it proper to go in and construct a large first-run theatre when there were already three theatres in existence in that town.

"Apparently Simon was right in saying that the excuse or the reason given for the refusal to sell was that Paramount wanted to protect its own theatres and did not want to sell him while he was operating in competition. The theatre or the company most interested in the competition of the Cameo, including its admission prices and operating policy, obviously would be the closest competitor, the Ritz or the Broadway.

"In the earlier days of the Academy, of all the organizations, would be the one most interested in this competition. They were operating houses. The gross receipts at their houses would be as much affected by the exhibition of any major product as it would be by the exhibition of Paramount product. Paramount, as a distributor, was

Lawmakers Away

BOSTON—Despite continued efforts to assemble the Massachusetts legislature this year, the first off-year in the new biannual session setup, it now appears that the only remaining hope of would-be conventioneers lies in the possibility that the financial condition of Massachusetts cities and towns may necessitate a special session. However, this eventuality appears to be slim.

Soon a Participant

BOSTON—Bradley Ryan, son of George S. Ryan, has been an interested spectator at the Federal Bldg. on several occasions since the plaintiff's attorney in the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust suit commenced his final arguments in the three-year-old litigation. According to him, young Ryan is scheduled to join the firm as a partner.

Manager Geraold Savoie, Richmond, North Adams, has started a new series of Wednesday night local talent amateur revues.

Summer Entertainment Pain to Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The adverse effects of summer entertainment on theatre boxoffices already are being felt in the metropolitan Springfield territory.

The baseball season, now in full swing, is doing its bit toward this end, as are the midget auto races at the old dog track in West Springfield.

The Riverside Drive-In has reopened with a new adjunct, a roller skating rink, while Mountain Park, up Holyoke way, also has opened for the summer.

Boston Gayety Leads in Forsaking Flesh Shows

BOSTON—The Gayety, E. M. Loew house in Boston, is the first of Boston's trio of burlesque theatres to go off flesh for the summer. Max Michaels and Al Somerby are scheduled to follow shortly with the Globe and Old Howard respectively. The Howard will darken for the summer months, while the other two locations will go on straight films. Exploitation pictures will probably be emphasized at the Globe.

Back-to-the-Land Trend Seen in Connecticut

HARTFORD—The state census bureau indicates the 1940 survey may show the population of Connecticut's cities, including Hartford, is "flattening out," and that there is a substantial back-to-the-land movement in rural areas. All Hartford county towns reported thus far, show increases amounting to as high as 48 per cent.

Troupers Hear a Plan on How to Improve Status

HARTFORD—Theatrical performers living in the metropolitan Hartford area were summoned to a meeting at the Allyn House ballroom where representatives of the Connecticut Theatrical Bookers' Ass'n explained its plan to improve working conditions in nearby night clubs and suburban theatres.

Incorporation Charter to Auto Vision Theatres

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—State Secretary Frederick Cook has granted a charter of incorporation to Auto Vision Theatres, Inc. Capital is 80 shares of no par stock. Incorporators are John F. Gatelee jr. of Westfield, Thomas D. Gatelee and Owen M. Holmes of Springfield.

Improve Two

CONCORD, N. H.—Recent improvements in New Hampshire motion picture theatres include installation of a projector at the Premier in Littleton and the addition of a new sound system at the Lisbon in Lisbon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

AN OUTSIDE sprinkler system prevented damage to the Rialto in Lancaster when an early morning fire gutted the adjoining Stanard Block on Main St., with a loss estimated at $5,000.

Eddie McMann of Salem, who is sponsoring Sunday super-vaudeville shows at the Memorial Auditorium in Lowell, Mass., which are drawing crowds from nearby New Hampshire points, presented George Jessel on May 12.

The Modern in Manchester staged three midnight shows May 13-15,. advertised as "Body of Beautiful" and selected short subjects. Only adults were admitted, with regular admission prevailing.

Rev. Ernest L. Converse of Concord, well known reformer, has launched an attack upon Rev. Chester E. Merrow of Centre Ossipee, a candidate for the Republican congressional nomination, because he says Merrow helped secure approval of Sunday motion picture shows in Ossipee.

A resolution against excessive billboard advertising along the state's highways was adopted at the 10th annual meeting of the N. H. Tourist Service Association, Inc., in Durham.

Sheeran Works on Plans For Legion Convention

BOSTON—James Sheeran of the Massachusetts department of public safety continued this week to formulate plans for the forthcoming local national convention of American Legion. Sheeran was recently appointed chairman of the national convention committee of the Theatrical Post of American Legion by William H. McLaughlin, Stoneham exhibitor who commands the organization.

McLaughlin, appointing all past commanders to the group, also named Kenneth Forkey, Dr. William Basch, Charles Heath, Major William Cotty, and Major Patrick F. Healey.

Ascap-Lavietes Action In Hartford June 10

NEW HAVEN—The damage and injunction suit by Ascap, Irving Berlin, Inc., and Santly-Joy-Select, Inc., against Harry L. Lavietes, operator of the Pequot, has been assigned for hearing on June 10 in U. S. district court at Hartford. Alleged violations of the copyright law were last New Year's Eve.

Republic Gains Runs

BOSTON—Ed Morey, general sales manager in New England for Republic, has set five Republic releases in first-run Boston. Ben Domingo, city manager for the RKO theatres, has booked "Grandpa Goes to Town," "Gaucho Serenade," and "Old Missouri." Al Lauder has dated in "Crooked Road," and "Gangs of Chicago," for the Trans Lux.

Cinema Club Clambake Planned for June 22

BOSTON—The Boston Cinema Club will hold a clambake at Green Acres in Saxonville on June 22. William Cuddy of RKO, Joe Glazier of Western Massachusetts Theatres, and Harry Schlar of Paramount are in charge of arrangements. Some 40 members of the exchange and circuit bookers and office managers fraternity are expected to attend the fete, traveling via special bus.

Film District Outing May Be Held in August

BOSTON—The annual film district outing, plans for which are tentatively going ahead, will probably be held the latter part of the summer, perhaps in August. Green Acres at Saxonville, site of the forthcoming Cinema Club clambake, may be the spot.

Relief Load Is Reduced Sharply in Hartford

HARTFORD—A decrease of 10.5 per cent last month as compared to April, 1939, in Hartford's relief case load, is reported by State Welfare Commissioner Robert J. Smith.

The case load last month totaled 3,175 or 12,065 persons. This was, however, 1.6 per cent above March, Smith says. Cost for the care of these cases totaled $95,874, or 3 per cent more than March but a decrease of 11.3 per cent as compared with a year ago.

Reports from Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, New Britain and Waterbury showed a total of 9,176 cases, representing 34,868 persons on the relief rolls last month.

Nipmuc Park Film Shows Must Obtain Approval

MENDON, MASS.—Motion pictures shown at Nipmuc Park must first be approved by the National Board of Review, the state department of public safety, and a local censor board, the board of selectmen has ordered. Local censors will be named by the selectmen.

The action followed a complaint by the Mendon Historical Society protesting the showing of "sensational" pictures last summer at the park.

Rob Paul Kessler

BOSTON—Paul Kessler, manager of the Suffolk in Holyoke, was held up by an armed bandit last week Thursday and robbed of theatre receipts approximating $250. The house, one of the eight on the Herman Rifkin circuit, is situated some 75 feet from the Holyoke police headquarters.

Olympia, E. M. Loew circuit house, in this city, is giving away encyclopedias; one of first giveaways to be used by neighborhood theatres in the city in years.

Two Hold in Hartford

HARTFORD—Holdovers in the downtown district included "Saturday's Children" for two weeks at the Regal, and a fortnight for "The Doctor Takes a Wife" at E. M. Loew's.

Theatre Candy Firm Opens

BOSTON—The Theatre Candy Company, operated by S. L. Lowe jr., has opened film district offices at 205 Stuart Street, in the Motor Mart Bldg. The firm supplies equipment and product to theatres and offers New England exhibitors an analyzation service designed to increase present confectionery sales.

Compromise Avoided, Ryan's Contention

interested not only in a certain percentage, assuming that they sold pictures on percentage, or on a specified flat rental.

"Paramount as an exhibitor was interested in every dollar of the receipts. Apparently the theory of the defendant is that Paramount as a distributor would act of its own volition to protect a small portion of the receipts at its theatres in Newburgh, but that Paramount as an exhibitor would do nothing about it.

Outlines Poughkeepsie Situation

"In view of the testimony of Walsh in regard to his conversations with other distributors, and in view of the testimony of the representatives of those companies in regard to Walsh's talks with them, is it conceivable that Walsh said nothing to the distributing branch of Paramount? Is it at all probable that this man, interested in every dollar of the receipts at the theatres, every dollar that came from Paramount pictures and every dollar that came from other companies' pictures, would say nothing to Paramount about it?

"Walsh was very much concerned about the Cameo. He visited it. He complained about it. Apparently he kept in close touch with its activities. Like Romano and other exhibitors in other situations, he was concerned chiefly with the competition of the Cameo and not merely with its competition at certain admission prices. He felt very strongly that the competition of the Cameo at any admission prices might hurt him.

"In other situations we have seen what these exhibitors do when competition comes in. They feel beyond any doubt that if they can cut off the supply of major product from the opposition, the opposition must go out of business. That is exactly what happened in this case."

Ryan later outlined the situation in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where Morse and Rothenberg leased the Rialto on April 22, 1933 and commenced to operate it the following August 26.

"At the time the plaintiffs leased the theatre," Ryan said, "there were three first-run houses operated by Paramount; the Bardavon, the Stratford and the State. There was a second-run house, the Liberty operated by the two Unger brothers.

"At the time the plaintiff started to operate there was another house, the Playhouse, which was closed, but a few weeks before the Rialto opened, the Playhouse reopened with admission prices at matinee of 10 cents and evenings of 15 cents, on a third-run basis, using some major product.

"Mr. Simon testified that during the interval which elapsed between the signing of the lease and the opening of the theatre he was told by Unger, the operator of the Liberty, that he was the brother of Joe Unger, a big shot in the Paramount home office.

"It had been Simon's idea, when he took the lease, to operate as a third run, which would be the last run. but that he found when he attempted to get product that the third run was being sold to the Playhouse. Unger in fact had told him that he was opening the Playhouse to run ahead of him and had already bought product and had some in reserve.

"Both Mr. Simon and Mr. Morse testified in regard to the investigations they had made of the situation before taking the lease and before opening the theatre.

"After securing the lease and before opening the theatre, Simon made efforts to get product from the various companies.

"The plaintiff never showed any Paramount product at this theatre. That is an unusual circumstance and would require an explanation. Simon saw Leith and Kusell and was told by Kusell that he would not sell for the same reason as in Newburgh, because they had their own theatres there.

Sees Fraternal Interest

"The situation in regard to Poughkeepsie so far as Paramount is concerned was to a considerable extent the same as in Newburgh. The different factor was that instead of Levy operating as in Newburgh, we find the Unger brothers operating in Poughkeepsie and we find a very definite attitude by Joseph Unger of Paramount. We find Mr. Joseph Unger telling a story in regard to Poughkeepsie and particularly the Rialto, which is not justified.

"Mr. Unger said that Paramount objected to the admission price of the Rialto but the refusal to sell was not entirely because of admission price. He said that when Morse & Rothenberg took charge they had a price of 15 cents, other theatres were charging 20 and 25 cents, and that subsequently the Playhouse was forced to run at 15 cents because of the admission at the Rialto. Mr. Simon said that the Playhouse opened at 10 and 15 cents.

"It is rather curious that this man should make an objection to that effect as to the Playhouse, when that theatre had been closed and was open only after it became known in Poughkeepsie that the Rialto was being opened.

"Unger said that Kusell in conference told him the Rialto was charging 15 cents and he felt it inadvisable to sell, with which Unger agreed. Mr. Kusell denied that flatly. He said his best recollection was that he never discussed with Unger the facts testified to by Unger at page 24 of his deposition, that the Rialto operation was one they didn't like or that it was a filthy, run-down theatre, and gave away dishes and hardware. He also said that he did not make any report to Unger on the Rialto.

"It has not been shown that Unger himself had a financial interest in the Liberty and the Playhouse theatres. That probably would be a violation of Paramount rules, but it is certain that he took a fraternal interest in those theatres. He said he had stopped at Poughkeepsie to see his brother and then he went over to the Rialto. He said it was a filthy, run-down theatre . . . by filthy he meant that there were some newspapers lying in the lobby, and that is what he meant by 'run-down.'"

Dr. Phelps on Films in "Theatre News" Issue

NEW HAVEN—Theatre News' special 10,000-copy fifth anniversary issue, published recently, carried the congratulations of local theatres and merchants on the service which this weekly New Haven County entertainment guide has rendered. In addition to a special editorial by Editor Jack Schaefer and a special stint by Columnist Penetrix, the 24-page issue contained an article by Dr. William Lyon Phelps, Yale man of letters and well-known critic. H.M.B., who covers the stage doings in the territory, dug five years into the past to reminisce.

Dr. Phelps states he does not agree with Dorothy Thompson that the three best pictures of the year were the foreign films, "Grand Illusion," "Harvest" and "The Baker's Wife." He agrees rather with the professional critics who awarded the best picture title to "Wuthering Heights." In connection with this film, he congratulates the producers on two things: (1) for giving "an honest and faithful dramatization of that work of genius without sentimentalizing or transforming it;" and (2) for having "sufficient faith in the public, that is, they believed there were a sufficient number of intelligent people to make the picture a financial success."

Phelps also names "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" as one of the fine pictures of the year, as well as "Pygmalion," "Union Pacific" and "Stagecoach." The two best of 1940 he considers "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Rebecca." He confesses to having cried all the way through "Abe Lincoln" and judges the film version of "Rebecca" better than the novel "because the strength of the novel lies in its drama, and on the screen we have the drama concentrated."

"GWTW" was a disappointment to him, the critic states, "though I suppose I am in a small minority." The picture seemed to him monotonous, and Melanie hopelessly miscast.

Extensive Alterations Are Planned for Loew Duo

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The two E. M. Loew houses located in the Connecticut valley are planning extensive alterations.

Three contractors are bidding at present for the construction of a new stage floor at the local Court Square. The marquee and lobby are soon to be redecorated, and the booth has been reventilated.

In Hartford carpets and new sound are planned.

"Our Town" Premiere Held in Boston

Boston—United Artists held its world premiere of "Our Town," produced by Sol Lesser and adapted from the Thornton Wilder stage success, here on May 23 at Loew's State and Orpheum. Joseph A. DiPesa, Joe Longo, and Al Longo of the Loew's Inc., local permanent publicity staff, arranged an appropriate advertising campaign.

Economy Program Gripping Studios

HOLLYWOOD — Sweeping retrenchment programs resulting from apprehension over the European situation among the studios this week followed the initial move taken earlier at a Warner economy meeting.

Twentieth Century-Fox executives were the second to act through the launching of a rigid economy regime throughout the studio with the immediate dismissal of more than 100 persons. Other plants are expected to follow with similar moves. Early effects of the retrenchment are registering in the publicity departments.

Jack L. Warner earlier called an "emergency meeting" of producers and department heads to launch a drive for stringent economies and the elimination of all waste motion in the studio's picture-making operations. Indicating there would be no slashing of personnel, Warner urged closer cooperation among all departments.

Neely Foes and Advocates At Washington Hearing

DALLAS—Key representatives of both sides of the Neely bill controversy from the exhibitor angle, have been in Washington for the past two weeks taking part in that hearing. Judge Roy Walker, president of Theatre Owners Protective Ass'n, has headed the list of opponents there along with other exhibitors who were made delegates from the 22 congressional districts. Among these was Henry Reeve, Mission at Menard, who came through the other day en route to Washington on a call from Judge Walker.

On the Allied side in Washington, was Col. H. A. Cole, the national president. At the capital at the time was Rubin Frels of Victoria, but it was not learned whether Frels went to Washington in connection with the Neely hearing or the government suit.

Report Mrs. Jack Buys New Jacksboro House

DALLAS—Authoritative reports reached here this week that Mrs. Trixana Jack has purchased and now is operating the new Palace in Jacksboro recently built and opened by Hollis Boren, of Memphis. Mrs. Jack, the mother of Fred Jack, Warner southern division manager, and of Jo Jack, of Film Forwarding Agency, has operated theatres in Texas for a number of years, her last situation being in Texarkana. Roy DiVinney, house manager for Boren since the new house was built, was in town this week scouting around for a new connection.

Mrs. Jack's venture affords the town two independent theatres with the owners each having one theatre. Mr. Thompson, who bought the Mecca there a few months ago, has current plans to remodel and modernize that house, it was said.

Says Lazarus-Allied Split Over Clearance

WASHINGTON—H. A. Cole, Allied president, declares Henry Lazarus resigned as a director of Allied because of a row over clearance in Texas. States Cole:

"It is due Allied that the facts be made known. Mrs. Lazarus is interested in the Bryan Amusement Company of Bryan, Texas, which is booked by the Jefferson Amusement Co., a Paramount affiliate. An independent exhibitor in Texas, a member of Allied, has built a fine, new theatre at College Station, adjacent to Texas A. and M. College and six miles from Bryan. This new theatre, the Campus, is seeking a reduction of the 45 days' clearance that Bryan takes over it and has the support of the student body which has instituted an effective boycott against Bryan.

"Mrs. Lazarus appeared before the Allied board last week and, after prolonged discussion, she was told the board could take no action. Allied regrets Lazarus' precipitate action, but it cannot intervene in behalf of a theatre tied up with an affiliated chain which is exacting unreasonable protection over an independent Allied exhibitor. Particularly when that protection is so unpopular in the community as to be the subject of a boycott."

Renew Doris Day

HOLLYWOOD—Doris Day has been given a term acting contract by Charles R. Rogers.

TENNESSEE

NEWPORT AMUSEMENT, INC., headed by J. Winston Baird, opened the new Doradele in Copperhill Monday night, May 20, with George A. Bauman as manager. Speight & Hibbs, Clarksville, were architects. The new theatre is scheduled to give night shows on each night except Wednesday, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Prices are 25 cents and 10 cents at all shows.

Among the "out of town" managers of the Crescent chain to come to Nashville to see the new Belle Meade were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. "Bud" Baniza, of Huntingdon, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Johnston of McKenzie.

Opening on June 10, Clarksville will have "The Credit Theatre," the first of its kind in the United States, and which will allow patrons to run a charge account for admission. It will have stage plays only, presented under the supervision of Charles Boilin Watts, New York.

Plans were made for a big crowd and gala evening for the Southern premiere of "Dark Command" at the Sevier, Bristol, at midnight Sunday. Regular schedule followed on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Merchants of Rockwood have given the public free shows on Saturday for the past four weeks, but have decided to discontinue it as an unprofitable venture. The pictures were shown in an empty store building.

Charter to Tent 22 At Ceremony June 3

OKLAHOMA CITY—Formal opening of Tent 22, Variety Club of Oklahoma City, and presentation of the charter will take place June 3 at the Silver Glade Room of the Skirvin Hotel here.

Several chief barkers from other tents will be present when the ceremonies begin at 7 p. m. John Harris of Pittsburgh and national chief barker, will present the charter, and James G. Balmer, national dough guy, also from Pittsburgh, will induct the members.

Several Oklahoma City and state officials will be present as guests of honor. Bob O'Donnell, president of the Interstate circuit of Dallas, will make the principal address. A motion picture will be shown depicting charitable work being done by the various clubs of Variety.

Auto Accidents Befall Five Alexander Men

DALLAS—A series of automobile accidents plied into the manpower of Alexander Film Co. within the past few days and took a slight toll from the head of the organization on down to four representatives in Texas.

To start it off, J. Don Alexander, president, was in a car turnover in Florida with E. J. Sparks. Neither received injuries of consequence. In District Manager J. A. McInaney's division in Texas, George Likins, west Texas salesman, had both legs broken in an accident near Marfa. He is mending rapidly. Lou Shrader turned over near Lufkin, receiving a broken pelvis and is now recuperating at his home in Dallas.

Jim McKinney jr., who handles Houston for Alexander, and who is a son of the Columbia representative, had one of his hands slightly injured in an intersection collision there, and is back on the job.

Joe Froehling was injured on a highway in south Texas but has recovered and is now back on duty.

Shut Birmingham Ritz to Permit Redecorating

BIRMINGHAM—With the last show at the Ritz, Sunday night, the house closed for two weeks in order to undergo a complete remodeling program.

According to Bill Coury, manager, the new program calls for interior redecoration; new drapes on the stage; acoustical treatment and new seats in the balcony.

Returns to Manage

MEMPHIS—Robert Kilgore will have charge of the Palace here upon its reopening by Loew's Friday, May 31. Kilgore, a native of High Point, N. C., has managed houses in the New York area the past 10 years. He at one time was an usher at the Palace in Memphis.

Santone Censorship Group "Advisory"

SAN ANTONIO—A film censorship committee was announced last week at the city council session. In making the announcement, Mayor Maury Maverick said its duties would be "advisory" and that there would be no preview censorship of motion pictures by the group. The mayor pointed out the newest releases are previewed by a national voluntary board of review.

If a film brought to San Antonio violates the rules of decency, charges will be filed on advice of the censorship committee, Maverick said. The cooperation of the San Antonio theatremen will be sought.

The committee follows: Mrs. Dove Vincius, Mrs. Alfred Rohde, Mrs. Floyd James, Mrs. J. H. Gibson, Mrs. G. H. C. Johnson, Max Waltz, Mrs. Sidney Berkowitz, Mrs. Wallace Francis, Mrs. J. K. Beretta and W. H. Hensley.

O L. SMITH and Mrs. Smith of the Alto at Alto, were here Wednesday, he doing some booking, she visiting the downtown shops . . . C. V. Griggs, the assistant manager of American Desk Manufacturing Co., makers of theatre seats, was here Wednesday looking over the company's new Dallas sales office located in the Herber Bros. building on South Harwood street.

Which recalls that Forrest Dunlap, the American Desk Mfg. Co. general sales manager, lives on a sizeable place down at Midlothian, about 20 miles from Filmrow. Last week he had down one of his company representatives, Floyd Shaffer, and Mrs. Shaffer, for a barbecue dinner. In the planning was enough meat left over for a few on Filmrow to get a break.

Jack Groves, owner of the neighborhood Queen at Houston and a former film man, was back on the Row this week on his first visit since the Variety convention . . . Wedding announcements were received by many friends here from Mr. and Mrs. Cranfill H. Cox at Gilmer, noting the marriage of Miss Mary Jo Cox to James Norton Shepperd on May 10.

R. N. "Bob" Smith of Mission was a visitor this week, headquartering in the office of his Dallas booker, Bob Euler. Speaking of Bobs, Robert "Bob" Hooks of Mineola, also was on the Row for a day.

Walter Penn, the Columbia representative, taking his daily reduction exercises the other morning, sprained an ankle. Walter came down on Filmrow in between crutches.

R. J. "Bob" O'Donnell is back from the west coast where he journeyed for a rest following the strain of staging the Variety convention . . . Rufus Layton, independent operator of three theatres at Childress, was here Wednesday booking a lot of pictures for those houses. Incidentally, Layton was nosed out by 28 votes in a run-off for a berth on the city council.

CHARLOTTE

CHARLOTTE city council has postponed indefinitely consideration of the proposal to permit Sunday shows. The local Ministerial Association earlier in the week had resolved to have representatives appear before the council to protest if the question should come up.

Sound Engineering Service Co. announces the completion of service contract negotiations with these theatres: Saluda at Saluda, Broadway at Dillon, S. C., Colonial at Valdese, Main at Granite Falls, and the Chadbourn at Chadbourn.

A small amount of money was taken from the safe at the State in Greenwood, S. C., recently, according to Manager Grady Beeker.

Ask Reorganization of Canadian Tax Setup

TORONTO—A reorganization of the system of taxation in Canada is advocated in the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, the report of which has been placed before the House of Commons for action in providing a new plan of public financing.

Among other things, the commission found the present complexity in the corporation tax field was "beyond belief" and that such levies "violated every canon of sound taxation" while the complaints from one end of the country to the other on the chaos in corporation taxes were well-founded, it was stated, the prime criticism being that business itself was taxed instead of being used as a means to collect taxes from recipients of wages, interest and dividends. The present system of taxation was found to be so grossly inequitable and placed such a heavy burden on Canadian industry, investors and labor "that a fundamental and sweeping reform is necessary."

One of the proposals of the commission is to concentrate all possible forms of corporation imposts under the supervision of the federal government and to delete much of the taxation by provincial governments, the latter to be given relief by the transfer of unemployment relief and other charges to the Dominion government, with a single authority for the administration of taxes. This will be of material benefit to the large theatre chains and film distributing companies which operate in every province of the Dominion and therefore are objects of taxation by 10 different governments with varying degrees of intensity. It is also proposed to have only one income tax and, under the new setup, the provinces would withdraw from all corporation taxes except annual licenses and levies on real estate.

Of particular interest to the theatres throughout Canada is the recommendation that nuisance taxes be abolished by provinces and municipalities, including amusement and sales tax which hurt actual business operations. There would be no amusement tax under the new federal plan because it would be unnecessary in view of the maximum revenue from a concentrated levy at a minimum cost of collection, thereby eliminating waste and overlapping.

At the recent opening of Parliament there was a rumor that the federal government planned to impose a new amusement tax in addition to the admission imposts of seven provinces but it is believed that this belief arose over the taxation reformation proposals of the commission which would, in a sense, relieve the necessity of levying such nuisance taxes by provinces. The commission's report has aroused wide attention and government action is awaited.

Ministerial Opposition Forces Sunday Closing

LONDON, ONT.—The manager of a theatre in nearby Mount Forest will be asked to discontinue Sunday midnight shows as the result of action by the town council and the Mount Forest Ministerial Association.

The ministerial association adopted a resolution opposing the Sunday midnight shows and then had representations made to the town council. The council concurred in the resolution and instructed the town clerk to interview the theatre manager.

National Clearance Board Approved by Industry

TORONTO—Adoption of a resolution providing for the establishment of a national clearance board was achieved at a meeting here of the film section of the Toronto Board of Trade when a full representation of the branches of the industry unanimously supported the motion and gave their unqualified endorsement to the expressed desire for the settlement of problems in a harmonious manner inside the industry and without recourse to legislative bodies or courts.

The consensus held that difficulties would be smoothed out by mutual effort in Canada and that the outcome of the recommendations was most timely in view of the present issue in the United States.

Of major importance was the fact that the motion was seconded by J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., signifying complete agreement with the move, one form of which was opposed by the circuit's representatives at an earlier meeting.

The resolution was presented by Louis Rosenfeld of Columbia, who was one of three members on the national clearance committee which has been studying conditions for the past six months. Other members are Morris Milligan of Paramount and N. A. Taylor of the Independent Theatres Ass'n of Ontario, who was chairman of the earlier meeting.

The committee recommended a personnel of eight on the national board, comprising two representatives of the distributors, two from the circuits and four from the organized independents, giving the latter an equal vote with the exchanges and chains. Representatives are to be nominated in a fortnight, after which steps will be taken for the establishment of district clearance boards in six exchange centers to comprise the quotas of branch managers, circuit managers and unaffiliated theatre owners in a similar ratio, the appointments to be for six months or longer.

The power of all boards is limited to questions of priority and clearance, because a provision already has been made otherwise for arbitration. The decisions of the district boards are to be binding, but rulings can be appealed to the national board on payment of a $25 fee.

The step is considered the successful result of discussions since last fall, following differences between major and independent interests that rose to bitter heights.

TORONTO

COL. JOHN A. COOPER, president of the Motion Picture Distributors, did some tall traveling for a week. He entrained for Ottawa where he spent two days on government matters; next he traveled to Quebec City where he attended an important meeting, and doubled back to Montreal for a conference with film executives, returning to Toronto five days later to face a pile of correspondence . . . A well-attended stag party was held in honor of Gurston Allen of Premier Theatres, Toronto, as a farewell before his marriage. Friends and co-workers presented him with a handsome radio.

Appointments: Sam Schwartz, of the Winnipeg office of United Artists, to the booking department of the Toronto branch; Robert Myers, booker in the RKO Toronto branch, to assistant to Ralph Dale, booking executive at Famous Players head office . . . E. H. Wells, national secretary of the Canadian Film Boards of Trade, Toronto, has purchased a fruit ranch at Clarkson, Ont., between Toronto and Hamilton.

Formal announcement is made that Don Gauld, manager of the Metropolitan, Winnipeg, will remain in the Manitoba capital following a change in plans at Famous Players head office. He was slated to become supervisor of suburban theatres in Toronto and was accorded a send-off banquet which proved to be a trifle ahead of schedule. Anyway, Gauld found out how much his Winnipeg associates thought of him.

Clarence Robson, eastern supervisor of Famous Players for many years, is showing excellent improvement in health at his summer home but is not planning to return to Toronto for some weeks . . . Leo M. Devaney, Canadian RKO general manager, enjoyed a complete rest at Atlantic City following his recent operation for appendicitis. He returned to Toronto for a few days and then proceeded to the company's sales convention in Chicago.

M. A. Milligan, Canadian general manager, and J. L. Hunter, Toronto branch manager, of Paramount Film Service, Ltd., left Sunday for the Paramount convention in Los Angeles. Before departure, Jack Hunter expressed pleasure that the conference was again being held at the coast because of the proximity of the big studios.

Haskell Masters, general manager for Canada, returned from the United Artists meeting in New York and conducted a special conference of his branch representatives in Toronto before they scattered to their respective posts . . . The Toronto delegation for the Universal convention at Atlantic City included Clair Hague, veteran Canadian representative; O. Hanson, president, and Paul Nathanson, vice-president of Empire-Universal Films.

D. D. Bloom, special representative of Regal Films, Toronto, has made a business trip of the Canadian West to prepare local details for engagements of "Gone With the Wind . . . A switch brought "Primrose Path" to the Toronto Uptown after it had been booked into the Imperial in downtown Toronto, "The Fighting 69th" replacing the feature which had been held back by the Ontario censor board because of its banning in several U. S. situations.

Manager Fred Trebilcock of the Uptown, Toronto, has been enjoying another of his famous holiday trips to far-away parts of the globe. This time he flew by airplane to several Republics in South America. On previous occasions he had taken a world cruise, a couple of jaunts to the West Indies and a vacation tour of the British Isles and the Continent. He has now visited every continent.

Callers along Toronto's Filmrow: F. H. Graham, in from Walkerton where he operates the Reenville Theatre; Jack Allen from the Tivoli at Thorold; Abe Rappaport, proprietor of the Hollywood at Campbellford; Grant Garrette from the Geneva at Orillia; the Saso brothers from the Roxy at Barrie; A. M. Giaschi of the Strand at Bracebridge; Gordon Borneman, down from Gravenhurst where he has the Muskoka Theatre; Ben Borlak, looking after the interests of the Esquire in Brantford; Miss A. E. Elliott, arranging dates for the Guest theatres in Hamilton; Mrs. H. J. Sutherland from the Lyric, St. Marys, and the other Sutherland houses in western Ontario, and Simon Meretsky, making a snappy trip from Windsor before the opening of his Park Theatre.

Abe Rappaport reports he is planning a big summer season at Campbellford even with a war on. Exhibitors from Gravenhurst, Bracebridge, Orillia and Barrie are also looking forward to a busy season in the Muskoka Lakes district, with many visitors from the United States in prospect because of the "decline" in popularity of European tours.

Manager Jules Bernstein of Loew's, Toronto, is back from New York where he conferred with executive officials of the Loew chain . . . Ralph Biamonte has advised film exchange offices in Toronto that he is now doing his own booking for the Hollywood at Niagara Falls, Ont., where Famous Players is now putting the finishing touches on the new chain house, the Seneca.

James Davidson of Colonial Pictures has returned to Toronto from a business trip to the cities and towns along Lake Ontario East of the film metropolis in a round-up of booking for "Dead Men Tell No Tales," one of several British Alliance pictures which are being distributed in Canada by this firm . . . Bill Melody, former manager of the Granada at Hamilton, has again taken up residence in Hamilton where he is well known after some months in Toronto during which he managed a neighborhood house.

Manager Al Sedgwick of the Toronto Belsize has organized an extensive Beauty Contest under the auspices of the Mt. Pleasant Business Men's Assn., and, as a further goodwill activity, took an active part in the running off of a junior athletic meet in Davisville Park, May 24. Sedgwick has also arranged to have the young patients of the Home for Incurable Children as his guests at a matinee performance on June 8, this being the second year that he had provided this treat.

Joe Holliday, newly appointed manager of the Circle, an independent house in north Toronto owned by H. Freedman, has become a columnist for the Herald, into which he injects a few plugs for the Circle. He secured several window tieups for "Music in My Heart" for the week of May 20, including a full-size replica of a broadcasting studio with microphones borrowed from Station CFRB.

Fire Prevention Post To Colonel Cooper

TORONTO—Col. John A. Cooper of Toronto, who has retired as national film commissioner of the Dominion government, has been elected vice-president of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association with D. P. Cruikshank of Ottawa re-elected as president. Col. Cooper, as head of the Motion Picture Distributors, has been identified with the preventive body for years.

The Canadian Film Boards of Trade are responsible for the enforcement of precautionary rules against fire in film buildings and each board has its own fire marshal who sends a monthly report of inspections to Toronto where a monthly summary is prepared in Col. Cooper's office to be sent to the distributors in New York. During 1939, according to the last annual report, the average percentage of efficiency in film exchanges in six key cities was 95 per cent, while all infractions of fire regulations were corrected immediately after inspection.

Chairman O. J. Silverthorne of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors reported that two building fires of a very minor nature were recorded during the past 12 months and these caused practically no damage. Six film fires were reported among Ontario theatres, in two of which only a few feet of film was destroyed. Four theatres and one film exchange by the Ontario Government for infractions of the Theatres and Cinematographs Act and Regulations and convictions were registered in each case.

Silverthorne has also reported that 21 projectionists were suspended for violations of the regulations during the year ending March 31, the suspensions ranging from one to three weeks.

On the outbreak of war last September, the Ontario department ordered the installation of emergency lighting equipment in all theatres against the possibility of attack or sabotage and to prevent panic in case of power failure from any cause. The independent lighting systems are required to be tested at least once each day.

Pioneers Will Form New Groups Over Dominion

TORONTO—President Clair Hague of the Canadian Picture Pioneers announces that information has been sent out to trade veterans in cities from coast to coast with a view to the organization of regional clubs of the old-timers' association under subcharters. It is expected branches will be formed in Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver and St. John. A general meeting of the Canadian Pioneers is to be held here at the Royal York Hotel on August 15 for the completion of organization and the annual meetings are to be held in succeeding years around this date for the election of officers and the filing of reports.

Officers for the interim have been chosen as follows:

President, Clair Hague; vice-president, O. Hanson; secretary-treasurer, Ray Lewis; directors, L. M. Devaney, RKO general manager; Louis Rosenfeld, general manager of Columbia; James P. O'Loghlin, general manager of 20th Century-Fox; H. M. Masters, general manager, United Artists; Sam Sternberg of B&F Theatres; Ben Cronk, Famous Players art department; E. H. Wells, secretary of Canadian Film Boards of Trade; Herb Allen, Premier Theatres; Syd Taube, A. J. Laurie, J. Smith of Toronto, Fred Pursel of Simcoe, Ont., and Charlie Stephenson of Kitchener, Ont.

Jack Cohn of Columbia Pictures, New York, has been elected honorary president of the Canadian organization, the qualification for which is service of 25 years or more with the business.

Censors of Ontario Lift Ban on "Beau Geste"

TORONTO—"Beau Geste" has now been made available for release to Ontario theatres through the lifting of the order by the Provincial Board of Moving Picture Censors to withhold the feature, which action was requested by the French government because of the possibility that the story would reflect upon the armed forces of a friendly nation.

"Beau Geste" had been advertised by Manager Fred Trebilcock for showing at the Toronto Uptown last Labor Day and the film was in the theatre ready to be screened when the withdrawal was ordered by the censor board, another picture being hastily substituted. That was practically nine months ago and, in the meantime, "Beau Geste" has been released in all other provinces with the exception of Quebec where the population is largely French-Canadian.

New Park in Windsor Is Opened by Si Meretsky

TORONTO—An addition to the theatre representation in Windsor, Ont., was recorded May 17 when the new Park opened under the direction of Simon Meretsky, who operates various other houses in that city in partnership with Famous Players Canadian Corp. The Park, which seats 800, is the ninth theatre in Windsor, which is now very busy with war orders and automobile production.

MONTREAL

CONCERN over the war situation has somewhat affected business since the invasion of the Low Countries. Some exhibitors report a tendency on the part of patrons to stay home and listen to the radio. Another upsetting factor has been the annual May movings.

Up in the north end of the city, the Rivoli, situated on St. Denis street, has problems and experiences which differentiate it from neighborhood theatres in other districts. A large proportion of the customers being French it is necessary to avoid giving them pictures in which there is too much conversation in English. Pictures which did well in other sections, such as "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "His Girl Friday" and "The Women" failed to make a hit with the French-Canadians, Joe Ledden, manager, reports. On the other hand, "Balalaika," musical film, made such a hit that it may be brought back.

No Italian films have been shown in local theatres, but it is understood several have been exhibited to purely Italian audiences at the Casa d'Italia in the north end, where many of Montreal's 11,000 Italians reside. In that district, Loe Ledden of the Rivoli reports, Mussolini invariably "gets a big hand" when he appears on the news reels.

Frank H. Warnicker, veteran manager of the Strand, has been on the sick list . . . Larry Druxerman, salesman of Empire-Universal, is in the eastern townships . . . Jimmy Leggatt, former manager of the Park, Verdun, is checking "Gone With the Wind" on tour in Eastern Quebec.

"Two tickets for the price of one," an advertising scheme occasionally adopted by independents, is suggested as a permanent policy during the war for members of the armed forces.

Following the eight weeks run of "Rebecca," Joe Lightstone has brought "My Son, My Son" to the Orpheum . . . The Seville is holding over the British film comedy "A Girl Must Live," which has also opened at the Papineau.

Visitors to Filmrow include: Raoul Lafrance, Town Hall, Donnacona; T. Trow, Imperial, Three Rivers; P. Senecal, Georges, St. Therese; Gonzague Tremblay, Capitol, Chicoutimi; G. Martineau, Royal, Valleyfield, and W. O'Regan, Laurier, Hull.

A. Jeffrey, local manager of United Artists, has returned from the annual convention of that company . . . Filmrow Bowling League held its winding up party for the season May 17 at Stanley Grill . . . L. A. Ringuette, former proprietor of the Parisien, Louisville, has opened a theatre of the same name at Berthierville, Que. It was formerly operated by Mme. Brisson under the name of the Varieties.

April business was particularly good all around Montreal, partly due to Lent finishing early, managers report. May has slipped off slightly in most theatres. In some districts, where war orders have given increased employment, theatres are noticing an upward trend.

Plottels Going Places in Canadian Film Business

TORONTO—The Plottels are going places in the Canadian film business. Mark Plottel, formerly at Montreal, has been appointed manager of the Ontario branch of RKO. A few days previously, Les Plottel was appointed manager of the RKO branch at St. John, N.B., in succession to E. A. Whelpley who has retired after many years of service.

There are three other Plottel brothers, two of whom are also exchange managers in widely separated cities of the Dominion. Some months ago Joseph Plottel was promoted to manager of the Ontario branch of Warner Bros. at Toronto while Ben Plottel is manager of the Universal office at Vancouver, B.C., where he succeeded J. E. Archer several months ago, Archer going to Sovereign Films. Plottel No. 5 is in the business at Vancouver as well.

In the RKO shakeup, Mark Plottel has succeeded Frank Meyers who resigned May 18 as Toronto manager. Meyers has long been identified with the moving picture business, having made his start as co-proprietor of the Dreamland at Simcoe, Ont., in 1907, and is one of the charter members of the Canadian Picture Pioneers. H. Taylor, manager of RKO at Calgary, has been transferred to the Montreal office in succession to Mark Plottel. He is the son of Percy Taylor who was RKO general manager for Canada for many years prior to his retirement from active business when he was succeeded by Leo M. Devaney. Incidentally, Percy Taylor has divided his time between the Pacific Coast and Toronto where a married daughter resides.

Preliminary Plans Made For E-U's Convention

TORONTO—Preliminary plans have been made for the annual sales convention of Empire-Universal Films Limited which is to be held here in the Royal York Hotel, with branch managers and salesmen in attendance from each of the six branches of the company. The tentative dates for the conference are June 14-15.

It is expected officials of Universal and Republic will come from the United States for the sessions, with one day being devoted to Universal plans and policies and the second for a presentation of the Republic program. The company also is the Canadian distributor for a number of British features which will continue to be produced in spite of the war.

Skeleton Exchange Staffs Saturdays During Summer

TORONTO—Head offices and branches of Canadian film distributors here have adopted the skeleton plan for Saturday operations during the summer months, giving the majority of employes a complete holiday on that day of the week. Only a few bookers and shippers are on duty to take care of emergencies. The head office of Famous Players Canadian Corp. is practically shut down for the day.

WINNIPEG

VISITING here for a few days, the Detroit Lakes high school band and chorus had the town by the ears with their classy marching and swell brass blowing. They appeared at the Capitol for a special performance last week.

Sir Harry Lauder, now being heard on BBC broadcasts with the troops in England, will appear here soon in the film, "Song of the Road," which is booked for an early showing.

N. Rothstein is back from Chicago, sporting a new car . . . Joe Derry of Kenora, and D. B. Roberts of the Capitol, Brandon, were visitors here.

Helmer Jernberg is reported ill in the hospital . . . D. Griesdorf is in New York attending the UA convention . . . D. Brickman is at the Paramount convention at Los Angeles . . . Miss M. Ripstein of UA left for an air trip to Los Angeles, Mexico and the Islands.

F. Feinstein of Regal Films is in New York on holidays . . . Tony Wallis is now in charge of Film Enterprises . . . Claire Fallis, formerly of Rainy River, now is managing the Paris in St. Boniface.

Henry Morton has installed new seats at the Garrick . . . Max Heppner is preparing an elaborate new front at the Colonial for his showing of "France Is Ready" which will be attended by various military units of the city . . . Les Pugsley, formerly assistant manager at the Port Arthur Lyceum, has been promoted manager of the Orpheum at Moose Jaw

Clamp Down on Bingo in Cornwall After June 1

TORONTO—The lid will be clamped down in Cornwall, Ont., on June 1 when the local police and those for the surrounding townships will impose a complete blackout on all games of Bingo regardless of the alleged purpose for which they have been running wide open for the past three years with an average of five big games each week. These have been attracting crowds of from 2,000 to 2,500 at a time and prizes as high as $250 have been offered.

Council and police officials held a conference at which it was decided to place a total ban on all such games regardless of auspices. Those affected include church bodies, charity organizations, labor unions, war veterans and just plain promoters.

McPherson Heads RKO Office in Calgary

CALGARY—Joseph S. McPherson has been promoted to the branch managership of the local RKO office, succeeding H. F. Taylor, who has been appointed to the helm of an eastern office.

Paul Cardell, booker in the Calgary office, has been promoted to salesman for RKO.

Story for Alice Faye

HOLLYWOOD—"Tin Pan Alley," a Pamela Harris story, has been purchased by 20th-Fox as a vehicle for Alice Faye.

RCAF Ladies Auxiliary Holds Sunday Matinee

OTTAWA—Somewhat of a precedent was established in the matter of Sunday performances in Ontario when the Elgin, an independent house of Ottawa under the management of Lloyd M. Mills, conducted a special Sunday matinee under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Air Force for the purpose of raising funds for soldiers' comforts. A complete film program was presented and a silver collection was taken at the door, no juveniles being admitted unless accompanied by parents.

During peace years there had been a decided discouragement against the holding of shows in theatres on Sundays for any purpose, even charity performances being frowned upon as being a thin edge of the wedge which might lead to encroachment upon Sunday observance. The Sunday benefit at the Elgin aroused no comment, however, and there is now a possibility other exhibitors will place their theatres at the disposal of organizations for war charity work.

13 F-P Toronto Houses Tie With Salada Tea

TORONTO—Thirteen theatres in Toronto of Famous Players Canadian Corp. combined in a tieup with the Salada Tea Company on May 18 in which juveniles were admitted to the matinee performance on presentation of a label from a tea package, the stunt being an advertisement for the Salada Stamp Club which offers packets of postage stamps in exchange for labels. The theatres were scattered throughout the suburban areas of Toronto.

NEWS BRIEFS

ALBERTA

EDMONTON—A permit to build a $30,000 theatre was issued to I. F. Shacker of Hanna.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

VANCOUVER—Clearing of a site here to permit construction of a de luxe theatre will be started June 1, according to an announcement of Vested Estates, Ltd.

NOVA SCOTIA

CLARKS HARBOR—The 500-seat Vimy has been sold at sheriff's sale to satisfy a mortage held by Mrs. Genesta Nickerson, and was bid in by the plaintiff for $2,500.

ONTARIO

MARMORA—The village council at its last session granted Fred R. Revoy of Peterborough the exclusive rights to show motion pictures in the town hall here for one year.

SAULT STE. MARIE—The extensive alterations undertaken for the Algoma Theatre have been completed.

TORONTO—O. J. Silverthorne, chairman of the Ontario moving picture censorship board, announced that all foreign films, with the exception of French talking pictures and those from the United States, have been barred from the province.

VANCOUVER

SAM NAGLER is expected back from the United Artists convention some time this week, and it is rumored a pleasant surprise awaits him on his return . . . Charles Ramage is one of the busiest managers on Filmrow, with a large part of his time spent afield arranging promotion of "Gone With the Wind" showings in the Interior and on the Island for Regal Films.

Larry Beard, Famous Players district manager, and Frank Gow, their suburban theatres manager, were to leave May 24 for the district managers' convention in Toronto. At this meeting the date and location of the convention of the western theatre managers will probably be settled.

M. M. Carrol of the Rex, Salmon Arm, B.C., is making many improvements on the house as well as enlarging it . . . Gough's Theatre at Hedley, B.C., is now serving a dual purpose in housing the school children during the day and entertaining their elders on show nights. This has been going on since the school was put out of business by a landslide.

Ben Plottel, Empire-Universal manager who has just returned from a trip to the Island, has many complimentary comments on the attractiveness and compactness of Harold Warren's house, the Rex at Alberni.

W. S. Jones, British Columbia manager, is preparing to leave May 27 for the RKO convention in New York . . . Alexander Gough, son of C. W. Gough of Goldbridge, was quietly married last month and has taken his bride to Hedley, B.C., where he manages the Hedley and Keremeos theatres.

Confederation Declares $3 Preferred Dividend

TORONTO—A dividend of $3 for each preferred share has been declared by Confederation Amusements Limited, an affiliate of Famous Players Canadian Corp., payable June 4, according to a notice by E. N. Tabah, secretary-treasurer.

This follows the declaration of a dividend on the common stock of United Amusement Corp. and by other theatre groups for the first quarter of the current year. It indicates a willingness on the part of the chain corporations to carry on during the war period in every respect and offers a note of confidence regarding the future.

The King's Birthday Will Be Observed on June 13

TORONTO—The King's Birthday, which has become a moveable holiday in the Dominion, will be observed this year on June 13, which is a Thursday. The Canadian government has passed an order-in-council setting aside this date as a tribute to King George VI, whose birth actually took place December 14. Many offices, banks, schools and places of business throughout Canada will be closed on the second Thursday in June and the theatres will get some benefit.

Amazing Mr. Williams
Here's one every one will like and it surely moves along. Good for the whole family. Wed., Thursday. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Rural patronage. Population: 1,500. Capacity: 350.—F. D. Morris, Meade, Meade, Kas.

Five Little Peppers at Home
Played this picture one day only and on a cash night. It is a kid picture, pleased all the children, but got few comments. Managed to slide through and break even. Play it if you wish. Thursday. Weather: Cool. Admission: 25-10. Town and rural patronage. Population: 670. Capacity: 408.—Jack Story, Mary Agnes, Jamestown, Ky.

Good Girls Go to Paris
Just fair. Had a tieup on this one with soft drink manufacturer. Did only average business. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fair. Admission: 30-15. Rural patronage. Population: 1,800 Capacity: 500.—Harland Rankin, Plaza, Tilbury, Ont.

His Girl Friday
A delightful remake of "The Front Page." Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell turn in swell account of themselves. If you can get them in for this one they will come out very satisfied, so do something special to get them in. Audience: Liked it very much. Boxoffice: No good.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Dr. Kildare's Strange Case
Some of the industry's top-flight reviewers may not think so much of this series in general and this pix in particular, but the public goes for it in a big way and that is what counts. This kind of picture is the industry's bread and butter. Audience: Liked it 100 per cent. Boxoffice: About average.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

40 Little Mothers
Eddie Cantor is not very well suited to his part in this one. Charlie Ruggles would have been a "wow." Audience: All thought the baby was "cute." No remarks much on rest of cast. Boxoffice: Below average for Sunday-Monday.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

Gone With the Wind
No question but its the finest picture ever made, but my patrons cannot afford the $1.12 per. Attendance at matinees at 75 cents more than double the night shows. Fri., Sat. Weather: Fine. Rural patronage. Population: 1,500. Capacity: 350.—F. D. Morris, Meade, Meade, Kas.

Strange Cargo
Not the most pleasant picture in the world, but nevertheless a satisfactory tropical-setting picture with a fair boxoffice draw. Most of the men patrons liked it—some of the women didn't. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage.—Walter J. Buchholtz, New Haven, New Haven, Mo.

Paramount

All Women Have Secrets
On a double bill (with RKO's "Reno") these two pictures failed to draw the usual business for bargain night. Just too much for the males to swallow in one evening. The females had other dates. Tuesday. Weather: Fine. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Farmer's Daughter
Looked a little crude to me. Can't say just what is the matter here but the picture didn't come up to what I believe could have been done under this title by a long way. Audience: Indifferent. Boxoffice: No good.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

Gulliver's Travels
Played on my preferred playing time, straight percentage, no guarantee, checked by Ross Federal. Business exceedingly poor. The kids liked it. Adults stayed in their cars until the children came out. You're asking me what's wrong with the business? The producers gamble too much on a story and their salesmen talk too much. Sun., Mon. Weather: Ideal. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Light of the Western Stars
Not bad at all and a lot better than most westerns which often are so inconsistent they are silly. Our people didn't snicker during this one as they do when we attempt to play run-of-the-mill westerns, and that is something.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

Republic

Arizona Kid
Roy Rogers not as popular as Autry. Did only one-third of the business of "South of the Border." Just fair picture. Fri., Sat. Weather: Fine. Admission: 30-15. Rural patronage. Population: 1,800. Capacity: 500.—Harland Rankin, Plaza, Tilbury, Ont.

RKO Radio

Allegheny Uprising
Just another historical flop conceived and executed by the brain trust of Hollywood. A lot of noise and racket. I didn't hear anyone say they liked it. Even the kids don't swallow the Injun stuff any more. No boxoffice value to this one in my town. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Good. Admission: 40-10. General patronage. Population: 3,000. Capacity: 486.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium, Emporium, Pa.

Pinocchio
Sorry Walt Disney has failed so far to take his cue from "Snow White" and make cartoon features featuring animals. It was the animals and dwarfs that made the hit then and in this one the cat nearly steals the show. Picture starts out pretty lively but bogs down in last half. Audience: Only the kids were mildly enthusiastic. Boxoffice: About the same as second showing of "Snow White." We showed "S. W." twice, once as roadshow and then at regular admissions.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

Swiss Family Robinson
A swell picture that will appeal to adults and children alike. In these troubled times, a person might even envy the adventures of the Robinson family on the tropical isle as depicted in the picture. Attendance only fair. Sat., Sun. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage.—Walter J. Buchholtz, New Haven, New Haven, Mo.

20th Century-Fox

High School
Jane's popularity seems to be growing in my community and this picture didn't hurt it a bit. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage.—Walter J. Buchholtz, New Haven, New Haven, Mo.

Little Old New York
A picture dealing with the invention of the steamboat entertainingly told. Did better than average weekday business with this one. Wed., Thurs. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage.—Walter J. Buchholtz, New Haven, New Haven, Mo.

Little Old New York
I thought this picture was very good. Well produced and superbly acted and directed, it still failed to click at the boxoffice, which just goes to prove, I am afraid, that the public doesn't go too much for historical pictures. I thought Alice Faye did a swell job, silk-hat critics' opinions to the contrary. Audience: Those who came liked it fine. Boxoffice: Couldn't get past average.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

Star Dust
Entertaining little picture and a good laugh in the lighter vein but not strong enough to draw them in. Believe a better preview would have helped. Audience: Enjoyed it. Boxoffice: No good.—E. A. Stein, Out-Wickenburg-Way, Wickenburg, Ariz.

United Artists

Eternally Yours
Very nice entertainment. A trifle draggy at times but above the average for entertainment. Sun., Mon., Tues. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Rural patronage. Population: 1,500. Capacity: 350.—F. D. Morris, Meade, Meade, Kas.

House Across the Bay
A swell picture full of entertainment and is Miss Bennett easy to watch! She is very ably supported by George Raft and Walter Pidgeon. Sun., Mon., Tues. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Rural patronage. Population: 1,500. Capacity: 350.—F. D. Morris, Meade, Meade, Kas.

Universal

Destry Rides Again
A super western with everything you could ask in that type picture. Good cast, plenty of action and thrills, and likeable musical numbers. Played this too late to an average Sunday-Monday boxoffice. Weather: Fair. Admission: 25-10. Small town patronage.—Walter J. Buchholtz, New Haven, New Haven, Mo.

Warner Bros.

Wings of the Navy
Despite it being an older film it's the best airplane film since "Test Pilot." Our customers really liked it. They couldn't forget the power-dive made by John Payne, who they like, nor Frank McHugh's comedy. Business: Can't complain, call it good. Thurs., Fri., Sat. Weather: Good. Admission: 25-10. Rural patronage. Population: 500. Capacity: 200. — John Grabenstein, Liberty, Eustis, Neb.

PRACTICAL IDEAS BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Window Display, Old Auto In "Grapes" Promotion

SLATER, Mo.—Two promotions of especial significance were used by Harold Sachse of the Kiva here to sell "Grapes of Wrath." In an empty storeroom near the theatre entrance he set up a window display with a burlap background and a dirty floor covering, a shack made of burlap and lathe, two old mattresses on the floor of the shack, an apple crate with lantern on it, an apple crate with tin pans on it for a table, apple crates for chairs, an ax stuck in a block of wood, two old black kettles hanging over kindling wood, and a few tin cans thrown on the floor. A sign tacked on the shack and made of part of the apple crate read, "The Joad Family." On another such sign was picture, date, etc.

Sachse secured a Model T pickup on which he stacked all the junk he could find: mattress, springs, buckets, chairs, old blankets and quilts. On the back was a banner, "The Joad Family is Coming to Slater, Sunday and Monday, at the Kiva Theatre." On each side were signs: "The Joad Family in 'Grapes of Wrath' at the Kiva Theatre, Sunday and Monday." The pickup made several surrounding towns.

Hold Coloring Contest For "Biscuit Eater"

HARTFORD, CONN.—M&P's Allyn, which is managed by Walter B. Lloyd, sponsored a coloring contest in the Hartford Courant two weeks in advance of the running of "The Biscuit Eater." Contestants had to color the dog which was printed in the "Parade of Youth" section of the newspaper. Cash awards were given from the stage of the theatre on opening day.

Going in for dogdom in a big way on this film, Manager Lloyd held a Dog Show at Colt's Park for all youngsters of the metropolitan Hartford area who owned dogs and wished to enter them in the contest. This stunt was done through cooperation on the part of the new tabloid in town, the Hartford News Daily.

Newspapers Help Push "It All Came True"

KANSAS CITY—"It All Came True" was plugged plenty in the two local dailies by Monroe Rubinger, Warner exploiteer, and Jerry Zigmond before it opened at the Newman, which is managed by the latter.

The Star serialized Louis Bromfield's "It All Came True," on which, of course, the film is based, with the beginning of the story given a front-page plug. The paper also ran two promotional ads, one with John Taylor's, the other with Jones department store.

The Journal carried a promotional ad with a fashion note as well as several layouts on its fashion page.

Rounding out the campaign were window displays in leading stores, the posting of a number of 24-sheets, and spot radio announcements.

Annual "Revival Week" Established in Austin

AUSTIN, TEX. — First annual "revival Week" at the Capitol chalked up such nice grosses that Manager Bill Hellums has decided to make it an annual affair. Hellums plugged the event with newspaper ads and publicity, heralds which were given out at the other six Interstate houses, and plenty of lights, flags and signs on the front of the West Sixth Street house.

Program for the week was as follows: "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Sunday; "Dark Victory," Monday; "Pygmalion," Tuesday; "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Wednesday; "Juarez," Thursday; "The Women," Friday, and "The Wizard of Oz," Saturday.

Heavy Campaign Sells Merrie Melody Short

BRIDGETON, N. J.—A special advertising campaign on a Merrie Melody cartoon, "Cross Country Detours" was conducted with telling results by Manager Dan C. Neagley of the Stanley.

Neagley had a screen announcement prepared accompanied by a "laughing record" which proved effective in arousing the interest of the audience. A direct mail campaign was utilized in addition to a regular ad campaign in the local and four out-of-town papers. A drawing contest was planted with the local paper.

The student newspaper of the local junior high school conducted "Cross Country Detours" jumble contests and ran comments from the high school teachers about the reel. A lounge room, living room and card room were built in the center of the lobby with this sign above: "Reserved for those patrons who will have hysterics after seeing 'Cross Country Detours.'"

An animated fat man was placed at the entrance to the lobby with copy referring to the cartoon. A dummy leaning against the boxoffice was used as ballyhoo. Copy around the dummy's head read: "I am a dummy because I am not going to see 'Cross Country Detours.'"

Loren Purnell, chief of service, assisted.

Game Pleases Juveniles

BUFFALO—After experimenting for a long time with stimulations for Saturday kiddie matinees, Edward Wise, manager of the Bailey here, has found Hollywood, "the screen game of film star names," is a great booster for juvenile trade. Many forms of merchandise and toys are given.

"Cave Girl" Prints—

Based on symbols in "One Million B. C.," these print dresses were displayed in the James McCreery department store in New York in a tieup with the picture at the Roxy.

IF NOT "A," THEN "B"

IT HAS to be said for Samuel Goldwyn that he stands by his guns. At least, he stands by two of them, one to bump off double features and the other to blast the bulk of the product into the region of the never more.

It has to be said that Goldwyn has fired them often enough over the years and finally to observe that, while the explosions have been loud, the damage has been inflicted on the eardrums while the targets thus far have passed unscathed.

Today, we propose allowing the argument against double features to slide by on the inconclusive theory that nothing apparently can be done about them as long as anything resembling public acceptance can be drawn into the calculations. And circuit men and other operators are convinced it can because their books tell them so.

The concentration on this page this time goes to the producer's belief Hollywood output ought to be reduced from its approximate six hundred features each year to two hundred. Goldwyn suggests slashing no budgets, thereby remaining faithful to the Hollywood tradition, but thickening the dollar spread over the fewer number. The arguments are old-line, of course:

Available talent will not be consumed so quickly.

Available brainpower, being insufficient to make six hundred, might prove enough if four hundred were cut off entirely.

The product will improve because each job will be customed-made, etc., etc.

But there runs a curious contradiction through the Goldwyn approach. On the one hand, the producer argues a most drastic curtailment as his answer to industry difficulties. On the other, he makes it clear he approaches the problem through his own highly individualized eyes and proves it by conceding no exhibitor depends upon him to keep his theatre going. There's a difference.

Until that point of development is reached where established and proven producers may be counted in sufficient numbers to assure no interruptions in the flow of worthwhile attractions, the Goldwyn type of argument gets nowhere, proves nothing.

It is among the definite assets of this business to acknowledge its Goldwyns, its Capras, its Selznicks. It is an unfortunate truth that the magic number is woefully small. Yet is it also true that these men and the few others entitled to walk in the same company do not deliver enough superior product, in combination, to keep the exhibition business functioning in its present framework?

Their endeavor may decorate the scene. Frequently, it dazzles the boxoffice. When it is right, it is usually very right and it makes the theatreman's operation all the sweeter. But that same theatreman will quickly recognize what a spot he is in waiting for a Goldwyn, a Capra or a Selznick to come his way.

The bald fact is that the majors are in the business of feeding a large and assorted list of customers who burn up celluloid by the mile. Some of the feedings turn out well and some even surprise the studio that makes them; part is averagely good and a lot is just plain lousy.

Yet all of it sells because the demand is there and insists upon being filled. Someone will do the job and at two hundred features a year—the Goldwyn suggestion—the majors cannot be that someone.

They are thoroughly aware of this. They see no reason why they should give up the playdates that mean money to a competition which they would be creating. If, by cutting their output, a wholesale exhibitor turnover to extended runs would ensue, that would be one thing. There is no assurance for this, although it is well known that in Hollywood a conviction largely prevails exhibition must re-fashion itself in ratio to studio output. Furthermore, it is fallacious reasoning to conclude doubles will drop away because the majors cut their programs. And it is fallacious, too, to conclude extended runs will become more extended by virtue of the same act.

It would be well to remember that, as the market dictates, so will go production. It may not be production confined to what are now described as major studios. It could, and probably would, be new production rising to an opportunity broadcast to the winds for anyone lucky enough to bag.

This kind of production, created by opportunism, might be far worse than any prevailing under existing conditions.

GOVERNMENT AND INDUSTRY GUNS UNLIMBER FOR OPENING OF MONOPOLY SUIT ON MONDAY

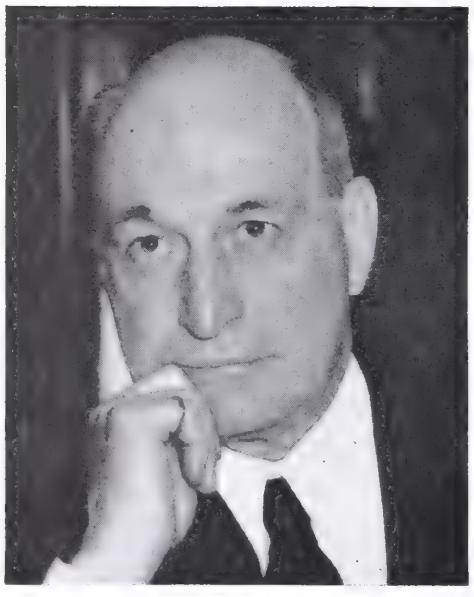
"Fight to Finish" Seen; Expect Year of Trial If Case Is Pushed

By BILL ORNSTEIN

NEW YORK—War or no war overseas and all efforts towards effecting an armistice having failed, the government's legal battery on Monday will get its official campaign under way to "overthrow monopolism" as allegedly practiced in the industry. Paul Williams will open the proceedings before Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard in the local district court with a resume of the government's petition and what it hopes to accomplish. He says he will be as short as possible.

Individual counsel for each of the eight majors will then follow and recite their company's position in a general denial of the charges made by the government. The defense legal brigade to answer the government will comprise John W. Davis, for Loew's and M-G-M; former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher, for Paramount; former Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, for Warner; William (Fighting Bill of the Old 69th) J. Donovan, for RKO; Ralph S. Harris, for 20th-Fox; Edward C. Raftery, for UA and Universal, and Louis D. Frohlich, for Columbia.

Both sides resolutely declare it will be "a fight to the finish." Unless a truce, on some basis probably not even envisioned yet, but as likely to come about as it did in the government's equity proceeding against Warner, Paramount and RKO in St. Louis, is declared before the final round is over, the legal fracas is expected to take at least a year.



An industry spokesman presages receivership for majors if the government wins the suit in the highest court. In rebuttal is the view of a department of justice representative who denies a victory will mean ruin for the industry. Detailed opinions by both sides can be found on pages 12 and 13.....

Williams has indicated he plans to spend four months for presentation of his case. Distributors hold they will require six months, or more, for rebuttal and cross-examination. But in any event, one thing is certain. That is Judge Goddard will take a two-month vacation starting August 1, or thereabouts. He has been asked by government sources to shorten his time off in an effort to expedite the proceedings and has politely and flatly declined.

On the opening day and for several days thereafter, the small courtroom is expected to be overcrowded with lawyers and executives interested in the case. During the course of the hearings it is not held unlikely that Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied; Col. H. A. Cole, president; Sidney E. Samuelson, head of the Philadelphia unit, and other organization leaders will be among the spectators. Practically every Allied head has been subpoenaed, but whether all will be called is contingent on Williams' operations.

The government has spent four years or more whipping together evidence for the suit. Distributors have been active about two years, the last six months of which have been spent on research and investigation. FBI men from the field have played an important part in contacting ex-

Industry Faces "Athletic" Staff

NEW YORK—If it were to be played off in terms of prowess in the field of sports, probably the government lawyers prepared now to prosecute the all-industry suit would take it away from defense counsel in a walkaway. Almost all of the battery of ten federal attorneys are big men who played some game or other in their university years which, for most of them, don't date so far back.

For instance:

Paul Williams, who will head the attack for the government, is six feet, one inch in height and weighs 190 pounds. He went to Cornell where he caught on the ball club.

William P. Farnsworth, head of the New York office of the department, is a Dartmouth graduate, six feet, two inches in height, weighing 180. Farnsworth laughingly remarks his favorite sport is yacht racing which would seem more readily within the team of the defense counsel. He played left-end in school and was a first baseman.

James Malley, a Lehigh man, is six feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. He was a left halfback in school and also specialized in tennis.

Stephen Doyle, the veteran of the department's prosecution staff, attended Johns Hopkins and Harvard Law School. He is five feet, nine inches in height, weighing 135 pounds and his sport is swimming.

J. Frank Cunningham attended Baylor University in Waco, Tex., and Jefferson Law School in Dallas. He is six feet two

Men and the Place

On the facing page are many of the legal stars who will shine in the all-industry suit, slated to get under way in New York on June 3. The top panel includes John W. Davis, senior partner of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner and Reed, attorneys for Loew's and M-G-M; Thomas D. Thacher of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, representing Paramount; Joseph M. Proskauer of Proskauer, Rose and Paskus, defending Warner; Col. William J. Donovan of Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lumbard, representing RKO, and Ralph S. Harris of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey, representing 20th Century-Fox. Immediately below Davis and Thacher are Edward C. Raftery of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, representing UA and Universal, and Louis D. Frohlich of Schwartz and Frohlich, representing Columbia. The group of seven comprises part of the prosecuting staff. Seated, left to right, are John F. Clagett, Paul Williams, in charge of the case, and William P. Farnsworth, while standing, left to right, are J. Stephen Doyle jr., James M. Malley, J. Frank Cunningham and H. G. Robinson. They are flanked below by Seymour Krieger and Robert L. Wright.

The building exterior is the facade of the United States court house, while below is the door leading into the courtroom which is pictured on the right, revealing what Judge Goddard will see peopled from the bench. These court interiors were photographed for BOXOFFICE by special, and infrequently granted, permission of Senior Judge John C. Knox. Cosmo-Sileo made all pictures for BOXOFFICE with the exception of Proskauer, who was photographed by Kay Hart and Donovan by I. N. P.

Notes to You from Red Kann

ONE on the trial, consent decrees and legal angles.

One lawyer gives it as his conviction that any decree which may be evolved after the trial gets moving in court must contain findings of facts which clearly set up the guilt of the defendants. He maintains this is not specifically written down, whether in statute or in Supreme Court precedent, but that it follows, nevertheless.

Assuming this to be true, such findings of fact alone might furnish potential litigants sufficient provocation to file suits in unlimited number. On the other hand, no decree conceivably would mean no findings of facts. And no findings of fact would mean litigants would be compelled to establish through their own counsel reasonable proof of guilt.

As a speculative approach to what the future might possibly bring, however, is the suggestion advanced that it would be possible to enter a consent decree during trial by a "bargaining" process which would eliminate findings of fact, which are the key to any future law suits. In short, if Thurman Arnold, for example, were to feel he had won most of the points he seeks in the trial, he might make a stipulation that the court dispense with such findings.

It's complicated, but if you catch the drift it might serve as a door opener to events to come. No assurance that the future will work this way accompanies this analysis.

Looking Backward

There is reason to believe that a policy step, up for vote of the RKO stockholders at their annual meeting in Wilmington Wednesday, might well be likened to a page torn out of earlier history at Paramount where George J. Schaefer once was a pivotal figure. The RKO holders will be asked to approve an amendment to the by-laws permitting indemnification of its officers and directors against expenses incurred in connection with suits brought against them by reason of their official positions.

The proxy statement to stockholders puts it in this language:

> "If the corporation is to continue to secure and retain the services of capable and responsible persons to serve as its directors and officers, the management believes that it is fair and proper that the corporation agree to reimburse its officers and directors for expenses reasonably incurred by, or imposed upon them, in connection with, or resulting from, proceedings to which they may be made parties by reason of their position with the corporation."

When Paramount went into receivership, one of the subsequent events was a suit against some of its former officers and some of its directors. The action had to be defended personally by each man involved although the complaints alleged had been entered upon in the course of corporate duty. It would seem, therefore, that the proposed move at RKO is designed to avoid any such possible complication, now or at any time in the future.

A 20-Year Wonder

On market research and its need, Walter Wanger remarks:

> "For twenty years I have been wondering why this industry has never prepared intelligent statistics and applied the methods of modern industry as they are applied to every other great enterprise in this country. I think the basis for any reorganization in this industry must be founded on an intelligent survey which is yet to be made.
> "As a producer, I would like to know how many pictures are really required, how much 'A' time is available and fifty other questions. In my opinion, the 'hit-and-miss' policy is what has kept this industry from becoming stabilized."

Pointed, Anyway

Editorially, the "Philadelphia Bulletin" makes this interesting observation:

> "Higher admission prices . . . will not be popular with the picture fans; nor do they seem necessary. A genuinely first class film can have a long run, as 'Gone With the Wind' had, even though the price in that class was raised. The producers might well try the experiment of attracting attendance by quality before they try higher prices, which are after all no assurance of better pictures."

Was that a roar from the general direction of Hollywood?

COLUMBIA TO HAVE 60 FEATURES FOR 1940-41, AN INCREASE OF FOUR OVER CURRENT SEASON

Determined to Increase Domestic Revenue in Face of War Blows

CHICAGO—A. Montague, general sales manager of Columbia, will announce a program of 44 features, 16 westerns, 104 single-reel shorts, 26 doubles and four serials for next season shortly after 125 delegates from the home office and the field gather at the Blackstone, Tuesday. The output marks an increase of four features over the current season and indicates the company is determined to increase its domestic revenue in face of declining monetary results from war-stricken Europe.

Selling Has Begun

Some time ago, district managers from the entire country convened in New York for meetings with Montague at which time a selling formula for 1940-41 was set up. Since then a number of deals have been made. At the local sessions, a final policy will be established based on the reaction of exhibitor accounts already contacted.

Jack Cohn, vice-president, will open the four-day meeting here by welcoming delegates. He then will turn the gavel over to Montague, who will preside during the balance of the conclave.

Importance of manpower will be stressed by Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager. He will be followed by an address by A. Schneider, treasurer. Maurice Bergman, publicity, advertising and exploitation head, will discuss matters of importance as they relate to his sovereignty. Joseph McConville, in charge of foreign, will talk on that subject. Other speakers include Max Weisfeldt, short subjects generalissimo; Al Seligman, in charge of accessories, and Maurice Grad on sales promotion.

Many From Field

In addition to these executives, the following from the home office will attend: Hank Kaufman, George Josephs, Bernie Zeeman, Seth Raisler, Vincent Borrelli, Irving Sherman, Joseph Freiberg, William Brennan and Al Sherman.

Present from the field will be the following division and branch managers and salesmen:

Chicago: Phil Dunas, division manager; F. Flaherty, C. W. Phillips, T. Greenwood, I. Joseph, M. Delano and W. J. Kahl, salesmen.

Denver: R. C. Hill, branch manager; M. B. Shooker, S. Dare, S. Cramer and T. J. Robinson, salesmen.

Des Moines: M. H. Evidon, branch manager; A. B. Leake, M. Goodman, O. Miller, B. Thomas, salesmen.

Detroit: Carl Shalit, division manager; H. R. Schilds, R. F. Cloud, G. L. McCoy, C. H. Townsend and C. Baker, salesmen.

Indianapolis: W. G. Craig, branch manager; H. Kaufman, C. Butler, A. J. Gelman and L. Shubnell, salesmen.

Kansas City: B. C. Marcus, branch manager; T. Baldwin; W. Bradfield, C. E. Reynolds, H. S. Stulz, Z. Beiser and M. Shackelford, salesmen.

Los Angeles: Jerome Safron, division manager; W. C. Ball, branch manager; H. Wineburg, S. Fisher, H. M. Lentz, N. Newman and Mike Newman, salesmen.

Milwaukee: O. J. Ruby, branch manager; T. J. MacEvoy, S. R. Chapman and D. V. Chapman, salesmen.

Minneapolis: H. J. Chapman, branch manager; M. E. Mazur, I. Marks, D. H. Conley, M. W. Sgutt, A. L. Aved and W. Evidon, salesmen.

Omaha: J. H. Jacobs, branch manager; E. Dunas, J. Zide, F. Horn and R. Adler, salesmen.

Portland: J. R. Beale, branch manager; C. E. Tillman, W. T. Withers and L. S. Metzelaar, salesmen.

Salt Lake City: W. G. Seib, branch manager; K. Lloyd, L. E. Kennedy, H. Green and W. Sterzer, salesmen.

San Francisco: L. E. Tillman, branch manager; C. Scott, P. Weinstein, E. Roberts and M. Klein, salesmen.

Seattle: L. N. Walton, branch manager; R. A. Ackles, W. K. Beckwith and W. Kostenbader, salesmen.

St. Louis: C. D. Hill, branch manager; L. A. LaPlante, J. Bradford, C. Ferris and R. Mortenson, salesmen.

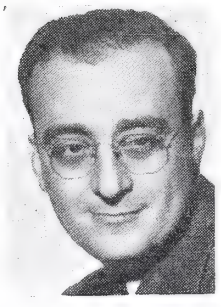
Canada: L. Rosenfeld, general manager and D. H. Coplan, sales manager.

Calgary: H. Harnick, salesman.

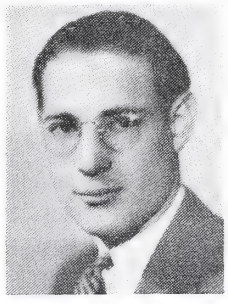
Montreal: W. Elman and A. Cohen, salesmen.

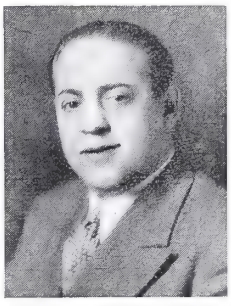
Toronto: A. B. Cass and J. Allen, salesmen.

Vancouver: H. Levant, salesman.



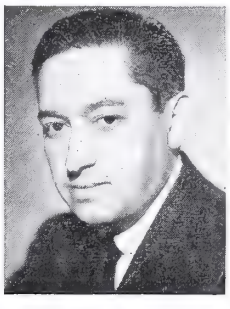
Winnipeg: I. Levitt and Jo. C. Cohen, salesmen.





Prepared for Meet—

Headlining the Columbia executive force to gather at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, from Tuesday to Friday are: Top row, left to right, Jack Cohn, vice-president, and A. Montague, general sales manager. Below Montague are Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager, and Abe Schneider, treasurer. In the next row are Louis Astor and Louis Weinberg, circuit sales executives. In the bottom row are Max Weisfeldt, short subject sales supervisor, and Maurice Bergman, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation.



26 OF RKO'S 53 FOR 1940-41 ON "A" LIST; NO BUDGET CUTS; NO CEILING ON BIG ONES

Ten Outside Producers Will Contribute 17; Plan 6 Westerns

NEW YORK—RKO will have 26 "A" pictures on its 1940-41 lineup of 53 pictures, according to George J. Schaefer, president, who told delegates at the annual sales convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel the budget will be no less than the current one with no limit on the amount to be spent for quality productions.

In outlining the program, which consists of 46 features, six westerns and one March of Time special, Schaefer revealed ten outside producing units will contribute a total of 17 features.

The Stars

The stars who will be featured include Ginger Rogers, Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton, Ronald Colman, Cary Grant, Charles Boyer, Anna Neagle, Jean Arthur, Maureen O'Hara, Orson Welles, Richard Dix, Jean Hersholt and Ann Shirley.

Producers for RKO release both on the company's lot and at other studios include: The Play's the Thing Productions, Gene Towne and Graham Baker, who plan two; Pyramid Pictures, Jerrold T. Brandt and Charles E. Ford, who will do a series of three "Scattergood Baines;" Stephens-Lang Productions, William Stephens and Howard Lang, who will do three "Dr. Christian" features; Andre Daven and Nat Wachsberger will do two with Charles Boyer; Norman Krasna and Frank Ross will do two; Harold Lloyd one; United Producers, William Hawks, one with Ronald Colman; Franklin-Blank Productions, two "novelty" features; Voco Productions, Jack Votion and Sam Coslow, one; and Vogue Pictures, Ltd., Lou Ostrow, a feature based on the cartoon character "Li'l Abner."

Short Subject Lineup

There will be 190 short subject releases consisting of 161 single reels and 29 two-reelers. The single reels are: 104 issues of Pathe News, 18 Walt Disneys, 13 "Information Please," 13 "Sportscopes," and 13 "Picture People." Two-reelers are: 13 March of Times, six comedies with Leon Errol and six with Edgar Kennedy, and four Ray Whitley musicals.

J. J. Nolan, vice-president, heads studio operations. Harry E. Edington, executive producer, will be in charge of the "A" productions and Lee Marcus, executive producer, will be in charge of the "B" productions. Other producers are: Frederic Ullman jr., Howard S. Benedict, Bert Gilroy, David Hempstead, Erich Pommer, Clem Beauchamp, Cliff Reid, Lou Brock, Robert Sisk and William Sistrom.

Among the directors are John Farrow, Leslie Goodwins, Jack Hively, David Howard, Boris Ingster, Garson Kanin, Ray McCarey, Lewis Milestone, Irving Reis, Robert Stevenson, Anatole Litvak and Frank Woodruff.

Featured players include Lucille Ball, Edmund Lowe, Kay Francis, Wendy Barrie, Jack Oakie, Charles Winninger, Joan Carroll, Richard Cromwell, James Ellison, Leon Errol, Virginia Vale, Linda Hayes, Patric Knowles, Elsa Lanchester, Frances Langford, Anita Louise, Jimmy Lydon, Ann Miller, Alan Mowbray, Donald McBride, Gene Raymond, Barbara Read, Kent Taylor, Lee Tracy and Lupe Velez.

The Features

The lineup, titles, producers, directors and casts, as outlined by RKO follow:

"Kitty Foyle" starring Ginger Rogers. David Hempstead will produce. Donald Ogden Stewart and Dalton Trumbo will do the screenplay.

Charles Boyer will be starred in two by Andre Daven and Nat Wachsberger in association with Harry Brandt. "Ariane Pretens" based upon a novel by Claudet Anet will be the first which Anatole Litvak will direct.

"Sister Carrie" by Theodore Dreiser will be produced by Robert Sisk. Sam and Bella Spewack are doing the screenplay.

"Valley of the Sun" by Clarence Budington Kelland will also be produced by Sisk. This is being adapted for the screen by Bartlett Cormack.

"Ann's House of Dreams" will co-star Anne Shirley and Patric Knowles. Cliff Reid will produce and Jack Hilvey will direct.

"Little Men" will be produced by Gene Towne and Graham Baker and the cast will include Kay Francis, Charles Winninger, Jack Oakie, Jimmy Lydon, Charles Esmond and Pamela Caveness. Norman McLeod will direct.

"Freckles" with Joan Carroll and Jimmy Lydon heading the cast. Cliff Reid produces.

Sidney Howard's "The Other Man" will co-star Carole Lombard and Charles Laughton with William Gargan and Harry Carey in supporting roles. Garson Kanin directs and Erich Pommer produces. Robert Ardrey is writing the screenplay.

"Two on an Island" starring Ginger Rogers and produced by Erich Pommer.

"Too Many Girls," a George Abbott musical, will have an all-star cast including Lucille Ball, Ann Miller, Frances Langford, Desie Arnaz (from the original show) Ernest Truex and Marie Wilson. John Twist adapted the play and the music and lyrics are by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart.

Emphasis on Music

Kay Kyser starring in a musical novelty feature to be produced and directed by David Butler. The cast will include Ginny Simms, Harry Babbitt and Sully Mason.

"No, No, Nanette" starring Anna Neagle, produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox.

"Sunny" will also star Anna Neagle with Herbert Wilcox as the producer-director.

"They Met in Argentina" produced by Lou Brock will have Maureen O'Hara, Gene Raymond and Alberto Vila as the leads.

"Dreaming Out Loud" featuring Lum and Abner and including Frances Langford, Frank Craven, Phil Harris and Robert Wilcox. Jack Votion and Sam Coslow will produce and Harold Young direct.

"Li'l Abner" will be the first feature to be made by Vogue Productions with Lou Ostrow as production executive.

Smith Heads Sales; Mochrie Upped

NEW YORK—In a realignment of RKO personnel, A. W. Smith jr., eastern division manager, has been promoted to sales manager, filling the vacancy when Jules Levy resigned. Robert E. Mochrie, southern district manager, assumes the former Smith post.

Charles Boasberg, Buffalo branch head, is now eastern central district chief, replacing E. L. McEvoy, resigned. Elmer Lux, salesman under Boasberg, assumes managership of Buffalo. J. H. MacIntyre, New England district manager, takes over Mochrie's former title, while Gus J. Schaefer of the foreign department is now New England district head.

The new selling policy is two at 40 per cent, six at 35; eight at 30, and 10 at 25.

"INDUSTRY RUIN" NOT SOUGHT BY GOV'T; ASKS "FREEDOM OF COMPETITION," SAYS SPOKESMAN

Theatre Divestment Seen As Only Assurance of Free, Open Market

By B. O. TELLER

NEW YORK—The government is not trying to ruin the film business, despite what distributors claim, but "we are trying to get it to comport with the American fundamentals of free competition," a spokesman for the department of justice here stated on the eve of the all inclusive suit.

"I do believe, however, that if some companies are forced to give up their theatres they will have to go out of business, so bad are their pictures," the department spokesman added. "There can never be a free and open market until the circuits dispose of their theatre units."

Two Decisions the Basis

Declaring the government and the film industry's attorneys do not see eye to eye on the basic economic principles of the Sherman Act, the department will rely, in part, on two decisions which quote and interpret the law, according to the observer. The first is U. S. vs. Colgate in which the presiding judge stated: "The fundamental purpose of the Sherman Act is to secure equality of opportunity and to protect the public against evils commonly incident to destruction of competition through monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade."

The second decision, in the case of Ramsay Co. vs. Bill Posters Ass'n, states: "The Sherman Act was intended to secure equality of opportunity and to protect the public against the evils commonly incident to monopolies and those abnormal contracts and combinations which tend directly to suppress the conflict for advantage called competition—the play of contending forces ordinarily engendered by an honest desire for gain."

Interpretations Vary

The spokesman's interpretation of the two quotations, briefly, is that "the Sherman Act is to preserve equality of opportunity amongst those who wish to engage and are engaged in an industry."

He then asks: "Have you got in your industry the American system of fair and open competition?" The supreme court has defined the Sherman Act, but its interpretation varies greatly in the minds of the government and industry attorneys. "Lawyers for the picture companies say they cannot operate differently, that present methods grew over the years to be accepted by the business and it cannot function any other way. But we disagree."

Taking a poke at Allied's critics, the government spokesman continues:

"You will never have peace in this industry of yours until you have a fair and open field and each man can compete with respective ability. The leaders of your industry have put this thing on a personal basis calling Abe Myers a dirty so and so, that this exhibitor has never been any good and that one is some other vile name."

That the government has a two-fold purpose ahead of it is pointed out by the representative for the department. "The evils of the business started in small towns where an exhibitor had one theatre, then bought or built others until he had a circuit of his own. Later he joined up with one of the larger circuits. Our job is not only to break up the majors' operations in the theatre field but also to dissolve the independent circuits."

Has Theatre Plan

The spokesman believes the best way to accomplish this is to have the court turn over all the theatres of the major and independent circuits to trustees who would operate until suitable purchasers come along. Such theatres would not be sold in groups, but only one to an individual.

For an exhibitor to operate more than one theatre would give him a buying advantage over the man with a single house, the department source contends. This would then not be in conformity with the government's ideology of free and open competition in trading. "The public is entitled to the advantages of free competition," it is stated.

"For the majors to own theatres is a form of controlling the market for its products. There is no freedom of contract, hence there can be no freedom of trading." Bringing home his point, the spokesman declares the Criterion on Broadway was unable to secure the product it now enjoys under Loew affiliation when it was independently operated by B. S. Moss. Similar situations exist throughout the country, it is added.

That independent producers are hampered from securing first run outlets is another matter stressed by the department. "The majors use Republic product only when they need it. This company has made some fine pictures. Why haven't they been treated the same as any other producer?"

"Wind" Metro Deal Puzzles

Why "Gone With the Wind" was produced by David O. Selznick in cooperation with M-G-M and distributed by Loew's when Selznick has been making his pictures for UA release is something that is puzzling the government. Selznick may be called to the stand to explain this.

The trade practice plan drafted by the department of commerce after negotiations with leading industry executives and others is ridiculed by the justice department. Although no comment would be made on the chief objections, one pointed out was that under the new selling plan suggested, independents competing against majors in small towns were being offered a vague promise of "some run."

75-80 Suits Pend; New All-Time High

New York—In addition to the all-industry action, distributor attorneys estimate from 75 to 80 anti-trust suits now pending against them in various courts throughout the country. This is an all-time high, it is stated.

At the close of 1939, the official estimate on anti-trust litigation was 58 in which the numerous plaintiffs sought a total of $23,904,431 in damages. Some of these have been settled, five at the most, and the difference between this figure and the new one represents the number of actions instituted since the first of the year.

Received 793 Complaints in Decade, States Justice Dep't

WASHINGTON—The department of justice has furnished the Senate committee on the Neely bill with information that shows 793 complaints filed by exhibitors from all parts of the country from 1930 to the end of March this year. Each year shows substantial increases except 1934, the first year of the NRA when theatre owners allegedly grieved filed complaints with local code boards. The largest number were registered last year, but according to the department the end of the current year is expected to show a decided increase over 1939.

The tally, as compiled by the department and made available to Senator Neely, points out there were 14 complaints in 1930, 19 in 1931, 36 in 1932, 53 the following year and a total of 11 in 1934 during the NRA. In 1935 there were 59 complaints, in 1936 there were 73 and in the year following 79. In 1938 a sharp rise showed 193 new objections and in 1939 there were 213. For the first three months of the current year 43 letters had been received from exhibitors.

SEES RECEIVERSHIP FOR ALL MAJORS IF THE GOVERNMENT IS ULTIMATE WINNER IN ACTION

Prediction Based Upon Adamant Attitude for Theatre Divorcement

By LEONARD WEISBERG

NEW YORK—Ultimate victory for the government in its all-industry suit is tantamount to receivership for the eight major defendants. Such is the view of a source whose efforts to negotiate a settlement of the suit exceeded in authority even that of first-string defense attorneys. In weighing whatever significance attaches to his observations it is important to consider he not only had access to confidential files of the majors but served as intermediary between defendants and the commerce department in preparing the basis for eliminating alleged abuses in the industry.

Cites $1,000,000,000 Investment

If, then, further consideration of the receivership angle is necessary it comes from the contention that the government will be satisfied with nothing less than theatre divorcement in the prosecution of its equity suit, and this: "The five distributor-exhibitor defendants have $1,000,000,000 invested in approximately 2,400 theatres in this country. Of this investment, $400,000,000 is the present-day equity involving 1,000 theatres. The balance of $600,000,000 is in leases, mortgages, bonds and other financial requirements." To complete the picture it is necessary to bear in mind the current equity holdings are but a fraction of what they were, say, five years ago before normal amortization writeoffs.

Trade Program Sidelight

A sidelight on the behind-closed-doors negotiations which began about a year ago with the commerce department toward setting up a trade practice program is provided in the quote: "Experts of the commerce department viewed the program as one of the best for the purpose, but it was never able to proceed or be adopted because Allied threw a monkey wrench into the proceedings." Coupling the view that, if given more time and with the indulgence of Allied, an acceptable trade practice program could have been worked out, the spokesman adds: "However, Allied elected to force the issue on theatre divorcement rather than depend on a trade program."

It has been reported that during these negotiations the justice departments were similarly aware of developments. It is also held in some quarters that Abram F. Myers, Allied's general counsel, encouraged the justice department to urge the commerce negotiators to develop the program as it progressed. Industry observers contend that when the third draft was drawn up Allied did not believe distributors, as a whole, would go through with it, but when the organization's leaders ultimately learned the majors were serious about the proposals they told the justice department a trade practice program would not solve the industry's problems. Allied, therefore, insisted upon divorcement. Allied's view in this respect is said to have been conveyed to the justice department, which, as developments have since proved, adopted the same attitude.

It follows, then, this spokesman avers, that settlement of the suit is in "Washington's hands; the distributors' hands are tied."

Envisions "Chaos"

He goes on to envision chaos if the majors are thrown into receivership. This is on the theory that "production, which is the essence and life-blood of theatres, will be demoralized." If production is reduced to a low ebb, the source continues, theatres will "not be able to make ends meet." And as for throwing the majors' theatres into the open market, "there can be no orderly development." This opinion takes recognition of the theory of Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, that sale of distributors' theatres could be accomplished under a court order and would be carried out over a ten-year period.

"This is a fallacy," according to the spokesman. "The sale of majors' theatres to independent operators—and remember, the government claims and is charging some independent circuits are violating the Sherman Act—simply would not work out. There would be very little interest for the average exhibitor in acquiring theatres worth $1,000,000, or more, when there is no assurance of outstanding product; the kind that has kept these houses open over the years."

A side view in this respect, and one calculated to bolster further the receivership contention if the government is victorious, is the spokesman's belief that if a number of independent exhibitors ultimately acquire control of local situations, the distributors—assuming they manage to turn out meritorious product—would be at the mercy of these operators "because they will tell distributors what they will pay for product instead of making a deal on what the theatres would be in a position to earn."

The spokesman assailed the alleged iniquity of the majors' $1,000,000,000 theatre investments being jeopardized by small exhibitors, with comparatively minute "stakes"—"the very same third, fourth and fifth run operators who are the main complainants."

Ready for Trade Program

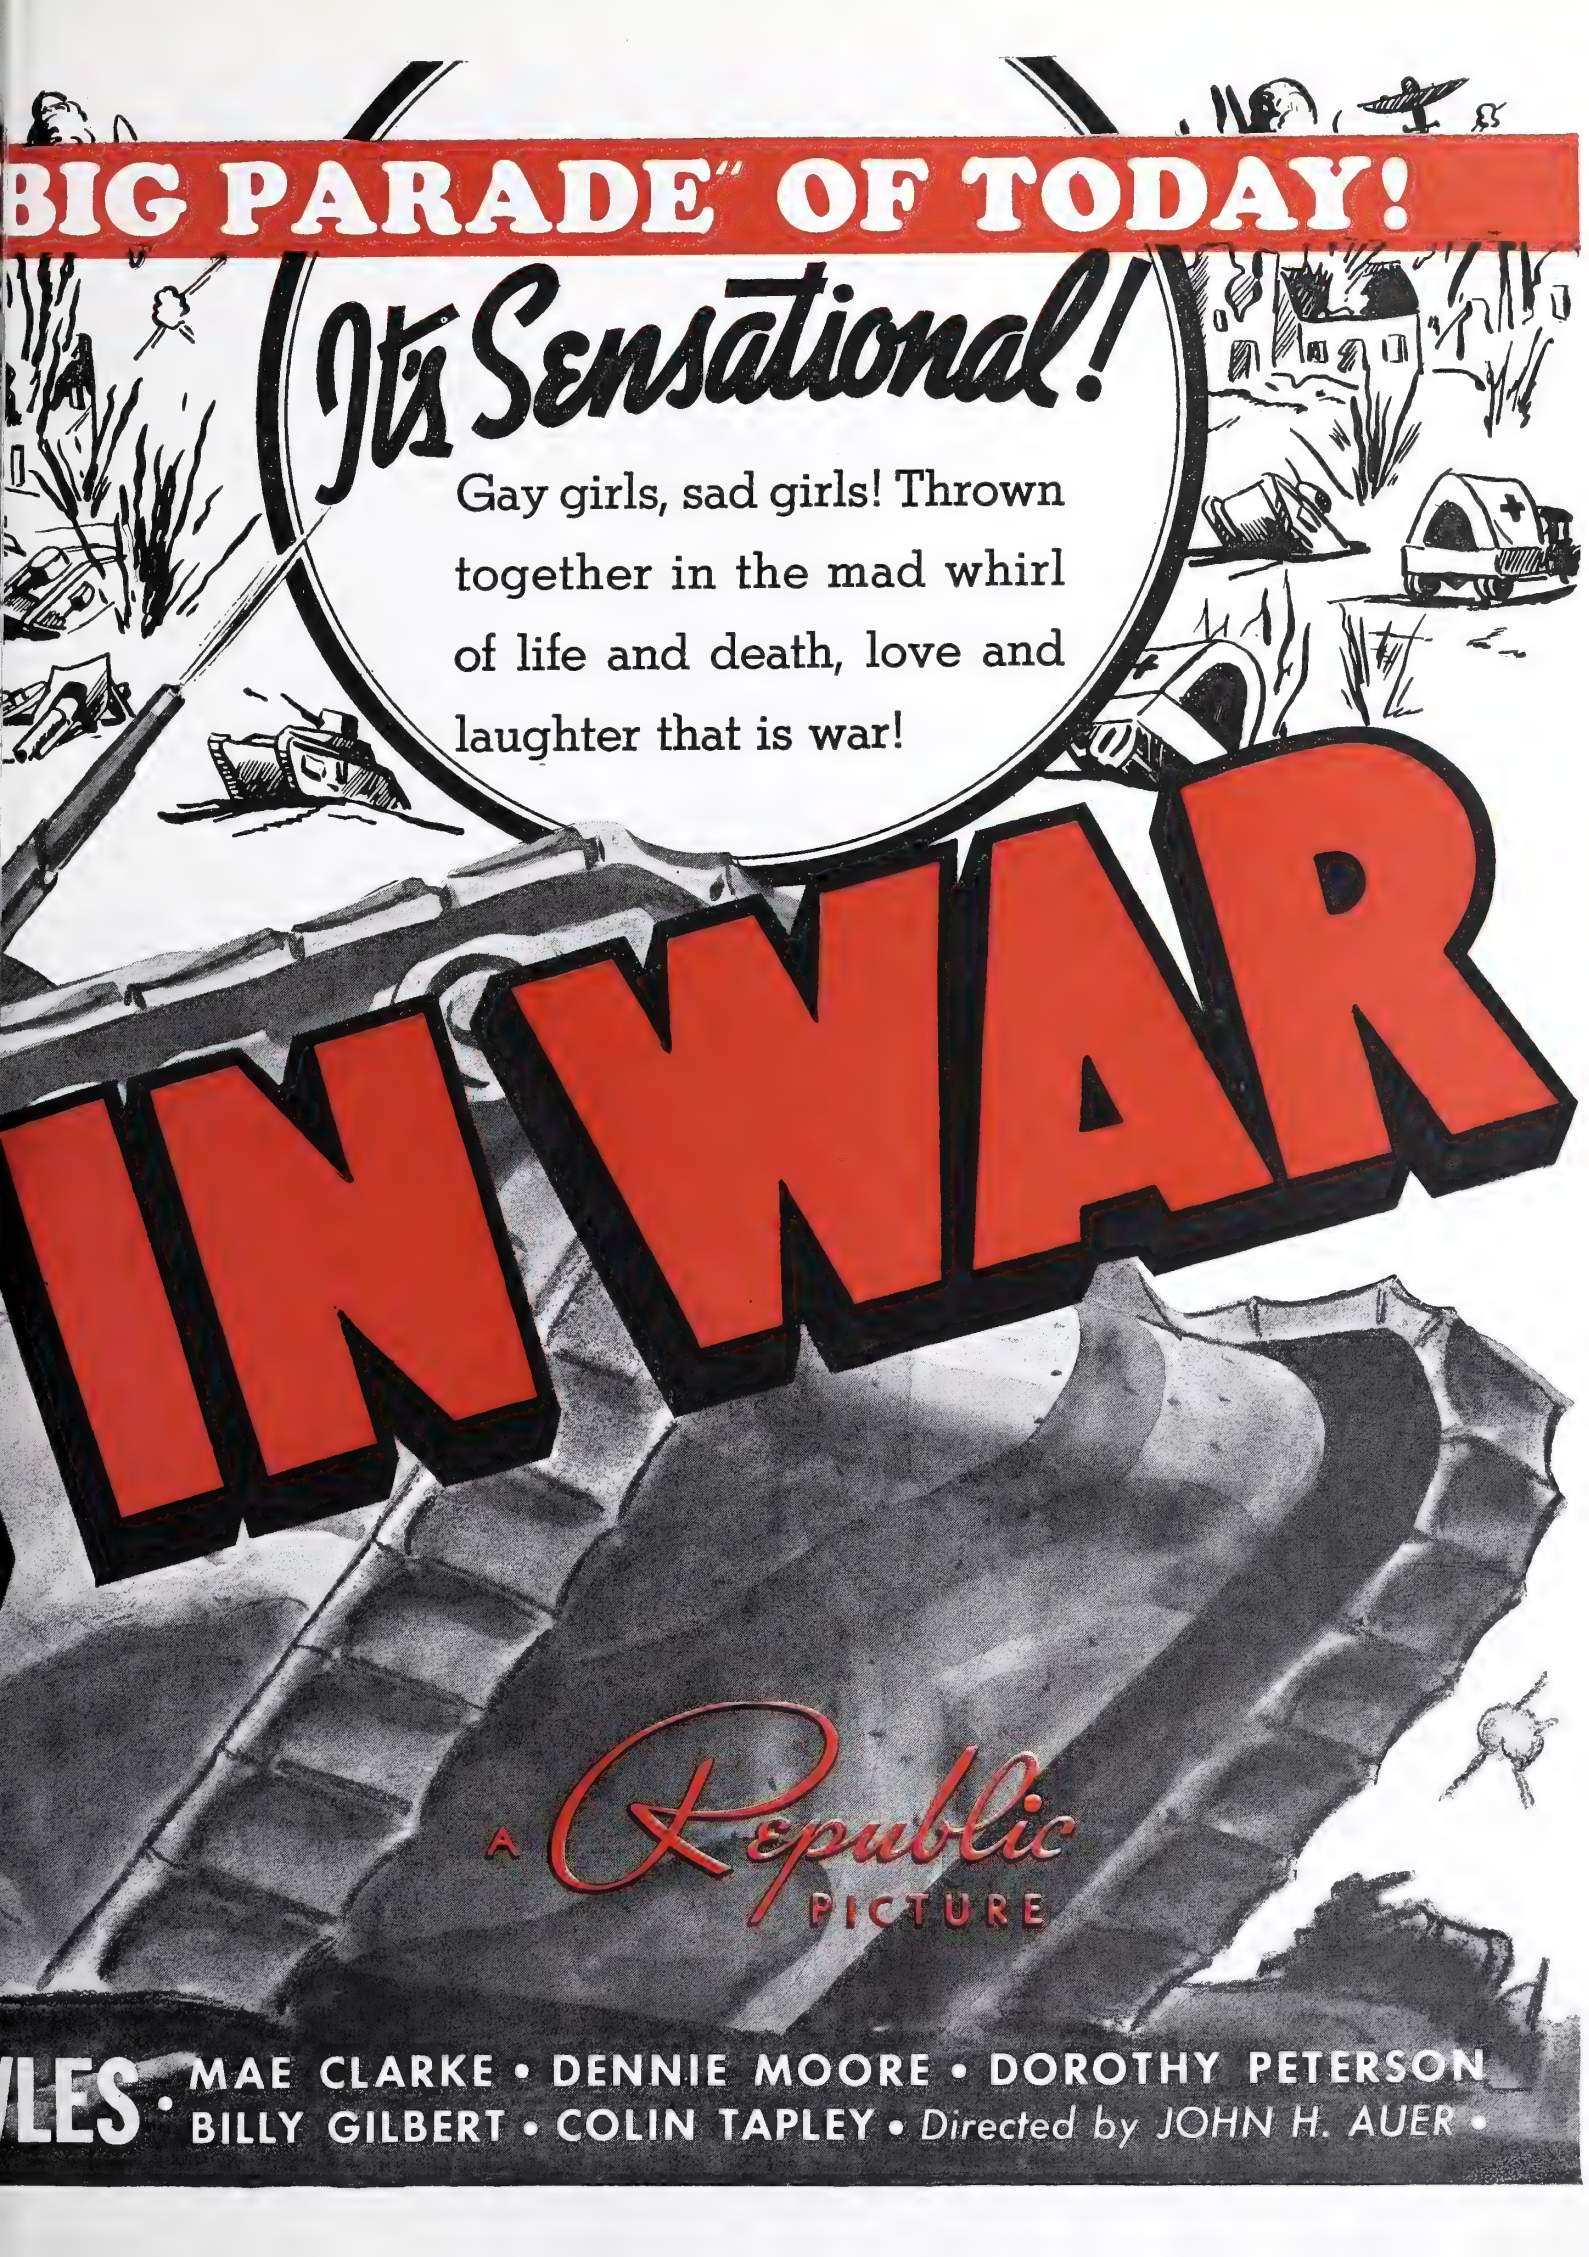
With these complainants in mind the spokesman observes: "We feel there is no trade practice problem which cannot be solved, and we have been ready for some time to work out a solution. It has gone further than that. It is not a matter of trade practices but one of ownership by the majors. Allied and its retinue of bellyachers will not be satisfied until we are forced to divorce our theatres. We have done everything possible to set up a trade practice program. We have failed not because of our own desires but because of a minority who are and always will be chronic trouble makers.

"About two years ago," he continues, "leading executives were called in by President Roosevelt and told to work out the industry's problems. We have tried to do that, but, apparently, other forces in the government are not convinced of our efforts. They demand theatre divorcement. We have been and are ready to do all we reasonably can but we will not tolerate divorcement—at least, if we can help it."

Wood Not in Starting Lineup

New York—One of the chief defense counsel in the government's St. Louis anti-trust suit four years ago against Warner, RKO and Paramount will not take part in the all-industry legal array which starts next week. He is Frederick H. Wood, member of the firm of Cravath, deGersdorf, Swaine & Wood.

As mainstay for Warner in the Mound City action, the distributor had been negotiating with the eminent lawyer until he suffered a heart attack shortly after he was retained by Schine Brothers for their anti-trust action pending in the Buffalo courts. He has recovered since but is not in a physical condition to handle both cases.



Observers at the St. Louis trial cannot forget how Wood characterized Federal Judge George H. Moore's charge to the jury as a "stump speech," for which he was later fined $100. It was paid by his fellow attorneys who jointly and unanimously refused to let Wood go through the expense.

All He Needs Is A Free Directory

New York—One of the major companies has received a report from its legal representative in a western exchange center which gives the all-industry suit a new twist. The attorney was sent to check up on a probable government witness and ask him the regular questions as to why the complaint was made.

The report in point informs the home office the exhibitor frankly admits he registered a complaint so he could get a trip to New York with all expenses paid.

hibitors, present and past, for the government, while the majors only started to work on checking up complaints by hiring counsel in the field about three months ago. Cooperating with the defense, the department of justice has agreed to notify distributors two weeks in advance exhibitor witnesses and from what territory they will be called. In the last two weeks, junior lawyers from the home office staffs have been in Philadelphia checking up on the first group of witnesses.

While changes in the government's program are being made daily, the probable procedure, after opening statements by both sides are concluded, will be to give the presiding judge a detailed picture of the industry's growth since its inception. In this connection, the department of justice states, "We want to educate the judge slowly."

Depositions Into Record

Depositions, rather than oral testimony, of leading executives will next be made a part of the record. This will include extracts from pre-trial examinations of all witnesses who have appeared at the informal proceedings conducted by Robert L. Wright and John F. Clagett in the federal court building. Testimony dealing with the early history of the business primarily will be introduced.

The next step will be to put on the stand such men like W. W. Hodkinson, I. E. Chadwick, T. L. Talley, Jesse L. Goldberg and Elmer Pearson whose knowledge of the industry goes back many, many years.

Following this, the government then plans to show the alleged domination in certain cities by major circuits. This will be done by calling independent exhibitors from the territories and who have been complaining about the majors' practices over the years.

Start With Philadelphia

In an effort to reduce expenses to a minimum, the plan is to start with Philadelphia, where one circuit, such as Warner, is declared to dominate the territory. The next city will be New York where it is held Loew and RKO are the powers in theatre operations. Most important in this connection will be the Century circuit complaint. Present and past personnel will be called to testify. Some of the men whose names are mentioned have associated themselves with major companies and others have dropped out of the business.

It has been intimated the summer recess may begin after Philadelphia witnesses are called, but the government hopes to reach the New York situation before Judge Goddard leaves on his vacation.

The third city will be Chicago where it is held by the department B. & K., a Paramount subsidiary, dominates. Next may be Los Angeles where Fox West Coast has more theatres than any major company. Kansas City or Atlanta may come before Los Angeles, depending on the particular point to be established in those cities.

Exhibitors who either filed suits against the majors or affiliates or complained to the department of justice in the past 20 years have been interviewed by FBI men. The government says the court will want proof of the charges made against the defendants. The theatre operators or records on file in any of the state or city courts will be introduced, many of them already being in the hands of the prosecution.

Seymour Simon, who some time ago resigned from the department of justice, is back on the payroll. William P. Farnsworth, who has been handling the New York end for Williams, left the staff June 1 to resume private legal practice. He was former NRA administrator and may later be called into service because of his experiences sitting on the Code Authority board in New York.

There will be no motion for dismissal at this time, it is stated. When the government rests its case this is usually done. Attorneys for 20th-Fox have tried to have the complaint against various of its officers and directors dismissed by the court,

Takes Precedence Over Other Suits

New York—In its resume of the all-industry case, the government points out: "The petitioner's position with respect to trial of the various anti-trust actions involving the industry is that this suit should be given preference over all others, and in case of adjournment, the adjournment should be made of the other cases when a conflict arises, upon the proper showing to be made. As yet, the other cases are not at issue, nor has a trial date for any of them been set."

and weighs 195. Cunningham's sport was track, with the emphasis on javelin throwing and pole vaulting.

John F. Clagett attended Maryland and Washington University, is five feet, ten inches and weighs 140. He also is a track man, who prefers fishing now.

H. G. Robinson, FBI man associated with the department in the suit, is from Northwestern University where he played football. He is five feet, ten inches in height and weighs 210 pounds.

Seymour Krieger, special assistant to the attorney general, attended Amherst and Yale Law School. He is five feet ten inches in height, weighs 185 pounds. While in school, he played center on the football team and was a member of the wrestling team.

Robert L. Wright, son of Frank L. Wright, is also an assistant to the attorney general. He attended Cornell and Wisconsin and received his law degree from John Marshall in Chicago. He is five feet 11 inches in height, weighing 175 pounds. On the football field he played halfback and tackle. He captained the basketball team and also played tennis.

Suit to Trial After Almost Two Years

but have not been successful. Within the past two weeks, the government attorneys here have been asked to strike out similar names without going to court. This has been denied. The angle involved, as explained, was that some directors are identified with banks, banking institutions and to have threats of triple damage suits hanging over their heads because of the possible outcome of the suit is a blot on their prestige. But the government insists these men pass on all important decisions made by the company and hence they should be subject to the same treatment as company executives.

Clashes between distributor and government counsel are inevitable during the many months the case will take, both sides predict. Recalling the St. Louis suit, a department of justice attorney was fined $25 by the court when he called one of the defense counsel a "liar."

See Lengthy Trial

The actual trial may take longer than was originally expected when the government hoped to get together with opposing counsel on a number of stipulations. Only one such hearing was held before Judge Goddard when Williams was informed his adversaries would not agree to anything. What the government wanted agreed to was (a) a description of the defendants as alleged in the petition, (b) material furnished in answer to interrogatories relative to organization and operations of the respective defendants or as much thereof as may be useful in presenting a picture of the industry to the court, (c) material relating to the description of the industry, (d) material in respect to competitive conditions in the industry, (e) material relating to interstate commerce, (f) certain factual material alleged under the heading of offenses charged, (g) certain material relating to trade practices, (h) to correct exhibits the government will introduce in evidence, (i) a stipulation covering the factual organization and operation of the industry.

"Must Prove Everything"

Distributors protested the stipulations on the ground to admit these as facts would be to "throw the case out of the window" for them. "This is an important case," they added, "and the government will have to prove everything. We will stipulate to nothing."

Instituted July 20, 1938, under section four of the Sherman anti-trust act, the all-industry suit goes to trial almost two years later. Another 50 days and it would have been two years. All along distributors intimated it would take about two years before trial.

Directly responsible for several delays are the wrangles over interrogatories on both sides. This was anticipated in the early stages of the case. A considerable amount of money has been spent by distributors to secure the factual material for the government's A to Z quiz. In addition numerous junior lawyers have

"Keep Red Cross in The Newsreels"

New York—From an MPTOA special bulletin by Ed Kuykendall:

"The Great American Red Cross is starting its campaign for funds . . . The Red Cross is appealing to the public through the medium of the newsreel, and I urge exhibitors everywhere, regardless of affiliation, to cooperate with them by not allowing the Red Cross appeal to be cut from the newsreel when it is run in their theatres. In doing this we are doing our small part in aiding and abetting a great cause."

Must Bide Time on Prints In Nazi-Invaded States

NEW YORK—The MPPDA has notified distributors the state department in Washington cannot take action to protect prints in Holland, Norway and Denmark until its ambassadors to these countries are able to gather and relay first-hand information of what is happening "behind the German lines." Majors asked the Hays office to seek aid from Washington to secure protection of its films in the three countries, since they are classified as under the "protective custody" of Germany, and this might mean the prints would be confiscated.

"United Front" by Majors On Italy Will Continue

NEW YORK—The majors are determined to maintain the "united front" in the Italian situation. So much so the larger companies are willing to contribute among them the sum offered to two smaller distributors by Italian agents for films.

The contributing companies are said to be firm in their conviction that if any of the majors should break away from the "united front" in Italy, countries such as Mexico and others in South America might seize this as a precedent and assume the "take it or leave it" attitude which is said to characterize the Italian point of view.

been added to the home office staffs, supplementing counsel and aides especially retained.

Specifically, the government charges the defendants "generally with violating the Sherman act by monopolizing, attempting to monopolize, combining and conspiring with each other to monopolize, and contracting, combining and conspiring to restrain interstate trade and commerce in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures . . . This is tantamount," the government says in its resume, "to a charge against defendants of a monopolization of the whole industry. The means and instrumentalities by which the said monopolization and restraints of trade have been brought about are cited in the petition."

Plaintiff's Resume

To continue with the plaintiff's resume, its prayer summation states: "a preliminary injunction is sought. This matter, as a result of conferences of counsel, is held in abeyance; the defendants having agreed to report to the department of justice changes in their theatre positions monthly. That the contracts, combinations and conspiracies described, together with attempts to monopolize and the monopolization, as described in the petition, be declared illegal; that the defendants, and each of them, and their respective officers and directors be perpetually enjoined from continuing to violate the law as described; that the integration of the production and exhibition branches of the industry be declared unlawful; for divestiture of production and distribution interests from exhibition; that the defendants be perpetually enjoined from loaning or pooling assets, as described in the petition; for an injunction prohibiting the defendants from enforcing upon independent exhibitors the unfair trade practices referred to in the petition; and for such other further relief as the court may deem proper."

All Charges Denied

These charges, one and all, are denied by each and every defendant.

On December 15, both sides agreed to be ready by May 1. On that date defense counsel asked for a two-month delay and was informed by the court June 3 would be the date and no further adjournments countenanced. Distributors declared at the time they needed at least 60 days to continue investigation of probable witnesses named by the government. The time was sliced in half.

The past few weeks have been hectic ones for both sides. While the plaintiff has been whipping its case into final shape, defense counsel has been gathering material from all parts of the country and at the same time have had numerous executives examined before trial. Several who had been scheduled to put in an appearance have not, for one reason or another.

Among those who have deposed are William A. Scully, Cliff Work and Nate J. Blumberg of Universal; Harry and Jack Cohn and A. Montague of Columbia; George J. Schaefer and Ned E. Depinet of RKO; Adolph Zukor, Barney Balaban, Y. Frank Freeman and Neil F. Agnew of Paramount; Gradwell L. Sears and Joseph Bernhard of Warner; Joseph M. Schenck, Sidney R. Kent, Herman Wobber, William Sussman, William Gehring and William Kupper of 20th-Fox; Spyros P. Skouras of National Theatres; Nicholas M. Schenck and Charles C. Moskowitz of Loew's, and William F. Rodgers of M-G-M.

The Loew president was the last to give his deposition. In it he stated selling of pictures individually would work a terrific hardship on every exhibitor. He added selling by percentage is the fairest way in that exhibitors pay in proportion to what pictures earn.

Conflicting opinions arise from the testimony by deposition. The government states the executives have provided substantiation of the charges against them while on the other hand defense counsel holds the information elicited is generally innocuous. That all the facts will come out at the trial and any attempt by the government to change the meaning or distort by innuendo any of the testimony to the disadvantage of the witness will be challenged, legalites for the majors insist.

Among industry leaders subpoenaed are: Agnew, Balaban, Blumberg, Bernhard, Depinet, Freeman, Harry L. Gold, J. R. Grainger, Sam Katz, Kupper, Sol Lesser, Al Lichtman, Moskowitz, William P. Philips, Rodgers, Edward M. Saunders, Joseph and Nicholas M. Schenck, Jack L. Schlaifer, Sears, David O. Selznick, Maurice Silverstone, Skouras, Scully, Sussman, Truman H. Talley, Albert, Harry and Jack L. Warner, Wobber, Work and Zukor. Sam Goldwyn has been asked to appear at a later date.

Richard A. Rowland, scheduled to produce for UA next season, has also been asked to come on from the coast. He has indicated he will, but not immediately. Rowland at one time headed the old Metro company and after selling out to the late Marcus Loew joined the First National executive roster. George K. Spoor, whose name has been linked with the Spoor reel for many years, has promised to leave his Windy City home for New York at the government's request. T. L. Tally, now an independent exhibitor on the coast, also had something to do with the original First National franchise setup. W. W. Hodkinson, one of the industry's production veterans and now retired; Jesse L. Goldberg, for years an independent producer, and I. E. Chadwick, an independent producer of long standing, have notified the department of justice they will come east from Hollywood. Elmer Pearson, head of Pathe before Joseph P. Kennedy took over, has indicated he will testify on background stuff.

From these will be chosen the first group of witnesses for the government. They will provide the flashback of pioneering days and lead up to the present insofar as they have participated in the industry's development. It is known William Fox has been contacted in the last week by an assistant to the attorney general. Having read Upton Sinclair's biography of Fox, the special agent is anxious to have Fox reveal all on the stand.

Metro Withdrawing 'Wind' Soon To Set New Sales Policy

NEW YORK—M-G-M is going to pull "Gone With the Wind" from circulation in about two months and will shelve it until a new sales and exhibition policy goes into effect shortly after January 1, 1941. Meanwhile, the company estimates it will have taken 5,000 contracts for the film before it terminates current roadshow engagements. With about 400 prints in work, it is estimated 2,000 two and three-day bookings will be taken in two months.

The film will not be included in 1940-41 contracts for new season showings. It will be offered around the fall for bookings right after the new year on a single picture basis. The 1941 sales and exhibition policy will be determined after a series of test engagements.

See "Wind" Taxes Paying For Government Suit

NEW YORK—Production, distribution and exhibition of "Gone With the Wind" by David O. Selznick and Loew's will net the government enough in taxes to pay several times its cost in the all-industry suit, if it goes to trial, according to a statistically-minded M-G-M-ite.

This source maintains that, before the picture has seen its last showing in this country, the government will have netted in taxes from $4,500,000 to $5,000,000. Already, the film has played to more than 2,000 theatres of a possible 6,000 to 7,000. The boxoffice gross is estimated at slightly over $20,000,000 at the present, but when the picture finishes its last showing the gross possibly may reach the neighborhood of $30,000,000—at the theatre.

So, it is figured, the government today has received from theatres $2,000,000 in taxes. Also, it has received income taxes from every individual that worked on the picture. Plus, corporation earning taxes from Selznick International and Loew's on its profits on the picture, plus taxes on advertising and ad sales accessories, plus levies on print costs and other duties the final tally is seen in the four to five million bracket.

Gallup Poll on Audience Preference, RKO Plan

NEW YORK—George J. Schaefer, president, informed convention delegates had engaged Dr. George Gallup to make a survey of picture patrons' tastes and habits in order to scientifically assist and guide the studio in selection of stories, casts and titles. The work will be conducted by Audience Research Institute under the direction of David Ogilvy. Samuel Goldwyn recently successfully suggested to Dr. Gallup an exclusive survey on double features.

20th CENTURY FOX

REPUBLIC'S 58 FEATURES AND FOUR SERIALS FOR NEW SEASON IS COMPANY'S LARGEST YET

Is an Increase of Four Over Last Year; Two Top Autry Films

SAN FRANCISCO—Republic's lineup for next season will be increased by four for a total of 58, James R. Grainger, president and sales manager, told western franchise holders, branch managers, salesmen and bookers attending the first of four regionals at the St. Francis Hotel here. One important change in the new output is the inclusion of two top Gene Autry musical westerns.

In addition there will be four serials. In toto, the lineup of westerns provides for eight with Don "Red" Barry, six Gene Autry productions, eight with Roy Rogers and eight with the Three Mesquiteers.

H. J. Yates, is attending all meetings. The next is slated for the Peabody Hotel, Memphis, for the southern group, June 4-5, followed by a midwest gathering at the Blackstone, June 6-7, and the final conclave at the New York Park Central, June 11-12.

The four serials will be "Superman" and "Dick Tracy Strikes Again," in 15 episodes, and "Jungle Girl" and "King of the Royal Mounted" in 12 chapters each.

Lineup Announced

Following is the new lineup as announced:

The four De Luxe productions are "Lady From New Orleans," a Beth Brown story; "Hit Parade of 1941," a musical; "Soldiers of Fortune," a Richard Harding-Davis story, and Rex Beach's "Thunder Over Alaska."

"False Witness" by Irving Stone; "Storm Over India" by Richard Blaker; "Puddin' Head" starring Judy Canova; "Gangs of Kansas City" by Jack Moffitt; Peter B. Kyne's "The Big Bonanza," and "Roaring Forties" by Nat Ferber make up the six Anniversary productions.

The Gene Autry productions consist of "Melody Ranch," "Down Mexico Way," "Old Mill Stream," "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride," "Valley of the Moon," "Song at Twilight," "Under Fiesta Stars" and "Old Faithful."

The 16 Jubilee productions include "The Imposter;" "Barnyard Follies," a musical; "The Girl From Frisco" by Medora Field; Ann Sewell's "Black Beauty;" "Doctors Don't Tell;" "Meet the Missus" and "Petticoat Politics" starring the Higgins Family; "Friendly Neighbors," "Arkansas Judge" and "Old Gray Mare," starring Weaver Brothers and Elviry; "Moon Over Mulberry Street;" "Ten Nights in a Barroom;" "Bowery Boy;" "Notorious Lady;" "Honeymoon Isle."

The eight Roy Rogers westerns are "Colorado," "Border Legion," "Young Bill Hickok," "Robin Hood of the Pecos," "Custer's Last Stand," "In Old Cheyenne," "Sheriff of Tombstone" and "Nevada City."

The Three Mesquiteers—Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo—will be seen in "Oklahoma Outlaws," "Arizona Skies," "Texas Trail Blazers," "Phanton Raiders," "Gaucho of Eldorado," "Raiders of the Alamo," "The Old Spanish Trail," and "Code of the Desert."

The new series starring Don "Red" Barry will consist of eight westerns which are "Tulsa Kid," "Frontier Vengeance," "Two Gun Sheriff," "Texas Terror," "Wyoming Wildcat," "Desert Bandit," "Kansas Cyclone" and "Bad Man From Rio."

Carroll Peacock

LOS ANGELES—The unexpected death of Carroll Peacock, local Paramount branch manager, is mourned by the trade. With Paramount 20 years, Peacock succumbed to pneumonia at Methodist Hospital. He was 54.

HERBERT J. YATES

JAMES R. GRAINGER

War News Holding Fans at Radios

NEW YORK—The European war has come home to roost at American boxoffices. At least, affiliated and independent circuit executives contend news developments of the conflict as translated into home radio competition in the evenings is responsible for falling off of business from 10 to 20 per cent.

In but one quarter, Loew's, is there a variance of the attitude that dial twisters are not able to be in two places at the same time. Here it is said that while grosses are ahead of the same period in 1939, assertedly due to a "better" crop of product, there is no way of telling whether current business is as good as it should be. In other words, "maybe the radio war news is hitting us, too. Perhaps we should be doing better than we are."

In virtually all other centers of national and local exhibition operations, however, there is no concealment of what is purportedly happening at boxoffices which, the argument goes, is directly traceable to the multitudinous broadcasts that emanate each evening. One circuit executive states he has personally checked into the situation and found many potential patrons sit at home with two and three newspapers on their laps and check war news developments as they come over the ether with maps printed in the papers.

Many Factors Concerned

Other factors said to be contributing to a general falling off in receipts are the "conservation phobias" said to be engendered among some classes of patrons by the Washington statements that tend to picture a condition of uncertainty for this country's immediate future, daylight saving and the building up of funds for summer vacations, all of which are said to be taking a definite percentage of business away from theatres.

One large independent operator declares he is finding "Gone With the Wind" an especially difficult counter attraction to buck. Furthermore, he feels June will see the beginning of "slough" summer product. An affiliated circuit executive, admitting he spends the bulk of his spare evenings listening to war news commentators, puts it this way: "Why not? I'm listening to the greatest drama in the world."

Warner Net

NEW YORK—Net profits for Warner for the 26 weeks ended February 24, 1940, totaled $1,518,497, as compared to $1,665,889 for the same period last year. Total assets are listed at $169,961,990 for the parent company and its subsidiaries. Cash on hand is reported at $10,448,363.

Say Public Groups No Selection Factor

WASHINGTON — Becoming increasingly frank as the Neely hearings progressed, witnesses for the independent exhibitors told the committee that the public groups would not be a factor in selection if the bill were enacted into law.

Col. H. A. Cole of Dallas, president of national Allied, and Nathan Yamins of Fall River, Mass., past president, agreed that exhibitors would bear the responsibility of selection and, said the former, would need "no great assistance" from local organizations in picking pictures to be shown.

"The boxoffice results are the best indication of what people want," he explained.

"Do you mean that without the aid of the community organizations on the whole you believe the exhibitor can be trusted to make the best selection?" Chairman Lea inquired.

"If he doesn't, he will go out of business," the Association head replied. "He measures his business by the boxoffice."

Cole told Representative Ryan that the 1933 "era of smut" was having its effect on the family trade even before the Legion of Decency swung into action and brought the matter home to the producers. He said there is a break in the "line of communication" between the public and Hollywood which results in a lag before the producers awake to a change in sentiment, but the exhibitor feels it immediately in his declining boxoffice.

Query on Setup

Members of the committee questioned Cole about Allied's makeup. He explained that about 3,300 exhibitors belong, and pay dues, to the state associations and contribute to the national organization, which gets about $25,000 a year.

Both Cole and Yamins were questioned extensively as to the workings of the synopsis provisions. Both contended they are workable, in the face of committee criticisms that, as written, it would be impossible properly to evaluate a picture. Representative Patrick admitted his inability to see either how an exhibitor could pick a picture from a synopsis or how it would be impossible to handle the provision without constant recourse to the courts.

Cole, however, declared there would be "very little litigation" and that "the bill would enforce itself." The whole setup was characterized by the Alabama Congressman as "a most extraordinary proceeding."

Representative Kennedy asked the witness whether admission prices would be reduced if the bill was passed, after Cole had explained that the circuits fix the prices for subsequent runs and supported his charge with a show of the requirements of the Interstate Circuit. Cole admitted that there probably would be "very little effect on admission prices" but argued that the public would get greater value for its money because of the better pictures that would be shown.

A considerable part of Cole's testimony was directed to an attack on the "propaganda" against the bill which he said was based on "inferences, half truths and misrepresentations." Answering a question propounded earlier by a member of the committee as to why all the exhibitors of the country were not urging the bill, he said many independent showmen had been "confused and deceived" into opposing it.

Both Cole and Yamins refused to admit that screening of pictures would be preferable to a synopsis, as suggested by Congressman Boren, the latter declaring the average exhibitor would be able to make a satisfactory decision on the basis of a synopsis.

"Can Supply Synopses"

Yamins contended that the companies finish their pictures well ahead of release dates and, by selling quarterly instead of once a year, could offer product on the basis of synopses written after completion.

He also declared the bill does not require pictures to be sold singly and admitted that, while he personally would prefer to buy them that way, most of the exhibitors still would want to buy in blocks.

Yamins paid his respects to cancellation, declaring that the distributors have made it a "privilege" and so hedged it in with restrictions that it is useless. The exhibitors need the bill, he said, because cancellation can be taken away at any time, if the distributors desire.

Miss "Real Glamour" of "Women in White"

Philadelphia—Because motion pictures "have failed to give a true account of nursing profession by romanticizing it, many girls enter the field and are unhappy in their work," Thyra Pederson, chief nurse of the Veterans' Administration Faculty, Washington, told the Biennial Nursing Convention here. The fault of the films, she said, is in putting the emphasis on the nurse's private life rather than on the "real glamour" in her profession.

Seidelman Sees Mexican Production Demand Fade

NEW YORK—Petition of the Mexican film labor union demanding a federal law compelling foreign distributors to invest 25 per cent of their profits in native production has little chance of succeeding, according to Sam Seidelman, UA's manager of Mexico, who is here for home office conferences.

Falling off of production, Seidelman states, is the reason motivating the petition. He explains there are two film labor unions, one covering production and the other distribution and exhibition, and no agreement between the two over the petition.

On June 1, Seidelman said, the largest second-run house in Latin America, the 7,000-seat Colonial, opens in Mexico City with "Four Feathers." The theatre will be operated by Oscar and Samuel Granat.

William Conselman

LOS ANGELES—Death claimed William Conselman, long a film writer of prominence, at the age of 43. His most recent scripts were "East Side of Heaven," and "That's Right, You're Wrong."

Merchandise Coupons Get Test in Phila.

PHILADELPHIA — The Sears Roebuck's "merchandise coupons," a new idea in giveaways that may spread to other parts of the country if successful here, are scheduled to make their debut Monday in three theatres.

They are Charles Stiefel's President, Sam Felt's Southern, and Jack Greenberg's Hollywood. On June 5, the scheme is to start at Henry Friedman's Lawndale; June 7, Tom Lazowick's Castle, and June 17, at Charles Goldine's Alden.

The coupons come in denominations ranging from one cent to five. The exhibitor hands them out as he chooses, as, for example, a one-center for kiddie admissions, five-center for adults on certain days. The exhibitor buys them at full value from Sears, which in turn will contribute an exploitation campaign.

Proponents of the plan say its chief advantage is that the coupons can be used as cash for the wide variety of merchandise sold by Sears.

Sears, Roebuck Executives Disclaim Giveaway Plan

CHICAGO—Sears, Roebuck and Company's home office executives here this week disclaimed any knowledge of a national giveaway plan despite reports from Philadelphia that the company is planning to extend on a national basis a premium plan to be tried there.

Heads of the company's retail merchandise office here said, "We know nothing whatever of such a plan to be tried nationally." They intimated, however, that the type of premium plan reported in Philadelphia, if used, would have to be tied in on a national scale.

Brazil Yielding Maximum Returns, Baez Claims

NEW YORK—Decrying statements made about recouping European losses in Latin America, Enrique Baez, UA's general manager of Brazil, suggests half-seriously that South American exhibitors may come up here to find out what is wrong with Amer can distribution.

He said distributors are getting maximum returns out of Brazil, and the same here to find out what is wrong with American countries. The companies, Baez maintains, cannot get any more out of the territory.

American pictures get about 90 per cent of the running time in the Brazilian first runs, according to Baez, with French films second in favor. At present there is no shortage of French product since one astute independent distributor stocked up before the war and now has a large supply on hand.

He reveals the Ribiero circuit is now engaging M-G-M in a building war. M-G-M recently announced plans for two theatres in the suburbs of Rio de Janeiro and the circuit is building against M-G-M in those spots.

No Trial Had Started Yet

NEW YORK—Many were the film notables who forsook Times for Foley Square to testify in pre-examination before trial in the all-industry suit.

These photographs probably will carry a familiar look. All of them have appeared in BOXOFFICE in the last two months. They combine, however, into an interesting pre-trial gallery of posed and candid camera shots of many principal industry figures. This key explains:

1. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew's, Inc., arrives at the U. S. court house to testify. On the left is Edward McLean of Davis, Polk, Gardiner and Reed, attorneys representing the film company. On the right is Tyree Dillard jr. of the M-G-M legal staff.

2. Backgrounded by the court house are Louis Phillips, Paramount home office counsel; Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of Paramount's studio operations, who had to fly from Hollywood for his examination, and Albert C. Bickford of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, special attorneys for the distributor.

3. Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of Paramount distribution, ponders his deposition with Phillips outside the testimony-gathering chamber.

4. Here Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, scans a transcript of his testimony as John Caskey, of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey—the inevitable present lawyer—again looks on.

5. When Adolph Zukor, chairman of the Paramount board, delved deeply into early film history, he was accompanied by former Judge Thomas D. Thacher of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett; Phillips once more and again Bickford. Zukor is second from the left.

6. Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, arrived early on his day. Here he poses while awaiting the arrival of the government's lawyers. Seated is Edward C. Raftery of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, Moskowitz, New York City theatre operator for Loew's, Inc., Jay Eisenberg of the Loew legal department, Edward McLean, also of the Davis office; J. Robert Rubin, Metro's general counsel, and John D. Davis.

B&L Case No "Peg" in Suit

NEW YORK—The fact that Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard, who will begin to hear the all-industry suit Monday, sat in the government anti-trust action against Bausch & Lomb will have no bearing on the court's attitude toward the film industry, major counsel hold.

Pleading nolo contendere to an indictment charging violation of the Sherman act, the optical company and three of its officers were fined $40,000. Carl Zeiss, Inc., which is said to have had a secret trade agreement with B&L since 1921 for the purpose of maintaining prices, has had the action against it adjourned until June 24.

Film counsel state no precedence can be established because of the different nature of the two industries; that Judge Goddard will have to base whatever decision he will hand down, if any, on the facts presented and argued by the government and opposing attorneys.

Adheres to Schedule Despite the War

NEW YORK—A reaffirmation of 20th Century-Fox's production plans for the new season is made by Herman Wobber, general sales manager, who states the company will adhere to the schedule announced at the convention in spite of the growing paralysis of the foreign market.

In a statement made to members of the company, Wobber said the executives are convinced more than ever that the future safety of the company lies in making itself domestically self-sufficient.

Calling for greater sales effort, Wobber said these are "trying times" and emphasized the executives "are betting millions on the manpower of the company."

He cited three reasons why the company was going ahead on a production investment that will reach a record high.

First, the company knows it has great story properties, most of them turned into scripts, and the ability of the studio to turn out the greatest array of showmanship pictures to come from any company in any season, he states.

Second, the confidence it has in the distribution department to obtain the necessary financial return justifying this unprecedented studio effort and investment.

Third, the belief exhibitors in the Americas are fully appreciative of their responsibility and will go along in a sincere determination to increase boxoffice receipts, and to give 20th-Fox its just share of receipts earned.

Public Land Administration Probe Ordered by Senate

WASHINGTON—Immediate investigation of the administration of the public lands by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and his recently announced charges, running up to $500 a day, for the use of the public lands and national parks by motion picture producers, has been ordered by the senate.

The fees for motion pictures, announced by the department last month, were the subject of severe criticism in the senate, and Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona introduced a resolution for an investigation, not only of the fees, but of the department's own motion picture production activities.

In the consideration of the resolution it was found that Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada had previously introduced a measure calling for a probe of the administration of the public lands, to which the senate committee on public lands and surveys appended the Ashurst resolution as an amendment.

The measure as passed by the senate provides no time within which the committee must complete its investigation and authorizes it to sit during recesses of Congress, giving it a fund of $10,000 for expenses.

Kent Holds 10,000-Share Yearly Purchase Option at $18.24

NEW YORK—Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, holds an option to purchase annually—and has held it since August 22, 1935—10,000 shares of the company's common stock at $18.24 per share, but not less than $10 per share, it is revealed in his company's report to the SEC covering the year ending December 31, 1939. The option is cumulative, so that stock not acquired within any one year subsequently may be taken up.

There also are 40,000 shares of common reserved for issuance to officers of the company in part payment for services rendered as the board shall determine, at not less than $10 a share.

William Goetz, with 178,342 shares of common, is the only executive listed as owning more than 10 per cent of any class of equity securities. Chase National Bank is down for 487,215 shares, or 52.67 per cent, of the preferred and 221,157 shares, or 12.70 per cent, of common; General Theatres Equipment, 185,600, or 10.65 per cent, common, and White, Weld & Co., 185,384, or 20.04 per cent, preferred.

The report lists 26 subsidiaries, but notes there are two domestic wholly-owned that have been omitted "for which confidential treatment has been requested," and that 23 foreign subsidiaries have been omitted, the disclosure of which "would be detrimental to the interests of the security holders." During 1939, the company wrote off $400,000 of a $850,000 reserve fund set up for fluctuation in dollar value of assets in foreign countries.

Among assets, the report lists investments totaling $1,640,342 and advances aggregating $2,097,415 to United American Investing Corp., 50 per cent owned, and Metropolis and Bradford Trust Co., Ltd., holding companies for Gaumont British Pictures Corp., Ltd., of Great Britain. Investments in property, such as land, buildings, leases, equipment, furniture and projects under construction totaled $22,280,-919 as of December 31, 1939.

Depreciation of fixed assets is written off on a straight line method as follows: Furniture and fixtures in the home office, five to 20 per cent per annum; furniture and fixtures in exchanges, seven to 20 per cent; laboratory equipment, five to 10 per cent; home ofice and exchange buildings, 2.22 to five per cent, while studio properties range from five to 20 per cent, depending upon type of property, the report adds.

The basis of amortization of inventories, the report discloses, is written off at the end of quarterly periods as follows:

No. of Wks. Since Date of Release	All Negative Costs	Domestic Positive Costs
13	53 %	75%
26	75.5%	95%
39	88 %	100%
52	94.5%
65	100 %

Salaries to all employes who received in excess of $20,000 shows that 130 were paid an aggregate of $6,635,802, while foreign salaries and expenses are reported at $3,-388,803. The cost of traveling and convention expenses was $445,541, and legal, auditing and financial fees, $582,595. In the latter connection, the law firm of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey, general counsel, received $290,600.

Remuneration for 1939 to the three highest officers, directors or employes shows that Darryl F. Zanuck received $255,000; Sonja Henie, $249,166, and John Ford, $235,000. The aggregate remuneration to 12 directors, who are unnamed, is $457,453. Salaries to six officers, also unnamed, who are not directors, totaled $396,490. Remuneration to others in excess of $20,000, other than officers, directors or employes lists the MPPDA as receiving $146,019 for "dues;" Ross Federal for checking percentage engagements, $305,685; Julian T. Abeles for legal fees, $36,455, and Karr & Springer for legal fees, $20,250.

Exchange Employes Sign First Pact With Clark

PHILADELPHIA—William Z. Porter, president of Local B-7, Film Exchange Employes Union, announces signing of the first written contract with Clark Film Distributors, Inc. There previously was an oral agreement.

Representing the corporation in negotiations were James P. Clark, president, and Oscar Neufeld, supervisor. Representing the union were Mollie Cohen, Jim Flynn, Ben Harris and Bill Porter.

HOLLYWOOD—John L. McManus, at one time editor of Fox Movietonenews and later writing scripts for Floyd Gibbons, W. C. Fields and Bob Burns, is dead at the age of 39.

Exhibitor Boomerang Foreseen in Neely

WASHINGTON — Sharply attacking the Neely bill and its proponents, Ed L. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, expressed grave fears at the hearing here that the measure would boomerang against the exhibitor.

In substantiation of his contention, Kuykendall cited the provision penalizing anyone transporting a film in violation of the act, arguing that buying contracts provide that the exhibitor shall handle the transportation of the films he buys, and so would be liable to the heavy penalties of the bill.

Further, Kuykendall said, the bill would lead to competitive bidding for films, whether sold singly or in blocks, forcing prices beyond the reach of many small theatre owners whose competitors enjoy larger financial resources. Exhibitors successful in getting films, he testified, would be at the mercy of disappointed rivals who could file complaints that the law was violated in the sale of the pictures.

Some of the proponents of the legislation, Kuykendall contended, see in the bill "a great opportunity for private censorship, through organized pressure on the management of the local theatre to forbid the showing of any picture to which the organized group may object, not merely because it may offend common decency, but because of religious bigotry, intolerance and personal prejudices.

"The theory of this law seems to be that if it were not for so-called compulsory block booking the theatre management would select for showing only the finest and most suitable pictures; that no motion picture would be exhibited in the theatre except those which the people who seldom patronize the theatre would like to see, not those which the general public likes and will pay to see.

"No Moral Protection"

"These sincere people do not understand, or will not recognize, the simple fact that the proposed law does not prohibit the exhibition of any film, no matter how improper, at any time or place, and no matter how unsuitable it may be."

Wholesale buying, with a reasonable and fair cancellation privilege, is an economic necessity for the exhibitor, Kuykendall asserted.

Calling attention to the fact that block booking legislation has been agitated for many years, Kuykendall told the committee that the whole industry is "on uneasy feet." "No one knows how to plan for the future," he declared. "We never know at what moment our activities will be restricted by legislation or governmental intervention. Large numbers of law suits are in the process of litigation all over the country. Some are government suits; a lot are private suits. All of you are familiar with the issues of the main government suit against this industry, which have been presented by previous witnesses. This suit is being rapidly developed and goes to trial June 3. Isn't it reasonable to say that by this process the courts of this land will determine which ones among us are law violators and which are not."

War Cuts Income Of MPPDA in Half

Washington—Declining to be led into a discussion of receipts and expenditures of the MPPDA, Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel, stated before the Senate Committee on the Neely bill he was not in a position to submit figures but the gross income of the association is about $450,000 a year, estimated at about half of what it was before foreign markets began to totter.

He added his own department is only one of a dozen in the association and expenditures for opposition to the Neely bill have been "less than $2,000."

Offers Alternative To Neely Measure

WASHINGTON—Contending that the Neely bill would ruin the independent exhibitor and tend to create a monopoly in the hands of the chains, Thomas McGuire, director of public relations for Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, and former advisor to the administrator of the NRA amusement codes, proposed to the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce amendments that he declared would solve the industry's problems.

McGuire proposed that Section 3 be eliminated in favor of a provision for "fair arbitration" of all disputes; that Section R be changed to provide for a mandatory 20 or 25 per cent cancellation, prohibition against forcing of shorts, newsreels, trailers and reissues, and prohibition against selective playing time on percentage films, score charges. He suggested a provision for identification of pictures by the naming of stars, featured players and names of popular or famous books rather than by a synopsis.

Analyzing the bill, McGuire testified it would bar producers from forcing blocks, but would not prevent an exhibitor's competitor from bidding his pictures away by buying the whole output at high prices. He pointed out that where the competitor was not successful in the bidding, neither would benefit and both would pay higher prices.

Adoption of the bill would throw the industry into confusion for three or four years, McGuire argued.

Freeman Strikes at Synopsis Provision

WASHINGTON—Defying Congress to enact legislation requiring that producers acquaint exhibitors with the contents of the films they offer, Y. Frank Freeman, chief of Paramount studio operations, told the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce, conducting the Neely bill hearing, that under no circumstances would he attempt to write a synopsis for a Paramount feature.

Sharply countering suggestions of committee members that it should be possible to write a synopsis of a completed picture, Freeman said flatly "I am not going to take a chance as an individual to write a synopsis and send it out to 17,000 exhibitors, any one of whom can claim a violation of law and have me convicted of a crime."

Admitting that a script frequently is given a free-lance star considering whether to accept a part in a picture, the Paramount executive told Representative Wolverton of New Jersey that there is a vast difference between such a script and the synopsis which the Neely bill would require be given an exhibitor.

Freeman set out to give the committee a brief description of the many things which interfere with the making of a picture, such as the illness of a star or his refusal to accept a role, and the difficulties of dealing with the 39 separate guilds, crafts and unions which participate in picture making, but soon found himself the target of questions.

Under examination, he declared he saw no difference between an exhibitor contracting in advance for pictures and a newspaper proprietor signing up for a feature or news service. The publisher, he pointed out, does not have to use the service, but must pay for it because he agreed to buy it; on the whole, however, he bought it in confidence that it would be worth while, and that, the witness said, is the motive which influences an exhibitor to sign up with some particular company.

Members of the committee led Freeman into a discussion of the English system of individual sales, and were told that the scheme has not worked successfully. Even before the war, the witness said, English production problems were almost insurmountable.

Would Clarify Allied Stand

Washington—Allied would like to clarify its interpretation of testimony offered by C. C. Pettijohn, MPPDA general counsel, during Neely bill hearings at the point he asserted Abram F. Myers and Col. H. A. Cole, in 1929, had engaged in production and distribution and had employed block booking and blind selling. In support of his statement Pettijohn submitted copies of a Tiffany-RKO franchise.

"He made the flat assertion that Myers was referred to in the franchise as 'a representative of the distributor'," says an Allied communique. "The actual wording of the franchise should be noted. It reads: 'The findings and recommendations of such representatives shall be transmitted to a National Appeal Board consisting of Abram F. Myers, a representative of the distributor and a third member to be chosen by the other two.'

"Thus the board was to consist of three members," continues Allied: "(1) Mr. Myers, (2) a representative of the distributor, and (3) a third to be chosen by the first two. If the words 'a representative of the distributor' referred to Mr. Myers, then the board would consist of two instead of three."

: RKO Sidelights :

NEW YORK—When George J. Schaefer, president, unveiled the RKO product lineup at the opening day of the sales convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, it had all the earmarks of showmanship campaign. At the mention of the Herbert Wilcox production, Leon J. Bamberger led Wilcox and Anna Neagle to the rostrum; then Orson Welles told all, and even Lee Tracy took a bow at the proper time. All very effective, too.

Lot of pleased comment about the RKO convention badge which carried a removable trademark emblem for lapel use after the gathering.

* * *

More about Welles who is now beardless which leaves RKO Pathe's Frank Donovan the only bearded man in the outfit. Welles says he spent most of his time looking around the studio the way Garson Kanin did when he was with Sam Goldwyn. He expects to shoot in another month and spend over $500,000, but not much more, for his first picture. In a bantering exchange with Schaefer, the Wellesian humor evidenced itself. "If I don't get my convention badge, I won't deliver a foot of film," Welles joked.

Need for "Invincible Morale" Is Emphasized by Depinet

NEW YORK—The need for "an invincible morale as well as an invincible armament in these days of trial" was stressed by George J. Schaefer, president, who addressed over 1,200 delegates and home office employes at the Waldorf.

Speaking in a serious vein, Schaefer reviewed economies effected by the company last year. He said at that time RKO stood alone in maintaining immediate economies were necessary to strengthen picture schedules for the domestic market in view of the crumbling markets abroad.

"No economy made could have justified any reduction in the quality and entertainment appeal of our pictures," the RKO president asserted. "That's the one economy we cannot afford, that we haven't made, and that we will not make. We are in an industry where pictures, not words, must tell the story, and as we introduce our 'line,' it is the character of our product that must speak for our progress."

Schaefer said at that time he "seemed to be the bull in the china shop." He added, "I am glad to report nothing was broken and what we did we did in the American way. Our program primarily was to decrease expenses, not decrease employment. We cut from above, not from below. While some salaries were reduced by more than 35 per cent, we made the promise and held to it, that no employe receiving $4,500 a year or less would be affected."

An imposing dais highlighted the luncheon, which, it was said, marked the first time the entire personnel of a distributing company was present. On the dais were: Jean Hersholt, John J. O'Connor, J. J. Nolan, John E. Parsons, Nelson Rockefeller, L. P. Yandell, Phil Reisman, Herbert Wilcox, Floyd Odlum, Anna Neagle, Ned E. Depinet, Schaefer, Richard C. Patterson, Orson Welles, Edmund O'Brien, Lee Tracy, Gunther Lessing, David Sarnoff, W. G. Van Schmus, N. Peter Rathvon, Fred R. L. Ehrman and Malcolm Kingsberg.

Drive Captain Lists RKO Victorious Branches

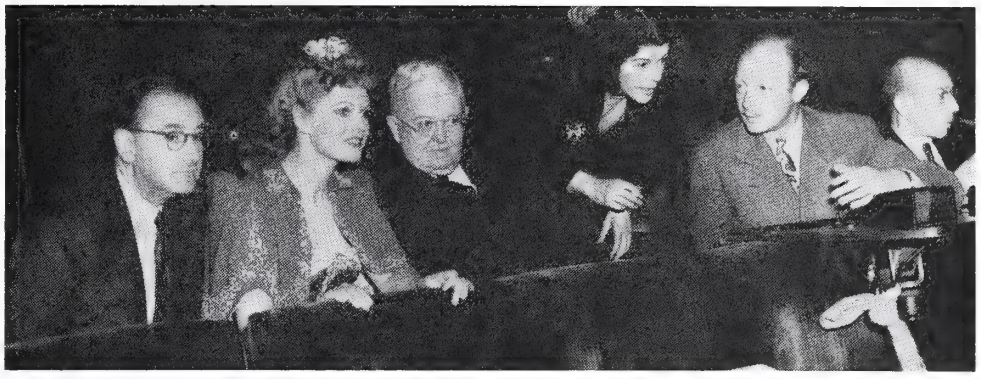
NEW YORK—Winning branches and their managers in the short subject division of the Ned Depinet Drive are listed in order of their standing by Drive Captain Herb MacIntyre.

Disney Cartoons: James F. Sharkey, Detroit; Jack C. Osserman, Chicago; Frank L. McNamee, Philadelphia; H. M. Lyons, Atlanta; H. H. Greenblatt, Pittsburgh, and G. William Wolf, San Francisco. Leslie L. Plottel, St. John and Mark Plottel, Toronto, led the Canadian division.

One and two-reelers, including Pathe News: Charles Boasberg, Buffalo; H. H. Greenblatt, Pittsburgh; Sol M. Sachs, Dallas; G. William Wolf, San Francisco; R. J. Folliard, Washington, and Bob S. Wolff, New York.

Five managers and 15 salesmen shared in cash prizes for "Information Please" division: Charles Boasberg, Frank L. McNamee, R. J. Folliard, and Harry E. Kahn, Washington; P. M. Baker, New Orleans, and Sol Sachs. The salesmen are: Frances C. Ross, Boston; L. S. Gruenberg, St. Louis; Ely J. Epstein and Samuel Lefko, Philadelphia; M. J. Kassel, Joe Cozzi and Sam Gorelick, Chicago; Albert L. Kolitz, Cincinnati; J. P. Rubenstein and J. F. Samuels, Los Angeles; John G. Chinell, Buffalo; Arthur Goldsmith, Cleveland, and J. E. Loeffler and W. C. Winters, Minneapolis.

RKO Advertising Budget Will Get Big Increase



NEW YORK—RKO will increase its advertising budget by 50 per cent, according to S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising, exploitation and publicity. He declined to mention the amount to be spent but said it would be ample to cover the big pictures planned by the studio and outside producers.

So There's Nothing New in Exhibition

Somewhere in New Jersey—About four years ago, when the things were a novelty, an independent exhibitor offered an electric refrigerator as the main prize in an audience game. Last week the same exhibitor offered another refrigerator, the second in the four-year period. It was won by the second wife of the man whose first wife, now deceased, won the first refrigerator. The second wife took the new box and the old one, to the same merchant from whom the exhibitor promoted them, and swapped them for a sewing machine.

RKO Hundred Percenters Get Depinet Awards

NEW YORK—Six RKO salesmen who sold 100 per cent of their possibilities were awarded gold badges by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales. They are L. S. Gruenberg, St. Louis; J. F. Samuels, Los Angeles; S. W. Whitehead, Los Angeles; G. F. Tucker, Albany; E. E. Spiers, Milwaukee, and Jack Ellis of the local exchange.

Those who received sterling silver badges for hitting 90 per cent and over are: Norman L. Sper, Buffalo; James W. Lewis, Kansas City; Sam Gorelick, Chicago; Louis L. Goldsmith, Seattle; Joseph P. Rubenstein, Los Angeles; William H. Gardiner and Carmen L. DeVizia, Boston; Vernon H. Adams, Dallas; Milton E. Cohen, Detroit; Paul Harrison, Atlanta; Francis C. Ross, Boston; M. A. Raymon, St. Louis; Arthur Goldsmith, Cleveland; William Canelli, New Haven; A. P. Folliard, Washington; Gene M. Engleman and S. S. McFadden, Portland; Ely J. Epstein, Philadelphia, and R. V. Reagin, and W. G. Wray, Memphis.

Reisman Opines Europe "Loss for Many Years"

NEW YORK—Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales, told RKO convention delegates his United Kingdom and European staffs were carrying on despite the most horrible conditions ever to beset the industry.

He expressed the opinion Europe was almost a complete loss to the industry and would continue to be so for many years. "Even in non-belligerent countries," said Reisman, "the industry will find it hard rowing. The expense of rearmaments which most of them are undergoing will cut off a great deal of foreign exchange formerly available to the industry.

The company, according to Reisman, will open an office shortly in Puerto Rico with Ned Seckler, now home office representative in Cuba, in charge.

"Ramparts We Watch" Prints in a Month

NEW YORK—RKO convention delegates were told by Ned E. Depinet that the long-awaited "The Ramparts We Watch" will be completed in two weeks with prints available for previews in about a month.

RKO Renews Cocalis Chain Union Confabs

NEW YORK—With the department of justice asserting it has "no objection" to RKO taking over seven Cocalis houses in the Bronx, executives of the major circuit are trying to work out a deal with Local 306 to take into the union the 14 Empire operators employed in the theatres. RKO is willing to employ two additional Local 306 men for each house and also put on a relief man if Joseph D. Basson and his committee will agree to the membership angle. Houses involved are the Pelham, Castle Hill and Marble Hill, which would become first runs, and the Ward, Square, Pilgrim and Interboro, which would continue as second runs.

Paramounties

LOS ANGELES—Throughout the Paramount convention, Bill Erbb, Boston district manager, let it be known how anxious he was to get back to his Milton, Mass., farm—his hobby being the tilling of the soil.

Ulrich Smith, Philadelphia sales manager, a candid camera fiend, took a total of more than 200 candid shots during the train ride.

Welden Waters, 100 Per Cent Clubber from Albany, didn't miss a thing on the trip out—his colleagues declared he almost got left at every stop remaining for the last breath of air.

Knox Haddow of the New York office insisted on having a piano put in his room. After Judge Frawley, convention manager, had complied with his request, Knox double-crossed the gang by refusing to invite them in for a concert.

It was a hurried trip all around for Charlie Casanave of Advertising Accessories, Inc. He flew to Hollywood May 23 and returned May 25, also by air.

Eddie Ruff, New Haven branch manager, took the food-stowing championship by popular vote of the eastern delegation.

Welden A. Waters, Albany salesman, was with the Cleveland gang at last year's convention, transferring to his present spot six months ago.

Harry Randel, Brooklyn branch manager, enjoyed the Southern California atmosphere so much that he refused to return with the rest of the delegates. He arrived a week in advance of the conventionites.

Keynoter—

At the Paramount sales convention in Los Angeles was Barney Balaban, president, shown here as he delivered his message to field, home office, studio and foreign manpower.

Publicists Home Office Drive Is Expected

NEW YORK—Drive for home office contracts is expected to get under way shortly now that the Screen Publicists and Advertisers Guild membership unanimously approved affiliation with the Screen Publicists Guild of Los Angeles. The SPAG hereafter will be known as the Screen Publicists Guild of New York.

At the meeting, the initial draft of demands which will be presented for negotiations were discussed among the membership. All contract proposals, it is said, will be whipped into shape as soon as possible.

The resolution also called for a national convention in the near future for the purpose of drafting a constitution for a national SPG. Ratification is expected from the coast unit.

Hear Joelson Dickering For Four Snaper Units

NEW YORK—Reports along Filmrow indicate Julius Joelson, who at one time operated a string of theatres locally and sold out to Fox Playhouses, is negotiating for Dave Snaper's four-unit chain in New Jersey. Snaper admits a deal is pending and is "40 per cent complete, and I may decide one way or the other over the weekend."

After quitting the local scene, Joelson developed a circuit in and around Boston, which he sold to M&P a few months ago. Following disposition of his New England theatres he went to the coast for a vacation and recently returned.

More Summer Closings, Despite Late Season

NEW YORK—Reports of additional summer closings continue to trickle in, although weather has been far from balmy.

Three houses operated by Brandt, the Clifton, Manhattan, Flatbush, Brooklyn, and Windsor, Bronx, are shuttered for the season. The New Singer, one of the oldest houses in Brooklyn, closes for the first time Tuesday.

Closings on the six Consolidated Bronx houses, the Avalon, Fleetwood, Oxford, Ascot, Kingsbridge and Jerome have been postponed until sometime this week.

The Mineola, Mineola, L. I., has been taken over by Frank Calderone, and Henry Malowitz has acquired the State, Malboro, N. Y.

Paramount Latin-American Sales Heads Convening

NEW YORK—John W. Hicks, Paramount's vice-president in charge of foreign sales, will hold a Latin-American sales meeting here shortly. A. L. Pratchett, general manager for Cuba, Mexico and Central America, arrives Wednesday by plane with S. E. Pierpoint, manager of Brazil, docking on the Uruguay Saturday. J. D. Rapoport, manager of Cuba, arrived here over the weekend.

No 20th-Fox Cut in Smaller Salaries

NEW YORK — Twentieth Century-Fox home office employes making $100 or less per week will not be affected by economies instituted as a result of the shrinkage of foreign revenue, Sidney R. Kent, president, stated upon his return from the coast.

Replying to a question concerning the wage cut reports, Kent told BOXOFFICE: "We are doing everything possible to meet the situation in a manner that won't bother the smaller people or touch salaries of $100 a week or less."

Kent said the company is doing everything possible to save money. He had no comment to make on how the situation was influencing the new season's production schedule.

His trip to the studio was termed a "routine checkup." He first quipped that he was doing "confidential FBI work and naturally cannot divulge any inside information."

On the government's suit which goes to trial Monday, Kent said the sooner it started the better. He expects no last-minute offer of a consent decree from Thurman Arnold.

20th-Fox Dividend

NEW YORK—A second quarter dividend of 37½ cents per share has been declared by 20th Century-Fox on the preferred, payable June 29 to stockholders of record June 15, 1940.

Lansdowne-Warner Suit Before Court in June

PHILADELPHIA—The $210,000 anti-trust suit of Harrison Bros. and others, in behalf of the Lansdowne Theatre, against the Warner circuit and the majors, is expected to come up in the federal courts some time in June, it is learned.

The Affiliated Theatres' suit against the same defendants has also been ordered for trial, although no date has been set. Pretrial examinations may start the first week in June.

Clark to Los Angeles At Paramount Helm

LOS ANGELES—M. R. Clark, Paramount's Cleveland manager, has been named manager of the local exchange to succeed Carroll N. Peacock, who died here during the company convention.

Ascap Must Furnish Gov't Particulars

NEW YORK—Denial of an application by Ascap to quash a subpoena served on Gene Buck, president, headed the court news of the week. Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard, in denying the request, ordered the society to furnish most of the 25 government interrogatories in 30 days. Louis Frohlich, appearing for Ascap, charged the government with attempting to secure a consent decree against Ascap in the civil action by starting a criminal one. The judge declared the government had a right to have both actions at the same time. The anti-trust suit against the society was started in 1935 and dropped after a two-week trial because the government could not prove its case.

Other Court News

Max G. Felder and Ben Braudie's suit against Joseph Silverman and Charles P. Carroll as officers of the motion picture division of the Theatrical Agents and Treasurers Union, in which defendants were charged with wrongdoing and a receiver for the union asked, was dismissed in supreme court by Justice Louis A. Valente. The two plaintiffs were expelled from the union.

Booth Tarkington's $100,000 suit against Warner for making "Penrod and His Twin Brother" from a story allegedly not based on any of his yarns, has been set for October trial in federal court by senior Judge John C. Knox. Warner claims the public associates it, and not the author, with the character of Penrod, due to the many films it has made of the character.

A $50,000 suit against M-G-M was filed in supreme court by Mabel Wayne and Neville Fleeson, charging infringment of their song "Betwixt and Between" in "In Between," a song sung by Judy Garland in an undisclosed picture.

Emerson Yorke has filed suit in supreme court against Loucks and Norling Studios seeking seven and one-half per cent of the cost of a third dimensional one reeler made by the defendants for Chrysler Corp. Cost is estimated to be approximately $50,000.

Goldwyn Release Plea Is Now Before Appellate

PHILADELPHIA—The third circuit court of appeals has taken under advisement the appeal of Samuel Goldwyn from a ruling of the U. S. district court in Delaware in his action against United Artists Corp.

Goldwyn is seeking abrogation of his contract with United Artists on the grounds the corporation sanctioned a breach of its contracts with Alexander Korda and Douglas Fairbanks, thus changing the conditions under which Goldwyn made his agreement with the corporation for exclusive distribution rights.

His petition was set aside by the district court, on the grounds the Korda and Fairbanks interests should have been named among the defendants, a step Goldwyn argues is not necessary. It is to restrict the action to United Artists that he appealed to the circuit court.

Landis-Warner Agree On Operating Tieup

PHILADELPHIA—One of the two Warner houses in Vineland is to close, and the remaining house will be operated on a "mutual basis" with the independent Landis, under the out-of-court settlement of the Landis' anti-trust suit, it is learned on good authority.

Under this arrangement, said to be unprecedented in theatre history, the Landis and the Warner house will be operated as if under one management, it is understood. The Warner house presumably will do the buying for both. Product will be allocated to the two houses according to what appears to be the best arrangement for total gross. The combined grosses, BOXOFFICE's informant says, will be divided equally between the two houses week by week.

The legal fees of State Senator Harry Shapiro, attorney for the plaintiff Landis, are to be paid by Warner, it is understood.

Philadelphia IATSE Picks Convention Delegates

PHILADELPHIA—Delegates from the IATSE locals here to the Louisville convention are:

Local 307—Harry J. Abbott, vice-president; A. B. Freeman, and Abbot Oliver, executive board members, and Horace Johns, business agent.

Local 418 (Camden)—Alex Fell, president; Walter Hoffman, vice-president, and William Friedman and Henry Singer, executive board members.

District 4 of the "B" locals—Solis Derfler, vice-president B-100, Philadelphia; Ted Tolley, president B-11, Pittsburgh, and John Kennedy, business agent B-11.

More Delegates

ALBANY—Jim Farrell, assistant chief of service at Fabian's Palace and business agent of Local B-44, is one of two delegates from the tenth District (Buffalo to New York) attending the national convention of IATSE which opens Monday in Louisville. Henry Harris of the Stage Hands' union, is its delegate from Albany.

Lapidus Heads District; Dana to Pittsburgh

NEW YORK—Jules Lapidus, who has been Universal's Pittsburgh branch manager, has been promoted to eastern district manager. Pete Dana, who was Kansas City district manager and later special representative, replaces Lapidus in Pittsburgh. Lapidus takes over the post held by A. J. Herman, now Boston branch manager.

Second UA Board Meet "Routine;" Third Is Due

NEW YORK—UA's second adjourned board meeting took up "routine" matters, according to a spokesman, and it was decided to hold a third and concluding session early in the week. Mary Pickford, who came from the coast for the meetings, remains in the east.

PHILADELPHIA

A 20-GUN salute to Elmer Hollander, who gets a week at the President Hotel, Atlantic City, as winner of Warner Brothers Manager's Week competition. His campaign on "One Million B. Republic Now Owns Two More of Its Branches

NEW YORK—Republic has purchased Herman Gluckman's interest in the company's New York and Philadelphia branches, making the ninth branch now under homeoffice operation. Gluckman, who held the two franchises since June, 1935, will continue to supervise.

Gilhula to Ashtabula: Brown Is Supervisor

NEW YORK—E. C. Grainger, general manager of the Shea Circuit, has transferred Dan Gilhula, formerly manager of the State and Ohio in Cambridge, Ohio, to Ashtabula, where he will be in charge of the Palace, State and Bula. He replaces Clark Brown, who has been appointed supervisor of Ashtabula, Conneaut and Geneva.

Reserves Ruling on RKO Allowances

NEW YORK—Federal Judge William Bondy has tentatively reserved decision on 28 applications for $2,025,214 in allowances for services in the RKO reorganization. A long hearing was held before the judge in federal court at which time applicants told of their services to the estate and why they were entitled to more than they asked.

At the conclusion of the requests, Marland Gale, representing SEC, informed the court RKO could not stand payment of more than $600,000 in cash, and requested the fees be reduced to that amount.

Since the equity receivership in 1933 a total of $968,000 has been paid out in interim allowances and fees. This hearing marked the final requests. Judge Bondy set June 18 at the request of Thomas K. Finletter, newly engaged RKO counsel, for the next hearing, at which time applicants will speak in rebuttal of SEC's statements, and Finletter will back up the company's position with oral testimony.

Requests for fees are as follows: William J. Donovan, attorney for Irving Trust seeks two allowances, $100,000 for his services to Irving Trust and $88,659 for services to RKO in connection with the all-industry suit.

Donovan has received $510,000 previously. Irving Trust seeks $95,000, and has received $295,000 previously. The highest amount requested was that of Atlas Corp., proponents of the reorganization plan. It seeks $875,037 in disbursements and 100,000 shares of common valued at $3 a share. This amount is made up of $300,000 to Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, attorneys for Atlas; $28,736 miscellaneous expenses; $163,277 to Rathvon & Co.; $106,250 to W. J. Merrill; $76,772 to Leo Spitz, and $200,000 for overhead expenses. In this case Gale declared Atlas was entitled to the 100,000 shares of stock, a considerably reduced attorneys fee, and nothing else. In regard to William J. Donovan and Irving Trust, he felt the requests were fair.

Ticket Tax Increase Viewed as Likely

WASHINGTON—Faced with the necessity of paying the price for neutrality, the American theatregoing public may be called upon to bear increased admission taxes as part of an administration program for the financing of the national defense effort.

President Roosevelt, facing the necessity of providing additional revenues for his re-armament program, has suggested to Congress the adoption of simple legislation providing for an "overall" tax of ten per cent on all present taxes, including that on admissions.

Another step in the program would be the increasing of the legal limit of the national debt, so as to permit the borrowing of another $3,000,000,000.

An increase of ten per cent in all present taxes was suggested as a quick method for meeting the problem, since if any effort was made to enact general tax legislation Congress would have to remain in session for many weeks.

Buys Edison Studio

NEW YORK—The original Edison studio in the Bronx, where the late inventor conducted pioneering experiments in the motion picture field, has figured in a real estate deal. The location and building, which now is a modern studio, was sold by the Edison family to Croydon Operating Co. Edison bought the site in 1905.

Two Boyers for RKO By New Independent

Adding two more vehicles to its 1940-41 lineup, RKO Radio has signed a release deal with a newly-formed independent production unit headed by Andre Daven, Nat Wachsberger and Harry Brandt, which will turn out a pair of pictures starring Charles Boyer. First of the films, to roll in August, will be "Ariane Pretends," which Anatole Litvak will direct from a novel by Claude Anet. This will be followed by "The Pirate," based on a play by Marcel Achard. Daven, who is credited with the discovery of Boyer, and Wachsberger will co-produce.

Having transferred his personnel almost in its entirety to his new studio in Burbank, Walt Disney has begun planning for his 1940-41 output of short cartoons for RKO Radio, in which he has announced he will introduce several new characters. The enlarged production space at the new plant has made increased activity possible, with present activities including work on the remaining 12 shorts in the 1939-40 slate as well as preliminary preparations for next year's series. Slated to be completed by the middle of October are "Put-Put Troubles," "Donald's Vacation," "Pluto's Dream House," "Window Cleaners," "Mr. Mouse Takes a Trip," an untitled Mickey Mouse and "The Fire Chief."

Sam Coslow and Jack Votion, heads of Voco Productions, have announced they will roll their second Lum and Abner starrer in August.

First of the "Range Busters" westerns which George Weeks will produce for release through Monogram has been charted to go before the cameras June 17 with Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune and John King in the leads. Jack Natteford is doing the script.

Shooting space at International studios have been secured by Globe Productions, with a production schedule of one reel, containing six subjects, to be turned out weekly beginning early in July. The reels, for use in the Mills automatic projection machines, will be made under the supervision of Henry Henigson.

Ralph Blank has withdrawn from the corporate setup of Franklin-Blank Productions, and Harold B. Franklin has filed papers requesting a change in name to Harold B. Franklin Productions. Its first completed release for RKO Radio is "The Villain Still Pursued Her," with future plans not yet disclosed.

Promises Abate, But Exit Signs for "B's" Multiply

For the past two seasons, at least, manifestos to the effect that "B" product would summarily and henceforth be discontinued were as much a part of major sales convention procedure as were the production announcements themselves or the boast that the aforesaid companies were confidently anticipating "their greatest year."

Despite which occurrence, production policy continued pretty much along accustomed lines; with surveys of the studios' completed efforts for the year disclosing about the same percentage of good, bad and indifferent vehicles in both the high and low-budget classifications. It was evident, furthermore, that the "B" picture formed as important a part of the aggregate as it had ever done.

Para't Promises Only "A's"

However, that annual spring wolf cry of "no more 'B's' " has not been so prevalent as the 1940-41 season draws near. So far it has been limited to one company, Paramount, whose president, Barney Balaban, announced prior to its annual convention here that his company will completely abandon "B" production effective May 31 and concentrate its efforts exclusively on "A" pictures. On that date, Balaban said, the low-budget unit headed by Harold Hurley will be dissolved, with Hurley and his associate producer, William Thomas, checking off the lot. Hurley, planning to enter the independent production field, leaves for New York June 5 to complete negotiations for a major release, and then will vacation for five months.

Despite the scarcity of such "no more 'B' pictures" announcements, and paradoxically enough, indications now are that there may be a curtailment in their making because of an accumulation of developments and circumstances with which the industry has never before been confronted, according to well-informed observers.

These dopesters point out that the frontal attack on "B" product is being launched from four directions, and offer the following in proof of their predictions:

1. Both Samuel Goldwyn and David O. Selznick announced, at the recent United Artists sales conclave in New York, that henceforth neither will countenance blind selling of their product; and declaring that each picture they produce will be given trade showings for exhibitors in every exchange district on the so-called "English auction block" system. Crystal-gazers on the sidelines are of the contention that most "B's" cannot stand such showings on merit and that their prices, kept high by the block-booking system, would drop disastrously under such conditions. Hence their potential elimination.

Poll May End Duals

2. Should the nationwide double-feature poll to be launched by Dr. George Gallup of the American Institute of Public Opinion result in the rejection of dual-billing by the theatre-going public, the demand for "B" pictures—usually the second half of a dual program—will cease to exist. Goldwyn, again, was instrumental in securing Gallup's agreement to conduct this poll.

3. With Goldwyn again in the picture through a telegram dispatched to the conventioneers urging they do everything in their power to remedy the "double-bill evil," delegates to the recent Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners conclave voted unanimously to use every means at their command to reinstate single-billing. Goldwyn told them in his message that only in this way can the public be brought back into the theatres.

4. Possible passage of the Neely anti-block booking bill would force every major company to adopt the trade-showing policy announced by Selznick and Goldwyn. Block booking, observers point out, makes possible the sale of a great many pictures —roughly 596 in 1939-40—of which, it is estimated, 75 per cent were in the "B" classification. One of the first Hollywood producers to be subpoenaed to testify at the hearings now being conducted on the Neely measure by a Congressional committee is Goldwyn.

All these are straws, dopesters aver, indicating "B's" are at long last on their way out. As a result, they say, considerable perturbance is being demonstrated by writers, actors, technicians and others, who have made their livings largely by working on low budgeted product, as regards their future.

"All This" Is Groomed for Swanky Premiere June 4

A top rung event on the calendar is Warner's projected premiere here of the Bette Davis starrer, "All This and Heaven, Too," at the Warner Beverly Hills Theatre June 4. This showing, at a $5.50 admission scale, will be followed by a road-show run of the picture in the house—giving the Los Angeles area a pair of two-a-day offerings, as "Gone With the Wind" will continue for some weeks at the Carthay Circle. It was the Warner intention, originally, to book "All This and Heaven, Too," into the Carthay Circle, but continued good grosses on "GWTW" decided Fox West Coast officials to hold the Vivien Leigh-Clark Gable starrer for an extended engagement.

Paramount has slated a tri-city premiere for "Untamed" in Seattle, Portland and Spokane, with the initial showing to be in Seattle June 13 and in the other two cities the following evening. Deal was set with Frank L. Newman, president of the Evergreen circuit. Jack Dailey of the studio advertising department will aid Evergreen's publicists in handling the stunt.

Later this summer, probably in July or August, 20th Century-Fox's "Maryland" is to be given a lavish opening at the New Theatre in Baltimore, Maryland, with city and state officials cooperating. Plans at present are to send the entire cast and other studio personalities to the affair.

Technicians Confer With Zanuck on Industry

To consider new problems confronting the industry, 50 leading studio technicians have been scheduled to confer with Darryl Zanuck, chairman of the Academy Research Council, in a meeting slated for May 29. The group was scheduled to complete organization of its new basic committees in the field of photography, laboratory processing, optics, cine-technical development and sound.

Considine Jr. Will Produce "Ex-Mayor of Boys Town"

John Considine jr. will next produce "Ex-Mayor of Boys Town," starring Spencer Tracy, for M-G-M, the picture to go into work when he has completed "Boom Town."

Borrows Sanders

Edward Small has borrowed George Sanders from 20th Century-Fox for a top role in "The Son of Monte Cristo," which will star Louis Hayward for United Artists release. Picture goes into work when Small has completed his current "Kit Carson."

Hellinger on "Thirties"

Warner has assigned Mark Hellinger to produce "The Fabulous Thirties," a sequel to "The Roaring Twenties," from a script by Milton Krims.

Major Production Falls; 45 Films Are in Work

For the first time in more than a month, production among the majors has dropped, with 45 pictures now in work—ten less than the all-time high established last week.

Columbia is filming seven, with "Five Little Peppers at School" as a new start and "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" and "Girls of the Road" going into the cutting room. Metro is idling along with four in work. Monogram broke an idle spell by gunning "Queen of the Yukon."

"The New Yorkers" went into production at Paramount, raising the studio's total to six. Republic dropped its pace to three with completion of "The Fighting Marshal." Gunning "One Crowded Night" and finishing "The Stage to Chino," RKO Radio held even with four in production.

With no new starts on the line, 20th Century-Fox continued camera work on six features. United Artists' aggregate dropped to three with the completion of Argosy's "The Long Voyage Home." At Universal, "The Mummy's Hand" and "Uneasy Payments" went into production.

Harlan Thompson to WB As Supervisor on One

Harlan Thompson, former associate producer at Paramount, has been signed by Warner to function as supervisor of "The Secret Army" under the executive guidance of Bryan Foy. William K. Howard will direct.

Hellinger on "High Sierra"

Mark Hellinger has been assigned by Warner to produce "High Sierra," the next Paul Muni starrer, from a novel by W. R. Burnett. Michael Curtiz will direct.

WHILE it was not scheduled as a part of the agendum at Paramount's annual sales convention, delegates were served a helping of ham which furnished the laugh highspot of the meetings.

At intervals, individual Paramount stars were rushed to the conference room at the Ambassador Hotel to tell the "dear, dear salesmen" how happy they were to personally greet the men who sallied forth to the four corners of the world and made it possible for a breathless public to enjoy the results of their Thespic labors.

Came Frederic March, resplendent in grease paint and costume and direct from the set of "Victory." Rolling his "R's" until the rafters rang, Star Mar-r-r-r-ch spoke:

"I am always at a loss to know what to say before a gathering of this kind and am reminded of the observation, which I think was originally made by Confucius, that 'a public speaker should stand up to be seen, speak up to be heard and shut up to be appreciated,' etc. . . ."

Polite laughter.

An hour or more later, Douglas Fairbanks jr., in tow of his newest producer, Boris Morros, made his bow to the visiting firemen. Said Fairbanks in his best synthetic English accent:

"I am always at a loss to know what to say before a gathering of this kind and am reminded of the statement of Sir Henry Irving, the great tragedian, that 'a public speaker should stand up to be seen, speak up to be heard, and shut up to be appreciated,' etc. . . ."

Again, polite laughter, but completely drowned out by twitters.

Apparently, Messrs. March and Fairbanks recently attended the same banquet but failed to agree as to the source of their parallel, but not collated, plagiarism.

Major studios are reportedly issuing orders prohibiting the use of radios on the lots. One has gone so far as to ban the sale of daily newspapers in its commissary. The object, of course, is an effort to have less executive and personnel time and attention devoted to the war and more to production matters.

But it was all rather unnecessary in view of the fact that the bangtails have started to run at Hollywood Park.

BALLYHOODLUMS—John LeRoy Johnston, who contends that the world is eager to know whether the Nazi invasion of Holland will hurt or benefit Walter Wanger's current production, "Foreign Correspondent," solves the weighty problem with the startling announcement that "the Nazi invasion of Holland was anticipated by Mr. Wanger when the final script was being written." Winston Churchill and General Weygand would probably like to employ one with such remarkable vision as a technical advisor on the super-super they have in production . . . Whether inadvertent or planted, one of the more noteworthy publicity breaks of recent weeks was the lengthy paragraph of a United Press newscast telling of the reissue of Warner's "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" as a definite and important part of the current combat-the-fifth-column activities. Take another bow, Bob (Addison Sims) Taplinger . . . An example of the degree of connivance or inaccuracy attained by freelance press-agentry: In one trade daily, headline proclaims "McCarey, Roach Deal Nears Signature." On the same day, another publication asserts "WB Deal to McCarey; Deal Similar to Capra's" . . . Apparently the marathon contest between Lou (Silent) Smith, Columbia's gift to the ranks of studio publicists, and "Scoop" Conlon, representing the freelance gentry, to determine which can go the longest without getting something into print about their respective principals is still deadlocked—and no signs of either contestant weakening. Incidentally, one of Hollywood's perpetual mysteries concerns the derivation of the "Scoop" appellation—with a long look at the amount of publicity forthcoming on Conlon clients.

Tip-Top, Tedious and a Tear-Jerker

Tragedy, presented at its productional best and worst, found itself established at the top and bottom of the week's list of eight pictures previewed. Easily dominating the octette was 20th Century-Fox's "Four Sons," while Paramount's "The Way of All Flesh," considering its budgetary position, must be adjudged the weakest effort.

Of unlimited appeal as engrossing entertainment, and a forceful argument for the democratic way of living as compared to dictator-ridden Europe, "Four Sons" will, with little doubt, win boundless praise for itself from every American who sees it. And their praise will reverberate to the point where, wisely exploited, its revenue should know no ceiling. The correlated efforts of those who had a hand in its making were little short of inspired, so magnificently was it written, produced, directed and enacted; while, from the merchandising standpoint, it is timed to the minute for universal interest, although its locale and motivation—the rape of Czecho-Slovakia by the Nazis—is now almost ancient history, considering the speed of current events. Producer Harry Joe Brown spared no effort to place the film in the top entertainment brackets. Working with him were Archie Mayo, who directed with vigor and authority, and John Howard Lawson, who wrote a compelling screenplay from a story by I. A. R. Wylie.

Only other entry to finish in the first division was Warner's "Brother Orchid," which had Edward G. Robinson deserting the be-whiskered biographical field to return to his first love, gangdom, tempered with comedy. A very worthwhile parcel of comedy drama designed to more than satisfy the average entertainment taste for something in the lighter vein, the picture reveals throughout the subtle touch of Producer Mark Hellinger, who seems to have a distinctive flair for photoplays of the quasi-hardboiled theme. Lloyd Bacon paced his direction well, working from a tailor-made script by Earl Baldwin, who based his work on an original story by Richard Connell. Baldwin successfully attained the required satirical treatment throughout.

Five programmers of assorted worth were topped by Metro's "Phantom Raiders," second in the "Nick Carter" sleuth series and a tip-top adventure melodrama all the way. Substantially mounted by Producer Frederick Stephani, it should rejuvenate dwindling grosses wherever thrill-seekers abound. Both Jacques Tourneur, who directed, and William R. Lipman, who did the script from an original by Jonathan Latimer, aimed their efforts with an experienced and practical eye toward the boxoffice.

Universal incorporated all the tried-and-true elements of adolescent action drama in "You're Not So Tough," and the picture, consequently, can be expected to account for itself satisfactorily in the program niche. Merged for the first time, the "Dead End Kids" and the "Little Tough Guys" are as noisy as ever, but both groups are rapidly attaining maturity and, for this reason, are probably reaching the end of their vogue as rambunctious juveniles. Production by Ken Goldsmith, and Joe May's direction, are both up to par. Arthur T. Horman fashioned a workmanlike script from Maxwell Aley's original story.

From the same studio came "Framed," a mystery-comedy that boasts snappy dialogue, fast-paced action and a whirlwind climax, all keyed in the lighter vein. In its unassuming way, this should more than pass muster with audiences of all types. Producer Ben Pivar and Director Harold Schuster fulfilled their respective assignments with complete competency, while Roy Chanslor's original screenplay was well-contrived.

Burdened down with a feather-weight cast and complete unoriginality in its plot development, 20th Century-Fox's "Manhattan Heartbeat," a re-make of the famous "Bad Girl," suffers badly by comparison with its predecessor. As subsequent-run material it will get by, but that's all that can be said for it. Under Sol Wurtzel's production guidance, Director David Burton did the best he could with the material at hand. Harold Buchman, Clark Andrews, Jack Jungmeyer jr. and Edith Skouras manufactured the laborious script from the novel by Vina Delmar.

Commonplace sagebrush fodder that fails to take advantage of the possibilities inherent in its budget and cast, 20th Century-Fox's "Lucky Cisco Kid" is so stereotyped in motivation and treatment, and attempts to include so many horse-opera cliches, that at times it almost seems to be a burlesque of the time-honored western. With each succeeding chapter, the series seems to be veering further away from the splendid "Cisco Kid" pictures made with Warner Baxter as the star, whose boots and saddle Cesar Romero cannot quite fill. H. Bruce Humberstone demonstrated a lack of smoothness and timing in his direction. John Stone produced, with Robert Ellis and Helen Logan scripting from an original story by Julian Johnson.

Major flaw in Paramount's "The Way of All Flesh" is the almost complete lack of alleviating touches of humor, the incorporation of which would have widened the picture's appeal considerably. However, it stresses the tear-jerking technique too relentlessly to hit the mark for any but those who demand huge chunks of heartbreak and despair in their motion picture diet. Despite all this, there are several compellingly powerful scenes to the credit of Director Louis King and Scenarist Lenore Coffee, who used an original story by Lajos Biro and Jules Furthman as the basis for her script. Eugene Zukor functioned as associate producer.

Progress Despite War Gloom, Balaban Hope for Paramount

LOS ANGELES—Charting a course of continued progress for Paramount despite world economic conditions and expressing complete confidence in the ability of the sales force to put over the program outlined for the new year, Barney Balaban, president of the company, sounded the keynote for Paramount for the 1940-41 season in an address delivered to the 125 attending delegates to the annual convention here May 24-25-26. Balaban pointed out that the company's operating and financial policies have been shaped to a conservative pattern which enables the organization to "breathe more freely," and declared that, "instead of running to cover, Paramount is shooting the works." He cited a list of stars, plays, studio and sales executives which he declared, in his belief, "add up to the strongest group of box-office pictures this company has ever had."

Touching upon sales policies, Balaban asserted that "this cannot continue to be a buyer's market," although declaring that "that does not mean starting a war between distribution and exhibition." Pointing out that a year ago he told conventionites that the time was drawing near when films would be sold on a different basis than in the past, Balaban said:

"I believe that we are just a year closer to that time."

Paying tribute to Y. Frank Freeman, William LeBaron, other studio executives and homeoffice officials, Balaban also read a cable from David Rose, English production head, pledging renewed efforts to increase revenue in Great Britain.

Sales policies were discussed by Neil Agnew, distribution chief, in a closed session with the attending sales forces. It became known through a Paramount spokesman, however, that Agnew instructed the district and divisional managers to work out their own policies on an individual basis to meet their individual problems and territorial aspects, in each instance securing the highest possible returns from percentage and flat-rental bookings. Divisional groups met in separate sessions, also, under the leadership of J. J. Unger, Charles M. Reagan and Oscar Morgan, heads of the eastern, western and southern divisions respectively.

Sees End of Duals

With the prediction that dual billing is coming to an end because of a threatened shortage of product, Freeman, who is in charge of studio operations, told attending delegates world economic conditions are forcing all studios to make less films during the coming year. Declaring there will be "just as many good pictures, but not so many pictures," he asserted "they simply won't be available to exhibitors for double billing." Because of this condition, Freeman said, exhibitors must contribute to a greater degree to the job of selling forthcoming product. Admitting that during the years past the studio has "in some instances" failed to deliver the "smash top pictures that we should have delivered," Freeman told the delegates that the plant is now on the road to making more of the hit pictures the sales force needs.

"This is not the beginning merely of the 1940-41 convention," Freeman said, "but it is the beginning of a new deal for Paramount."

Freeman's references to improved quality in the 1940-41 lineup were expanded upon by Cecil B. DeMille, who recalled that it was his 25th appearance before a Paramount convention and announced that he will make three pictures, all in Technicolor, during the next two years, first of them to be "Reap the Wild Wind." William LeBaron, studio production head, and A. M. Botsford, his executive assistant, introduced Arthur Hornblow jr., who outlined the plots and casts of the four pictures he will supervise; Mark Sandrich, producer-director, who is to make two films; Anthony Veiller, who has three on his schedule; William A. Wellman, to produce and direct two; Harry Sherman, planning six "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns and two specials. Brief appearances were made by such stars as Jack Benny, Gary Cooper, Dorothy Lamour, Fredric March, Douglas Fairbanks jr., Betty Field, Mary Martin, Robert Preston and others. Thereafter Freeman explained the studio's efforts to build up new players and develop new stars, and asked the cooperation of the sales force in giving "every possible break" to the newcomers.

$2,000,000 Advertising Budget

A $2,000,000 advertising budget has been set aside for the new season, Robert M. Gillham, publicity-advertising chieftain, announced to the delegates. Of this the bulk will be spent in newspapers and in more extensive exploitation in the field, he said. Gillham declared magazines will be used only when pictures lend themselves especially to that type of national advertising. An exploitation man is to be assigned to each distribution district, Gillham said, working directly with the district managers to contact newspapers and exhibitors, handling premieres and special showings. Their work will be coordinated by Alec Moss, Gillham's New York assistant. Paramount will continue to utilize radio as a selling force, Gillham added. He was followed to the rostrum by Cliff Lewis, studio advertising-publicity director, and other departmental executives, including Al Wilkie, A. C. Dillenbeck of the Buchanan advertising agency and Charles Casanave, vice-president of National Screen Service.

The foreign situation was reviewed by John W. Hicks jr., vice-president in charge of foreign operations. He told conventioneers the Paramount organization abroad still is in operation, although under conditions imposing "a terrific burden." Hicks declared the organization is being maintained "so that when peace comes again, we will be ready to step in and rehabilitate our business." However, he said, world unrest precludes the possibility of accurately foretelling what revenue may come from abroad.

Merchant Byke Promotion Takes Hold on Coast

LOS ANGELES—The use of bicycle promotions for Saturday matinee giveaways has taken hold at boxoffices throughout the country, and is being adopted by west coast exhibitors, according to Cal Hermer, western district manager for International Enterprises.

International Enterprises, with home offices in Chicago, has dealt in theatre-merchant promotions for years, and for the past eight years has specialized in bicycle tieups. Hermer came out here recently to supervise West Coast operations through the company's Los Angeles branch, located at 2028 S. Vermont Ave.

They offer Speed-O-King bicycles and the new Hollywood Police Car free to theatres with merchant tieup. Merchant selling is done by their own bonded representatives under supervision of the Los Angeles branch.

Many of the major circuits throughout the country have been served by International, including Warner, Publix, Fox Midwest, Balaban & Katz, Crescent Amusement, Wilby & Kincey, Malco, Griffith, Interstate, Harris, and United Detroit, as well as independent houses.

"U" Has Crosby Short

Paramounties

LOS ANGELES—Frank H. Smith, Salt Lake City branch manager, and J. M. Bettencourt, San Francisco sales manager, acted as an advance column, for the Paramount convention arriving four hours earlier on different trains ahead of the other delegates. They held down the Ambassador Hotel lobby as self-appointed information bureaus.

The west coast seems to have agreed with A. R. Anderson, Portland branch manager, who moved from Sioux Falls last year, and on whose cheeks a Technicolor glow now is noticeable . . . Frank Smith, branch manager from Salt Lake City, also is on the healthy side.

All keyed up about the San Francisco Fair, Neal East, San Francisco branch manager, acted as a lobbyist trying to persuade the conventioneers to make the Bay City exposition a stopover on their way home.

Harry David, Salt Lake City Paramount circuit executive, flew in to meet the salesmen, and lunched with Frank H. Smith, Salt Lake branch manager.

Morris Segel, Seattle manager, was so anxious to save time for the company that he planed in from his territory.

Few conventionites escaped Harry Sherman, producer of those "Hopalong Cassidy" and other westerns, who buttonholed everyone within reach to show them his armful of wires and letters from exhibitors, listing statistics claiming his "Light of Western Stars" is outgrossing virtually every other picture from Paramount for several seasons past. With Sherman was Myke Lewis, his sales contact, hobbling around on two canes as the result of an automobile accident some time ago.

A personalized touch was introduced when Kenneth Robinson, Buffalo manager, delivered a greeting from Vince McFaul, general manager of the Shea Theatres there, to Y. Frank Freeman.

Two unchallenged records were set by Alvaro Reyes, manager of the Colombia, South America, office. He traveled farthest—4,850 miles via New York—and set foot on American soil for the first time in ten years.

It was a case of pleasure before business when William H. Pine, assistant to Producer C. B. DeMille, ran across his old friend Alec Moss of the New York office. Pine forsook his task of editing "North West Mounted Police" to have lunch with the easterner.

Nobody can tell Judge Frawley, convention manager, much about handling these sales sessions. He's been in Hollywood once a year, every year, since 1920, staged his first convention for Paramount in 1922—and has plenty of gray hairs to prove it.

Lion of the luncheon table was Gary Cooper, introduced by Y. Frank Freeman as "one of our up-and-coming young stars." He dined with Barney Balaban, Freeman, Y. Frank Freeman jr., Jack Moss, Jacob Karp and Austin Keough.

While war talk was heard on every side, more concern was exhibited by Jack Roper, homeoffice statistician, than by most other delegates—and with good reason. He has relatives living in London and others fighting at the front.

Evidently hoping to get himself in trim for a strenuous bout with the adjectives in 1940-41, Bob Gillham, publicity-advertising chief, played a game of tennis with William T. Tilden, former champ, each morning before breakfast. Gillham's refusal to divulge the scores, and his claim that he had a hole in his racket, were met with raised eyebrows on the part of conventionites.

Clayton Eastman, Albany chief, proudly reported business at his office 30 per cent ahead of last year.

PORTLAND

NEXT WEEK is the Rose Festival, which if it is not an event in which the entire community takes part, comes remarkably close to it for a city as large as Portland. This year's show promises to be as good as the best, if not better, and not the least of its marvels is how this guy Ted Gamble can general-manage it while operating a string of show houses and remain his usual jovial self—always willing to help out a reporter.

Oregon lost a leading spirit in civic enterprises with the death Sunday of Sam Slocum, publicist, who in recent years directed promotion of the Winter Sports Carnival, The Redhead Roundup at Taft, the Mount Angel flax festival, the Independence Hop fiesta, the Tillamook Beaches jubilee and the firemen's milk fund. The former newspaperman passed away at University state tuberculosis hospital at the age of 49.

Visiting the Row last week, Eddie Callahan of Seaside revealed his new 650-seat Times house will open June 29, probably with a single feature policy . . . Herb Sobottka ran off a pretty dance feature on the Paramount stage Saturday and Sunday, with some 300 pupils of the Billings dance studio going through their paces in an hour. LOS ANGELES

LANE NICHOLAS, M-G-M shipper, is vacationing for two weeks in the High Sierras . . . Enid Kasten has resigned from M-G-M to take a job at the Lockheed airplane factory. Kathleen Gannon replaces Enid in the accounting department, shifting over from the clerical staff.

Booking visitors included Fred Siegel of the Palomar and Margo theatres, Oceanside, and Harvey Levinson of the Cozy . . . Astor's releases, "Hell's Angeles" and "Scarface" have been held for another week at the Filmarte in Hollywood.

Leon Glasser, new owner of the Bell in Bell, is learning about the city's transportation system first-hand via street car and bus. His automobile was stolen from in front of the theatre . . . Mike Levinson checked in from a trip through the northwest, supervising runs of his independent release, "White Zombie," which opened in Sacramento, Fresno and Stockton . . . A visitor at the Azteca exchange was Roberto A. Morales, Mexico City producer.

Marcella Daly, booker's secretary at RKO Radio, became Mrs. Dick Cantwell in a ceremony performed at Las Vegas, June 1. She and her new husband will establish residence in Alhambra . . . A two-week vacation is being planned by May Cunningham, of RKO Radio's secretarial staff.

Producers Releasing Corp. screened "I Take This Woman," its first release, for Fox West Coast executives . . . Oscar Rose and Sam Horowitz have purchased the Film Cafe, on Filmrow, from Milton Rose, who is thinking seriously of becoming an exhibitor and deserting the restaurant business for good.

More booking visitors: Harry Hoffman, Soboba, San Jacinto; Harvey Perrizo of the Dreamland; George Bromley, operator of the Campus . . . Frank Ullman, who owns the Azteca in Calexico, reports no damage was done to his house in the recent Imperial Valley earthquakes.

Hi Peskay of Majestic Pictures has set a booking deal with Fox West Coast for "Mill on the Floss," starring Geraldine Fitzgerald . . . The exchange has also acquired west coast distribution rights to "Murder Is News," English-made film starring John Gallaudet.

Edith Simmonds, who operates the switchboard at the Columbia exchange, is off on a two-week vacation. She intends to spend most of it right in town . . . C. A. B. Emanuel, father of Bess Emanuel, local independent distributor, checked in from San Francisco for a short visit . . . Jenne Dodge, Mission Theatre, Ventura, came in for bookings.

Sam Nathanson, general manager of Coast Pictures, received word from Detroit that his father, Simon Nathanson, had died there May 22 of a paralytic stroke at the age of 74 . . . Delegates from the local exchange attending the United Artists convention are back on the job after their trip to Chicago.

Ralph Carmichael, M-G-M office manager, and Howard Perretz are keeping in trim (they hope) by boxing a few rounds after office hours every night.

DENVER

ORSON DRAKE, operator at the Pueblo, Pueblo, was asphyxiated in his booth when a fire broke out back stage. Drake apparently tried to save the film from destruction. The 300 in the theatre at the time escaped injury. $20,000 damage was done to the house.

The Kiva at Las Animas, Colo., was destroyed at an estimated loss of $15,000 in an early morning fire. The house was owned by E. M. Simon and operated by C. E. McGlothlin.

The Pace at Gordon, Neb., destroyed a few months ago by fire, is being rebuilt by the Black Hills Amusement Co. The new house will be opened around July 1, and will seat 550.

Frank Young has changed the name of his Star at Otis, Colo., to the Sun . . . The Granada, Denver, one of the Civic group, is operating only on Friday, Saturday and Sunday for the summer.

Two prominent theatre families of the Denver area will be united some time this fall when the wedding of Miss Niriam Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl P. (Buzz) Briggs, and Wm. H. Ostenberg III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Ostenberg II, takes place. Both are students at the University of Colorado.

The showroom of the Graham Bros. Theatre Equipment Co. is nearing the end of the remodeling, and will provide this firm an up-to-the-minute place to exhibit their stock. The showroom has been more than doubled in size.

More than 50 attended the final monthly luncheon of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, at which time Rowland K. Goddard, secret service man, gave an instructive talk on money, and special stress was laid on how to detect counterfeit bills.

Miss Rose Agren, office manager and booker for the Monogram exchange, is enjoying a three-week's vacation in the east and Canada. Charlotte Priesen is filling the job while Miss Agren is away.

Leimbrock & McCallester are building a new theatre at Caddoa Dam, a government project. The house will seat about 300. While in Denver they bought sound equipment and projectors, along with a screen and miscellaneous equipment, at the National Theatre Supply . . . A. E. Meyers, sales manager of the International Projector Corp. of N. Y., was a visitor at the NTS branch.

Ticklish Situation Confronts Browne

NEW YORK—Although local observers believe IATSE President George I. Browne will poll a unanimous vote to give him his fourth successive term on the basis of his accomplishments over the past year, the organization's four-day convention in Louisville, starting June 3, is expected to provide fireworks when Browne attempts to "talk his way out of the Willie Bioff, case, the Westbrook Pegler situation and the John P. Nick scandal" in St. Louis.

Browne may use a "smoke screen" in the form of pointing up progress in the strengthening of the IATSE in major exchanges and the 30 locals recently chartered in the boxoffice treasurers' field, it is said, but "he has an account to settle in respect to the prestige of the organization in explaining the three other matters," as one source puts it. However, Browne's personal popularity is seen as overcoming any resentment "as it might be translated into action."

A topic that may flare into a major issue revolves about Altec, whose purported "inclusive service" is said to be aimed at "servicing everything in the house" and which is claimed to be "stepping on the toes of projectionists." Action also is expected to be taken toward consolidating IATSE's lines in the 16mm field, which is said to be decidedly on the upbeat. It is the organization's feeling, union observers say, that its members should be employed where 16mm showings are performed for large public groups, whether they be commercial or educational.

In fact, as one spokesman puts it, "wherever there is projection, the IATSE says 'me, too.'" This attitude may resolve itself into action in respect to jurisdiction in the television field and the recent influx of nickel-in-the-slot machines that employ amplifiers, which must be serviced.

Harland Holmden of Cleveland, presently a third vice-president, is seen as a logical election successor to Nick, who held the post of first international vice-president. If Browne is re-elected president it will be his first under the new four-year term amendment. His three previous administrations were two-year terms. About 1,000 delegates, including representatives from the Bahama Islands and Hawaii, are expected. There will be about 15 commercial equipment displays.

Suburban Chicago Houses Benefit by Rainy Weekend

CHICAGO—The rainy weekend was an aid to suburban theatre business, many of the houses reporting their best boxoffice takes in several weeks.

In the loop, however, there were no outstanding favorites, with all the houses reporting average business.

"Olympia," the motion picture of the German Olympic Games, despite all Nazi propaganda having been taken from it, had a miserable week at the Sonotone.

Racine Manager Branches Into Broadcasting

Racine, Wis.—Stanley Lambert, Hollywood air reporter! That's the latest monicker of the versatile manager of the Warner Rialto here.

Lambert recently sold the local radio station, WRJN, on a weekly 15-minute broadcast every Tuesday of Hollywood news. When a professional woman announcer wanted too much money for the job, Lambert tested for the job himself and passed with flying colors. And besides plugging his own Rialto on the program he also plugs the Warner Venetian and State theatres.

A 3% Admission Tax May Face Illinois

CHICAGO—A three per cent admission tax is expected to be introduced during the next session of the Illinois legislature as one means of replenishing the state treasury, which is reported badly depleted.

Should the proposal materialize, it is certain to meet concerted opposition from the United Theatre Owners of Illinois, according to President Eddie Zorn of Pontiac.

The UTOI confines its activity to combating legislation harmful to the trade. Its last campaign was waged against the Lund anti-double feature bill.

Protest Against Multiple Programs Seen Effective

ST. LOUIS—The recent protest by officers and members of the Better Film Council of Greater St. Louis against triple feature programs being used by some theatres in St. Louis and St. Louis county, has apparently obtained some results.

It has been learned that the management of the Fairy, a 500-seater at 5640 Easton Ave., and the Macklind, a 645-seater at 5415 Arsenal St., have announced they intend to eliminate such programs in the future. It is anticipated their lead will be followed by other houses, including some in the St. Louis Amusement Co. fleet.

The Fairy and Hi-Way are pioneers in the triple-feature program field.

Confine 'Waterloo Bridge'

CHICAGO—M-G-M's "Waterloo Bridge" has been given an adult-only permit by the local censor board. The film opens its loop run following "Edison, the Man" at the United Artists.

Greiver Into Antioch

ANTIOCH, ILL.—Si Greiver of Chicago has taken over operation of the old Crystal here. After remodeling the house, he has renamed it the Lake. The house was reopened Decoration Day.

Milwaukee Paper Hits Censorship Proposal

MILWAUKEE—Mayor Carl F. Zeidler's proposal to set up a censorship committee with power to act against objectionable pictures is opposed by the Milwaukee Journal in an editorial because "Censorship of films goes along with censorship of speech or of the press.

"Those who accept the ideas of totalitarian governments wouldn't object," the paper goes on. "But that is not yet the American idea. Most persons think there is already too much government interference in their lives. But at least they can still read about it in their newspapers, hear about it over their radios and see pictures of what is going on.

"Decency is vital to a community. Year in and year out we've been in a good many campaigns for decency. We've heard the outcries from one side that the law and the police interfere with 'personal liberty,' the demands from the other side that safeguards be thrown around children and young people. We stand for guarding the young people.

"But there never has been a time when it wasn't possible to shout down an indecent performance. There is authority enough in the present law and film commission to prevent a showing that classifies as indecent, without creating an arbitrary board to limit one of the freedoms we still enjoy."

Showing of "Primrose Path" here started the censorship agitation after the motion picture board had approved the picture despite a statement by Mayor Zeidler that he had received numerous protests from citizens as to the desirability of showing the film. Mayor Zeidler requested the commission to review its original approval of the picture, which it did, and again gave the film a clean bill of health.

Free Screen Bulwark of Liberty, Says Milliken

INDIANAPOLIS—"Freedom of the screen and freedom of the press stand as an eternal reiteration of the Bill of Rights," declared Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in a recent address before the Business and Professional Women's Club here. Great tribute was paid to Will Hays as a major influence in the development of films the past 18 years.

Milliken touched upon the role of the motion picture as the combiner of all the arts and its vast potentialities in education, and reminded his hearers that films are still in their first generation.

Plan Light Fare

CHICAGO—Comedy relief in films as an antidote to war news is planned by various major studios, Clarence Brown, M-G-M director, told BOXOFFICE during a brief stopover here between planes. He was en route to Hollywood after a stay in New York.

CHICAGO

BILL BRUMBERG, Warner assistant branch manager, still is making the "kerosene circuit" of smalltown and neighborhood civic clubs for luncheon speeches, and doing a swell public relations job. His latest was before the Niles Center Business Men's Club.

The all-star Filmrow softball team won its first game in the Trans-Loop League, defeating the Southern Limited outfit, 9 to 2. Bill Kassell of Columbia was the Filmrow pitcher, allowing just four hits.

Jake Wilk, Warner story editor, stopped in the local exchange, en route east on a regular jaunt . . . George West was through here, motoring to the west coast . . . B&K has remodeled its publicity department offices, and they even have venetian blinds now.

The M-G-M Employes' Club hosted a party to Evelyn Seman at Al Simon's. She is going back to her old job of housewife . . . Our sympathies to Frank Ishmael, whose mother died recently near Taylorville, Ill.

Florence Eddy Tucker, "hello" girl at 20th Century-Fox, is honeymooning in the Ozarks and postcards to the office gang that it is "heavenly" there . . . Mrs. William Weinshenker, wife of the Universal city salesman, is confined to University Hospital.

Florence Rosen, "hello" girl at Universal, has been promoted to contract clerk, succeeding Ruth Greenberg who has received a federal stenographic post at Rockford, Ill. Taking Florence's place is Ann Weiner.

CONVENTION ECHOES: Ben Elrod, Chicago member of the Paramount 100 Per Cent club, is considered one of the most enthusiastic salesmen, having run his zone from a hospital bed when he was injured in an accident recently . . . Jim Donohue, Chicago Paramount manager, went out ahead of the convention delegates because of his mother's illness in San Francisco. When she was reported improved by physicians, Donohue went on to Los Angeles.

Practically all of the office staffs of the Filmrow exchanges are on a summer schedules now. Which means, they close a half hour later daily, at 5:30 p. m., and remain closed on Saturdays, with only skeleton crews on duty a half day then.

Alaine Brandes, one of the most photographed girls in Chicago until about a year ago, is now Hollywood's "Movie Glamour Girl of 1940," according to word from the film capital. Alaine, who tried for RKO's "Gateway to Hollywood" last year without success, is now set for four forthcoming film roles, viz: In Hal Roach's "Turnabout" for UA; "The Boys From Syracuse," Universal; "A Night at Earl Carroll's," Paramount, and an untitled RKO picture.

Al Jolson's forthcoming musical, coming into the Grand Opera House, July 7, has been retitled "Silks and Saddles." Formerly it was "Keep Punchin'."

The annual summer season at Ravinia, swank north Chicago suburb, of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, gets under way again this year on June 25.

Jack Osserman, RKO branch manager, and his sales force hopped aboard the RKO convention special at LaSalle Street Station here last Saturday. The special carried all the western boys to the New York confab and picked up a lot of them en route.

Many Sign for Allied Equipment Exhibit

CHICAGO—Companies already signed for exhibits in the Equipment Dealers' Exposition phase of the 11th annual Allied national convention at the Hotel Morrison here June 19 to 21 include:

Adler Sign, American Seating, American Ticket, American Vending, Arcus Ticket, Brenkert Light & Projector, Burch Manufacturing, Confection Cabinet Corp., Consolidated Book Publishers, Cretor's Popcorn Machine, De Vry Corp., Holmes Projectors, Heywood-Wakefield, Ideal Seating, International Seat, Kroehler Manufacturing, Motiograph Projectors, National Carbon, National Program & Printing, National Screen Service Corp., and its two subsidiaries, National Screen Service Corp., and its two subsidiaries, National Screen Accessories, Inc., and Advertising Accessories, Inc., National Theatre Supply, RCA Manufacturing and Universal Theatre Premiums.

The exhibits committee comprises Harry Reckas, chairman; Harold Gollos, Jerome Marks, Saul Meltzer and Basil Charuhas. With the convention still almost a month away, more than half the concession booths originally available, already have been contracted for, according to Reckas.

Gets Word-of-Mouth for "My Favorite Wife"

KENOSHA, WIS.—To talk up "My Favorite Wife," E. R. Brennan, manager of the Kenosha, invited some of the employes from the city's largest industrial firms to see the picture at a private preview showing. As a result of the word-of-mouth resulting from this stunt, it did a brisk business during its four-day run.

Record of Post-Dispatch Case to Supreme Court

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.—The return of Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe of St. Louis in his contempt proceedings against the Pulitzer Publishing Co., publishers of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and two editorial employes of that paper, was filed with the Missouri supreme court here on May 25.

It consists of the complete record in the proceedings against the paper, its editorial page cartoonist, Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, and Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page. He fined the paper $2,000. Coghlan drew a $200 fine and 20 days in jail and Fitzpatrick a $100 fine and ten days in jail.

The request for a review by the high court automatically suspended the carrying out of the punishment inflicted by Judge Rowe. The jurist has indicated he will ask an investigation of the paper when the grand jury for the circuit court for criminal causes convenes, June 3.

Respond to Call

CHICAGO—More than $5,000 of the industry's $10,000 quota for the American Red Cross war relief fund has been raised. John Balaban, chairman, announced the total this week in making a plea for additional funds to reach the film industry's share of Chicago's $1,000,000 sought.

When Paramount Premiered "Those Were the Days"—

Among the thousands milling about the streets of Galesburg, Ill., when Paramount premiered its "Those Were the Days" (Good Old Siwash) at the Great States' Orpheum, were numerous Great States, B&K and independent exhibitors. The ever-present Paramount cameraman, Ed Sullivan, was responsible for this series of pictures which BOXOFFICE presents:

Premierettes

GALESBURG, ILL.—This town of 28,800 was swelled to some 50,000 for the world premiere of Paramount's "Those Were the Days" at the Great States Orpheum. The film was also shown on a continuous run basis at the Great States West and Colonial.

Many Paramount home office officials in attendance, including Charlie Reagan, J. J. Unger, Oscar Morgan, district managers; G. B. J. Frawley, in charge of convention details; Alec Moss of the publicity department. Also John Balaban, Jules Rubens and Bill Hollander, of B&K; Gene Russell of the Rialto, Champaign, and Mrs. Marjorie Kerasotes, wife of George Kerasotes, of the Kerasotes circuit, Springfield.

Working on the premiere were Ed Churchill and Ralph Ravenscroft, of the Paramount studio publicity department. Helping them in Chicago was Ed Seguin of the B&K publicity department. And a lot of those local details were handled here by Tom Ronan, Great States central district manager, and Ed Toerpe, city manager.

A press party was given at the Hotel Custer the night before the premiere. Displaying dancing ability was Mrs. Marjorie Kerasotes, wife of the Kerasotes circuit executive, George. Mrs. Kerasotes was doing all right at the piano, too, until an "intruder" came and went her one better. The "intruder?" Merely the head of the music department of Knox College, Prof. Herbert Inskip.

Scotty Martin, B&K publicity head in South Bend and manager of the Colfax there, was here to get an idea on how to handle a premiere. Scotty hopes to have his own in South Bend next fall: Warner's "The Life of Knute Rockne."

Lou Aurelio and Lou Goldberg, Paramount Chicago salesmen, were going around with press badges all during the festivities . . . Other companies' salesmen here during regular sales stopovers were Irving Joseph, Columbia; Jack Schwartz, Republic, and Milt Simon, 20th Century-Fox.

Manny Greenhouse, 19-year-old New York photographer apprentice, helped Ed Sullivan, Paramount home office staff photographer, in mugging all the events of the premiere. They got nearly 300 shots on every phase of the premiere.

Thousands of local folks were down to the Santa Fe station to see the Paramount convention special during its stopover. The reason: Someone rumored some film stars were on board.

Charlie Dyas of the Lyric, Earlville, and P. B. Shaver of the Henry, Henry, were among the exhibitors present.

Tom Ronan promoted from the chief of the Illinois highway patrol, Walter Williams, some 50 uniformed state troopers to handle the crowds.

Besides J. Carrol Naish and Lynne Overman, Paramount sent Vaughan Glaser, who appeared in the picture, and Muriel Angelus, here for the premiere.

GEORGE KERASOTES, general manager of the Kerasotes chain, and his wife went to Galesburg to see the premiere of Paramount's "Those Were the Days."

Miss Rose Marie Frisina, daughter of Dominic Frisina, Taylorville, president of the Frisina Amusement Co., a freshman at Taylorville High School, won first prize in the state finals at the national music contest held recently at Battle Creek, Mich.

Anthony Kerasotes, son of Gus Kerasotes, local theatre operator, is graduating this spring from the St. Louis University school of medicine.

Dave Jones, manager of the Senate Theatre, placed the first color ad ever used by an individual theatre in the Springfield papers, on Vivien Leigh's new picture, "21 Days Together."

Springfield went on daylight saving time May 26. Theatre operators reported various reactions from the movie-going public. Many out-of-town patrons arrived an hour too late for the evening shows. Most managers feel that the idea will be harmful to their business. A. R. Zimmer, manager of the Fox-Lincoln Theatre, however, reported that he did better business than usual the first few days under the new time.

M. E. Berman, manager of the Orpheum, arranged a display of a huge shotgun and boot in front of the theatre in preparation for the "Dr. Cyclops" picture . . . The troupe of "The Little Theatre off Times Square," which produces the radio First Nighter program, made a personal appearance at the Orpheum last Sunday.

More than 2,000 boys and girls attended a free All-American program at the Orpheum Theatre presented through the courtesy of the theatre and a local store . . . Miss Mary Brown, noted lecturer, is conducting cooking school at the theatre for three Mondays, ending June 3.

A Sellout on Opening of New Des Peres Drive-In

DES PERES, MO.—The first drive-in theatre in the St. Louis area opened here last Friday and was a sellout.

The admission is 35 cents for adults, with no charge for children. Two shows are given nightly, the first getting under way at 7 p. m.

Arnold Berger of Boston is manager of the 500-car affair, which is said to represent an investment of $75,000.

Asks $250 Weekly

ST. LOUIS—James A. McKeown, co-receiver for Local No. 143, since April 21, 1939, has applied to the circuit court for an allowance of $250 a week as compensation for his work. His compensation for the 13 months to date would aggregate $14,000.

A Checkup Checks A "Spy" Story

St. Louis—The other day a woman rushed into the office of Manager Harry Crawford at the Ambassador excitedly telling a story of a "spy" sitting near her and taking notes on a newsreel featuring tests of a new Army rifle.

A checkup revealed the "spy" to be Martin Davis, Crawford's assistant, who, as is customary at the Fanchon & Marco house, was timing the various films on the program.

Tells of Exhibitor's Paradise in Ceylon

CHICAGO—An exhibitor's paradise is the country of Ceylon, situated in the Indian Ocean southeast of the southern tip of India.

This is the good word of Abraham Gardiner, chairman of the board and managing director of Ceylon Theatres, Ltd., circuit operating the 14 leading theatres in Ceylon. Gardiner and his wife stopped off in Chicago two days as guests of M-G-M en route to Havana where he is a delegate to the international convention of Rotary as governor-elect for next year of Rotary in Ceylon and central and southern India.

That "paradise" is made possible through the fact that Ceylon is a land of single features, according to Gardiner. Only the short western pictures from the United States are double-featured in one or two small theatres, and those only occasionally, he added. He said that there are about 200 English-speaking pictures imported annually, including those from the mother country, England, and that some 35 to 40 of them each year are from the Metro lot. Close behind come 20th Century-Fox and Warner.

Admission prices are somewhat comparable to those in the United States. The chain's leading house is the Regal, seating 900, in the city of Colombo.

American film favorites of the Ceylonese are Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, Gary Cooper and Errol Flynn among the men, with the women favorites being Norma Shearer, Deanna Durbin and Greta Garbo.

But as to those double features, says Gardiner: "You can't get my patrons to sit through two features. They will just get up and leave after one is shown. Showing two features is just like giving your audience two stage productions of Shakespeare. It is just too much. Instead we offer a feature, newsreel, cartoon and comedy to round out a balanced program."

Flesh on Two Nights

INDIANAPOLIS—The Oriental, managed by Roy Perry, this week presented seven acts of vaudeville on its stage for two nights.

ST. LOUIS

LOU HOLTZ, noted comedian of stage and radio; Ethel Shutta, one of radio's top singers, and Betty Hutton, heralded as "America's No. 1 Jitterbug," opened at the St. Louis on May 31. The recent success of Ted Lewis on the stage of the St. Louis has caused Fanchon & Marco to arrange other stage attractions for the 4,000-seater. On June 14, Benny Meroff will bring his own show, "Fun's Afire," while George White's "Scandals" will likely open an engagement there on June 21.

The third Civic Theatre season will open July 2 and close on September 15 . . . "Lights Out in Europe" won a run at the Will Rogers.

The 1940 season of the Municipal Opera Ass'n opens in the Municipal Theatre at Forest Park, June 3, thus ushering in the customary 12 weeks of headaches for local theatres.

Miss Theodora Poulos, niece of Frank Speros, owner of the Marquette, here, will be married at St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church, June 2, to Bill Sanos, who is in the restaurant business in Arkansas . . . Earl Gillihan, who was head booker for the O. T. Crawford circuit of neighborhood theatres here some 25 or 30 years ago, is operating an automobile filling station at Independence, Kas.

George Bentley, veteran booking agent, is back in the game again after spending several seasons on the sidelines . . . The new home of the Little Theatre here will be styled the "Clark McAdams Memorial Theatre" in honor of the late editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch editorial page, and founder of the Little Theatre 13 years ago.

Bill Hollander Realigns B&K's Publicity Staff

CHICAGO—William Hollander, B&K publicity director, has realigned his publicity aides as follows:

Archie Herzoff still handles the Chicago, with Dorothy Deere handling special features and publicity in addition to the United Artists, and her five-day-a-week radio program over WJJD. Jimmy Savage and Eddie Seguin will handle the remaining loop houses, with Seguin, however, devoting most of his time with Jack Garber to outlying theatres. Jack Katz remains assignment man, with Herb Lyon rounding out the publicity staff.

Record to Hope

CHICAGO—Bob Hope broke all attendance records at the Chicago last week with his personal appearance. The house played to approximately 175,000 persons, more than at any time since the World's Fair here. Gross receipts passed the $60,000 mark the last day, but did not top the Amos 'n' Andy figure of nearly $75,000 because the present-day admission top is only 75 cents.

Anna Neagle and Wilcox Keep Busy in Chicago

CHICAGO—Anna Neagle, star of RKO's "Irene," and her producer-director, Herbert Wilcox, had a busy three days this week in Chicago.

Besides doing three personal appearances at the Oriental Friday, the opening day of "Irene," Miss Neagle was to star in a one-hour radio adaptation of the film over WGN and 130 Mutual network stations that night.

In addition, Bob Hickey, RKO exploiteer here, working with WGN's Frank Schreiber, outlined several radio appearances for both Miss Neagle and Wilcox. One was to be an interview with the star over WGN Thursday in an American Airline's plane over Chicago. Wilcox was to be on the radio Friday.

Film Magazine Features Former Indiana Adman

INDIANAPOLIS—The magazine Screen Life, in its June issue, pays tribute to Frank Ryan, former local advertising man and well known to Indiana showmen. The article, entitled "Hollywood's Strangest Writer," reveals Ryan does no writing at all when he works. His method is to draw tiny pictures illustrating bits of action which he thinks should be incorporated in the story. Some samples of these drawings for this latest production, "Our Town," are reproduced in the article.

"Confessions of Nazi Spy" Into All Warner Houses

CHICAGO—Warner's reissue of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," which played this week at the B&K Garrick with the documentary "Lights Out in Europe," will be booked into every Warner house in the country, it is understood. It is said the Warner Bros. feel that the picture should be reshown now and are setting the example by setting it in, in all of their houses.

George O'Neil Rites

ST. LOUIS—Funeral services were held here May 28 for George O'Neil, former St. Louis poet and playwright. Burial was in Calvary cemetery. O'Neil for the past ten years had been a successful scenarist in Hollywood. He was 44 years old and a bachelor. He is survived by his father, Henry O'Neil; two brothers, Joseph O'Neil, president of the O'Neil Lumber Co., East St. Louis, Ill., and Henry O'Neil jr., of Hadlyme, Conn.

Revive War Films

INDIANAPOLIS—Local exhibitors are taking advantage of the European situation to revive two war pictures of other years, "The Road to Glory" and "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Plans June 15 Opening

TERRE HAUTE—Mrs. M. A. Wood has named her new theatre here the Best and plans to hold the formal opening, June 15.

CHICAGO

Henri Elman took a plane to New York on his last trip to Gotham. The "committee" included Jack Kirsch, Johnny Mednikow and Tippy Harrison. Said Henri, in rebuttal: "The only time I'd fly is when I could grow my own wings."

Among the film folk coming to and fro through the Windy City via Santa Fe's Chief and Super-Chief this week were Joan Crawford, Noel Coward, Jean Hersholt, all east-bound; and Alice Faye, west-bound, after an eastern vacation following the premiere of "Lillian Russell" in Pittsburgh . . . Gus Kostakis of the Yale, Maywood, is the latest to join the ranks of newlyweds . . . Half of the United Artists theatre lounge is boarded off to make room for subway constructions in the loop.

Phil Fischer of Hollywood Amusement has branched out into another field. He has organized the "76" Corporation, company which will manufacture a new soft-drink.

Dick Kahn and Louis Weiss of Hollywood Productions, west coast producers, were local visitors of Saul Goldman of Variety Pictures . . . Al Dezel was in St. Louis this week working on several of his roadshow film attractions.

Bill Bader, assistant at the B&K Southtown, has been transferred to the Chicago . . . Frank Beres, booker for RKO theatres here, is a father. It's a boy, Anthony; 8 pounds, 11 ounces; and all are doing well.

Mrs. Lou Abramson, wife of the Allied secretary, is recuperating from a fractured spine suffered in a fall from a ladder in her home . . . Emma Abplanalp, in the east, is due back next week.

Closed for Remodeling

ST. LOUIS—Through a sudden shift in plans, the Grand Theatre, which in recent weeks has been showing motion pictures in combination with burlesque, was closed May 26 for an extensive remodeling program. Manager Sam Reider said while originally it had been planned to continue the regular screen and stage policy while the remodeling work was in progress, it was found impracticable to do so.

Returns From Coast

LOWELL, IND.—Kurt Laemmle, owner of the Ritz here, has returned from the west coast for a stay of a few weeks.

Sam Meyers at Helm of A. J. Balaban Circuit

CHICAGO—Sam Meyers this week became closely associated with the A. J. Balaban theatres and has been given the general managership of the AJB circuit. This group includes the Melrose, Melrose Park; Roxy, West Chicago; and Liberty, Libertyville. In addition, they will be associated in the new Glenwin, Glencoe, to be ready for opening about Thanksgiving Day. Meyers is retaining his own management of his Teatro del Lago and Wilmette in Wilmette, and the Villard, Villa Park. However, he gives up the lease on the Villard about September 1.

Frank Olsen in Louisville Working on IA Conclave

CHICAGO — Frank Olsen, head of the stagehands' union here, has been in Louisville for the past week as a member of the general arrangements committee on the IATSE national convention starting there Monday.

Leaving this week as delegates from the Chicago operators' union, were Pete Shayne, Johnny Smith, Neal Bishop, Frank Galuzzo, Jack Mulvaney and Bobbie Burns, with George Busch, RKO shipper, as representative of the local exchange workers' union.

"Gangs of Chicago" Gets In Trouble in Chicago

CHICAGO—Several cuts have been made in Republic's "Gangs of Chicago" by the police censor board. It is also understood a new title, omitting the Chicago reference, must be submitted to the board before final approval is given. This is merely general procedure of the board in eliminating references to Chicago's gangdom wherever possible in films.

Preview "Florian" For Nine Horses

Indianapolis—Something new in previews was the one of "Florian" held in the stable of Miss Audrey Pugh for nine of the thoroughbreds that will compete in the Spring Horse Show.

The "guests" were reported very responsive to the action on the screen, though a trifle startled when the introductory music blared forth. At one point a whinny from Florian brought a hearty response from the stalls, and when fate reduced the proud beauty to the lowly task of pulling a wagon, much stamping and snorting indicated what the "guests" thought of that trick.

Loew's Theatre is presenting a Florian trophy as one of the awards in the horse show.

Banansinga and Bryner Are Union Delegates

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Delegates from Springfield to the IATSE convention June 3 in Louisville, include Sam Banansinga, business representative of Local No. 138 of the stagehands' union, and Walter E. Bryner, of Local No. 323 of the operators' union.

Indianapolis Corporation Seeks Return of Tax

INDIANAPOLIS—The Indianapolis Coliseum Corp., which leases the new Coliseum at the Indiana State Fairgrounds, this week filed for the return of $1,335.62 in taxes paid under protest to the state gross income tax department.

Varsity in Carbondale

CARBONDALE, ILL.—This city, and not Cairo, as at first reported, boasts the new Varsity that was built by the I. W. Rodgers Theatres. The circuit headquarters in Cairo.

Lake Shore Formally Reopens

CHICAGO—Ray Goldstein, who recently took over operations of the Lake Shore from Ike Ettelson, held a formal reopening this week.

Install Air Conditioning

INDIANAPOLIS—Earl W. Bell, operator of the Howard, and Oscar Kuschner, operator of the Hollywood, have installed new air conditioning systems.

Height Would Be Penalized Here

Indianapolis—Because he has been having trouble collecting children's admissions on the basis of age, Claude Allison, manager of the Olson circuit's Strand here, announces he is considering making children pay according to height.

Halt Film Programs For Talk on Arms

DES MOINES—More than 100 theatres of the Tri-States and Central States circuits in Iowa and Nebraska interrupted their film programs last Sunday night to bring President Roosevelt's radio address on armaments to patrons over loud speakers. The action was taken under specific orders from A. H. Blank, president of both circuits, who feels the gravity of the current world situation deeply.

After ordering the President's speech into the Sunday night programs in his circuits, Blank wired President Roosevelt:

"On Sunday night, May 26, at 8:30 in every theatre under my direction in Iowa and Nebraska, the performance will be interrupted and the audience will listen to your fireside chat on arms as it is broadcast.

"Certainly every American man, woman and child should listen to your thoughts in this grave hour in the history of the world, hence our action in making it possible for our theatre audiences to hear what you have to say.

"We pray for your continued good health and we have the greatest confidence in your leadership."

Show Own Films in Raising Money for Scandinavia

DES MOINES—Two Des Moines women, who visited Europe a year ago with a movie camera, are raising money for Scandinavian relief through public showings of the pictures they brought back. The women—Alice J. Boyer, counselor of the Pathfinders of America, Inc., and Margaret Brick, social science teacher at West Junior High School—live together here.

Since Russia invaded Finland in November, they have shown their 2,500 feet of film, most of it in color, to more than 5,000 persons at 48 different places in Des Moines and Iowa. After each showing, which takes about two hours, a collection is taken by the sponsoring group.

Expanding Service

DES MOINES—Within 30 days the Film Transportation Co. will offer service to the extreme northwest corner of Iowa. The firm was granted a permit for a line extending from Omaha to Sioux Falls, S. Dak., recently, making this service possible.

Flash War News

MINNEAPOLIS—Lyric Theatre, Minnesota Amusement second-run loop house, has a bulletin board in front. Latest war dispatches from Europe are displayed. The dispatches are furnished by a local radio station and attract plenty of attention.

U. S. Supreme Court Test of Anti-Ascap Law Is Foreseen

LINCOLN—Surface activity at the attorney general's office here indicates that before the expiration of the 90-day privilege period of filing an appeal from the federal court decision against the anti-Ascap Nebraska law, the case will be carried on up to the U. S. supreme court.

These things have happened:

Attorney General Walter Johnson has secured right to practice before the high bench.

He has studied thoroughly the decision recently by the high court in the matter of copyrights and patents as handed down in the Ethyl gasoline case in which he sees a parallel.

He has shown the Nebraska case, first test to be conducted on its merits, to the department of justice in Washington, and indicates that department is interested to the point of helping finance the test.

He has said, whether or not the Nebraska law passed against music combinations in 1937's legislature can stand the top constitutional test, he hopes the opinion will direct some light on how some of the music business practices can be better adjusted.

Nebraska's case was originally conducted by William Hotz, special prosecutor of Omaha, and the three district court judges—Gardiner, Donohoe and Munger, chose to interpret Nebraska's law as a menace to the rights of copyright owners and authors, saying the bill was so worded as to indicate the legislature would not have passed one portion, without passing it all—therefore, it was inoperative and unconstitutional. Hotz answered back, in attempting a new trial, saying monopoly was the only attack made by the solons, and offered 22 affidavits of legislators in which they declared innocent of other intent than to pop restraint of trade features of Ascap.

Whatever happens to the Nebraska law when it faces the high bench, it is thought in the trade it will have an important future effect on legislation. If the high court throws any illumination on the manner by which solons may safely nip at the heels of the music structure, it's a cinch it will be pounced upon nationwide for a new crop of test legislation.

Johnson's office, now busy mulling possibilities here, has said the appeal has an 80-20 chance of being made before the 90-day privilege expires.

Paramounties

LOS ANGELES—Ben Blotcky, Minneapolis manager, and Johnny Fitcher, 100 Per Cent Club booking manager from that exchange, had lunch during the Paramount convention here with Bob Blotcky, Ben's son, a mail clerk at the Paramount studio.

Veteran salesman at the convention was Chester A. Roder of St. Louis who joined Paramount May 5, 1921. He has qualified for the 100 Per Cent Club four times.

Maurice Schweitzer, St. Louis branch manager, was never without a telegram he received from Jess McBride, Columbia, Mo., salesman, telling of the endorsements he received after previewing 'Those Were the Days" for fraternity and sorority presidents of Missouri University.

After a year's separation, Ralph Li Beau, Kansas City district manager, and son Ralph jr., got together for luncheon at the Ambassador. Junior Li Beau is in the studio's precision machine shop office.

Only 20 of 42 Suburban Units In Kaycee Have Free Parking

KANSAS CITY—Contrary to general belief, subsequent run theatres in suburban areas are not blessed with a lot of free parking space for patrons.

Less than half—20—of the 42 suburban subsequents here have any facilities for parking at all, and of that number at least four do not have enough. Of the 22 theatres without such facilities, only five do not believe lack of parking space hurts grosses, and some hold that opinion pretty largely on the basis of present business, which is considerably less than normal. Some of the five are located on wide streets where there is little, if any, evening business in their immediate neighborhood other than their own, so that they have all of their immediate and nearby streets available for parking of patrons.

Agree Parking Is Problem

That the problem is a real one 90 per cent of exhibitors agree. Take the case of the Aladdin, which is operated by Bill Parsons and G. L. Johnson. The theatre lost a 75-car parking station 18 months ago (the space has been developed for another type of business). Johnson estimates that lack of the lot costs the theatre as much as $25 or $30 on a good Sunday.

For many of those without parking (and for some of those with it) the matter of cost in securing or maintaining free parking lots close enough to the theatre to do any good, is an almost insurmountable difficulty. Without close-by free parking, the business of many suburban exhibitors suffers, but the expense of obtaining and maintaining a lot is in many instances prohibitive. One theatreman reported that it costs $50 a month to maintain a free station for his theatre, and that it is, of course, impossible to ease the situation by charging even a nickel for parking.

Here are some of the comments of exhibitors on parking:

Lack of it bothers if we have any business; doesn't bother on the basis of present business; we have space for 50 cars, but we could use a long more; lack of parking space hurts; it handicaps us; 30 cars, need more; none, considerable handicap, etc.

"If we have a good picture, people will walk quite a way; if not, a hundred yards is too far," one exhibitor commented.

How Downtowns Handle Problem

Downtown subsequents do not have parking facilities, of course. First runs downtown have, in several instances, made arrangements whereby the theatre pays part of the parking cost, or all of it. The Esquire (800 seats) has an arrangement with a garage so that the normal fee of 25 cents for three hours is reduced to 15 cents when stamped at the boxoffice. This is inside parking, and makes an especial appeal during winter months. Because the arrangement means money to the garage, no money changes hands. About five to ten per cent of the patrons take advantage of the plan.

At the Tower (2,200 seats) arrangements are in effect whereby the patron gets five cents off the parking fee at nearby lots. Here again no money changes hands.

For over three years the Newman has supplied free parking for patrons who have their parking tickets stamped at the boxoffice. This is more expensive, but it has meant business.

Downtown theatres have perhaps more parking space than those in the suburbs, though practically all of it close-in enough to be of value, is paid space.

Suburban theatres have approximately 38,298 seats and parking lots that will accommodate 1,810 cars, or one-car space for every 21 seats. In addition, many of them have some street parking available for customer use. Downtown first runs have 12,008 seats; downtown subsequents, 2,200. The Plaza, Fox suburban, is probably the only theatre in town with completely satisfactory parking arrangements. There is available within a block of the theatre, all the parking space needed.

Following is a list of theatres with capacity for free parking (in the case of suburbans) and number of seats:

RKO Is Their Host—

: No Teary Farewell :

DES MOINES—No teary farewell is the semi-retirement of Shirley Temple from the screen, in the editorial judgment of the Des Moines Register. The newspaper views this development of the 20th Century-Fox roster with the following editorial:

"The retirement of a famous actress is traditionally an occasion for teary farewell and fragrant reminiscences. Her career is discussed in the past tense, comparisons of her performances as Juliet (in her youth) and as Lady Macbeth (later in her career) are made, and the lady enjoys the privilege of reading her own obituary.

"Not so with the semi-retirement of Shirley Temple. For several years she was the world's top ranking movie star, as measured by that most reliable of barometers—the boxoffice. Her pictures were shown all over the world, and there was hardly a nation that didn't have a Shirley Temple club. She even attained a niche in 'Who's Who in America.' You will find her between 'Temple, Seth Justin, architect,' and 'Temple, Truman Roswell, librarian,' both of whom were old enough to be her grandfather when she was born in 1929.

"And now, full of honors (and $3,000,000 in her bank account), she is to go to school for a few more years and drop out of pictures for that period.

"This will tickle those crusty old misanthropes who hate child actresses on general principle. It will calm those other and more numerous souls who have been worrying about what 'is going to happen to Shirley Temple.' And it should give Shirley Temple a chance to catch up with herself."

LINCOLN

R W. "BOB" HUFFMAN is a bachelor now, the Mrs. and kids having taken off for Pueblo, Colo., the old home town, for a visit of six weeks. Bob, during the family absence, has closed up house and home and moved to the Purity Hotel (YMCA to you) . . . Howard Federer and Don Monroe were too lazy to clean the fish they caught in Canada, so they brought them home for people to cook, and invite them out to help eat 'em . . . Alvin Hendricks says he's going on a diet. During the past week, one vest and two coat buttons popped off. He's afraid one might hit a patron in the eye and bring about a suit on the theatre.

Lee Williams, the projectionist, takes more interest in Bing Crosby and the other screen singers and song pluggers lately, what with having a gob of those nickel-in-the-slot music boxes in the beer stubes . . . H. W. "Speed" Lambert was in town, and he, with Ed Vaughan, ganged up on the newspaper for a paragraph plugging "Edison, the Man" . . . All eyes are on the attorney general's office for the next month, where exhibs who have resented the "score charge" for years, see new hope . . . M. E. Lofgren is the picture of a man who gave a little, then went all the way. Amateur shows started paying off, and now he's playing Gene Autry.

Plaudit for John Peere Miles, way out in Hollywood: That picture of Cary Grant in the wooden bathtub, sent out as a preview of Grant in "Howards of Virginia," has caused an office feud among the gals. They all want it . . . Speaking of press agents, Otes Wiles, down in Tucson, Ariz., did the equivalent of a man biting a dog when he sent out those cactus plants as a gag to all columnists press agent stabs by-liners.

Photo of misery: Bob Livingston, standing in front of the Capitol listening to the roar of midget autos, which drew about 3,500 to the ball park and helped make his business bad. Livingston always preferred baseball, which never drew more than 500 people—the reason the midget autos are in the park, and baseball is not.

Ray Holtz of Fairbury has left the theatre business to join Electrical Products Consolidated, an advertising outfit, in Omaha. Ted Kempkes and the Fairburians, Jimmy Redmond, Bonnie Aumiller, etc., partied him to the wee hours on leaving . . . One of the best western series, the Hopalong Cassidys, can't be seen in downtown Lincoln, playing only at Slim Fraser's Joyo, in suburban Havelock . . . Mrs. Barney Oldfield and BOXOFFICE's Gene Rich helped manage the "Those Were the Days" premiere in Galesburg, Ill., taking over the selection of the gals who appeared on the "Battle of the Sexes" program with Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit. Mrs. O. was chaperon for Nebraska's college queen entry, Bettie Cox.

To hear Bill Quinn at the Capitol tell it, one doesn't have to die to go to heaven, one gets married. His matrimonial experience is less than a month old, need you ask? . . . Bill Knight sat through "Flight Angels" five times, then decided he would fly everywhere from now on, even to Omaha, if anything like Virginia Bruce is aboard . . . Dolly Dawn, George Hall's singer, turned down an offer to go to Paramount in Hollywood for some picture work, saying she wasn't ready. Dolly weighs a chubby 135, explaining she was hired to sing, and she sings to eat.

Home town stuff: Rosita Royce was offered in New York for a television broadcast. A former Lincoln girl, her forte is a dove dance, sans too many encumbering clothes. Broadcast was stymied, however, it suddenly remembered that television lights are hot enough to almost roast a duck, let alone a dove.

Flack! Flack!

THAT'S A PRESS agent for ya:

Look closely! Artiste Connie Krebs does a bit of practicing on his dapper mustache . . . Milt Howe knows now that two Nevada beers and an airplane ride won't mix in Milt Howe . . . Rufus Blair is no wife beater. He takes it all out on a defenseless cigarette . . . If you want to know how a broken nose feels, Al Sellers can tell you. He told us how ours felt.

Plenty of midwestern newsrooms have been wondering why they haven't been seeing personable Teet Carle's signatures in the Culver City mail sack. Rumor puts his name in the upper left corner these days—on stories from the M-G-M lot. They tell us he's a unit man.

We found out what RKO's S. Barret McCormick enjoys most about his NY Athletic Club card when he showed us the lights of Central Park from the dining room window. Was that treason, McCormick? Those lights are a standing ad for M-G-M's "Edison, the Man," y'know.

UA's Art Catlin labels Paramount's Carl Krueger "a bold, reprehensible, brave, indispensible, sensible aid to the press."

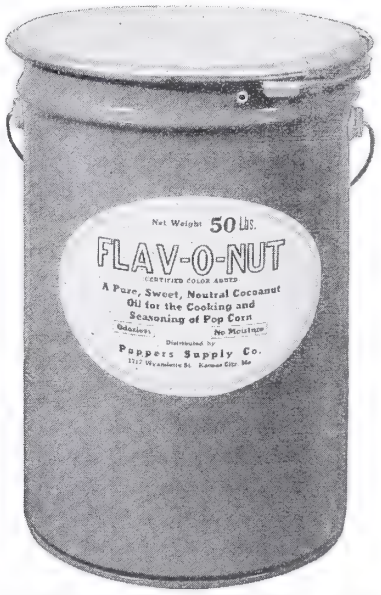
Another Catlin cat-call: "The Bouncing, Bounding Barto;" This means you, Chicago's Fred Bartow.

But the echo misbehaves, Art. Eddie Solomon, who Balaban & Katzed Chi before being 20th Centurized, calls you "Wacky."

While Bob Taplinger relaxed on the sands of Waikiki with Bette Davis, Carlisle Jones felt right at home handling the Warner wheel . . . He used to hawk Packards in Lincoln, when tooling one of those long jobs around a corner was a chore requiring three surveyors and a block-and-tackle.

If you've missed the name of Louey Alleman the Elder on those brusk notes RKO's Terry Turner Uncle Sam's to his field men, it's because Louey's dabbling with the idea of freelancing on filmdom's ground floor. The Carnation Kid has plenty of rooters hoping he draws a whole bouquet in Hollywood.—K. & R. C.

DES MOINES



WE COVER THE ROW—even on Saturday night: Gilly Wells buying a dime's worth of cookies at the market on 17th and Grand . . . Madge Ward at the Casa Loma wondering why RKO's Danny left her his car to drive while he was in NY and took the three-fourths-full-gas-tank keys with him . . . Joes Smith and Ancher, Kennie Weldon and Bebianne, Lew Lepovitz, the Sil Vogels, and Universal's little Bill of the poster department making merry at the Casa Loma too. We arrive home and Bill Scholl rings the phone off the wall suggesting the 100 Club with the Emil Frankes . . . we long to go, but are worn to a frazzle and in serious need of one night's sleep.

DD's latest all-over curled hair-do is so nice . . . How'd you ever rate a swell lookin' Mrs. like that, Art Stolte? . . . Filmrowers all seem to have their midday sandwich and cuppa coffee at Wilson's Drug . . . at least we see DD gnawing and reading a paper there, Don West sipping his soup, Henry Peterson dunking his doughnut, and Lionel Wasson rushing out (No toothpick) Tuesday noon before that newsreel screening at Paramount.

The reason Frank Greenland was so irate when Grace Simons telephoned him at home the other day: Frank was giving himself one of his own famous shampoos and the soap was getting in his eyes while he was trying to tell Grace where she'd find that contract. MINNEAPOLIS

CONGRATULATIONS to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kaplan—the parents of a 7¾-pound girl, their first. Harold is the manager and part owner of the successful St. Louis Park Theatre . . . Sol Lebedoff, veteran independent circuit operator, is afflicted with an eye ailment . . . Dave Gillman, independent exhibitor, had his auto stolen from in front of the Crystal where he holds forth. It was found the next day only a block away from the showhouse. The gasoline tank was empty, but there was no damage.

Half a dozen neighborhood houses are going in for a new book giveaway . . . "South of the Border" did so well for the Nile, Camden and several other leading neighborhood theatres that they played still another Gene Autry picture, "Rancho Grande" . . . Gladys Moore of the RKO office staff keeps the office beautified with flowers which she raises in her own garden.

F. T. Murray, Universal manager of branch operations, in town for a few days . . . Moe Levy, 20th-Fox district manager, visited the Omaha and Des Moines branches. He leaves in a fortnight for the west coast where he'll launch the annual S. R. Kent sales drive. He's head of the drive for the second successive year . . . Bill Flynn, RKO salesman, accidentally struck a deer with his auto while driving in Wisconsin. He damaged his fender and killed the animal which he turned over to the state game warden.

Marion Schwartz of the 20th-Fox booking department is vacationing in California . . . The girls at RKO gave a farewell party for Helen Storler, one of their number who is taking an extended leave of absence . . . W. A. Steffes, Northwest Allied, will do as his doctor ordered and remain for at least three months on his northern Minnesota farm . . . A broken oil line resulted in the burning out of the bearings and crank shaft in Bill Winters' auto and the RKO salesman had to have the engine replaced . . . Joe Podoloff, 20th-Fox branch manager, visited northern Minnesota accounts.

Back from their convention, the Universal boys are hard at work selling new-season contracts . . . The RKO gang is in New York currently for their sales convention . . . Bill Elson, operator of the RKO Seventh Street, spent a few days in Chicago . . . M-G-M will start active selling of out-of-town accounts within a few days. They're waiting for the new contract forms . . . Phil Dunas, Columbia district manager, a visitor.

Out-of-town exhibitors visiting Filmrow included John Piller, Valley City, N. D.; Royce Andrews, West Concord, Minn.; Jack Heywood, New Richmond, Wis.; Don Buckley, Redwood Falls, Minn.; Carl Sather, Annandale, Minn.; Andrew Severson, Osakis, Minn.; Tony Paulson, Amery, Wis., and Sheldon Grengs, Clouquet, Minn. . . . Beatrice Verterney, Warner contract clerk, vacationing in northern Minnesota.

Dorothy Blumberg Johnson, one-time member of the Warner office staff, is in town with her husband for a visit. The Johnsons live in Los Angeles . . . Cerna Martin of Columbia's office staff vacationing in western Canada . . . Ben Blotcky, Paramount branch manager, back with his head booker, John Fritcher, from the sales convention at Los Angeles, reports that approximately one-fourth of his accounts already have been sold 1940-41 contracts.

The triplets of Martie Lebedoff, independent neighborhood exhibitor, have been entered in a children's popularity contest and it looks as though they're going to win it . . . C. K. Olson, Warner branch manager, completing a trip around the territory . . . Helen Fimon of the United Artists staff keeping her vacation destination a secret.

Republic's "Dark Command" and "Women in War" will have their Twin City first-runs at the Esquire here and at the World, St. Paul . . . Eddie Ruben has bought "Beast of Berlin" for his entire circuit. It opened in Sioux Falls, S. D., this week. Picture did exceptionally well at the Granada, Duluth, and now is running at the Minneapolis and St. Paul Worlds.

Casper Choinard, United Artists' southern Minnesota salesman, is driving a new car . . . The mother-in-law of "Hy" Chapman, Columbia branch manager, died . . . Mrs. Charlie Weiner and her daughter,

....AW, SHUCKS!.....

From the Tall Corn—By KEN and RENE CLAYTON

THE rest of the Des Moines Filmrow was as deserted as the southwest corner of Eleventh and High streets Tuesday, having been transported bag and baggage 150 miles northeast for the big event of the week—the grand opening of the renewed and remodeled Firemen's Theatre at New Hampton with Harry Herman at the helm and a new canopy over the door. Harry, who used to weary himself for Warner, offered golf and refreshments at the Country Club and an "old-fashioned" reunion. His invitation to BOXOFFICE & Co. had a slight error in the address (check the by-line, Harry), but had both grinding their teeth because they couldn't break away. Don't be surprised if we pop in at a later date and try to make a rain-check good, Harry.

If the street(s) of Danbury look dark to you, it's because the Roxy has closed.

Watch for the opening, about July 20, of Bob Bernau's New Iowa in Lake City. It's costing above the $40,000 figure and has 525 seats, installed in the currently popular stadium arrangement. After being burned out and while awaiting completion of his new theatre, the ambitious Mr. Bernau tried conducting a temporary house with portable equipment in a Lake City hall, but poor acoustics forced him to abandon the attempt.

Indianola's Bill Eddy visited Des Moines and found the Row between two Budweiser signs last week.

Just as predicted here when sister Mary trekked to the altar, Lew Lepovitz has installed a new ticket hawker in the box-office of the Iowa Theatre across the river. Two of 'em in fact. Opal Pierreck and Julia Starkweather are the gals dishing out smiles with the change now.

Columbia's transfer of Milt Goodman to the northern Iowa territory may broaden that salesman's contacts, but it's a blow to the exhibitors down south . . . From all we hear, he was one gent who sold himself as well as his product and has his clients rooting for him en masse.

While Harry Herman was busy remodeling that Firemen's Theatre in New Hampton, Mrs. Harry was digging divots at Hyperion Club in DM and getting her likeness on Page One of the Sunday Register society section by so doing.

George Frick of Graettinger, Ia., was traversing the Row last week in the interests of his Hawkeye. George didn't have a word to say about his town losing its "lucky seven" status with the new census. Its population used to be 777.

The newly-beardless "Doc" Twedt is due for a startling at his Lido in Manly, Ia. Des Moines pals have listened to his "c'm up 'n' eat chicken" often enough without taking him up on it in spite of the distance. They're planning to show "Doc" that 200 miles is no longer sufficient defense against a blitzkrieg on a chicken dinner invitation.

News that there's an extra Tompkins at the Winfield Theatre in Winfield, Ia., doesn't mean the stork's been busy. Estelle's brother's handling the projector these days.

THE battle lines are drawn for the big golf match between Variety and Cinema clubs June 9 at Hillcrest. For Variety it will be Leon Abraham, RKO; William Benjamin, Monogram; Roy Dunnock, Atchison, Kas.; F. E. Ritter, Uptown; Charley Knickerbocker, 20th-Fox, and Bob Withers of Republic-Midwest or Tommy Thompson of RKO. For Cinema Club it is Martin Stone, Screenland; Joe Lysowski, Altec; Walt Kirkham, Commonwealth; John Long and Bob Conn of 20th-Fox, and Bill Kubitzki. Let her go!

Helen McLatchey, formerly on Filmrow at Monogram and Grand National, is working at Baker Enterprises, and will be there while George Baker is in West Yellowstone . . . Mary Lou Collins at Oklahoma Theatre Supply is on vacation.

District managers of Fox Midwest Theatres in town Monday for a meeting: Fred Souttar of St. Louis, H. E. Jameyson of Wichita, and Ed Haas, Harry McClure and Lon Cox of Kansas City . . . Nearly a thousand attended the preview of "Our Town" presented by UA at Edison Hall Monday night.

Columnist conversation from Tom Edwards, Ozark, Eldon, Mo.: "With the Kentucky Derby just passed, I finally figured out that the only man who is sure to make money following the horses is the street cleaner, and the only ones who get happiness and mirth in following entertainment are the ones who attend the OZARK . . . We collected $46.50 for the Will Rogers Memorial for which Thanks Kindly."

Lawrence Lehman, manager of the Orpheum, has recovered sufficiently from a recent illness to return to his home from the hospital.

Jerry Zigmond of the Newman plugged in President Roosevelt's address last Sunday night and cut off the show while the audience listened. Which is one way of expressing in action the old adage, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em."

H. L. Hyde, who operates the Cozy at Geneseo, Kas., was in town Monday with Mrs. Hyde en route to Chicago to see their son married.

He is taking over the Casino, Boonville, Mo., from Mrs. Marion Miller, Elmer Bills reported while on Filmrow Monday. Bills operates the Lyric, Salisbury, Mo.; Electric, Glasgow, Mo., and Roxy, Brunswick, Mo.

H. J. Griffith Theatres, Inc., has shifted Jack Jeffries from assistant manager at Auburn, Neb., to manager of the Osage, Osage City, Kas.; and Turner Morrissett, formerly at the Dickinson, Paola, Kas., to manager of the Dickinson, Beloit, Kas.

Landon Laird, a bachelor, won the 35-piece cut glass set of dishes at Variety Club the night of the party recently . . . On the Row: M. B. Pressley, Globe, Savannah, Mo.; Morris V. Biesner, Dream, Glasco, Kas.

Mrs. R. C. Buxton

RANSOM, KAS.—Mrs. R. C. Buxton, who assisted her husband in the operation of the Strand here until she was invalided eight years ago, died recently at her home. Mrs. Buxton was well known to many trade people in the Kansas City area. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Mort, who operates the Garden at McCracken, Kas.

MINNEAPOLIS — Recent installations by United States Air Conditioning Corp. of cooling systems have been made in the Griffith Amusement's Booth Theatre at Auburn, Neb., at the New Center in St. Paul; at the Traer in Traer, Iowa; Davis in West Plains, Mo., and the Sosna in Mexico, Mo.

Equip at Triumph

TRIUMPH, MINN.—The new theatre being constructed here by George Ehlers of Sherburne, Minn., is being equipped with Western Electric sound and American Seating chairs.

Bowling Alley for Widmer

BELLE PLAINE, MINN.—Cletus Widmer, owner of the State Theatre here, is opening a bowling alley in his theatre building. He also operates a cafe in the same building.

IOWA NOTES

FAYETTE—William G. Leefers of Cedar Rapids is manager of the completely redecorated Fayette here, formerly known as the Cozy.

NEW HAMPTON—E. C. Potter, former operator of the Firemen's Theatre, is planning to build a new theatre here.

TRAER—Mrs. Gene McLaughlin of Bancroft has bought the Tama Theatre Co., Inc., headed by Wesley Mansfield.

Up Jerry Shanahan

LINCOLN—Jerry Shanahan, formerly doorman at the Stuart, has been made assistant manager to Harvey Traylor by City Manager R. W. "Bob" Huffman. Traylor has had no aide since he moved from the Nebraska manager's office over to the Stuart.

To IATSE Convention

LINCOLN—Roy Warner, delegate to the IATSE convention, June 3, in Louisville, leaves this week.

Cooling at Rich Hill

RICH HILL, MO.—The Booth Theatre here is installing new cooling equipment.

rack on it (we haven't the faintest notion how to spell rick-rack, do you?)

Iles and McKinney have been back from that National Carriers convention in NY for over a week now, but they're still popeyed and glowing over those 60 aquacade merimaids who did their stuff at the Fair to the "Blue Danube." Our little YMCA boys journeyed to Broadway via plane. Kennie Myers of Iowa Film is another of the amateur broadcasters with a license n'everything . . . but Sy Harlan has a new green Chevie beautifully equipped with those extra special Generals . . . fellows in NY were expecting to see DM's Ray Copeland out in California.

We heard, did you? That our Elmer Tilton has sold his interest in Republic as of June 1 . . . That Madge Ward and Marie Frye were there when Gallahadion won by a tail at Churchill Downs . . . That Virginia Orr (G. Ralph's pretty secretary) left Thursday for a visit with her sister in California . . . That Madrinne Silkebaken is spending a week with her parents in Kansas . . . That Chuck Plows chatted with Wally Beery when the star was here recently . . . That Jerry Banta rocks little Gloria to sleep every Wednesday evening before rushing over to the midget races where he picks up a bit of spare change . . . That Editor Bill Formby in Kaycee is getting a little plump right here and here.

Style note sounded by Harry Gottlieb: Very green, very wide hat bands are the uff-sta this year . . . Loretta Dieling wants to know if anyone would like to have a nice runny summer cold. She has one she'll sell cheap . . . Jack Frost stopped in at Universal Friday eve to see how the gang was doing without him . . . We noticed a nice old lady living one door south of Metro filling an improvised bird-bath the other evening . . . it was an empty film can!

Art Anderson says we can write anything we want to about him just so's we don't mention his suntan this year . . . Art has challenged BOXOFFICE & Co. to a game of tennis, and it's about time we got it over with . . . Monroe Rubinger is to be teamed with Anderson the Great against the Claytons.

Didn't we see Bing Miller and the Missus daring the stork at Dave Fidler's Sixty-fifth Street bistro Satiddy? . . . Tri-States reports fewer complaints than had been expected as a result of shutting off the Sunday night program for the broadcast of President Roosevelt's armaments address . . . "The Biscuit Eater," which Y. Frank Freeman jr., sneak previewed here some weeks ago, was P.T.A. film committee fare at the Paramount screen room Tuesday night . . . Carl F. Mahnke, president of Vocational Guidance Films, Inc., was scheduled to talk to the Ad club Tuesday noon.

Sunday (June 2) is Pat Goodenough's weddin' day (and BOXOFFICE's birthday) . . . She (Pat) is marrying Don Wilson, who draws his paychecks from the Campbell Heating Co. . . . Pat hails from Livermore, Ia., and has been pounding one of the word machines in the National Screen plant of Chick (Romeo) Friedman here . . . Speed Lambert hove into town Monday and spent Tuesday morning on an early "Mortal Storm" buildup at the wartorn R&T.

Hands at the Metro office here are having to get acquainted all over again . . . The personnel has been changing faster than French generals . . . Frank Gaskill's gone, reported in Chicago, with Jerry Banta moving up into one of the booking berths . . . Bud Shumow and W. W. Sherill have swapped towns, Bud joining Metro in Kaycee while Sherill takes over direction of booking chores in DM . . . Betty Scace and Mary Jane Todd are new gals on Leo's payroll here, too . . . Leona Bair relinquished her post with Metro in order to head for California with Hubby Al, who abandoned his recently acquired spot with Republic to heed the westward call.

Valley at Valley, Neb., Acquired by Weisses

OMAHA—J. W. Weiss and wife of Montana have taken over the Valley at Valley, Neb., formerly operated by C. E. Byars. The Weisses remodeled and reopened the house as the Gem.

Quality Theatre Supply Co. of Omaha handled the remodel job, which included curtains, chairs, carpets, booth equipment and exterior improvements. The house seats 400.

For the Fishermen

MINNEAPOLIS—Some of the Minnesota Amusement Co.'s neighborhood theatres are offering timely fishermen's screen parties. The parties consist of 30 minutes of fishing thrills to be offered in addition to the regular show which features Wallace Beery in "Man From Dakota," "Fighting Sharks," "Fly Casting" and "Big Game Fishing" are included.

Short on Flesh

MINNEAPOLIS—The Minnesota Amusement Co. still wants stage shows for the Orpheum here, but they are unavailable, according to John J. Friedl, the circuit's general manager. There hasn't been a stage show here in several months and none is in prospect.

Honor Johnny Fritcher

MINNEAPOLIS—Johnny Fritcher, Paramount head booker, has been honored by being elected to the Paramount 100 Per Cent club. Membership is limited to those whose outstanding accomplishments entitle them to the distinction.

Contest Sells "Singapore"

PARSONS, KAS.—For "Road to Singapore," David Dallas, manager of the Kansan here, held a "sweet potato playing" contest on the stage a week before playdate. The music store furnished the ocarinas and ran announcements.

New Contract to Rivers

HOLLYWOOD—Paramount has handed W. L. Rivers a new writing contract. He is scripting "The City That Never Sleeps."

O M A H A

MARY FRANCIS of Monogram is in St. Joseph Hospital recovering nicely from an appendectomy . . . The Bingo games at the Omaha Variety Club have been so successful they will be a weekly affair from now on . . . Plans are being made for a Variety golf tourney some time in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Adams, Rialto, Nelson, Neb., were rare visitors on Davenport St. this week. Their son, Bobby, is getting to be a good-sized young man and will soon be as big as Exhibitor Adams . . . A. D. St. Clair and wife were in town to buy some new carpet for the Grand at Wymore, Neb.

Dorothy Kirchner is the new steno at Warner's . . . Raideen Bowers at the same exchange is on vacation . . . Ted Mendenhall, Paramount boss, is back home after a trip to Los Angeles. We understand he attended some of the Paramount meetings while there . . . John McQuisten, Star, Bloomfield, Neb., on Filmrow.

George March has issued invitations to attend the opening of his new Co-Ed Theatre at Vermillion, S. D. The big affair will be June 5, and according to the invitations will include golfing and a big dinner . . . Odes A. B. Hilton, Park, Sioux City, Ia., here to line up some cooling equipment.

Summer weather brought a lot of visiting exhibitors to Filmrow this week . . . Among 'em were A. Burrus, Isis, Crete, Neb.; John Eding, Community, Aurelia, Ia.; the competitors at Ainsworth, Neb., R. R. Bailey, Royal, and Roy Syfert, Ainsworth Theatre; Lou Weiner, New West, Sioux City, Ia.; Roy Ehlers, Minden, Neb.

BOXOFFICE received a lot of congrats along Filmrow for the story on Prosperity Club, the city's new giveaway plan. One exhibitor said he liked to read all the facts about such things. Incidentally, the first week's deal was a little slow but the plan has a lot of possibilities and Omaha exhibitors expect it to pick up rapidly, as did attendance on Bank Night.

R. V. Fletcher, Lyric, Hartington, Neb., was on Davenport St. He bought a pair of conversion units from Frank Van Husan . . . A really rare visitor was J. D. Rankin, Tarkio, Tarkio, Mo. . . . Max Shoemaker, exhibitor at Tabor, Ia., was on Filmrow but we didn't get to ask him whether his house is the Isis or the Iris and we've been given both names. Please inform, Max.

Keith Wilson, World-Herald critic, has shaved off his Golden Spike moustache and looks almost naked . . . C. N. Robinson, exhibitor and restaurant owner at Blair, Neb., was in town but we didn't get a chance to talk him out of a dinner invitation . . . Phil March, Wayne, Neb., and Carroll Lane, Carroll, Ia., also in town.

Starts New House

HUNTINGBURG, IND.—The Huntingburg Lumber Co. has started erection of a $50,000 theatre here to seat 700.

Northwest Allied Will Hire Interim Leader

MINNEAPOLIS—Northwest Allied is preparing to fight more vigorously than ever for elimination of alleged trade evil practices, including percentage and unfair protection, and for lower film costs. In line with such a resolve it will employ an executive secretary at a substantial salary to lead it while President W. A. Steffes is absent on a leave of absence because of ill health and until he is fully capacitated again and able to devote his energies to the independent exhibitors' cause.

It is understood that a strong faction within the organization favors Ben Ashe, general manager of the Berger independent circuit, for the post, but his acceptance would necessitate his resignation from the Berger chain, inasmuch as the Northwest Allied position will be a full-time one and the man chosen must have no theatre affiliation. Whether Ashe would consider the appointment under such circumstances is problematical.

At the recent Northwest Allied convention and at recent local and directors' meetings, Ashe has filled President Steffes' shoes most creditably, presiding with the utmost skill and fairness and handling the sessions like a veteran. He is a graduate attorney, but has been associated with Bennie Berger for a number of years.

Northwest Allied hopes to enlist every independent exhibitor in the territory in the organization. At a dinner meeting of Twin City exhibitors this week even nonmembers were invited. The territory also is being divided into districts which will have their own units directed by the office of the main body here.

In addition to Ashe, two others have been named as possible choices for the executive secretary post. One is Charles Weiner, who recently stepped out as branch manager and part owner of the local Monogram exchange. The other is Harry Sherman of New York City who formerly was a Minnesota Amusement Company employe. Before joining the Minnesota Amusement Company, Sherman was head of one of the big theatre employes' unions in New York City. Recently he has handled state-right pictures and sent out vaudeville units. Both Weiner and Sherman have many friends among Northwest independent exhibitors and are favorably regarded.

The Twin City independents will have another meeting Monday night (June 3) to discuss the situation. Northwest Allied directors finally will decide upon a recommendation to submit to the main body at its convention scheduled for Minneapolis late this month or in early July.

Twin City Nabes in Line For "GWTW" in 1941

MINNEAPOLIS — Twin City independent neighborhood exhibitors will have to forego "Gone With the Wind" until 1941, according to present indications. There are no plans to make any deals for this year. It is expected that it will be shown next year at regular admission scales.

The picture has been going great guns in even the territory's smallest towns.

Joan, leave for Boston where they'll visit Charlie's parents.

Max Facter will be married in Chicago on June 22. He recently left Great States Theatres there to join the Pioneer circuit as booker and supervisor for Harold Field . . . Mary Supak, the pretty girl in the pretty sports Buick, is secretary to Gordon Greene, manager of the Benz theatre properties . . . Joe L. Stern, owner of Majestic exchange, continues to "Kaltenborn" it for Twin City Variety Club members at noon luncheons, analyzing war developments in his scholarly manner.

Dorothy Lamour Crane, the cute Welworth girl, went fishing on Mille Lac Lake over Decoration Day. Sister Betty was kept off the water by sea sickness . . . Joan, married daughter of Ben Friedman, independent circuit operator, a visitor from Kansas City . . . Daughter of Nate Fisher, owner of the Varsity and Campus theatres, off to Texas for a vacation . . . Mike Manas, Twin City Variety Club steward, all spruced up in a flashy new suit, sponsored by Bruzz Rubel, the brokerage customers' man for the show bunch.

John Cliplef, manager of the Hollywood, Montevideo, Minn., busy these days as a young Republican campaigner. Is taking all bets on a GOP victory . . . Alexis "Kelly" Evidon, manager of Warner accessories and advertising department, is making a hobby of writing letters of encouragement to boys in the Canadian army abroad. "Kelly" served with the Canadian contingent in the last war and, incidentally, met and wooed his bride-to-be while stationed in London . . . Covering North Dakota for United Artists, Bill Crystal is back in his home state again.

Filmrow was a quite lane for a few days. The reason—"Nickey" Goldhammer, RKO district manager, was in New York for the sales convention . . . Ray Close, Pantages Theatre m. c., claims two knockout victories over Johnny Hanschaen, local heavyweight sensation. Efforts are being made to get Close back in the ring for a third encounter with Johnny . . . Jack LeMarce, Benson, Minn., exhibitor, dropped in.

Mannie Sgutt, Columbia salesman and political orator, back from South Dakota where he introduced his new campaign song for the Republicans there. It's titled, "Claire, I'll Be There" . . . Louie (Blumie) Blumberg, the Thoreau of Palm Springs, Cal., enjoys telling locals here how nervous Tommy Charack, former Warner salesman here and current screen find, was when he first appeared before the camera for a screen test. Tom now is playing a lead in the Warner production, "The Story of Francis Drake," heralded as a very spicy yarn. Louie use to sell films for Warner, ill health compelling his retirement.

Carl Engstrom, manager of the New Ulm, Minn., theatre, visited his fellow Welworthian circuit pal, Manager Eddie Swanson of the Metro, Red Wing, Minn. The pair spent the entire evening bragging about the greatness of their little daughters.

Curfew Cooperation Promised in Minny

MINNEAPOLIS—Meeting here this week, Minneapolis independent exhibitors went on record to do everything within their power to cooperate with police officials in enforcing the curfew law which prohibits the presence of children under 16 years of age in theatres after 9 p. m. unless accompanied by an adult. It was stated that no tickets would be sold after 7 p. m. to those whose age was in question and that trailers would be run on the screens explaining the law and asking patrons to aid in its enforcement.

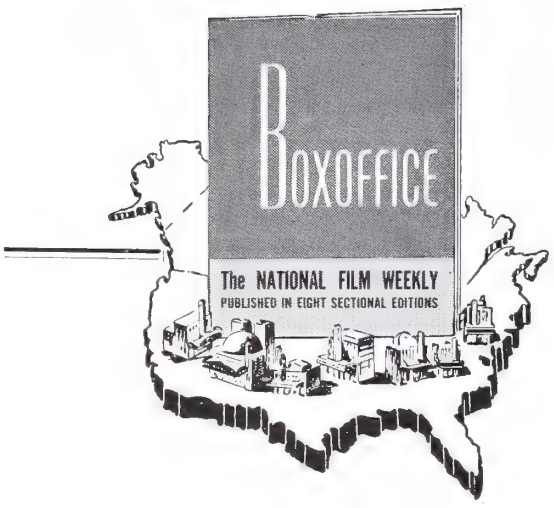
Police Chief Frank Forrestal informed the exhibitors in a communication to them that he previously had asked for this cooperation in combating juvenile delinquency, but that a number of theatres had failed to respond and were admitting children to their midnight Saturday shows. Copies of the law accompanied his letter.

Benzes Permit Option on Minnesota to Expire

MINNEAPOLIS—The Benzes have permitted their option on the 4,000-seat Minnesota Theatre to expire and the de luxe $2,000,000 showhouse now is without a prospective tenant and more likely than ever to wind up being torn down for a parking lot or remodeled for business property, in the opinion of the film trade here.

At the same time, the Benzes, wealthy realtors and theatre owners, are negotiating with the Minnesota Amusement Company for the latter to take over the 1,800-seat lower loop Palace.

If the deal goes through, the Benzes will step completely out of the theatrical picture here and will not go through with their threatened anti-trust suit against the Minnesota Amusement Company and major film distributors.



Both the Minnesota and Palace now are dark. The Benzes claimed that the main reason for the failure of the recent Minnesota Theatre operation was inability to obtain major screen product.

Minnesota Amusement Co. May Acquire Steffes' Duo

MINNEAPOLIS—Reports in local show circles are that the Minnesota Amusement Company will take over the operation of the sure-seater World Theatre and possibly the Alvin. Both houses are owned by W. A. Steffes who has been operating them himself. Because of illness, however, Steffes has been compelled to retire to his farm in northern Minnesota where he must remain inactive for at least six months.

The World has been highly successful, playing foreign, unusual and arty films along with holdovers moved to it from other loop houses for an extension of their first-runs. It has appealed mainly to the carriage trade and some of its offerings have run as long as three and six months.

Steffes has had a deal with Minnesota Amusement to keep pictures out of the Alvin.

Factual Argument Aborts Fast Time

By ELSIE LOEB

CLEVELAND—If all proposed adverse legislation were disposed of as quickly and as effectively as the proposed daylight saving plan which was killed in the city council legislative committee, the motion picture industry wouldn't have a worry in the world.

For the benefit of other communities which may be threatened with such legislation, it might be well to set forth just how the plan was successfully attacked in Cleveland.

The greatest share of credit goes to Ernest Schwartz, president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Ass'n. Illustrating his talk before the legislative committee with maps and charts, he explained in simple language how time is computed and then showed that Cleveland normally operates on a partial daylight saving plan all the year round. This is because, by adopting eastern standard time many years ago, Cleveland advanced its time one half hour. To advance the clocks further to a point where they would be one and a half hours ahead of the sun would be ridiculous, Schwartz argued.

Statistics by Schwartz

Schwartz produced statistics proving on a twofold count that traffic accidents increased under a daylight saving plan, because what with more traffic on the road greater opportunity for accidents exist, and also that longer driving creates fatigue in the driver, reducing his caution and thereby increasing the traffic hazard.

M. J. Ulmer, attorney representing the downtown theatres, protested the proposed legislation as tending to jeopardize a $50,000,000 local investment. Harland Holmden, executive vice-president of the IATSE and business manager of Local 160, expressed the unanimous opposition of the members of his union and of affiliated unions. Tom Lenihan, head of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, too was an ardent opponent of the plan.

Only proponents of the plan, introduced by Councilman John Lewandowski, were representatives of the golf and garden associations.

In vetoing the plan, members of the legislative committee present also went on record as opposing Councilman Lewandowski's proposal that the issue be put up to the public in the November election.

Move to End Fast Time Bar in Louisville

LOUISVILLE—Asserting that amusement interests were instrumental in getting a 1922 Kentucky law passed, prohibiting employers in first class cities in the state from using daylight saving time, Mayor Joseph D. Scholtz agreed to put his city administration behind a movement to adopt fast time for Louisville.

Louisville's civic organizations, the Louisville board of trade and the retail merchants association has begun circulating 12,000 petitions to support the change among employers. The petitions are to be sent to Gov. Keen Johnson.

Daylight Saving Time Lasts But Three Days

SOMERSET, KY.—Daylight Saving Time, ordered by the Somerset city council to become effective last week, reigned only three days—and then many business firms and individuals turned their clocks back to plain old central standard time.

New South Lansing House For Butterfield Circuit

DETROIT—Another theatre expansion program for Lansing is announced by Edward C. Beatty, president of the Butterfield circuit, with construction soon to start on a new 900-seat house for south Lansing. Location of the house, which is as yet unnamed, is at South Cedar St. and Rockford Road. Opening is tentatively slated for October 1.

The new house marks another construction spurt for Lansing, where Butterfield erected three houses at one time about two years ago, indicating the rapid growth of the town.

Detroit M. P. Council Elects New Officers

DETROIT—New officers elected by the Greater Detroit Motion Picture Council are: Mrs. Arthur D. Kerwin, president; M. E. Shattuck, first vice-president; Mrs. Max Williams, second vice-president; Mrs. Robert Pond, recording secretary; Mrs. William Henry Caswell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John M. Phillips, treasurer, and Miss Eleanore Hutzel, Rabbi Leo Fram, the Rev. Edward J. Hickey and Dr. Clarence Frank, advisory directors.

Get Lock From Tara

WASHINGTON, PA.—A brass lock from Tara, the homestead made famous by "Gone With the Wind," has been presented to Washington and Jefferson College for use in the library of a chemistry building now being erected on the campus. It was a present of David O. Selznick, producer of the epic photoplay.

Lapidus "U" Eastern District Manager

PITTSBURGH—Jules Lapidus, branch manager for Universal who was announced at the company's sales convention as winner of the national Bill Scully Drive, this week was appointed eastern district manager with headquarters in New York. Lapidus succeeds Al Herman, who has been transferred to Boston. The Pittsburgh film manager was in New York this week conferring with company executives regarding his new duties.

Members of the local branch divided $1,000 as a result of the recent sales contest and this week they presented to their branch manager a framed parchment testimonial signed by all members of the staff.

The popular film executive is a veteran in the local industry, having entered exhibition here a number of years ago with William Finkel. He later turned to distribution and was with M-G-M as a sales representative for a long period. For three seasons he handled Grand National here with outstanding results, joining Universal as local manager two seasons ago.

Lapidus set the pace in the recent business drive from the opening week and the local branch exchange maintained first position throughout the eastern division contest.

Succeeding Lapidus is Peter Dana, who arrived Wednesday.

Ed Lebby and Bob Lynch Are Leaving Industry

PITTSBURGH—Two of this city's veteran film sales representatives are withdrawing from activity in the industry.

Ed Lebby, who recently celebrated his 25th anniversary as a film salesman in the northwest Pennsylvania territory, did not attend the RKO sales convention, thus revealing he was "getting out" of the business.

Bob Lynch, with a sales record of 24 years here, had previously announced his withdrawing from duties at Vitagraph.

The veteran film men are entering a new business together at Erie, Pa.

Detroiters Are Guests—

Raymond Schreiber (left), of the Midwest Theatres, Detroit, learns about Hollywood from Ida Lupino in the "They Drive by Night" set on the Warner lot. With Schreiber and Miss Lupino are two of the theatreman's friends.

CLEVELAND

BIG news of the week is the election of I. J. Schmertz, 20th Century-Fox branch manager, to membership in the local Grandfathers' Club. The Schmertzes automatically became members of the group when a daughter, named Dianne, was born to Raymond, of the 20th-Fox ad sales department, and his wife, at Mt. Sinai Hospital last Thursday. Everyone, including the grandparents, are doing as well as can be expected.

Lou Walters, manager of National Theatre Supply Co., furnished the projection equipment, chairs, carpets and screen for the Hall, Strasburg, which opens June 7.

Story Properties Key A Library's Display

CLEVELAND—The Cleveland Public Library has opened a "Book Prevue of Motion Pictures" in the grand concourse of the Terminal Tower. The prevue will continue for ten days.

This exhibit shows many books purchased for filming by the various motion picture companies, together with stills of stars cast in these pictures.

Because of curtailed budgets, the library is unable to supply the demand for books simultaneous with the showing of a film version, so the library now offers Clevelanders an opportunity to read the book ahead of the picture version.

While this prevue is not the complete list of books that have been purchased for filming, it nevertheless shows the wide scope of story material soon to reach the screen. As new purchases are announced by the producers, the books will be added to the exhibit.

The motion picture companies are cooperating by lending pictures of the stars tentatively cast in the film versions of the novels. The exhibit also contains stills of scenes from forthcoming pictures now completed. A separate section of the exhibit is devoted to book versions of films already shown and now available at the library.

Book publishing houses are cooperating by sending new copies of books for the exhibit, thereby freeing the library copies for circulation.

All of the exhibit is not devoted to features. The increased interest in short subjects has led the library to set aside one section for short subjects under the heading "You Have Heard Their Voices." In this section are photographs of men whose voices are heard but who are never seen, including Pete Smith, Carey Wilson, John Nesbitt, James FitzPatrick and Bob Benchley.

Librarian Charles E. Rush, Dr. A. C. Young, curator of exhibits for the library, and Fred L. Myers, director of public relations, arranged the exhibit.

Alexander Hall Pact

HOLLYWOOD—Columbia has given Alexander Hall a new one-year directorial pact.

Browne Lets IATSE Actions Refute Pegler's Attack

LOUISVILLE—Columnist Westbrook Pegler's charge that the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators is a "racket union," dominated by undemocratic leadership, was called untrue here this week by George E. Browne, Chicago, president of the IATSE.

"The best reply we can make to Mr. Pegler is to let the people here in Louisville see our convention, how we run it, who its delegates are and the quality of its leadership," Browne said.

He arrived in Louisville last Monday for meetings of the union's executive board preceding the convention opening on June 3 at the Kentucky Hotel.

"After all, I'm not going to let Mr. Pegler run my business," he replied when asked if any action was planned against Willie Bioff, the union's international representative, now serving a term as a panderer. "The only interest I have in Bioff is how ably he serves the union," Mr. Browne said.

"The rank and file knows the charges are untrue" and they are "incensed" at Mr. Pegler's remarks, Browne added.

The IATSE president said he did not know exactly what issues would be brought up for consideration on the convention floor next week. All questions are presented by delegates in resolution form and in measures prepared in executive sessions, which have been held all during this week, he said.

Two Pitt Locals Choose Delegates to Louisville

PITTSBURGH—Film Exchange Employes Union (Local B-11) will be represented at the IATSE's 35th annual convention in Louisville on June 3, by Ted Tolley, veteran M-G-M shipper, while the local Theatre Employes Union (B-12) will send Charles Kennedy as its delegate. Tolley will represent the Philadelphia and Washington film exchange unions as well as the Pittsburgh local. L. J. Katz, IA representative of this city, was in Louisville a week in advance of the convention.

Queen City Delegation To IATSE Convention

CINCINNATI—Reservations for the IATSE convention at Louisville include a representative body from the Queen City headed by J. P. Hawthorne, president of Local 327, Arthur H. Fix, executive manager; Ben Bien, from the exchange allied with B-37; W. C. Elliott and Charley Goodwin, also members of B-37.

Many other members and their friends will also join the local delegation to the convention, which will be held at the Brown Hotel, June 3.

Cleveland Delegates

CLEVELAND—Local 160 delegates to the IATSE convention in Louisville, starting June 3, are Victor Wellman, E. J. Brock and Charles Bullock.

Detroit Ordinance To Bar Carnivals

DETROIT — Carnivals would be barred from the city under an ordinance introduced before the city council by Nathaniel H. Goldstick, assistant corporation counsel. The present ban, in effect nearly four years, prohibits games and similar concessions, but rides have been allowed to operate generally the past few seasons.

Checkup by the city showed opposition to the present policy, and Goldstick was asked to draft the ordinance which will ban rides as well.

Attractive Stage Units For Two in Auto City

DETROIT—The Fox and Michigan are both set with stage shows for the week starting June 7. The Michigan has set Bob Hope and his unit to go with the world premiere of Hope's "The Ghost Breakers." Faced with one of the biggest drawing cards of the season, the opposition Fox penciled in Betty Grable and "Rochester" Anderson to head their stage show the same week.

Next regular show at the Fox goes in June 21, with Glenn Miller to make his first Detroit appearance. The Michigan, as well, is relying heavily on bands, with Orrin Tucker in currently for a week.

At the Colonial, which was the only vaudeville house in town all fall and winter, stage shows were tentatively slated to drop out this week, following a successful climax with the Maxine Sullivan show, which drew some 40 per cent above average business. Final decision was being withheld, however, pending return of Raymond Schreiber from a California vacation.

New Theatre Company Is Formed by Joseph Stoia

DETROIT—The Circle and Midway Theatres Co. has been organized by Joseph Stoia, Detroit and Dearborn circuit owner, to operate these two houses. Stoia recently dissolved his partnership with Joseph Miskinis, who now operates the Alden.

In the new company, Victor Retty, who was a part owner in the older organizations, is joined by a new partner, Joseph Johann, but the bulk of the stock remains in Stoia's hands as hitherto.

Uptown in Highland Park Gets "Wind" for a Week

DETROIT—Second run of "Gone With the Wind" will start here June 7 at the RKO Uptown in the suburb of Highland Park. The film is booked for one week only.

Usual price scale for the film is being followed, and an extensive two-week campaign is being put on in advance under the direction of Warren A. Slee, M-G-M exploiteer.

Paramounties

LOS ANGELES—Harry Goldstein, Cleveland district manager, kept the Paramount convention in stitches with new joke repertoires for their future "openers."

Cincinnati's branch manager, Joe Oulahan, never goes to bed at night without his sandwich and milk, even though turning-in time comes as late as 2 a. m.

Robert Clark, son of Duke Clark, Cleveland's branch manager, is making good on the West Virginia sales staff. Six months ago the younger Clark was in Pittsburgh's ad sales division.

Conventionites brought back plenty of Hollywood mementoes to Mark Cummings, Cincinnati salesman, who was married recently and is honeymooning back east.

At the behest of Hilland "Eddie" Stuckey, Detroit 100 Per Cent Club salesmen, a lot of the delegates made merry at the Florentine Gardens after the studio screening of "I Want a Divorce."

Never without a black cigar, Duke Clark of the Cleveland office ran into real competition when Jack Benny appeared at the convention.

A Stag Outing June 20 by Detroit Bowling League

DETROIT—The Film Bowling League will stage an annual stag outing Thursday, June 20, at the Lakewood Golf Club, over in Canada, President Jack L. Saxe reports. Golf, baseball and other sports will be provided at the all-day affair, with a steak dinner at eight in the evening in the club house. Tickets are $2.50 for the day, or $1.50 for the dinner without golfing privileges.

The league will bowl in a new location next fall, the Bowl-O-Drome Alley. Bowlers who have not been league members in the past are invited to register now through BOXOFFICE.

Two Ordinances in Detroit Would Affect Sign Lights

DETROIT—Two different ordinances now proposed before the city council will basically affect all sign lighting in the city.

One would prohibit all red signs and all flickering signs of any color within 22 feet of a traffic signal, as proposed by M. W. Cochran, traffic engineer of Detroit.

The other proposal, by Joseph P. Wolff, commissioner of buildings and safety engineering, would prohibit all intermittent lighting of any type.

Two Summer Closings

ZANESVILLE, OHIO—The Grand and Quimby theatres were to close this weekend for the summer. The Imperial and Liberty will carry on through the season. All are Schine houses.

Say Public Is Hungry For Light Film Fare

CLEVELAND—Theatre owners in this territory are of the opinion that the public is unanimous in wanting their screen entertainment confined to light comedy.

Heavy drama appeals to the minority, they claim, a minority that attends the downtown first run houses. These dramas, however, do not draw attendance to the neighborhood theatres.

Comedies like "The Road to Singapore," "Too Many Husbands," "The Doctor Takes a Wife," "It's a Date" and novelties like "One Million B. C." are doing average and better than average business in this territory, a survey reveals.

Exhibitors say this condition exists as an antidote to the serious war condition. They say further that audiences do not even want to see newsreel shots of the war; they want to get as far away from the war as possible when they attend the theatre.

Taking cognizance of this condition, the exhibitors suggest producers concentrate their efforts on turning out lighter screen fare.

Over 500 Attend Variety Dance in Cincinnati

CINCINNATI—Approximately 500 attended the annual dinner dance for the charity drive fund, given by the Queen City Variety Club at their clubrooms in the Netherland Plaza Hotel. One of the finest shows ever produced, according to opinion, was the one produced by Col. Arthur Frudenfeld, general manager of RKO Theatres, and Allan Moritz, Columbia Pictures. J. J. Grady was in charge of the drive.

Longo From Boston to Loew's Ohio Circuit

CLEVELAND—Joseph Longo has been transferred here from Boston as director of publicity for the Loew circuit in this area to succeed Milton Harris.

Harris severed a six-year connection with the chain to become associated with a new producing company in Hollywood.

Marcia Cohen Kransberg of the UA office has withdrawn from duties due to illness . . . G. M. Gillespie, former Union, W. Va., exhibitor, is now operating the Amusement Center at White Sulphur Springs.

Many in the industry were grieved by the recent death of James Lyon Gilliland, projectionist of the Schenley, who was a veteran operator. He had been a member of the IATSE for a quarter-of-a-century . . . Mrs. Morris Tauber, wife of the Oakland district exhibitor of many years ago, is visiting here from California where her husband has continued his theatre enterprises . . . Ed Lebby's daughter, Lucille Ruth, who became Mrs. Gilbert Michael Prell last Sunday, will reside in Los Angeles . . . Ed Good was around the other day distributing new service timetables for delivery trucks of Exhibitors Service Co.

Local world premiere "Lillian Russell" broadcast fiasco has resulted in a radio ban on such programs in the future. Additionally, KDKA has discontinued all cooperation with the industry. The program in question reached a new low in ignorance and stupidity and the "stars" who were scheduled to speak didn't appear.

CLEVELAND—A. H. Golden and M. M. Deutsch have been appointed Ohio distributors of Filmsets, classroom aids to teachers in the form of silent films on 16mm stock.

Claims Standards of Legion Are Ignored

PITTSBURGH—A survey of motion pictures by the Pittsburgh Catholic contends that the offerings of a "considerable percentage of the theatres are objectionable, according to the moral classifications established by the National Legion of Decency, for both adults and children, and that only a few theatres schedule programs that are suitable for youthful patrons."

The official organ of the diocese of Pittsburgh continues: "In last Sunday's Pittsburgh dailies the billings of 60 film theatres were advertised. Of these, no less than 15 listed Class B or Class C pictures. It has been repeatedly explained that all persons, adults as well as children, who observe the Legion of Decency pledge are expected to avoid both these types of films.

"Only eight theatres—less than 12 per cent—presented Class A-1 films (suitable for children) exclusively. A large number of houses billed one Class A-1 picture but combined it with one of a lower classification. This arrangement, of course, marks the program objectionable for the patronage of the young. Some of the exhibitors claim that the practice of "block-booking" makes it impossible for free selection of subjects to be made and that this causes the unsatisfactory combinations.

"The Class C (Condemned) picture being most widely shown here at present is 'Strange Cargo.' Of this film the Legion of Decency says: 'This picture, in which religion is the prominent issue, presents a naturalistic concept of religion contrary to the teachings of Christ and the Catholic Church. Irreverent use of Sacred Scripture. Lustful implications in dialogue and situation.'

"The Class B (Objectionable) films which are included in current billings here are: 'Big Guy,' 'The Human Monster,' 'Johnny Apollo,' 'He Married His Wife,' 'The Light That Failed,' 'My Little Chickadee' and 'Cafe Hostess'."

LOUISVILLE—Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox are scheduled to make a personal appearance at the Rialto here on June 7, when RKO's "Irene" opens.

Advice

PITTSBURGH—"Don't convert theatres into recruiting stations," is the appeal of Kaspar Monahan, Pittsburgh Press drama critic.

He writes, in part:

"Movie companies are losing great profits because they've lost the European markets. So from the cold-blooded mercenary viewpoint, it is poor business to add fuel to the fires of international hatreds to endanger possible sources of trade over there when the conflict ends.

"Building 50,000 planes and increasing our armed strength in every branch of the military is one thing and a good thing—converting our theatres into recruiting stations is another and a bad thing. If we have to fight—why let's fight, but let's do it with bullets, or fists and teeth if necessary, not with celluloidic harrangues. Theatres are places of entertainment; those who disagree can always find halls to hire."

Mrs. Florence Fisher Parry, also a feature writer for the Press, advises:

"Certainly now is the exhibitors' big chance to put over the greatest campaign of Preparedness ever attempted! Supposing with each feature program they were to show a Then-and-Now geography lesson, in terms of war-torn Europe? It would be worth a dozen double features!"

Midnight Shows Are Routine in Detroit

DETROIT—Midnight shows have become a common occurrence along Detroit highways and by-ways, a survey of typical houses indicates. Confined originally almost entirely to the downtown theatres, the idea has spread until it now is a regular routine—particularly on change nights.

Result is, that neighborhoods have the choice of coming out at midnight on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, to see a new show—or they can go to the 9:00 p. m. show, and see four features in most cases, as the new films for the next day's show are run after the regular late evening show.

"Guest features," or an extra third feature, have long been a fairly common occurrence among many types of houses for late Saturday shows, but the general change night four-feature idea is relatively new. It was adopted years ago by some downtown theatres, and has been the subject of discussion in recent studies of the competitive situation between the Loop and the Times Square, for example.

Spreading from the downtown or typically night houses it is fairly common along Woodward Ave., among the colored houses on Hastings St. and several other parts of the city.

Signs Cleveland Chains To Play "Pinocchio"

CLEVELAND—Before leaving to attend the RKO convention in New York, Branch Manager George Lefko announced he had signed a contract with the Associated and Community circuits, the two largest local independent chains, for city-wide showings of "Pinocchio." COLUMBUS

SPEAKING of complex situations: At least three of the smaller nabes are keeping open for the simple reason they have adjustments coming from the film companies—if it were necessary to pay for their product at this stage of the business slump they would have to close.

The RKO Grand is open on weekends only, policy to continue indefinitely . . . Bill Pullen of the Linden has been named to the city licensing board as representative of the exhibitor interests . . . Bob Pullen has been in Cincy on business.

George E. Hayward, secretary of the Midland Theatre Co., Marietta, is dead . . . Local Artist Benny Bloom is responsible for the murals in the new Sunset, Cincy, which opens this weekend. Murals are unusual in sense "dark light" is employed for illumination . . . Ruth Niswonger, niece of Max Stearn, marries the fifteenth . . . Harry Young admits the horses now have him exactly where they want him.

To stop the talk around town: Fred Rowlands advises us that he definitely will not build the much discussed university district theatre this year . . . UA's Jim Hendel is in the field again . . . Variety Club directors met at dinner Tuesday . . . The ITO has started a direct mail campaign boosting the Neely bill. Same office has advised its members to sign the Metro contract rider in order to get benefit from the cancellation privilege on 1939-40 contracts.

Deposition Taking for Suits Occupies Ryan

BOSTON—George S. Ryan, anti-trust attorney, spent much of last week in taking depositions for use in forthcoming New England film litigations. Ross C. Cropper, RKO branch manager, gave testimony Tuesday for use in the Kenneth Gorham anti-trust suit, filed against the Kurson circuit interests and others in the U. S. district court for the district of Vermont.

Maurice N. Wolf, M-G-M district manager, was queried by Ryan on Wednesday and Thursday in connection with the Gorham suit and the respective anti-trust actions of C. F. Millett of the State in Bridgton, Me., and of the Millinocket Theatre, Inc., of Millinocket, Me.

These latter two cases have been brought in the U. S. district court for the district of Maine.

Ryan may conclude taking of depositions by the plaintiffs in these three monopoly actions by finishing this week with William Kelly, Universal branch manager, in the Gorham case and with Norman Ayers, Warner branch manager, in all three actions.

Call Morse to Testify

BOSTON—Charles Morse, New England circuit man, has been subpoenaed to testify at the government's equity suit which is scheduled to open on June 3, before Judge Henry W. Goddard, in New York.

M&R Arguments End; Hendrick Studying

By BRAD ANGIER

BOSTON—Arguments that consumed 212 days and covered a period of 17 months, beginning in 1938, have been closed in the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust suits now under consideration by Philip Hendrick, master appointed by the U. S. district court. The case, not yet ended, has become the longest motion picture litigation ever to be tried in the United States.

George S. Ryan, plaintiffs' attorney, brought his summation to a close with a reiteration of his view that proof of conspiracy on the part of the major distributors was clear and that the plaintiffs had accordingly suffered damage. Said Ryan: "The cases are of extreme importance to the plaintiffs because of the conspiracies against them and because of the damage sustained by them. These defendants should not be permitted to continue these practices. If such practices were to be allowed to go unscathed it would mean that 10,000 independent theatre owners in the United States would live in fear and trembling. If the evidence in these cases does not establish conspiracy there can be no hope for any of them."

Charges "Misstatements"

Edward F. McClennen, attorney for the defendants, called the court's attention to what he termed "the positive misstatements of the facts which have been made from time to time with respect to those matters in evidence, both oral testimony and exhibits . . . Sometimes they are merely distortions. Sometimes they are specifically accurate but quite false when taken out of their contexts. Sometimes they are false because so incomplete."

McClennen rapped charges that papers were not readily or completely produced as "unwarranted," and pointed to the quantity of papers produced and not put in evidence. Also categorically denied was the allegedly implied claim by plaintiff counsel that the defense had argued that distributors may combine in restraint of trade if it is to meet competition. Said McClennen: "There is nothing of the sort in the contention made for the defendants. That can be attested only by reference to what was said in argument."

Charges Falsity Assumed

Further contending that plaintiffs' attorney operations proceeded on a premise that with "no evidence of conspiracy among distributors . . . the witnesses, at least most of them, called by the defendant testified falsely.

"With this as a foundation, it is asserted that these falsehoods must have been because of the existence of some fact which the witness thought to conceal. Then a wide hurdling jump is made that that fact was a conspiracy among the distributors; that there could have been no other reason for the desire to conceal the specific thing. This makes each one of these misstatements important far beyond its intrinsic value."

An accusation of perjury that McClennen recalled Ryan made against Mallard, was censured by him, and deemed refuted by testimony. Said the chief defense attorney: "Mallard at no time said anything inconsistent with Exhibit 593 (a document of April, 1930, taking up the matter of protection with the attorney general). There is no reason for intimating that he was a member of that law committee (the alleged drawers of the document) when the document was signed."

John V. Spalding, attorney for the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Co., pointed out that what the law wants is competition, but that the tendency of the law is toward fair competition.

Frank W. Crocker, attorney for Columbia Pictures, in addressing the court pointed out the fact that continued sales of product were made to Mr. Ford and to the Maine and New Hampshire circuit even through Columbia was selling second run, and accordingly the charge of pressure wielded against a distributor by a circuit, was refuted.

Ryan, in closing all testimony, rested the hearing upon "the facts mentioned in the record."

Boston Friars Club Honors Maurice Wolf With Party

BOSTON—Maurice N. Wolf, retiring president of the Boston Friars Club, is to be presented with a scroll signed by fellow Friars at a Cocoanut Grove party of the club here Sunday.

Steve Broidy, Monogram director and New England sales manager, is to be seated in impressive installation services as president of the local fraternity.

The Boston Friars Club plans a golf tournament at Pine Brook in July. An outing has been tentatively set for August at Silver Beach in Falmouth. A theatre party is in the cards for September. Morris Goldstein, M-G-M city salesman, has been appointed chairman of the Friars entertainment committee by Broidy.

Joe Longo Is Named Loew Publicist in Cleveland

BOSTON—Joe Longo, for several years assistant to Joseph DiPesa, advertising manager for Loew's, Inc., and at one time special UA advance man, this week succeeded Milt Harris as Loew's Theatres Cleveland publicist. Al Longo, his brother, has been promoted to first assistant in Boston.

Shift Ascap Suit Against Lavietes to New Haven

NEW HAVEN—Hearing on the Ascap damage and injunction suit against Harry L. Lavietes, operator of the Pequot, set originally for Hartford on June 10, has been shifted to the New Haven federal court on the same date. Judge Carroll C. Hincks will hear the matter.

Censor Offices Will Close Saturdays for 4 Months

BOSTON—Major Patrick F. Healey, supervisor of the bureau of Sunday censorship, has notified Massachusetts exhibitors the 3 Hancock Street offices of the department will be closed Saturdays, from the last Saturday in May to and including the last Saturday in September.

"Any changes in programs or other additional information pertaining to amusements or entertainments held on the Lord's Day other than Sunday licenses," Major Healey said, "must reach this office not later than noon on the Friday preceding the Sunday on which said amusement or entertainment is to be held.

"It is necessary to have all Sunday licenses delivered or mailed in order to reach the offices of the commissioner of public safety, Commonwealth Pier, Boston, Mass., not later than the Wednesday morning preceding the Sunday on which the entertainment is to be held."

Healey said that there would be no entertainment or amusement opened for operation on the Lord's Day, under Massachusetts laws, until a Sunday license for same containing the approval of the commissioner has been received by the licensee and is posted in a conspicuous place near the main entrance.

Reduce Scene to Flash in "Island of Doomed Men"

BOSTON—"A scene showing the horsewhipping of slaves" was ordered cut to a flash in Columbia's feature, "The Island of Doomed Men." It was the only Massachusetts department of public safety elimination in last week's approved Sunday list which included 46 motion pictures. Among the films okayed without cuts were First National's "Torrid Zone," Paramount's "Way of All Flesh" and 20th-Fox's "Lillian Russell."

Vaudeville did not fare so well, with 12 out of 32 acts incurring difficulties. Five routines were denied Sunday licenses, while seven others were ordered to make modifications.

NEW HAVEN

OVER the signature of Edward H. Kessler jr., retail secretary, invitations went out to New Haven exhibitors and exchange managers to be present at a closed Chamber of Commerce meeting last week to discuss pros and cons of the Neely bill.

Arthur Lockwood and Bernhart E. Hoffman finally held their debate on the theatre divorcement bill at the twice-postponed Connecticut MPTO meeting . . . Herman M. Levy, MPTO executive secretary, attended some of the hearings on the Neely bill in Washington as an impartial observer.

Report is that Peter Perakos, New Britain exhibitor, has signed a lease for occupation of the new East Hartford theatre scheduled to be started this summer by the Joseloff interests . . . New Bailey, 750-seat Westville theatre, is advancing at a rapid pace despite rainy weather . . . Broadbrook Theatre under foreclosure by mortgagee, and Henry Phaneuf has departed for parts unknown . . . Gilbert Josephson's 284-seat Lincoln set to close June 2, a few days earlier than last year.

Sympathy to Leo Schapiro, operator of the Guilford, on the loss of his father, Benjamin Schapiro of New York . . . Robert E. Pasho, son of Eugene Pasho of the Gem, Naugatuck, was honored with an appointment to West Point, as of July 1, through Congressman J. Joseph Smith of Waterbury . . . Vic Cusanelli and Marion Salwitz of the Warner exchange, left for a Miami Beach vacation June 1.

Congratulations to Jack Post of the Fishman circuit, who has moved into his own home . . . Milton Hyams and Morton Katz still talking about the French Pavilion at the Fair and Broadway shows attended after the recent M-G-M meet in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria . . . News that Zippy Goldman, well-known in the New Haven territory, had severed connections with Warner, Boston, surprised the boys on the street.

Harry Shaw and Lou Brown had another rush week with the Rita Johnson receptions and the "Our Town" premiere in Boston. Harry rode with Miss Johnson from N. Y. to Worcester, introducing her to the reception committees and public during train stops at Bridgeport, New Haven, Meriden, Hartford, and Springfield. In Worcester her homecoming occasioned a city-wide holiday by proclamation of the mayor.

College-WELI-Eskimo Pie weekly tieup is gaining momentum and promises to win Sam Badamo the Dollar Club award. Each week 30 school children, accompanied by teachers, are guests of the theatre and teachers act as judges of the quiz conducted and broadcast from the stage.

Loew-Poli ushers in New Haven ran their semi-annual dinner-dance at the Seven Gables Inn, Wednesday night, with Frank Manente in charge, and Harry F. Shaw, Lou Brown, Bob Russell, Nat Rubin, Jack Brassil, and Charlie Gaudino as invited guests. Assisting on the committee were Marshall Blevens, Art DeFrank, Martin King, John Bashta, John DiNicola, and Henry Bobinski.

Pete DeFazio, Warner salesman, and Rose Civitelli of New Haven were married at a church wedding on Friday. The couple left for a wedding trip to New York and Atlantic City . . . Alba Gionotti of Metro exchange staff is first to leave on her vacation . . . John Murphy, assistant to J. R. Vogel of Loew's, New York, visited Bridgeport to catch the new vaudeville policy at the Globe and inspect the theatres . . . Leo Cohen, head of the Marcus Loew booking agency, also was in town . . . Mrs. Mary Mullen, mother of Frank and Jack, is recuperating at St. Raphael's Hospital after a recent operation . . . Thomas Germaine, son of Sam, has been appointed counselor at a camp in Goshen . . . Paul Sampsell, Mort Tiley's partner at the Essex Square, is in Washington, on a Senate hearing . . . Joseph G. Samartano, manager of the Poli, Meriden, and vice-president of Kiwanis, received bouquets and a picture in the local press for his work with the central committee of the town on boys' and girls' week programs.

Albert Laurion, operator of the Union Hall in North Grosvenordale, village of 2,000, is celebrating his 28th anniversary in the film business in the same spot. Theatre operation is a sort of hobby with Laurion, who is a loom mechanic by trade. The house is open one day a week . . . Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Hess of Moosup and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hess of Groton were a foursome on the Street . . . Steve Panora has opened his summer home, the Panora Villa, in Niantic . . . Lucy Falck of the Capitol, Milford, has returned from her southern cruise with a coat of tan and a Haiti accent.

Bill Hoyt of the Capitol, East Haven, had his fishing activities temporarily halted by a sore throat . . . The John F. Barnetts of the State, Jewett City, celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary . . . Hymie Schwartz, exhibitor of Taftville, is a Norwich sheriff in his spare time . . . He failed for the first time to collect a sheriff's fee last week when he served some papers on his own behalf. The debtor balked, even when Schwartz insisted "it cost me more myself" . . . Nat Rubin of the Poli, New Haven, scheduled for some minor surgery.

Bob Russell was invited to speak on the Bassett School Council film appreciation WELI program on the educational aspect of pictures, and took the opportunity to plug coming "Edison, the Man." He also obtained 200 group attendance reservations of employes of the Ediphone Co. and arranged an old phonograph display in the lobby of the Poli . . . Morris Keppner of Glastonbury and Leo Schapiro of Guilford are the district's official inspectors of all new theatres.

Warning to Mike Sirica: Henry Germaine is about to challenge his former bowling opponent to some golf and suggests a little brushing up and less temperament . . . Poli, Worcester is cooperating in the new WTAG daily quiz program with offer of free guest tickets . . . Joe Amstead and Max Novitsky crashed the Worcester dailies with a story on the historical site of the present Elm Street theatre.

Bob Russell left large mailing envelopes addressed to Lillian Russell, 23 Church, on top of mail boxes in the center of the city . . . Also imprinted 5,000 hosiery bags for Beck's, inserting 25 lucky guest tickets.

Exhibitors continue their quest for new special inducements. Adolph Johnson has installed his encyclopedia and dictionary deal in the Colonial, Southington; State, New Haven; Rialto, Windsor Locks; Community, Oakville; Somerville, Broadway, Somerville; Field Square, Somerville; Orient Palace, East Boston. Harold Rubin of Metro Premium has signed up the Rivoli, Hartford, for glassware and the Park Playhouse, Thomaston, for enamelware . . . Charlie Lazarus and the other Metro-ites are working hard in the summer championship contest in which they now hold eighth place, expecting to wind up with money for the whole force.

A New England Tour for Rita Johnson's Visit

NEW HAVEN—Learning that Rita Johnson, featured in "Edison, the Man," would visit with her parents in Worcester for a few days, Division Manager Harry F. Shaw, of the Loew-Poli New Haven office, and Lou Brown, publicity chief, arranged to escort the star from New York, with train platform appearances at Bridgeport, New Haven, Meriden, Hartford and Springfield.

MANAGER GEORGE E. FREEMAN, Loew-Poli, after having the mayor select two local school students on the basis of scholarship, etc., sent a boy and a girl to Boston last Thursday to attend the world premiere of the film, "Our Town," in the Hub City.

Springfieldites who went to Hartford last Sunday to attend the annual Warner Club affair in that town were Al Streeter and his Mrs., Alice Bartlett, Eve Sanefini, Eddie Carberry, Jack Knightly, and Andy Sette and his Mrs., all connected with the local Warner's Capitol.

To New York City last Wednesday went Don Barhydt, manager of the E. M. Loew's Court Square . . . Eddie Whittle, projectionist at the E. M. Loew's Court Sq., is riding around in a new Oldsmobile nowadays . . . The Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus is reportedly due in town on June 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl W. Whitford were in Boston last Sunday and Monday. He's the assistant manager at the E. M. Loew's Court Square . . . Golf: Andy Sette, manager, Capitol, went out on the greens last week and ended with a total of 110, the same result as Jack Knightly, assistant manager at the same theatre, rolled up when he took out his clubs one afternoon.

Manager Al Anders, Bijou, was in Boston last Wednesday . . . Edith Roger Dahl, the woman who saved her husband from General Franco's firing squad in Spain, made a p. a. on the boards of the local E. M. Loew's Court Square . . . Ditto Erik Rhodes, Hollywood actor . . . Joe Niel, electrician at the E. M. Loew's Court Square, is just about the top man on the links at the Franconio Golf Course.

Emil Morrisseau, projectionist at the E. M. Loew's Court Square, is building a trailer at present in which he hopes to spend a month's vacation in the summertime. He's sound equipping the trailer . . . Main stem Garden brought in the much-discussed "Ten Nights in a Barroom," the film that was the cause of that bickering in several Bay State towns recently . . . Horace Heidt and his band put in an appearance at the Riverside Park-In Theatre's new ballroom.

Golf enthusiasm seems to have invaded Springfield a bit early this season. Jack Foxe, assistant manager of Loew-Poli, is out on the links again, as is John Knightly, assistant manager of the Capitol. Andy Sette, manager of the Capitol, also is a links devotee.

Four Have Wells

BOSTON—A. B. Robinson of the Robinson Artesian Well Co. in Lynnfield Center, Mass., has recently installed wells for air-conditioning purposes for Richard B. A Success Story of Combining Mutual Interests and Ideas

By LEROY WEYMOUTH

LYNDONVILLE, VT.—Mutual interests, mutual ideas, combine them, and therein lies the tale behind the tale of the successful feature wowing the patrons of the Gem Theatre, product of the fertile imagination of a couple of enterprising, up-and-coming young chaps.

This novelty of the silver screen, at least in this section, a takeoff on the home movie idea, is a local newsreel revealing candid action shots of the local gentry as they pursue their varied and sundry ways in and about this rural Vermont village.

The title, appropriately dubbed "Lyndonville on Parade," gives a clue to what the newsreel endeavors to furnish in the line of entertainment and gives the patron a fair hint to expect he will be included in the parade.

But probably this is getting ahead of the story. So, back to the opening sentence, that concerning the mutual ideas and interests wording.

It was this selfsame mutuality that glowed in the mind of two contrasting looking lads; on the one hand Lloyd Goulding, a mere broth of a lad tipping the scales nigh onto 250 pounds, who steers the managerial fortunes of the Gem, owned and operated by Andrew Tegu of St. Johnsbury, in a most capable manner; on the other hand, Slim Adrian Hebert, who makes you look twice to see if he isn't Goulding's shadow, a master wielder of the monkey wrench along the plumbing line.

Despite their physical and occupational differences, they both are right in the same alley when it comes to discussing the pros and cons of the art of photography. Goulding had the theatre, Hebert the art of making better than better pictures, but what both lacked was sufficient kale to put the idea across.

Now you know it's an old "Yankee" trait to answer a question by asking one. So the two lads began to do plenty of "Yankee" questioning. It finally was deducted that the feature would attract patrons. This candid deduction was arrived at in three ways. First, they knew the inborn love in each individual's soul of seeing himself or his name either in the form of pictures or print.

This is borne out by the fact that there are innumerable home movies, where the individual can see himself pictured, on his living room wall screen, in all his glory. Then they were cognizant of the fact the column in the local daily paper of the greatest reader interest was . . . you guessed it, the "Local News Columns" . . . telling where soandso had been, and when he had been there. Thirdly, which is really closely tied in with the first factor: At some time in his or her life, each and every individual has nourished a secret desire to have himself flashed on the screen.

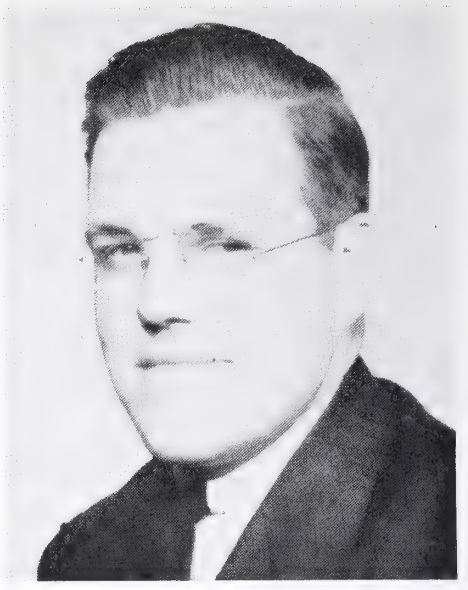
Of course, being seen in the local newsreel, the boy knew, was a far cry from the real thing, but it did get the person or persons on it, the screen, just the same, and they felt sure the theatre patrons would go for it in a big way.

However, before the lads could get started on their venture, it was necessary to talk it over with Mr. Tegu. His approval of the feature exceeded their fondest expectations. In fact, so enthusiastic was he that he told the boys to hop to it, and he would foot the bill on the film and advertising costs.

Encouraged by Mr. Tegu's hearty approval, the boys immediately lined up their advertising, simply by sending in the words they wanted on the newsreel trailer to National Screen Service. And it's a knockout. But more about that later.

The next step was to line up things of interest to feature in the newsreel. It was in the middle of winter, but the newsreelists couldn't have chosen a better time to gather material. They opened up by "shooting" the 32nd annual Lyndonville Winter Driving Club's Washington Birthday races; then took shots of the skiers on the local outing club slopes, and of the skaters on the two local skating rinks, for the sporting angle; intimate views of the natives on the street, and for a background, a swing around the town's interesting places.

While all this was being done the trailer was flashed on the screen in ample time to attract the attention of the patrons.



Using Hebert's 16mm Keystone projector set up in the projection booth, the showing was remarkably clear, and with records for a musical background, scored a big hit with the patrons who saw it in its two-day run.

Thus encouraged, the boys prepared their second film with an eye to adding several improvement. They arranged two turntables thus dispelling any interruption in the music and included novel sound ef-

Ready for Action—

"How We Do It"—

LYNDONVILLE, VT.—"In preparing our local newsreel, 'Lyndonville on Parade,' " reports Lloyd Goulding (pictured above), manager of the Gem, "I am aided by Adrian Hebert, a plumber, whose hobby is photography. He develops pictures every evening, and sometime after 11:00 at night I go over and help him.

"He takes the shots with the 16mm camera and I take the still pictures and snapshots and take down notes for my narration.

"We edit the reel in the evening after the show, and on Sunday, running it through quite a few times in order to get everything timed and my comments planned.

"We use a long-range focal lens on the projector in order to show the pictures from the projection booth. As we have only a 750 watt bulb, the light is none too good, so we are experimenting with a carbon arc. We hope to have it perfected by our next showing.

"For the films, we use a 16mm Victor camera and a Keystone projector. For the stills, we use a Graflex and a Robot camera. We have a Western Master exposure meter for judging the light.

"For the narration, we have an Amperite microphone hooked through a preamplifier and then into the theatre's RCA sound system. One turntable is an RCA; the other one is made over from a radio-phonograph combination. Mr. Hebert made his tripods and carrying cases himself, and also set up his own laboratory.

"We take pictures of anything that we think is interesting. For example: Water going over the municipal power plant dam during flood time, inundated fields and roads, children in juvenile track meets, kindergarten track meets, etc.

"We are vitally interested in this hobby of ours and are spending all the minutes we can take from other jobs to develop the newsreel."

fects with breezy commentations by Goulding. Each issue ran to between 400 and 500 feet.

The second run of the feature included such shots as pigs being raised in an old Dodge sedan by a neighboring farmer, playground antics of the school children, their progress to school, people going and coming from church on Easter Sunday, and came to a smashing finish with grand sound effects of the Lyndonville fire department in action at a fire.

It can readily be gathered that it takes plenty of time and patience to take the shots, develop them and get them ready for the feature. And to the boys' credit, they get it out on just what odd moments they can find. Hebert does have a few evenings now and then to do a little of the developing work in his fine home cellar laboratory.

It is their plan to cover anything of interest from sports to Aunt Emma hobbling along to her weekly sewing circle meeting, and get in any spot action shots they can.

In general, they plan to make their screen the mirror of this rural village's life. To date they have been successful, if boxoffice returns are any criterion.

: NEW HAMPSHIRE :

SOMETHING new in a drive-in theatre may be introduced in the small town of Milton, where the Teneriffe Sports Club is considering outdoor films for autoists at the town beach.

Arthur Borden, a deaf motion picture operator from Portland, Me., showed films of the Missouri School of the Deaf, at the semi-annual meeting of the New Hampshire Association of the Deaf in Manchester.

Newspapers in Manchester published column-long dispatches from Boston covering the world premiere of the film version of Thornton Wilder's play, "Our Town," depicting everyday life of Granite State folks. Gov. Francis P. Murphy and his staff attended, and a real New Hampshire cast of characters from the Monadnock region was entertained.

Junior Film Councils Hold 5th Symposium

NEW HAVEN—The Junior Motion Picture Councils of the New Haven schools held their fifth annual symposium at Troup Junior High, where Donald A. Eldridge, director of audio-visual education, gave the history and pointed out the progress of the Council work. Membership embraces over 500 students, who are encouraged to attend good films regularly.

Representatives of the various councils gave reviews of current pictures and spoke on motion picture appreciation methods here and in other schools. The Troup council demonstrated the use of a scientific film in the classroom. The symposium was drawn to a close with the screening of "Servant of the People," an educational film recently acquired by the board of education.

PORTLAND

SEVEN days and nights of drizzly, foggy weather, with periodic showers, have blessed boxoffices of local film theatres. The untimely weather and empty coal bins sent chilly customers to the theatres in droves seeking comfort as well as diversion.

George Gould, president of Local 458, MPMO, will attend the national IATSE convention to be held in Louisville, Ky., June 1 . . . Al Russell, State Theatre projectionist, has been selected as the Local's only delegate at the Maine State Federation convention which will be held in Portland beginning June 11.

The first of the summer theatres opened May 25—the Lakewood Playhouse at Skowhegan—with S. N. Behrman's comedy, "End of Summer." This is the Playhouse's 40th season. The play featured film actress Louise Campbell, who made a personal appearance in Portland last summer with Ray Milland.

"Recess Time" went off the air Saturday, May 25, with a special program including all the usual features plus a cartoon show and a skating specialty by one of its juvenile members—Lenore Peterson, 12-year-old daughter of Birge, the State Theatre's organist.

: Recalls a Friend :

HARTFORD — When "Lillian Russell" opened at the Loew-Poli, Manager Jack A. Simons recalled his early days as a theatre manager and his experiences, prior to that, as police court reporter on the now defunct Pittsburgh Leader.

The paper was owned at that time by Alexander P. Moore, the character that is played by Henry Fonda in the new film. Moore was Lillian Russell's fifth husband and the famous actress was a frequent visitor to the editorial rooms. "There was nothing high-hat about her," Simons now recalls. "She knew us all by our first names, and we spent many pleasant hours together."

When Simons joined the army in 1917, Lillian Russell gave him a wrist watch which he still has, a slip-on sweater and a comfort kit with razor and toilet articles. Later, when her husband was appointed ambassador to Spain, Jack Simons was offered a position with him. He declined, to join the staff of Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, where Moore often visited him on his return to the United States. Simons was a pallbearer when Moore died. He also attended Lillian Russell's funeral.

Al Russell of Local 458, MPMO, is sporting a new Packard . . . Chelsea Waldron, the local's business agent, has chosen a new Chris Craft for use at his Big Sebago Lake camp. Chelsea revealed a domestic streak this week by painting the cabin's screens and other sundries. Although he doesn't plan to open "Waldron's Lodge" until June, weekend excursions already are being made . . . Frank Vennett, manager of the Opera House, Bath, is the proud owner of a new Olds.

Filmrow visitors: Harry Kirchgessner, district manager for NS, and Fred Stoloff, NS representative for Maine.

Two local young people, Laura Littlefield and Richard J. Mulkern, students at Portland Junior College here, chosen recently as typical replicas of the George and Emily of Thornton Wilder's play, "Our Town," were the guests of Leo Young, manager of the Strand and Empire theatres, at the play's world premiere held in Boston, May 23.

Our sympathy to Frank X. Smith, swing operator in Portland theatres, whose father died at Gardiner last week . . . Proud fathers are George Francis and Al Russell as their daughters appear in the Spring Three-Arts Recital (dancing) here, May 27.

The State Theatre introduced printed theatre programs last week. The two-sheet leaflet carries copy on the next week's bill with interesting bits of film gossip about the players and pictures which have been dated to play at the house.

Members of Local 458, MPMO, held their annual spring camping trip at White's Bridge, Sebago Lake, May 18 and 19 . . . The local's bowling league has disbanded until fall.

Projectionists Shape Up Plans for Annual Dance

HARTFORD—Plans for the tenth annual supper and dance of the New England Projectionists' Ass'n, which is slated to be held in the Westminister Hotel, Boston, Wednesday evening, June 5, rapidly are rounding into shape, and a gala evening has been assured for those attending the event.

Orrin R. McGuley, president of the association, has appointed Robert Meade of Hartford as general chairman, to be assisted by Don McGourty, Modern Theatre, Marlboro, Mass., treasurer; Morris Swartz, Beverly; Henry McElvey, and Charles Wayshak, Boston.

Six Beano Licenses Are Suspended in Boston

BOSTON—Six Beano licenses were suspended in Boston last week as city officials continued to move against the cash giveaway. City Censor John J. Spencer declared that other Beano games were under police surveillance. Five of the licenses suspended were for games operating on Huntington Avenue in the Back Bay.

Reseating at Taftville

TAFTVILLE, CONN.—H. Schwartz is planning reseating of the 400-seat Hillcrest, which has recently been renovated.

Singles at Whitney Extolled by Phelps

HAMDEN, CONN.—The new 900-seat Whitney, de luxe neighborhood house, inaugurated its experimental Wednesday-Thursday single feature policy with a talk by Dr. William Lyon Phelps, popular Yale man of letters and lecturer, from the stage of the theatre.

The talk, which congratulated the management on the beauty and comfort of the new house, plugged several coming attractions and the single feature idea generally, was broadcast over WELI. Franklin E. Ferguson, manager, through whose efforts the distinguished speaker's appearance was arranged, gave an introductory talk.

"Every part of a city should have access to good motion pictures," Dr. Phelps said in commenting on the new location. "I don't know of any art which has developed more rapidly, more wonderfully than the motion picture," he pointed out in speaking of the early developments of the industry and in giving informal sidelights on his friendship with Edison. "Even now," he remarked, "there are some snooty, superior people who say they never go to the movies . . . they might just as well say, 'I never read a good book' . . . It's a far greater sin not to go to a good picture than to go to a bad one."

With regard to double features, Dr. Phelps drew gales of laughter with his statement, "Some people will prefer two bad features to one bad feature. They think they are getting more for their money."

The single feature nights at the theatre will be augmented by the presentation of the "Whitney Hour," of a selected shorts program.

Pawtucket Imposes Ban on Metro's "Strange Cargo"

BOSTON—The black-listing of "Strange Cargo" in Rhode Island has continued with the banning of the Gable-Crawford feature in Pawtucket, necessitating the pulling of the film by M&P Theatres Corp. at the Strand. Providence started the move by clamping down on "Strange Cargo" after it had already played first-run there.

O'Connell to Lisbon

BOSTON—Edward J. O'Connell has been appointed manager of the new Lisbon Playhouse in Lisbon, N. H., by Judge Pike. O'Connell, who succeeds Clark Stinson, was formerly with the Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., at Brattleboro, Vt.

Stars P. A. for "Our Town" World Premiere in Hub

BOSTON—Boston had a world premiere last week Thursday with the opening of Sol Lesser's "Our Town" at Loew's State and Orpheum. Fay Bainter, Frank Craven, and Beulah Bondi appeared in person on the stage of both houses. The stars were given a dinner at the Ritz-Carlton to bolster them for the affair. Charles Kurtzman, Fred Greenway, Howard Burkhardt, Joseph A. DiPesa, Joseph Longo, and Al Longo added the publicity momentum. Hub film critics were deputized by Oscar Doob as special members of the "Editorial Board of Boosters for 'Our Town.'"

Cannon Jr. Heads New Grand Theatre Corp.

NEW HAVEN—The Grand Theatre Corp., operator of the Cannon's Theatre, has filed its certificate of organization, which shows J. Lewis Cannon jr., son of the former operator, as president and treasurer; secretary is Edward J. Brennan, also of New Haven; directors are the officers and N. L. Blake of West Haven.

The amount of stock subscribed for is $3,000; representing 60 shares of $50 par value; $1,500 is paid in cash and $1,500 in property. It is reported the theatre will be remodeled and modernized.

Blaze Damages NSS

BOSTON—The screen accessories department of National Screen Service was damaged by fire last week when a blaze swept through the Brown Derby, film district night club in whose second story the NSS branch has been quartered. The conflagration damage forced the National Screen Service paint shop to move to another part of the building. Main offices of the National Screen Service are some 150 yards away on Melrose Street.

Food Stamps Boost

HARTFORD—The FSCC food stamp plan in Hartford in its first seven weeks of operation added $36,675 new business to the Hartford food industry, it was announced to this publication here last week. The participation in the plan by assistance clients is increasing, it was stated, with $9,569 in blue stamps issued during the first two weeks and $11,041 in the last two weeks.

Theatres Boost Safety

HARTFORD—Connecticut's more than 200 motion picture houses are aiding the state in a campaign to reduce highway accidents by displaying safety trailers each week.

To Again Choose Beauty

NASHUA, N. H.—The contest to select New Hampshire's beauty for the "Miss America" pageant in Atlantic City this summer again will be held at the Colonial here, it is announced by Manager Ben Gold.

Something New in "Differential"

Houston—The "world's most honest film patron" is what Robert Wygant, operator of the Heights here, considers the unknown person who mailed him $5.00 with the explanation that he felt it was due the theatre since he learned that his children, over 12, had been attending at the juvenile admission rate.

Variety Ceremony May Attract 500

OKLAHOMA CITY—From three to five hundred theatre men are expected to be present in the Silver Glade room of the Skirvin Hotel annex here the night of June 3 when Tent 22, the newest Variety Club in the country, will hold charter presentation ceremonies and local members will be inducted into the national organization.

James Burge, manager of the Plaza; Morris Loewenstein, Majestic, and Brownie Akers, division manager for Griffith Amusement Co., are in charge of arrangements, with Akers chairman.

There will be speakers, although they will be kept at a minimum. Gov. Leon C. Phillips, Oklahoma congressmen and senators and Oklahoma City officials have been invited to attend in order to acquaint them with the work of Variety.

National Chief Barker John Harris of Pittsburgh will present the charter to Oklahoma City club members and National Dough Guy James Balmer, also from Pittsburgh, will induct Tent 22 members into the national organization.

Bill Quinn, city manager of Oklahoma City, will give the address of welcome to the visiting national variety officers and will present them with gold visitor cards.

New Suburban Theatre in Oklahoma City to Open

OKLAHOMA CITY—Oklahoma City's newest suburban theatre on N. Pennsylvania Ave., just off of 12th St., will be opened formally early next month, Nelson N. Clabaugh, announces. Clabaugh, with James Boyle, has a ten-year lease on the new theatre.

The $25,000 house will seat approximately 430 persons. It has the new type floor which slants downward from the rear and rises slightly in front.

Meanwhile, Sam Caporal, suburban operator who recently announced plans for two new houses, said excavation for his theatre on Northeast 23rd St. between Kate and Lottie Aves., would begin this week. Construction on his second new theatre on Northwestern Ave. and 43rd St., will begin within a few weeks, he said. He plans to have store spaces in each of the buildings. Caporal now operates the Mayflower and Yale here.

Louis Barton, Stroud, Okla., exhibitor, who has plans all ready for a new theatre to cost $50,000 at Southwest 29th and Western here, has not yet begun any construction. It is understood clearing of the title to the lots on which the theatre is to be built, is holding up construction.

U. S. Charges Crescent Used Competition as a Threat

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A detailed examination of the bill of particulars filed May 22 in U. S. district court here in the suit of the United States Government vs. Crescent Amusement Co., et al., shows that defendants are charged with closing an indeterminate number of theatres by "threats of competition by competing theatres" and causing others to lose money by causing "distributors to withhold product," etc.

The papers filed are in answer to separate orders granted Feb. 23, 1940, in behalf of one group composed of Crescent Amusement Co., Lyric Amusement Co., New Strand Corp., Cumberland Amusement Co., Strand Entertainment Corp., Rockwood Amusement Co., Inc., Cherokee Amusement Co., Inc., Kentucky Amusement Co., Anthony Sudekum, R. E. Baulch, and Kermit C. Stengel; another composed of Loew's, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., Paramount Pictures, Inc., Paramount Film Distributing Corp., and 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., and a third group composed of Columbia Pictures Corp., United Artists Corp., Universal Pictures Co., Inc., and Universal Film Exchange, Inc. In the case of the third group, the plaintiff admits inability to name person or persons, time or place of act or acts enabling defendants to take over theatres in Crescent towns.

Theatre Closings Cited

The government's bill cites the following theatre closings and the "distress manner or method" used against it:

Piedmont, Spruce Pine, N. C., 1938; J. A. Taylor; Crescent Amusement Co.; competing theatre constructed.

Winston Theatre, Newport, Tenn., 1937; J. W. Baird; Newport Amusement Co.; forced to sell 50 per cent interest under threat of competing theatre.

Palace, Rogersville, Tenn., 1938; W. P. Miller; Rockwood Amusement Co.; defendant built competing theatre, cut admission prices, used double features.

..... Theatre, Coal Creek, Tenn.; Sam Key; unknown; threat of opening competing theatre.

..... Theatre, Oneida, Tenn., 1937; Ed Zumstein; Cherokee Amusement Co.; leased theatre from independent exhibitor and forced him out of business.

Roxy, Union City, Tenn., 1939; John D. Henry; opened second competing theatre and cut admission prices.

Roxy, Earlington, Ky., 1939; E. W. Dozier; Rockwood Amusement Co.; opened a second competing theatre and cut prices.

Empress, Central City, Ky., 1937; F. M. Piltna; Rockwood Amusement Co.; opened competing theatre.

Kentucky, Hopkinsville, Ky., 1938; V. R. Anderson; Anthony Sudekum; engaged in price cutting, had bank nights, family nights, stage shows, and the like.

Lido, Providence, Ky., 1938; Walter Beymer; Crescent Amusement Co.; threat of opening competing theatre caused local bank to call loan on independent theatre.

Palace, Greenville, Ky., 1938; William G. Head; unknown; threat to construct competing theatre and withhold first-run product.

Cherokee, Copperhill, Tenn., 1939; Cherokee Theatres, Inc.; threat of opening competing theatre.

Hundren & Parrott Group—theatres in Erwing, Mountain City, Sweetwater, Lenoir City, LaFollette, Oneida and Greeneville, all Tennessee; June 1936; Hundren and Parrott Amusement Co.; forced to sell 50 per cent interest on threat of competition in every town.

Lyric, Guthrie, Ky., 1936; John N. Allison; Rockwood Amusement Co.; threat of opening competing theatres.

Princess, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., 1938; Mrs. H. Rhulander, Lewis and Helen Rhulander, and Mrs. Cowan Oldham; Cumberland Amusement Co.; 50 per cent interest sold to defendant under threat of opening competing theatres.

McKenzie, McKenzie, Tenn., 1939; unknown; Rockwood Amusement Co.; defendant leased building and threatened to open competing theatre.

Lists Product Blocks

The bill lists instances of independent exhibitors claiming hindrance in getting pictures from producer or distributor as follows:

William Roth, Gallatin, charges Paramount Pictures, Inc., Paramount Film Distributors Corp. and Loew's, Inc., with refusing first-run films. Ray Smith, Murfreesboro, says Paramount, Loew's, Fox and Warner refused pictures if defendant wanted them. Tim W. Smith, Peerless Enterprises, Inc., Newport, says he could secure only such pictures from Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, and RKO as defendant refused, and none from Warner. E. A. Dozier, Earlington, Ky., says Paramount refused to sell first-run pictures to him and that all producers raised prices.

W. O. Taylor, Dresden; E. W. Dozier, Roy Smith and Ruble N. Page, Mt. Pleasant, all Tennessee, reported that all contracts with Paramount contained 30 to 60 days clearance clauses. These are alleged to have been in favor of defendant's theatres as far as 20 miles away.

M. M. Buchanan, Athen, Ala., claimed he was forced to close because he was unable to obtain sufficient first-run pictures. V. R. Anderson, Hopkinsville, Ky., said he couldn't get Paramount pictures.

"GWTW" Enriches State of Texas

Austin—The state of Texas is richer by $68,700 in taxes, thanks to "Gone With the Wind," George H. Sheppard, comptroller, announces.

Sheppard says the theatre admission tax of one cent for each 10 cents admission applied only on admission costing 51 cents or more. Three-fourths of the tax is allocated to old-age pensions and the remainder to public schools.

South Texas Pushes Ahead With Building, Despite War Gloom

PORT ARTHUR, TEX.—Despite a seeming depression that has gripped most sections, South Texas is forging ahead rapidly, what with five new theatres in this area now open, or preparing to open within a short time.

On Thursday, Al Johnston was to have opened his swanky new $50,000 Sabine on the main street of Port Arthur. This will be one of Port Arthur's largest houses, and much speculation is being indulged in as to the outcome, since the owner, Sam Hyman of Lufkin, is invading a Jefferson Amusement stronghold of years standing. Hyman owns the Jackson at Jacksonville, another Jefferson town, and is interested with other persons in several additional spots in East Texas.

Jefferson Opens New One

Coincident with the opening of The Sabine, Jefferson Amusement on June 6 plans the opening of its sixth house in Port Arthur proper, The Port, a $40,000 community theatre at Ninth Ave. and Eighth St. In addition, the company operates another recently opened house, The Grove, named for that community, a subdivision of Port Arthur.

With the two new Port Arthur houses, adding thereto The Dixie and Lincoln, devoted to colored patronage, the town will have a total of ten theatres, an interesting product situation in a community of some 62,000 population.

The new Sabine will be committed to a policy of first and second runs, Johnston says. Its opening feature was "Paradise Isle."

F. W. McManus, who hails from Long Beach, Calif., will open, on July 15, his Isle, a 300-seat subsequent run house, on the main street of Galveston, an Interstate town partnered by A. Martini, veteran Texas exhibitor. McManus will be the lone independent on the island, unique in that the local Interstate houses are managed by three generations, A. Martini, grandfather; Mrs. Anita Martini his daughter, and Sonnie Martini, a grandson.

A second Galveston house will be The Carver, for colored patronage, and named for the Negro scientist at Tuskegee University. It will be opened by the Martini interests at 2521 Market St. about September 1 and will seat 650.

Opening of a new theatre at LaMarque, some six miles from Galveston, by M. R. McDaniel, is expected within the coming week. This house will compete not only with Galveston but Texas City, a Long-Griffith town, nearby.

Southern Texas Personals

Rufus Honeycutt, whom we contact in Port Neches, and who manages the Lyric there and The Rio in Nederland while Dan Fagan is vacationing, on June 1 became manager of the Port in LaPorte. Fagan on his return then will take charge of the Nederland-Port Neches setup. The latter two are Jefferson towns, while LaPorte is a Jefferson partnership with H. E. Brunson . . . Emil George, of the Dixie and Lincoln in Port Arthur, discovered in Tritico's Cafe digesting a midnight snack with 20th-Fox's Salesman Gribble from Dallas . . . We called on R. W. Barrow and his brother Claude of the Vida at High Island.

Late reports indicate A. Martini, 73-year-old Galveston veteran, is convalescing nicely after an illness that kept him confined to his quarters since April 21 . . . We are indebted to Morris C. Clemmons at Port Arthur and Tom R. Clemmons at Beaumont for their courtesies while we were making those two lively cities.

AUSTIN

BILL HELLUMS, skipper of the Capitol, paired "The Glamour Parade," seven acts of vaudeville backed by a stage band, and "The Man From Dakota" (M-G-M) for a tidy Friday-Saturday gross.

All seven local Interstate houses carried the President's Sunday evening broadcast . . . Stanley (Young Tom Edison) Fisher, the Varsity's chief of service with inventive interludes, will spend the first two weeks of June vacationing in Philadelphia.

The Texas brought back two Englishers starring Robert Donat, "The 39 Steps" and "The Ghost Goes West" . . . Final examination jitters (worse than war jitters) being experienced by the University of Texas' 11,000 potential picture customers.

Rumor has it a certain cashier at a downtown theatre is pining for Bobby Clark, 14-year-old cowboy screen player, after a beautiful friendship developed between them during his recent personal appearance at the Capitol.

Locals Contribute for a Proposed National Park

FORT WORTH—Nine locals affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators turned in contributions totaling $49.75 to the Texas Big Bend Park committee, which is gathering funds with which to purchase land for the proposed national park.

Checks were mailed from locals in Houston, Dallas, Gatesville, Amarillo, Port Arthur, Fort Worth and El Paso in response to an appeal by the State Federation of Labor.

Webb Buys Second

DEMOPOLIS, ALA.—M. C. Webb of Demopolis has purchased the Marengo here from the Wilby interests. A. O. Dainswood remains as manager.

R. I. (Rip) Condron in Gubernatorial Race

DALLAS—In a telegram received Wednesday by Col. H. A. Cole, R. I. (Rip) Condron, at LaFeria, Tex., said he had filed with the secretary of state to get on the ticket in the race for Governor of Texas. Condron said his platform is "Against chain theatres and to stop film contracts forced on independents and also to stop blind selling and block booking of pictures."

Condron was first connected with this business as a mechanic, or technician, in the repair and servicing of pipe organs and automatic instruments. When this phase ended with sound pictures, Condron bought and operated the Bijou at LaFeria for a number of years. Later he owned and operated the Star at Forney. After selling Forney, he returned to the Valley where he expected to open a new theatre in a spot which he did not announce.

Adams Is Releasing "Beast of Berlin"

DALLAS—Immediately following a double-gross holdover run at Interstate's and Louie Charninsky's Capitol on Elm St., Adams Film Exchanges has announced the release of "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," to Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas theatres.

The Capitol booking was for a normal three days, this theatre playing three-a-week. The holdover was for two days.

Lines forming were a common sight during the five days, Charninsky said, adding that many exhibitors came to the theatre for a checkup and others wrote in for a check on boxoffice values.

In the Adams Exchange all hands were on deck to take care of an increased activity in bookings. Jack Adams, who gave the office its name and who has been taking things leisurely of late at his home on Eagle Mountain Lake, has been at the office all this week watching bookings and supervising the spurt in distribution. L. F. (Chick) Turner, office manager, checked the Capitol business and then made request for a number of extra prints, which was granted. Turner said on Tuesday that deals had already been closed with the Interstate and Jefferson circuits in Texas, besides a large number of independent theatres.

DALLAS

HAROLD E. PICKETT, Paramount branch manager and representative for many years, has severed his connection with that distributing company.

Billy Duckett, checker in Texas for "Gone With the Wind," arrived in Dallas this week after a number of weeks in many places.

Ed Blumenthal jr., the latest recruit in the Monogram sales staff, is back from the Houston territory with a batch of contracts. Young Ed joined the Monogram sales force during the company's national convention held here last month.

For some unknown reason, but a good omen, this Filmrow received an unusual number of visiting exhibitors during the midweek. Usually they come on Monday, but later than that were seen H. S. Usry, Decatur; R. Q. Coleman, Mabank; Ernest Rockett, Itasca; A. C. Moore, Bartlett; Willard Barnes, Alvarado; George Smith, Center; S. G. Fry, Tyler; Joe Bailey and Clinton Bailey of Nocona; Gene Lacy, now of Houston; Mitchell Lewis of Houston; J. N. Stewart, Kaufman; his brother, M. D. Stewart, DeLeon; Hugo Plath, Houston, and others.

W. G. Underwood, Claude Ezell and Lloyd Rust, left on the weekend for the Republic regional convention at Memphis, June 4 and 5. Herbert J. Yates and James R. Grainger, ranking heads of this distributing company, will be there, it was learned at the Dallas exchange.

Newspapers wrote a long story the other day about a waif from the north without relatives and friends running amuck with federal court with the judge offering immunity if some kind soul would offer the boy a suitable home and chances for education. Many offers came in, among which was one from an exhibitor at Childress, Tex. Rufus Layton, the only exhibitor there happened to be in Dallas at the time. By deduction, friends claimed the offer to befriend and look after this boy did come from Layton.

M. B. Moran, partner in the former company of Southwestern Theatres of Oklahoma which sold out recently to Griffith, was here mingling with friends for a stop on a two-week trip through south Texas and a point or two in Mexico. He took in Galveston, Houston and San Antonio in the itinerary. Mrs. Moran was with her husband on the trip "just to look the country over." Incidentally, the Morans have two sons, Bob and Pat, graduating next year from Notre Dame.

Speaking of the Morans, Dallas friends commented that the other member of the former Oklahoma team of Moran & Isley, Phil Isley and Mrs. Isley have been in New York attending the arrival of a new granddaughter, born to the former Phyllis Isley.

M. K. McDaniel, a chemist and new to this business, who is opening a new theatre at LaMarque, between Galveston and Texas City, was here attempting to buy and book for the new venture. Being a newcomer, it is said he learned something about protection and clearance and expressed his indignation.

THANK YOU ALL!

WE are grateful for the encouragement through the manner in which our Exhibitor customers and friends have warmed up to our new equipment store which we made every effort to modernize and locate conveniently.

We thank the manufacturers who participated in this special section and feel that more Exhibitors realize these manufacturers have been in business a long time and are qualified to produce theatre equipment in keeping with the most modern advances of showmanship.

We again put in our claim that this store, through its many manufacturer connections of long standing, is able satisfactorily to fully equip and service the finest theatre, or the most unpretentious theatre venture, which of course carries a saving in either case.

Come To See Us NOW!

Make yourself at home here while in town. See our displays of NEW and USED equipment, accessories, parts and a complete and modern repair shop.

Paramounties

LOS ANGELES—Harold Wilkes, who has been ill, pulled himself together to make the Paramount convention trip from Atlanta, where he is district manager. Jack Kirby, branch manager there, gave him support in place of the weight he lost. Scott Lett, who, since his appointment as Charlotte branch manager, has taken on weight, said he is trying to catch up with Kirby, who is champion of all the delegates on the scales.

Card champ of the convention was Jack Kirby, who was given the title by both the northern and southern conventionites and regretted having to return to his Atlanta office.

The inside dope on Diesel engines was given Hugh Braly, Dallas district manager, when he lunched with his son Jack, a five-year man in a Los Angeles motor firm.

Jack Curry, Oklahoma City branch manager, who went to San Diego recently to recuperate from an illness, was replaced at the convention by Charles L. Dees, acting branch manager, who was formerly sales manager in the office.

HOUSTON—Members of the Houston local No. 279 of the IATSE are sending the entire executive board to the national convention at Louisville. The delegation will be E. J. Miller, southwestern representative, and the executive board as follows: "Bumps" Coogler from the Delman booth, W. J. Kuntz of the Metropolitan, I. Rubin of the Iris, Jess Hogue from the Kirby and Charles Smith from the Uptown.

In addition to the above members, several from other Houston houses will represent locals from out of the state, of which they were members before coming to Houston. Among them L. C. Hall who will represent his old local from Norman, Okla.; Al Garrard as representative of the local in Salisbury, N. C.; Dick Pully as a delegate from Lufkin, Tex., and Al Hunt will represent the local at Goose Creek, Tex. All are working in Houston at present.

Jack Krum from the San Diego local will stop off in Houston on the way to the convention to be the guest of Clarence Nelson for a few days.

SANTONE

JACK KARMI, general manager of Karmi Roadshow Pictures, spending a week in San Antonio to have some work done on his truck, dropped in at the Prince to visit his friends, Edward Sonney and Leon Silverman, managers of the "Sex Slaves" roadshow film which recently broke a five-day engagement at that house.

Recent change in the floor staff at the Majestic finds Lee Chitwood as the newly appointed assistant chief of service with Bill Corler and George Darnell as sound checker and doorman respectively. "Cavalcade of Mexico," Bill Wells' special 11,000-footer on the country below the Rio Grande, had a private screening at the Empire. Incidentally, it is an Azteca Film.

Injured in an attack blamed on union troubles, Roy Cogdill, Aztec projectionist, was in a serious condition in Santa Rosa Hospital where he was re-admitted after being discharged following treatment several weeks ago. He is local business agent of the motion picture operators' union.

Benno Kusenberger, the golfing projectionist, turned in a 74 last week to qualify for the local Sweepstakes Tourney . . . Elena Cadena was recently added to the Latin-American Film Exchange office staff as clerk . . . Buster Bryan of KTSA has returned from Hollywood where he acted as narrator for the forthcoming picture, "Crossroads of the Nation" . . . C. H. Moss, Interstate exploitation director here, won a $75 cash prize for campaign on "Pinocchio."

Concerning Corpus Christi

By A. JULES BENEDIC

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.—Following a clinical examination, this is about Corpus Christi. Also about Johnny Long's boys, the same as to the Henry Hall circuit, and about some other exhibitors whose cinemas clutter the contours of the coastal plains of southern Texas.

The clinic was not on cines, but on the Auburn, which, heretofore reposing in an Austin garage, now hums hilariously over highways long familiar to this reviewer.

Two schools of thought pondered on the fate of this jagged Juggernaut. Agreed that the trouble was in the radiator, opposing operators offered conflicting remedial courses. One, an expensive clique of radiator rajahs, (habitat Waco, Hillsboro and other towns northward); insisted the honeycombed aluminum should be baked, at about $4 per bake. (This treatment caused only backfire; a boiling far above the 212 Fahrenheit allowed on the dashboard. Further, the speed limit was reduced to 15 mph.)

Racuous Radiator Raving

At Austin, it will be recalled, the gasoline jallopy went to the shop with a blown out gasket, and this integral gadget finally was obtained from a town in New England. There was an additional hiatus when geysers sprung from Old Faithful as we drove around the block. Here enters the second school of thought.

Austin radiator men, consulting charts and diagrams, opined that a program of oxy-acetelyne welding, plus a rust-exuding experiment, followed by lactealization, might turn the trick. The radiator, which has a zipper installed to facilitate removal, was then placed alternately in three fearsome-looking Rube Goldberg objects, one of which chugged; each chug a tug at our heart.

In the final analysis, it was the lacteal fluid that did the work. This milky substance, which local Mexicans call leche, caused not only a breakdown of the stultifying exudation, but, conversely, it's adherance to the lining prevents further disintegration of the clogging factors.

Six-Month Guarantee

"The job's guaranteed for six months," smilingly announced an Austin spokesman at the consultation. (The smile was occasioned by the presentation of a bill, the sum total of which easily would pay for the plumbing fixtures in R. and R.'s swanky new Beach Theatre in Corpus Christi).

At any rate, the Auburn now clicks consistently at 60, so we clip into Corpus and interview Bruce Collins, city manager, and his aide, H. T. Hightower. Both are enthusiastic over prospects for a fine summer season, what with war keeping folks from abroad. On May 10 the R. and R. people opened their eighth Corpus Christi theatre, The Beach, out on North Beach. The town is growing fast and the circuit is keeping apace.

We push into Palacios and palaver with J. G. Davis . . . We pull into Pasadena and discover an old-timer, J. J. Brown, at the helm of the Pasadena . . . We pass to Port Lavaca and it's Jimmy Denham all the way at Long's . . . We angle to Angleton for a talk with Taylor, then bail out for Boling, for a ditto with Jack Duff . . . We consult H. A. Kramp, new pilot at the Ritz, in Columbus, and find he's just arrived from Miami, Fla. . . . Another new Long manager is Lance Williams, satrap at The Studio in Ingleside . . . Speaking of Johnny Long recalls to mind a visit to our former Galveston school crony, at his Bay City headquarters, where we also meet Circuit Manager L. O. Wallace, Ken Prickett, Theo. Routt, and Hayden Curtis. Thumbnailing Johnny, we'd say that he has parlayed a Texas City store show of 25 years ago into a South Texas theatrical empire, and today, with his Griffith tiein, has one of the fastest-growing circuits in the country.

We bump into Bastrop and meet the veteran Jack Wright at the Strand . . . We slip into Smithville for a melange with Joe Mazola, then cleave to Cleveland for a ditto with T. A. Booth . . . We dash to Dayton and sling some slang with Manager Slusher, then get towed around Texas City under the hospitable auspices of Emil Heinen, son of our old friend, Emil, at New Braunfels . . . Mangling to Madisonville, we renew acquaintance with smiling Herb Smith, then get engaged in Edna conversation with Pete Stoker . . . We elevate to El Campo for a fling at Floyd's with D. B. Nance . . . We wobble to Wharton for a Sunday call on Mr. Larza and there bump into George Belcher, competitor, who is building a ten-unit, air-conditioned tourist court in addition to running The Rio.

Emerling in Memphis to Plan Palace Reopening

MEMPHIS—Ernest Emerling, home office publicity-advertising executive for Loew's, is here from New York to assist with plans for the reopening by the circuit of the Palace. Emerling, himself a Memphis theatre manager for Loew until his promotion some years ago, will remain here several days.

Arthur Groom, assistant to Manager Cecil Vogel at the State, will be transferred to the Palace as assistant to the new manager, Robert Kilgore. Groom's spot at the State will be filled by Henry Fox, who comes here from Loew's Penn in Pittsburgh.

Cianciolo to Build New 1,000-Seater in Memphis

MEMPHIS—Work was expected to start this week on a new theatre here to be known as the Lucia-Ann. Builder is Michael "Uncle Mike" Cianciolo, who is naming the theatre for his oldest and youngest daughters. An August 1 opening is the tentative plan for the 1,000-seater.

Cianciolo also operates the Rosemary here, which is named for another daughter.

ATLANTA

A C. BROMBERG, president of Republic of the Southeast, and his five branch managers, are leaving this week for Memphis where they will attend the regional convention to be headed by Herbert Yates and James R. Grainger . . . Mrs. Gene Tanner, formerly stenographer for Warner, is the mother of a girl, born May 18. She has been named Jean . . . Vacationists at Paramount are Martha Nash and Louise Coleman . . . William H. Murphy jr., booker for Warner, is also enjoying his vacation.

Friends of Mrs. John H. Daniel, wife of the late John Daniel, well known Atlanta projectionist, will be glad to learn she is reported much improved although still confined to the hospital . . . Congratulations are in order for Mike Alterman, booker for Wilby-Kincey, who has just announced his engagement to Evelyn Carol Blate. The marriage will take place September 1 at Tallahassee, Fla. . . . Mrs. M. M. Osman, Strand, Covington, Ga., paid Filmrow a visit for the first time in several months . . . Pearl Moose, telephone operator for Columbia, is vacationing.

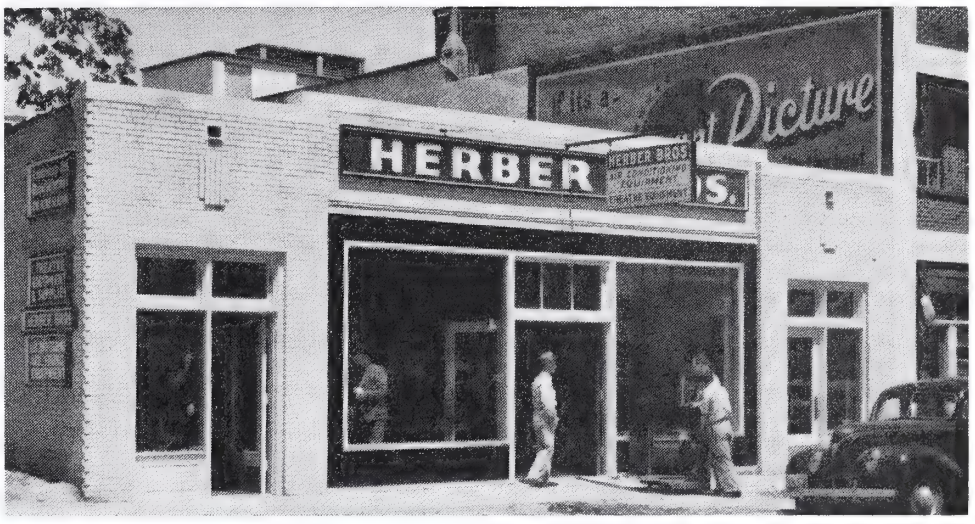
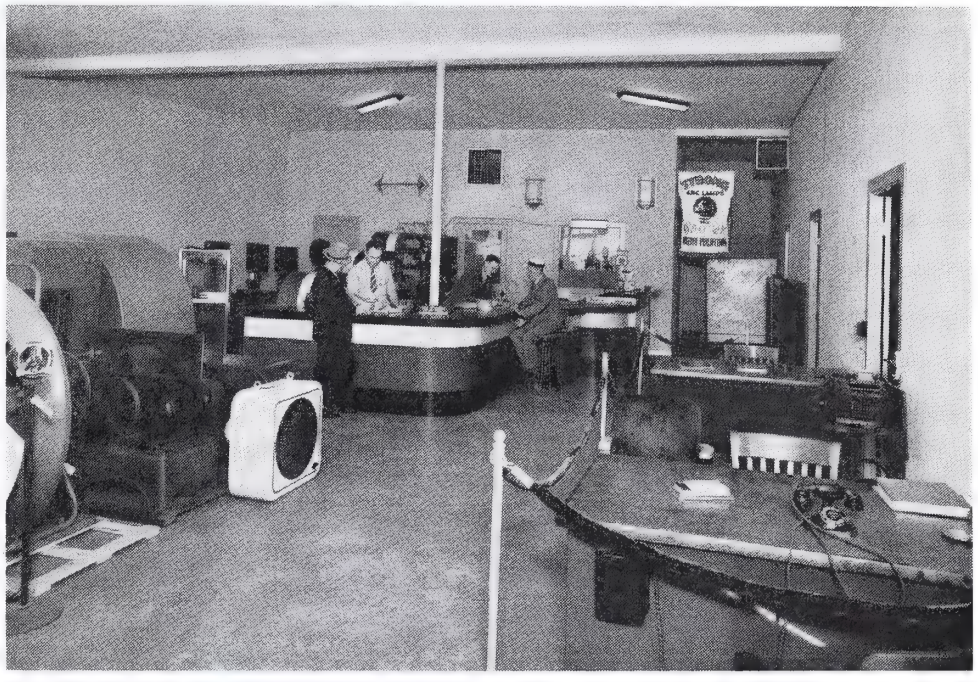
HERBER BROS. INTO THEIR NEW DALLAS STORE

Old Established Equipment Firm Makes Modern Bow To Theatre Trade

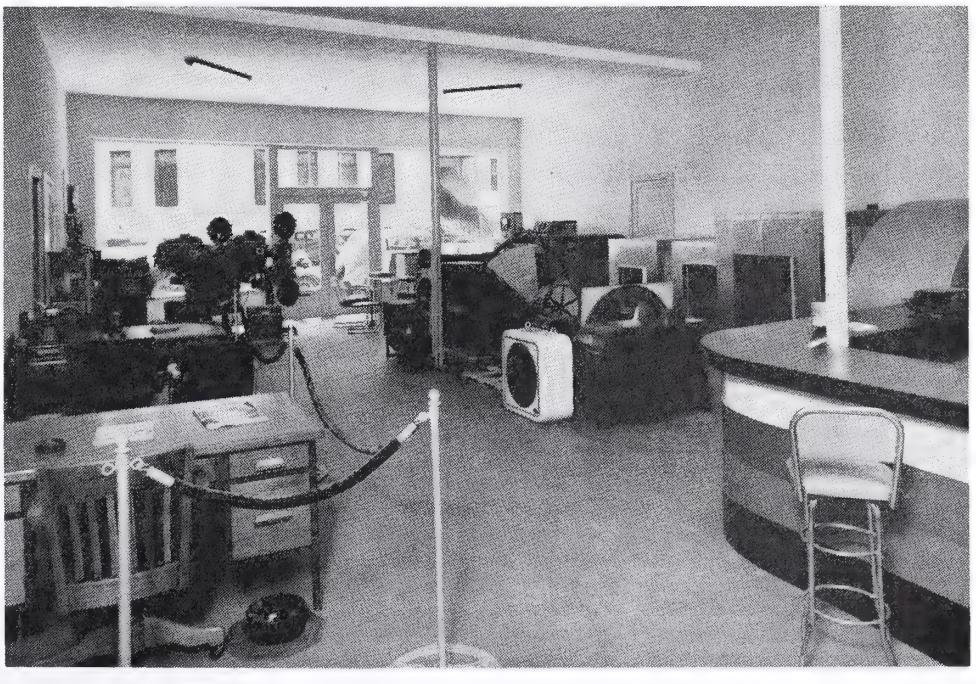
DALLAS—Beyond the ordinary in the formal opening of the new and modernized Herber Bros. equipment establishment is the fact that all phases of showmanship are now demonstrated before the eyes of the inquisitive showman.



Entering the front door to the left the exhibitor sees only cooling equipment, whether it be for his own theatre home or that of a friend, or a complete house in any part of the country.



The visitor should stop there at the counter where colors of almost every country are in evidence in a streamlined effort which so far has met exhibitor approval. At the counter he looks into a modernized repair shop with all equipment necessary to the repair of a part or the manufacture of one in an emergency.



Swinging on around you see a large quarter for storage of various kinds of equipment until it is put in stock. From there to the front is a stock room, a private office for each of the Herber Bros. and a private sales room for salesmen engaged in the commercial end.

Second photo shows a center view to the rear of the new Herber Store with its large streamlined counter and accessory department. In this photo, left to right, are Hans Schmidt, owner of the Irving Theatre at Irving being waited on by Dan Hulse, one of the Herber technicians and service men. Next behind counter is E. P. Herber, one of the partners, taking an order from Walter McNatt, owner of the Inez at Naples, Village at Hughes Springs and Morris at Daingerfield.

Behind the solid door at extreme left is a well furnished rest room for women. The entire building, including private offices, is cooled with washed air coming in through deflectors high in center of back wall and at extreme right, with equipment for the job mounted on the roof.

Lower photo is taken from rear of store with a department for new modern equipment, showing reflector arc lamps, projection heads, sound heads, amplifiers, rectifiers, popcorn and ticket machines, etc. In front of the center double doors is a chrome-leather set of chairs, table and divan, with trade and other magazines handy. At the right are new models of small cooling units for commercial or auxiliary theatre use.

jections and accessories, which includes light, projection and sound. Various models in booth lamps and projection displayed in this new quarter.

Further around is a sample or more of new chairs manufactured by American Desk Mfg. Co. at Temple, Tex., which company shares a part of the new building which Herber Bros. occupies.

In the new store are provided rest rooms for both men and women.

Evading the private offices, the exhibitor will see at his left an imposing display of entirely new merchandise in projection and sound.

Herber Brothers were first connected with the industry in the sale of pipe organs and automatic musical instruments to theatres. They developed the Kue-Graph, a dual turnable amplified phonograph which they installed in hundreds of theatres for cueing silent pictures. When sound came, they were among the first to develop disc equipment, making many installations under the name, Photo-Talker. They later became distributors for sound-on-film equipment and branched out into the cooling business.

Moving into their old location in 1936, the Herbers opened a theatre supply store featuring cooling, projection and sound. Both are graduates of the University of Texas, School of Business Administration.

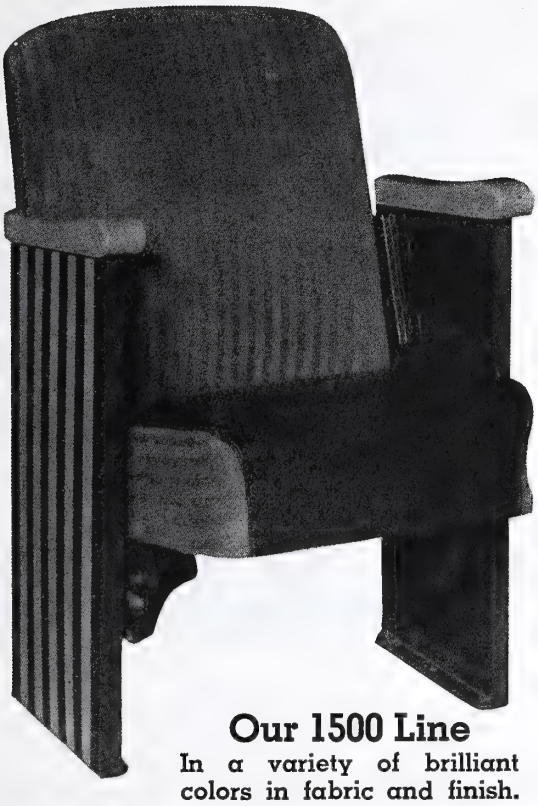
Say Popcorn Sales Now Average 2c Per Ticket



ST. LOUIS—Officials of the Advance Mfg. Co. here, makers of popcorn machines, declare that most exhibitors average two cents in popcorn sales for every ticket sold, and point out that this means $20 for every 1,000 patrons. Many theatres are making from $20 to $100 per week in popcorn sales, they say.

Advance's new popcorn machines, handled by Herber Bros. in that equipment firm's new location at Dallas, are streamlined and finished in colored porcelain enamel, with lights, color and motion for added attractiveness. The New York World's Fair, after using Advance machine for the first year, ordered 14 of the new models for this season.

J. R. Burch, president of the Advance company, is a native Texan who has spent nearly all of his business life in building popcorn machines for exhibitors, for fairs and for other large concessions.

THEATRE SCREEN CORPORATION

Congratulates Herber Brothers On Their New Equipment House

HERBER BROS. have distributed VOCALITE and CHROMOLITE SCREENS for the past eleven years, during which period they have given the Exhibitors unexcelled screen service and we are proud to have them as our distributor.

Our latest screens represent the utmost in perfection and are the best screens we have ever manufactured in our long history of screen manufacture.

VOCALITE and CHROMOLITE SCREENS save the eyes in preventing eye strain. They show better results in reflecting color pictures. They are used in de luxe theatres all over the world, yet their prices fit the smallest theatre.

Our screens are porous and do not have perforations, thus affording better sound transmission and less light loss.

Install a new VOCALITE or CHROMOLITE and see the improvement.

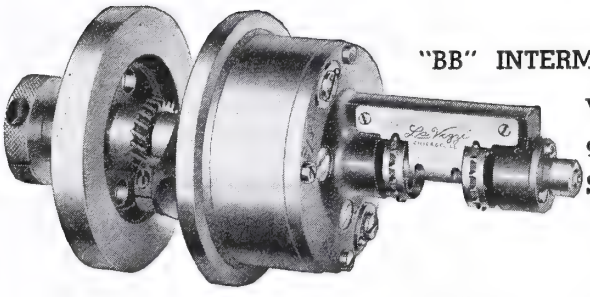
American Desk Mfg. Co. Into Herber Building

DALLAS—Affording a better display of its manufactured line of theatre seating and a more convenient service for exhibitors, American Desk Manufacturing Co. has moved its Dallas sales and display offices to 408 S. Harwood St. in the same building with the new Herber Bros. store. This office is in charge of Forrest Dunlap, general sales manager for the company. The sales display is occupied by three rows of sample seats along with an arrangement of fabrics which go into them. In back of the display is an office which Dunlap occupies.

The company was organized 13 years ago in Temple, Tex., where an enlarged factory now employing 200 people still is located. At first only school furniture and equipment was turned out, but during the past seven years theatre chairs have been manufactured along with the school work. During this time 800,000 theatre chairs have been sold to theatres, an official of the company said, with the area of sales covering 15 south, midwest and southwestern states and the exporting of chairs to Porto Rico, South America and Mexico.

The officials are A. P. Brashear, general manager; C. V. Griggs, assistant manager, and Forrest Dunlap, general sales manager, who headquarters in Dallas.

The company reports sales during the past few days of 800 upholstered seats to P. G. Cameron for the new Airway in Dallas, 800 upholstered seats to the O. K. Circuit for the new house at Lisbon on the southern outskirts of Dallas; closing of a deal with D. C. McCord of the Malco circuit for theatres in Pine Bluff and McGehee, Ark., with the Martin-Thompson circuit for full upholstered chairs going to Canton, Ga., and the installation of 800 upholstered seats for the Griffith circuit in Enid.



Dunlap points out that practically all chair orders are shipped direct to theatres in company trucks and that the installation crews ride these sleeper trucks and are ready to go to work when the chairs are backed up to the curb in front of a theatre.

Rockett First Exhibitor Deal in New Store

DALLAS—The first piece of business done at the new equipment house of Herber Bros. was with P. Q. Rockett who started his career as a Texas exhibitor during 1912, according to B. G. Herber. Before the Herber move to the new building at 408 S. Harwood was completed, Rockett came in and purchased a new cooling unit for his home in Waxahachie and accessories for the small unit he bought last year.

Twenty-eight years ago, Rockett operated the Dixie and Empire at Waxahachie and, with his two sons, Ernest and the late Willis Rockett, had theatres in Italy, Midlothian, Ferris and Itasca. He sold the Waxahachie houses in 1927 to Robb & Rowley. He now operates the Queen at Ferris, where he owns the big opera house. Ernest Rockett runs the Pastime in Itasca.

Operadio a Herber Line For Many Years

ST. CHARLES, ILL.—An association of a number of years was celebrated when the Herber Bros. equipment company moved into new quarters in Dallas, Tex., with continued contracts for the product of the Operadio Manufacturing Co., of this city.

In congratulating the Dallas firm on its move, an official of Operadio said: "Such a move means only one thing, and that is that due to diligent work and close study of the needs of their customers, Herber Brothers have built up their organization and their business to a point where more space and better surroundings are not only desirable but absolutely necessary.

"The Operadio company wishes to extend to Herber Brothers, in addition to their congratulations on this move, a word of appreciation of their long and pleasant association with the Herber boys and the wish that the future will bring them a continuance of ever-increasing business that made their present move necessary."

Two Garver Products Handled by Herber

UNION CITY, IND.—Two of the Garver Electric Co. products to be emphasized in the new Herber Bros. equipment store in Dallas are the new Garver Kurrent Changer and the Garver 45-60 Ampere Royal Rectifier.

Company claims for its product are that the Kurrent Changer has been designed to give greater efficiency, smoother performance and longer bulb life. It features an improved winding, higher grade steel and natural draft cooling. The rectifier has been designed for better, more economical operation with Suprex-type high intensity projection arc lamps.

GENEVA, ILL.—Cetron photo cells have been sold by Herber Bros. for the past ten years, and will continue through that distributor in the new home recently opened in Dallas.

Continental Electric Co. claims for Cetron photo cells include uniform output, non-microphonic quality and careful inspection and testing.

Louisianians Must Pay Film Rental Sales Tax

WASHINGTON—Application of the Louisiana "use" tax to motion pictures is in effect validated by the supreme court in the rejection of a petition of the Saenger Realty Corp. for review of a state supreme court decision, on the ground that no substantial federal question was presented.

The case was brought to Washington to test the collection of the one per cent tax on film rentals demanded by the state under the statute imposing a levy upon the "proceeds from the rental of tangible personal property."

In the district court, the company secured a favorable decision on the ground that the copyright, rather than the physical property, was the subject of license, but the state supreme court reversed the decision, holding that the right to exhibit was not of greater value than the use of the film.

Bringing the case to Washington, the company contended that the motion pictures involved were moving in interstate commerce and that the copyright situation was a factor, but the supreme court held that nothing presented had shown a federal question was involved.

The Palace in McAllen Features Shorts Show

MCALLEN, TEX.—The Palace featured an all-short subject screen show composed of ten units, as follows: "Know Your Money" (Crime Does Not Pay series), "Calling on Colombia" (FitzPatrick Traveltalk), "100 Pygmies and Andy Panda" (Color Cartoon), "The Domineering Male" (Pete Smith Specialty), "You Nazty Spy" (Three Stooges), a Screen Snapshots, "When a Nag Was Only a Horse" (Stone Age Cartoon), "Moments of Charm of 1940" (Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra), "Bows and Arrows," and "Double or Nothing."

Education Lags Behind Films

Ottawa—According to a statistical report of the Canadian government, the people of the Dominion spend twice as much on film entertainment as they do on higher education, which includes universities, colleges and high schools.

The statement shows an expenditure of $17,000,000 for such training during the past academic year while theatre receipts for the year are estimated at $35,000,000. In another comparison, it is pointed out the expenditure for newspapers and magazines in Canada is three times that for higher education.

Canada Rejected Only 17 Films in 1939

TORONTO—According to a statistical survey, only 17 features were involved in the 19 rejections by all of the provincial censor boards in Canada during the calendar year 1939. The report shows that one feature was condemned by five boards in succession but no other picture received more than two condemnations.

The Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors headed the list with a total of nine features rejected during the past calendar year while there were two condemnations in four provinces, these being New Brunswick, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia. Only one feature was turned back by the censors in Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan while Ontario stood at the bottom, or top, of the list with a record of all features approved.

In the 1938 calendar year, there were 26 features condemned by the various boards but, actually, only 23 different pictures were involved. The number of condemnations in 1937 was 19 while back in 1932 the boards in Canada rejected features in 101 instances, thus indicating the improvement in the tone of films and perhaps more generous acceptance on the part of the censors.

One reason for the comparatively high total of refusals in 1938 was that the Quebec board rejected 17 features in that year out of a total of 26, compared with Quebec's total of nine last year. In 1938, British Columbia rejected three features, as compared with two in 1939.
